CUK-H04817-22-LP2200

ALLAHABAD
LAW JOURNAL

22

EDITOR
KAILAS NATH KATJU, M.A., LL.D.
ASSISTANT EDITOR
MAHESHWAR NATH KAUL, M.A., BAR-AT-LAW
SUB-EDITOR
RAMNATH DAR

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY LAW COLLEGE

UNIVERSITY OF CALCUTTA NOT TO BE REMOVED DEPARTMENT OF LAW

Vol. XXX

ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL PRESS
ALLAHABAD
1932

JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT ALLAHABAD
1932

CHIEF JUSTICE

THE HON'BLE SIR GRIMWOOD MEARS, KT., K. C. I. E.
(Retired from March 16)

THE HON'BLE SIR SHAH MUHAMMAD SULAIMAN, KT.
(Took his seat on March 16. On leave from July 11 combined with vacation. On deputation to the Government of India, Army Department, from October 28)

ACTING CHIEF JUSTICE

THE HON'BLE SIR LAL GOPAL MUKERJI, KT.
(Officiated from July 11 to July 27 and from October 28)

JUDGES

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE LAL GOPAL MUKERJI, KT.

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE GUY PONSONBY BOYS
(On leave preparatory to retirement from April 19)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE LALIT MOHAN BANERJI
(Died on October 15)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE CHARLES HENRY BAYLEY KENDALL

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE JOHN DOUGLAS YOUNG

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE CARLETON MOSS KING

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE AYRTON GEORGE POPLEWELL PULLAN
(On leave from October 11)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE JOHN GIBB THOM
(Took his seat on April 11)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE SURENDRO NATH SEN
(Vacated office from March 1)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE NIAMATULLAH

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE EDWARD BENNET

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE BARTHOLD SCHLESINGER KISCH

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE IQBAL AHMAD
(Officiated from April 19 to July 27 and again took his seat on October 17)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE UMA SHANKAR BAJPAI
(Took his seat on October 21)

THE HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE RACHHPAL SINGH
(Officiated from November 8)

VERSITY
LIBRARY.
LAW COLLEGE

INDEX

PART I

ARTICLE

PAGE

Principles governing the forfeiture of Bail-bonds 1

LAW LIBRARY

Elements of the Law of Contract 12
The All-India Law Digest (1921-1930) and Century Referencer (1821-1920) 11
The Court-Fees and Suits Valuation Acts 11
The History and Status of Landlords and Tenants in U. P. 1
The Law of Evidence in India 11
The Law of Shah Jog and other Hundis 11

OBITUARY

Mr. Justice Lalit Mohan Banerji 13

IMPERIAL AND LOCAL ACTS (U. P.)

PAGE

Agra Tenancy (Amendment) Act (II of 1931) 1
Code of Civil Procedure (Amendment) Act (X of 1932) 4
Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (XXI of 1932) 93
Indian Companies (Supplementary Amendment) Act (I of 1932) 4
Indian Emigration (Amendment) Act, 1932 (XVI of 1932) 91
Public Suits Validation Act (XI of 1932) 6
Special Powers Ordinance (X of 1932) 61
Trade Disputes Act, 1929 (XIX of 1932) 92
U. P. Arrears of Rent Act (I of 1931) 2
U. P. Court-Fees (Second Amendment) Act, 1932 (VII of 1932) 91
U. P. Court-Fees (Amendment) Act (III of 1932) 49
U. P. District Boards (Second Amendment) Act (X of 1932) 83
U. P. Land Revenue (Amendment) Act (II of 1932) 7
U. P. Land Revenue (Second Amendment) Act (XII of 1932) 95
U. P. Medical (Amendment) Act (IV of 1931) 3
U. P. Municipalities (Amendment) Act (II of 1931) 3
U. P. Municipalities (Amendment) Act (V of 1932) 10
U. P. Stamp (Amendment) Act (IV of 1932) 21

CONTENTS OF INDEX

	PAGE
Abadi	1131
Accounts	1132
Agra Pre-emption Act (XI of 1922)	1132
Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901)	1132
Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926)	1132
Appeal	1132
Arbitration Act (IX of 1899)	1132
Arms Act (XI of 1878)	1132
Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act (Local Act II of 1903)	1132
Burden of Proof	1133
Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908)	1133
Company	1149
Companies Act (VII of 1913)	1149
Contract	1150
Contract Act (IX of 1872)	1150
Co-sharer	1152
Costs	1152
Court-Fees	1152
Court-Fees Act (VII of 1870)	1152
Court of Wards Act (Local Act IV of 1912)	1155
Criminal Procedure Code (V of 1898)	1155
Criminal Tribes Act (VI 1924)	1162
Custom	1162
Damages	1162
District Boards Act (Local, X of 1922)	1162
Estoppel	1163
Evidence Act (I of 1872)	1163
Excise Act (Local Act IV of 1910)	1164
Executant	1164
Family Settlement	1165
General Clauses Act (X of 1897)	1165
Grant	1165
Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890)	1165
Hindu Law	1166
Hindu Widow's Remarriage Act (XV of 1856)	1170
Hire-purchase	1170
Income-tax	1170
Income-tax Act (XI of 1922)	1170
Insolvency	1172
Land Acquisition Act (I of 1894)	1172
Landlord and Tenant	1173
Land Revenue Act (Local Act III of 1901)	1173
Legal Practitioner	1173
Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879)	1174
Limitation Act (IX of 1908)	1174

PAGE

Madras Irrigation Cess Act (VII of 1865) 1179
Majority Act (IX of 1875) 1179
Minor 1179
Mohammedan Law 1179
Mortgage 1181
Municipalities Act (Local Act II of 1916) 1183
Mussalman Waqf Act (XLII of 1923) 1185
Negotiable Instruments Act (XXVI of 1881) 1185
N. W. Tenancy Act (XII of 1881) 1185
Oaths Act (X of 1873) 1185
Oudh Estates Act of 1862 1185
Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869) 1186
Oudh Taluqdari Estate 1186
Partition 1186
Partition Act (IV of 1893) 1186
Penal Code (XXVII of 1870) 1186
Pre-emption 1188
Pre-emption Act (Local Act XI of 1922) 1189
Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) 1190
Professional misconduct 1191
Prostitute 1191
Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) 1191
Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887) 1193
Public Prostitute 1194
Railway 1194
Railways Act (IX of 1890) 1195
Registration Act (XVI of 1908) 1195
Res Judicata 1196
Riparian Rights 1196
Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) 1196
Stamp Act (II of 1899) 1197
Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925) 1197
Tenancy Act (Local Act II of 1901) 1198
Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926) 1199
Tort 1204
Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) 1204
Trusts Act (II of 1882) 1209
U. P. Court of Wards Act (IV of 1912) 1209
U. P. Land Revenue Act (III of 1901) 1210
U. P. Municipalities Act (II of 1916) 1210
Will 1210

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.
LAW COLLEGE

TABLE OF CASES

REPORTED

PRIVY COUNCIL

	Page
Abdul Halim Khan v. Saadat Ali Khan	593
Bageshwari Charan Singh v. Jagarnath Kuari	186
Brij Indar Kuar v. Jai Indar Bahadur Singh	747
Dulahin Jadunath Kuar v. Bisheshar Baksh Singh	632
Faqir Chand v. Aziz Ahmad Khan, I. L. R. 54 All. 199	195
Ghulam Mohammad v. Ghulam Husain, I. L. R. 54 All. 93	245
Gopal Saran Narain Singh v. Sita Devi	703
Hans Nath v. Ragho Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 189	190
Kadiyala Venkata Subamma v. Katreddi Ramayya	293
Lasa.Din v. Gulab Kunwar	913
Manmatha Nath Mullick v. Headit Ali	341
Maung Sein Done v. Ma Pan Nyun	735
Mohammad Afzal Khan v. Abdul Rahman	909
Mohammad Ejaz Husain v. Mohammad Iftikhar Husain	199
Mohammad Raza v. Abbas Bandi Bibi	709
Mohammad Sadiq Ali Khan v. Fakr Jahan Begam	663
Nagendra Nath Dey v. Suresh Chandra Dey	643
Nisar Ali Khan v. Mohammad Ali Khan	691
Prag Narain v. The Collector of Agra, I. L. R. 54 All. 286	741
Prem Narain v. Ram Charan	182
Raj Kumar Sen Chowdhury v. Ram Sundar Shaha	198
Rashid Ahmad v. Anisa Khatun, I. L. R. 54 All. 46	344
Satgur Prasad v. Har Narain Das	297
Shiba Prasad Singh v. Prayag Kumari Debi	919
Sorabjee v. Dwarkadas Ranchhoddas	889
The Australian Investment Trust, Ltd. v. The Strand and Pitt Street Properties, Ltd.	963
The Benares Bank, Ltd. v. Hari Narain	714
The Commissioner of Income Tax, Bengal v. Shaw, Wallace & Co.	588
The Commissioner of Income Tax, Central Provinces and Berar v. Sir S. M. Chitnavis	647
The Official Liquidator of M. E. Moolla Sons, Ltd. v. Mrs. Perrin R. Burjorjee	706
The Ripon Press and Sugar Mill Co., Ltd., Bellary v. Gopal Chetti	825
The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Sannidhiraju Subbarayudu	384
Tsng Chuen v. Li po Kwai	971

FULL BENCH

	Page
Afzali Begam v. Kanhyya Lal	722
Amraj Singh v. Shambhu Singh	895
An Advocate of Benares—In the matter of	773
Bhajani Lal v. The Secretary of State	769
Bhola Umar v. Kausilla	941
Gajadhar Prasad v. Gauri Shankar, I. L. R. 54 All. 698	533
Gobardhan Das v. Dau Dayal, I. L. R. 54 All. 573	365
Kalu Ram v. Babu Lal, I. L. R. 54 All. 812	684
Kaulpati Kunwar v. Ram Baran Singh	677
Lachman Singh v. Surendra Bahadur Singh	653
Narsingh Narain v. Ram Chander Pandey	719
Shanti Lal v. Agha Dost Mohammad	745
Siraj Fatima v. Mahmood Ali, I. L. R. 54 All. 646	437
Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd.—In the matter of	394
Tota Ram v. Ram Lal	627

HIGH COURT

A

Abdul Jalil Khan v. Mohammad Abdul Salam Khan 733
Abdul Rafiq v. Bhajan 77
Abdul Rab v. Akbar Husain 561
Abdul Rahman v. King-Emperor 155
Abul Wahab v. Sughra Begum, I. L. R. 54 All. 455 171
Abdul Wahid v. Tribhawan Das 13
Afzal Husain v. Mohammad Ahsan 266
Ali Husain v. Lachhmi Narain Mahajan, I. L. R. 54 All. 416 168
Amba Sahai v. Nathu 1026
Ambika Prasad v. Devi Dayal, I. L. R. 54 All. 401 235
Amir Hasan Khan v. Mohammad Nazir Hasan, I. L. R. 54 All. 499 275
A Mukhtar of Gorakhpur—In the matter of 116
An Advocate of Benares—In the matter of 861
Anandi v. Lakhmi Chand 208
Anandi Devi v. Mohan Lal, I. L. R. 54 All. 534 335
Anand Singh v. The Collector of Bijnor 868
Arjun Singh v. Mahesha Nand 474
Asia Bibi v. Malik Aziz Ahmad, I. L. R. 54 All. 448 230
A. U. John v. Suraj Bhan, I. L. R. 54 All. 553 385
Avinas Chandra Banerji—In the matter of, I. L. R. 54 All. 293 140
Aziz Fatma v. Mukund Lal 572
Aziz Ullah Khan v. The Court of Wards, Shahjehanpur, I. L. R. 54 All. 800 784

B

Babu Lal v. Raghunandan 311
Bachchan Lal v. Narottam Datt 1090
Badri Chandan v. Indrajit Pertab Bahadur, I. L. R. 54 All. 736 675
Badri Gopi v. K.-E. 1075
Badri Nath v. Raja Rám 883
Badri Prasad v. Jhamman 1076
Badri Prasad Misir v. Bijai Nand Tewari 851
Balbhaddar Upadhya v. Sheo Mangal 413
Balkrishna Sharma v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 331 39
Balzor Singh v. Raghunandan Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 85 33
Bandhan Singh v. Daulata Kuar 384
Barmha Singh v. Emperor 865
Basdeo Narain Singh v. Birju Singh 30
Basdeo Singh v. Ram Raj Singh 71
Basharat Beg v. Hira Lal 497
Behari v. Muthra 1024
Bhagwan Sahai v. Ram Chander 849
Bhagwanti v. Dhanwani 244
Bhagwant Singh v. Bhao Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 490 272
Bhagwati Prasad, Rais, Alinagar, Gorakhpur—In the matter of, I. L. R. 54 All. 496 389
Bhajja v. Mohammad Said Khan, I. L. R. 54 All. 525 489
Bhan Datt v Moti Lal 306
Bharosa Shukul v. Manbasi Kuar 875
Bhikugir v. King-Emperor 530
Bhim Shah v. Ude Ram Shah 108
Bikram Singh v. Dip Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 767 514
Bishambhar Nath v. Achal Singh 816
Bishambhar Nath v. The Agra Electric Stores, Ltd., I. L. R. 54 All. 541 354
Bohra Panna Lal v. Basdeo 1100
Brij Gopal v. Suraj Karan 466
Brij Lal v. Emperor 269

C

Chanchal v. King-Emperor 28
Chanderdeo Chaube v. Megh Narain 1069
Chandi Ram v. Kunj Behari Lal 411
Chandrabhan v. Raj Kumar 1012
Chand Rekha v. Janki Prasad 481
Chedi v. King-Emperor 107
Chottey Lal Panna Lal v. R. K. Ry., I. L. R. 54 All. 557 526
Chiranji Lal v. Mahadeo Prasad 819
Chitar Singh v. Lachmi Narain 501
Chiteshwar Dube v. King-Emperor 42
Chokhey Lal v. Sri Kishen 228
Collector of Farrukhabad v. Kishore Mohun 19

PAGE PAGE

D

Dakhani v. King-Emperor 1103
Dambar Lal v. Chand Mal 578
Dan Sahai v. Jai Ram Singh 517
Dasai v. King-Emperor 75
Dhapo v. Bakridi, I. L. R. 54 All. 770 724
Dhiraj Lal Ram Prasad v. Jacob Behrens & Sons 1055
Duiji Kunwar v. Baila Kunwar 521
Durga Shankar v. Ganga Sahai 493

E

Edna May Olivia Hardless v. Harold Richard Hardless 755

F

Faqir Chand v. Kundan Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 622 471
Fatima Begam v. Bansidhar 289
Fattu v. King-Emperor 1073

G

Ganga Kalwar v. Beni Madho Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 82 111
Ganpatji v. Hanuman Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 125 1
Gauri Singh v. Bechu Singh 1092
Girdhari Lal v. Bishun Chand, I. L. R. 54 All. 506 279
Gobardhan Das v. Afzal Husain 598
Gopi Shankar v. Lilawati, I. L. R. 54 All. 379 142
Gulab Singh v. Raghubir Saran 357

H

Hakim Mohd. Fazihuzzaman v. Anwer Husain 126
Halima Begam v. Mohit Ullah Khan, I. L. R. 54 All. 742 621
Halka alias Dariyao v. Nannhon 101
Hamid Hasan v. King-Emperor 211
Hankar Kunwari v. Ishwar Dayal Singh 313
Harakh Chand v. Sajida Begum, I. L. R. 54 All. 521 315
Harish Chandra v. King-Emperor 1089
Harnam Chandar v. Rup Chand, I. L. R. 54 All. 532 361
Harnarain Sahi v. Govind Rai 603
Har Prasad v. King-Emperor 579
Hira Lal v. King-Emperor 1087
Hirambho Nath Banerji v. Sarojni Devi 582
Hira Singh v. Chandan Singh 815
Hurmat v. King-Emperor 154

I

Inayat Husain v. Bashir Ahmad 416
In re Rashid Ahmad 764
In re The Official Receiver 152
In the Goods of R. V. A. Stock, I. L. R. 54 All. 605 363

J

Jagannath v. King-Emperor 179
Jagannath v. K.-E. 1074
Jagannath Prasad v. Chunni Lal 1110
Jagannath Prasad v. Jamuna Bai 125
Jagdish Narain v. Hazari Lal 309
Jag Narain Pandey v. Mata Badal, I. L. R. 54 All. 790 601
Jai Dayal Madan Gopal of Benares—In the matter of 999
Jai Karan v. Panchaiti Akhara Chota Naya Udasi Nanak Shahi .. 1035
Jangi Singh v. Gudri Singh 175
Janki Das v. Sheo Prasad, I. L. R. 54 All. 344 43
Jathali Bhul v. Nadia 468
Jauhari v. Tunday 986
Jitmal Ram Gopal v. Nathu Ram 407
Jiwa Ram v. King-Emperor 519
Joti Prasad v. Har Prasad 567
Juthi Upadhya v. Kesho Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 753 .. 495

PAGE PAGE

K

Kallu Mal v. Bikramajit Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 409 260
Kanauji Lal v. Chiraunji Lal 863
Kanhaiya Lal v. Mahdei, I. L. R. 54 All. 523 47, 320
Kanhaiya Lal v. R. H. Skinner, I. L. R. 54 All. 240 129
Kaniz Fatma v. Yad Husain 1063
Karan Singh v. Sadho Ram 1118
Kashinath v. Emperor 113
Kasturi v. Balmukand 1068
Katwaroo Rai v. King-Emperor 624
Kaul Ahir v. King-Emperor 1072
King-Emperor v. Abdul 776
King-Emperor v. Abdul Aziz 301
King-Emperor v. Bahadur Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 335 112
King-Emperor v. Baijnath, I. L. R. 54 All. 756 483
King-Emperor v. Chittira 1070
King-Emperor v. Harihar Kalwar 157
King-Emperor v. Mirza Mohammad Ibrahim 701
King-Emperor v. Patrakhan 67
King-Emperor v. Raja Ram 754
King-Emperor v. Shambhu, I. L. R. 54 All. 350 162
King-Emperor v. Sikhdar, I. L. R. 54 All. 411 570
King-Emperor v. Sohan, I. L. R. 54 All. 792 801
Kishan Chand v. Lachhmi Chand 838
Kishori Lal v. Balkishan, I. L. R. 54 All. 824 984
Kishun Piyari v. Gopal Narain 795
Kirpa Ram v. Kunwar Bahadur, I. L. R. 54 All. 467 241
Kundan Lal v. Duli Chand, I. L. R. 54 All. 347 45

L

Lachmi Narain v. Piarey Lal 516
Lachmi Narain Girdhari Lal v. Mansa Ram Murlidhar 792
Lachman Das v. Lakshmi Narain, I. L. R. 54 All. 444 226
Lachmi Narain v. King-Emperor 5
Lachmi Chand v. Anandi 177
Lakshmi Chand v. Behari Lal, I. L. R. 54 All. 280 18
Lal Bhupendra Narain Singh v. Ashtabhuja Ratan Kuer 418
Lalman v. Bishambhar Nath, I. L. R. 54 All. 359 49
Laraiti v. Shiam Sunder Lal 509
Latif Jahan Begam v. Mohammad Nabi Khan 9
Laxmi Narain v. King-Emperor 880
L. C. De Souza, Cawnpore—In the matter of, I. L. R. 54 All. 548 409

M

Madan Mohan Lal v. Sheoraj Kunwar 503
Mahabali Prasad v. H. N. Palmer, I. L. R. 54 All. 781 761
Mahabir Pershad v. Chitto Lal, I. L. R. 54 All. 546 397
Mahadeo Pandey v. King-Emperor 224
Mahadeo Prasad v. Sarju Prasad 758
Mahadeo Sahai v. The Secretary of State for India, I. L. R. 54 All. 390 254
Mahtab Singh v. The Collector of Saharanpur 556
Majhli Dulaiya v. Munna Lal 562
Manni Lal v. King-Emperor 213
Mannu Lal v. Lachman Das 564
Mannu Naik v. Mathura Prasad 1107
Mela Ram Gorwara v. The Secretary of State for India in Council 405
Misri Lal v. Debi Charan 321
Mohammad Abdul Jalil Khan v. Mohammad Abdus Salam Khan 93
Mohammad Ahmad Saeed Khan v. Kishori Lal 414
Mohammad Asghar v. Abida Begam 730
Mohammad Bashir v. King-Emperor 104
Mohammad Ismail v. Liyaqat Husain 165
Mohammad Rafi v. Kripa Ramji 1010
Mohammad Salim-ullah Khan v. Khalil-ur-Rahman Khan, I. L. R. 54 All. 465 149
Moti Chand v. Balram Das 1128
Moti Chand v. The British India Corporation Ltd., Cawnpore 54
Mufti Mohammad Hasnain v. Rustam Ali 1116
Muhammadi v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 1 15
Municipal Board, Etah through The Chairman v. Asghari Jan alias Lappo 117
Munni Bibi alias Ambika Dei v. Triloki Nath, I. L. R. 54 All. 140 63
Murlidhar v. Jainti Prasad 812

N

Nandan Sahu v. Hari Shankar 726
Nand Gopal Das v. Batuk Prasad Gupta, I. L. R. 54 All. 17 36
Nand Kishore v. Behari Lal 329
Nanhi v. Ketki 69
Nasir v. King-Emperor 1125
Nasrullah v. Wajid Ali, I. L. R. 54 All. 475 262
Nathu Ram v. Madan Gopal 391
Naziran v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 611 399
Newal Kishore v. Sarju Ram Sahu, I. L. R. 54 All. 774 611
Niaz Ahmad v. Phul Kunwar, I. L. R. 54 All. 428 237

P

Padarath Tewari v. Dulhin Tapesha Kueri 221
Panchanan Banerji v. Anant Prasad Pandey, I. L. R. 54 All. 738 477
Panna Lal Sham Lal v. Abdullah Usman 1095
Paras Ram Chaubey v. Sheo Dhan Pandey 595
Parbhoo Dayal v. Dwarka Prasad, I. L. R. 54 All. 371 215
Parmarath Gir v. Ram Sarup Singh 303
Parmeshar Kurmi v. Bakhtawar Pande 908
Parsottamanand Giri v. Mayanand Giri 777
Piyare Lal v. Chunni Lal 1018
P. K. Banerji, Official Liquidator, Cawnpore v. Mangal Prasad 53
Posti Mal v. Radha Kishan Lal Chand, I. L. R. 54 All. 763 486
Puttu Lal v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 5 32
Puttoo Lal v. Munshi Lal 308

Q

Qabul v. King-Emperor 1079
Qasim Husain Beg v. Kaniz Sakina, I. L. R. 54 All. 806 781

R

Radha Ballabh v. Deoki Nandan 207
Raghunandan v. Shew Nandan 339
Raghunandan Chaube v. Bhuwal Tewari, I. L. R. 54 All. 423 257
Raghunath Baraie v. Jainarain Baraie 99
Raghunath Das v. Ganesh Das 615
Raghunath Prasad v. Jwala Prasad 574
Ram Agyan Pandey v. Chatrughun Singh 864
Rama Shankar v. Iqbal Husain 480
Ram Chand v. King-Emperor 1078
Ram Charan Sahu v. Jumna Prasad Sahu 859
Ram Charan Lal v. Hanifa Khatun, I. L. R. 54 All. 796 727
Ram Khelawan v. Sheo Nandan, I. L. R. 54 All. 413 166
Ram Kumar v. Girdhari Lal 860
Ram Kunwar v. Amar Nath, I. L. R. 54 All. 472 267
Ram Naresh Rai v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 55 103
Ram Nath v. Nanak Chand 821
Ram Pati Kunwar v. Phool Singh 421
Ram Phal v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 54 All. 230 176
Ram Raj Pandey v. Har Prasad 109
Ram Ratan v. King-Emperor 753
Ram Sahai v. Debi Din, I. L. R. 54 All. 482 584
Ram Shankar v. The Secretary of State for India in Council 842
Raza Husain v. The District Board, Banda 1081

S

Sabir Husain v. Farzand Hasan, I. L. R. 54 All. 608 387
Sabratan v. Dhanpat Gadariya 1021
Saghir Fatma Bibi v. Brij Raj Singh 757
Sahadeo Das v. Raja Ram 886
Sahu Deputy Shankar v. Mangal Sen 1007
Sahu Ram Kishore v. Chiranji Lal 1060
Salona Bibi v. Bu Ali Khan 855
Sampat v. Ram Prasad 499
Sarabdeo Bharthi v. Ram Bali 836
Sarju v. Emperor 523
Sarju Prasad Sonar v. Mahadeo Prasad Pandey, I. L. R. 54 All. 786 511
Sarnam Prasad v. Sunder Sahu 1097
Satya Nidhan Banerji v. Mohd. Hazabber Ali Khan 1123
Secretary of State for India v. Basant Rai 174
Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Prasad 752

	PAGE
Secretary of State for India in Council v. Girdhari Lal Shambhunath, I. L. R. 54 All. 226	150
Shahzad Singh v. Jiachha Kunwar	853
Shankar Lal v. Hashmi Begam	878
Shanti Lal v. Ram Gopal	239
Sharda Prasad v. King-Emperor	766
Sheikh Mohammad v. Sagar Mal	470
Sheo Narain v. Bala Rao	331
Sher Pal Singh v. Aijaz Fatima	1029
Shiyam Dei v. Bankey Lal	797
Shri Chand v. Bansidhar	219
Shri Kishan Lal v. Bijai Singh	857
Shukrullah v. Zuhra Bibi	1039
Siddiq-un-nissa Bibi v. Nizamuddin Khan, I. L. R. 54 All. 128	21
Sidh Nath Tiwari v. Tej Bahadur Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 516	359
Sita Ram v. Receiver of the Estate of Ram Prasad, insolvent	285
Sohan Pal v. Mustafa Husain	261
Sohni v. Raj Kumar Singh Jain	809
Sridat v. Mohar Singh	392
Sri Ram v. Jai Kishun Lal	873
Sri Ram Singh v. Baldeo Prasad	605
Subah Lal v. Fateh Mohammad, I. L. R. 54 All. 628	425
Sukhdeoji v. Ram Lal	1085
Sukhnundan Singh v. Ramdeyi Kunwar	731
Sunder Lal v. Emperor	160
Sunder Lal v. Subedar Singh, I. L. R. 54 All. 777	50[illegible]
Suraj Bhan Ugarsen—In the matter of	576

T

The District Board of Farrukhabad v. Ikhlaque Husain	803
The East Indian Ry. v. Narain Das Ganga Saran, I. L. R. 54 All. 368	217
The Gresham Life Insurance Society, Ltd. v. The Collector of Etawah	1015
The Official Receiver of Moradabad v. Murtaza Ali, I. L. R. 54 All. 616	402
The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Fazal Uddin Badruddin	1033
The Secretary of State for India in Council through the Agent, E. I. Ry., Calcutta v. Kesho Prasad Sheo Prasad, Belanganj, Agra	788

Z

Zia Uddin Ahmad Khan v. Akbar Ali	317

TABLE OF CASES

CITED

PAGE

A

Abadi Begum v. Kaniz Zainab, 25 A. L. J. 51 856
Abdul Aziz v. Mariam Bibi, 25 A. L. J. R. 48 314
Abdul Fata Mahomed Ishak v. Russumoy Dhur Chowdhury, 22 I. A. 76 250
Abdul Ghafur v. Ghulam Husain, I. L. R. 35 All. 296 722
Abdul Gufur v. Nizamuddin, 19 I. A. 170 250
Abdul Hafiz Khan v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1926 All. 188 106
Abdul Rahman v. King-Emperor, 54 I. A. 96 867
Abdul Sattar v. Special Deputy Collector, Vizagapatam Harbour, I. L. R. 47 Mad. 357 772
Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 496 314
Abi Dhunimsa Bibi v. Muhammad Fathi Uddin, 41 Mad. 1026 783
Achhayya v. Hanumantraydu, I. L. R. 14 Mad. 269 123
Aditnarayan v. Mahabir Prasad, 48 I. A. 86 536
Aditya Prasad v. Ram Ratan Lal, 57 I. C. 173 597
Administrator-General of Bengal v. The Land Acquisition Collector, 12 C. W. N. 241 770
Ahmad Ali Khan Alavi v. The Secretary of State, A. I. R. 1932 Oudh 180 753, 772
Ahmad Wali Khan v. Shamsh-ul-Jehan Begum, I. L. R. 28 All. 482 20
Ajudhia Prasad v. Gopi Nath, I. L. R. 39 All. 415 860
Akora Suth v. Boreani, 2 Beng. L. R. 199 949
Alamelu Ammal v. Venkatarama Iyer, A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 919 169
Ali Asmat Shakur v. G. I. P. Ry., [1930] A. L. J. 1125 1034
Ali Bakhsh v. Allahdad Khan, I. L. R. 32 All. 551 278
Allah Bakhsh v. Hamid Khan, 1931 A. L. J. R. 56 283
Allah Wasai v. Ramzan, 1929 A. I. R. Lah. 498 490
Allauddin v. The G. I. P. Ry. Co., 14 A. L. J. 494 528
Ameeroonissa Khatoon v. Abedoonissa Khatoon, 2 I. A. at 104 672
Amin Ullah v. Hajrah, 3 A. L. J. 767 479
Amir Begam v. Badruddin Husain, I. L. R. 36 All. 336 1092
Amir Chand v. Kanhaya Ram, 16 I. C. 777 388
Amir Hasan v. Nazir Hasan, 1932 A. L. J. R. 275 991
Amir Hasan Khan v. Emperor, 16 A. L. J. R. 527 154
Amrit Kumari v. Lakhi Narayan, 10 W. R. (F.B.) 76 541
Anand Prakash v. Narain Das Dori Lal, 1931 A. L. J. R. 122 288, 684
Anjaneyulu v. Chinna Subbiah, 82 I. C. 952=A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 860 462
Annie Besant v. Narayaniah, I. L. R. 38 Mad. 807 at 822 24
Anrudh Kumar v. Lachhmi Chand, 50 All. 818 734
Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand, 18 A. L. J. R. 789 89, 995

PAGE

Anwar v. Kishan Singh, 71 I. C. 171 . . 434
Apte v. Trimal Hanumant, I. L. R. 49 Bom. 695 . . 372
Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangaswamy Pillai, I. L. R. 38 Mad. 922 . . 467
Aruna Chelliam Chetti v. Subramaniam Chetti, I. L. R. 30 Mad. 235 277
Asha Bibi v. Kadir Ibrahim Rowther, [1919] I. L. R. 33 Mad. 22 at 23 347
Ashirbad Muchi v. Maju Muchini, 8 Cal. W. N. 838 8
Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee, I. L. R. 5 Cal. 438 566
A. S. S. Subbaiya Pandaram v. Mahamad Mustapha Maracayar, 21 A. L. J. 731 838
Aulad Ali v. Ali Athar, I. L. R. 49 All. 527 39, 854
Ayiswaryanandaji Saheb v. Sivaji Raja Saheb, 49 Mad. 116 877
Ayyaswami Iyer v. Annan Thirumala Iyer, 47 Mad. L. J. 8 77
Aziz Ahmad Khan v. Chhote Lal, 26 A. L. J. R. 298 20
Azizpur Rahman v. Ali Raja Chaudhri, 1928 A. I. R. Cal. 527 373

B

Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 339 538
Babu Lal v. Raghunandan, A. L. J. R. 1930, 1200 308
Babu Ram v. Emperor, 23 A. L. J. R. 356 225
Bachan Singh v. Bhika Singh, 106 I. C. (A) 49 440
Badal Singh v. Debi Saran Dhar Dube, 49 All. 506=25 A. L. J. R. 485 312
Badami Kunwar v. Dinu Rai, I. L. R. 8 All. 111 (F.B.) 369
Badri Das v. Jivan Lal, 10 A. L. J. 480 559
Badri Narain Singh v. Mahant Kailash Gir, I. L. R. 5 Pat. 341 837
Bagala Sundari Devi v. Prosanna Nath Mukerji, 21 C. W. N. 375 386
Bahadur v. Khairuddin Husain, I. L. R. 29 All. 133 147
Bahadur Singh v. Ramphal, I. L. R. 5 Luck. 552 1009
Baijnath Lall v. Ramoodeen Chowdry, [1874] L. R. 1 Ind. App. 106 912
Baijnath Prasad Singh v. Tej Bali Singh, [1921] L. R. 48 I. A. 195 925
Bakhtawar Begum v. Husaini Khanum, I. L. R. 36 All. 195 1022
Balabux v. Rukhma Bai, I. L. R. 30 Cal. 725 1019
Balakrishna Menon v. Uma, I. L. R. 52 Mad. 263 228
Balakrishna Udayar v. Vasudeva Ayyar, I. L. R. 40 Mad. 793 805
Bala Prasad v. Kanoo, 14 I. C. 407 786
Balbhadar Singh v. Lakshmi Bai, [1930] A. L. J. 28 at 623 656
Baldeo Misir v. Ram Lagan Shukul : Qudrat-un-nissa v. Abdul Rashid, 48 All. 616 193
Baldeo Shukul v. Syed Yusuf, 60 I. C. 318 474
Baldeo Singh v. King-Emperor, A. I. R. 1926 All. 566 156
Baldeo Singh v. Udal Singh, I. L. R. 43 All. at 4 190
Balgobind Das v. Narain Lal, I. L. R. 15 All. 339 1114
Bal Krishn v. Basdeo, L. R. 44 I. A. 261 807
Bal Krishna v. Ram Krishna, 1931 A. L. J. 499 1019, 1113
Balkrishna v. The Collector of Bombay Suburban, I. L. R. 47 Bom. 699 772
Balwant Raghunath v. Bala, I. L. R. 46 Bom. 833 1008
Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuer, I. L. R. 5 All. 27 232
Banarsi Das v. Ramzan, 72 I. C. 477=1924 A. I. R. Lah. 342 375
Bandhu Dayal v. Gauri Dat Pandey, 1930 A. L. J. 1247 307
Banka Singh v. Gokul, 25 A. L. J. 246 504, 866, 1088
Bansi Dhar v. Sital Pershad, I. L. R. 29 All. 13=3 A. L. J. 613 333
Banwari Lal v. Maksudan Lal, [1930] A. L. J. 280 1017

	PAGE
Barton v. Bank of New South Wales, 15 App. Cas. 379	980
Baru Mal v. Sunder Lal, 21 A. L. J. R. 330	513
Basangowda v. Irgowdatti, I. L. R. 25 Cal. 869	825
Basanti Bibi v. Babu Lal Poddar, 1930 A. L. J. 1517 (1519)	1001
Basappa Buddappa Halavalad v. Bhimangowda Shiddangowda Patil, I. L. R. 52 Bom. 208	511
Basawa Singh v. Sardarni Bhagwan, 17 I. C. 270	779
Bawan Das v. Mahesh Lal, I. L. R. 9 All. 961	628
B. B. & C. I. Ry. Co. v. Mitthu, 1931 A. L. J. 727	491
Begu v. King-Emperor, 23 A. L. J. 636	802
Behari Lal v. Chhajju, 2 A. L. J. 272	866
Bellamy v. Sabine, 1 De Gex and J. 566	194
Benares Bank Ltd. v. Hari Narain, [1932] A. L. J. 714	897
Bengal Nagpur Ry. Co. Ltd. v. Hukum Chand Hardat Rai, A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 559	219
Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram, I. L. R. 38 All. 452=14 A. L. J. 438	440
Bhagwan v. Emperor, A. I. R. 1929 Oudh 190	755
Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Das, 39 All. 8	1129
Bhagwan Din v. Indrani, 24 O. C. 297	962
Bhagwat Das v. Chhedi Koeri, 24 A. L. J. R. 537 (F.B.)	378
Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal, I. L. R. 31 All. 82=6 A. L. J. 71	583
Bhagwati Dayal v. Dhan Kunwar, 24 A. L. J. 331	842
Bhagwati Saran v. Deo Saran, 1928 A. I. R. All. 166	874
Bhagwati Saran Man Tewari v. Parmeshar Das, I. L. R. 36 All. 476	314
Bhairon Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass, 17 A. L. J. 787	392
Bharat Singh v. Tej Singh, I. L. R. 40 All. 246=16 A. L. J. 193	873
Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad, 7 C. L. J. 1	59
Bhikan Saran v. Piare Lal, 1931 A. L. J. 103	1122
Bhimji N. Dalal v. The Bombay Trust Corporation Ltd., 54 Bom. 381	764
Bhola Nath v. Baskin, [1894] A. W. N. 127	479
Bhola Nath v. Net Ram, 3 A. L. J. R. 801	91
Bhup Singh v. Chedda Singh, I. L. R. 42 All. 597	905
Bhura v. Shahabuddin, I. L. R. 30 All. 128	611
Bhyah Ram Singh v. Bhyah Ugar Singh, [1870] 13 Moore's I. A. 373	638
Bibi Khaver Sultan v. Bibi Rukhia Sultan, I. L. R. 29 Bom. 468	671
Bickerton v. Walker, 31 Ch. Div. 151, 159	981
Bihari Lal v. Mohan Singh, 42 All. 268	193
Bijai Misir v. Kali Prasad Misir, I. L. R. 39 All. 469	450, 623
Bijai Saran Sahi v. Rudra Bageshwari Prasad, [1930] A. L. J. 531	1117
Bindaji Laxuman Triputikar v. Mathurabai, I. L. R. 30 Bom. 152	1113
Bindeshri Prasad v. Badal Singh, I. L. R. 45 All. 369	1009
Bindubashni Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy, I. L. R. 25 Cal. 305	65
Bipin Chandra Das v. Menajaddi, 47 Cal. L. J. 287	442
Bisesar Ram Dassi Ram v. Har Kishan Pahlad Rai, I. L. R. 47 All. 623	260
Bishambhar v. Radha Kishunji, 1931 A. L. J. R. 393	73
Board v. Board, L. R. 9 Q. B. 48	696
Bonda Chinnaya v. Pothala Achanma, 16 I. C. 543	442
Brahannayaki v. Krishna, I. L. R. 9 Mad. 92	194
Brij Lal Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad, 17 Cal. W. N. 133	258
Brij Narain v. Mangla Prasad, [1923] L. R. 51 I. A. 129=46 All. 95	717, 901
Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup, I. L. R. 48 All. 44=23 A. L. J. 901	440

PAGE

Broder v. Saillard, [1876] 2 Ch. D. 692 .. 760
Brojo Lal Saha Banikya v. Budh Nath Pyari Lal & Co., 55 Cal. 551 .. 1001
B. Sheolochan Singh v. B. Saheb Singh, 14 I. A. 63 .. 876
Bunkates Sewak Singh v. Rama Das, 6 A. L. J. 737 .. 658
Bussunteram v. Kamaluddin, I. L. R. 11 Cal. 421 .. 729
Byramji v. Chunnilal, I. L. R. 27 Bom. 266 .. 194

C

C. A. Easwara Iyer v. K. Govindarajulu Naidu, I. L. R. 39 Mad. at 689 .. 169
Carrit v. Real and Personal Advance Co., 42 Ch. D. 263 .. 980
Chamiyappa Tharagan v. Rama Ayyar, I. L. R. 44 Mad. 232 .. 291
Chanchal v. King-Emperor, [1932] A. L. J. R. 28 .. 402
Chandrani Kuar v. Sheo Nath, A. I. R. 1931 Oudh 146 .. 658
Chandra Shekhar Tewari v. Balakdhar Dube, 10 A. L. J. 149 .. 441
Chandu Lal v. Koka Mal, I. L. R. 43 All. 334 .. 73
Chattarpal Singh v. Raja Ram, I. L. R. 7 All. 661 .. 489
Chaturbhuj v. Govind Ram, I. L. R. 45 All. 407 .. 906
Chaudhri Jagdish Misir v. Chaudhri Sureshwar Misir, 6 Pat. L. J. 253 .. 373
Chedi Lal v. Bhagwan Das, I. L. R. 11 All. 234 .. 65
Chhaju Ram v. Neki, 49 I. A. 144 .. 445
Chhatarpali v. Kalap Dei, [1931] A. L. J. 837 .. 417
Chhotey Lal v. Brijraj Singh, 26 A. L. J. 90 .. 678
Choke Lal v. Behari Lal, I. L. R. 42 All. 634 .. 1026
Chotkanu Lal v. Ganga Singh, A. I. R. 1927 All. 219 .. 907
Chowdhry Chintamun Singh v. Mst. Nowlukho Konwari, [1875] L. R. 2 I. A. 263 .. 925
Christiana Sens Law v. Benarshi Proshad Chowdhury, [1914] 19 C. W. N. 287 .. 646
Chunduru Punnayyan v. Rajani Viranna, 45 Mad. 425 .. 442
Chunia v. Ram Dial, I. L. R. 1 All. 360 .. 386
Chunni Lal v. Lakshman, I. L. R. 46 Bom. 24 .. 81, 90
Chunni Lal v. The Nizam's Guaranteed State Ry. Co. Ltd., I. L. R. 29 All. 228 .. 528
Churya v. Baneshwar, I. L. R. 48 All. 334=24 A. L. J. 369 .. 885
Collector of Madura v. Mootoo Ramalinga Sathupathy, [1868] 12 Moo. I. A. 397 at 436 .. 932
Connecticut Fire Insurance Co. v. Kavanagh, [1892] A. C. 473 at 480 .. 707
Corea v. Appuhami, [1912] A. C. 230 .. 432
Cottingham v. Earl of Shrewsbury, 3 Hare 627 at 638 .. 609, 737
C. Ross Alston v. Pitambar Das, I. L. R. 25 All. 509 .. 765

D

Dada Saheb v. Gajraj Singh, A. I. R. 1925, Mad. 204 .. 464
Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 142 .. 65
Dalel v. Bhajju, I. L. R. 16 All. 191 .. 145
Dally v. Wonham, 33 Beav. 154 .. 300
Dalton v. Fitzgerald, [1897] 1 Ch. 440 and [1897] 2 Ch. 86 .. 698
Damodar Das v. Adhikari Lakhan Das, 37 I. A. 147 .. 838
Damodar Prasad v. Masudan Singh, A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 85 .. 149
Dan Prasad v. Ganesh 11 A. L. J. 696 .. 504, 866, 1088
Dassu v. King-Emperor, 6 A. L. J. R. 544 .. 17
Data Din v. Nohra, 1930 A. L. J. 1046 .. 622
Daulat Kauri v. Meghu Tewari, I. L. R. 15 All. 382 .. 209
Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh, A. W. N. 1894, 141 .. 441, 640

	PAGE
Dayal Singh v. Ram Rikha, 109 P. R. 1912	746
Dayaram v. Secretary of State, 25 A. L. J. 1002	848
Debendra Nath Dutt v. Administrator-General of Bengal, I. L. R. 35 Cal. 955	141
Debi Rai v. Gokul Prasad, I. L. R. 3 All. 585	374
Deoki Rai v. Harakh Narain Lal, I. L. R. 49 All. 85	306
Deoraj Misra v. Abhai Raj Singh, 25 A. L. J. R. 729	73
Deoraj Tewari v. Indrasan Tewari, I. L. R. 8 Pat. 706 at 709	282
De Silva v. Govind Balwant, I. L. R. 44 Bom. 895	801
Dewan Abdul Alim v. Abdul Hakam, [1926] 53 Cal. 901	646
Dharam Chand v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 596	180
Dharam Das v. Ganga Devi, I. L. R. 29 All. 773	261
Dharamshala Lala Reoti Ram v. Lachhman Prasad, 23 A. L. J. R. 900	85
Digambar Singh v. Ahmad Said Khan, 42 I. A. at 18	194
Dinbandhu v. Yogmaya, I. L. R. 29 Cal. 154	629
Dubri Lal v. Dholu Rai, 3 A. L. J. R. 619	144
Duck v. Mayeer, 2 Q. B. D. 1892, 511	498
Dulari v. Vallabdas Pragji, I. L. R. 13 Bom. 126	490
Duni Chand v. The Commissioner of Income-tax, I. L. R. 10 Lah. 596	390
Durga Bakhsh v. Mirza Mohammad Ali Beg, 1 Oudh Cases 123	688
Durga Prasad v. Kesho Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 8 Cal. 656	447

E

Eda Punnayya v. Jangala Kama Kotayya, 53 In. C. 184	1128
Emperor v. Allahdad Khan, I. L. R. 35 All. 358=11 A. L. J. R. 442	106
Emperor v. Balkishan, 22 A. W. N. 117	30
Emperor v. Bhure Mal, I. L. R. 45 All. 526	40
Emperor v. Chhater Singh, 21 A. L. J. R. 922	108
Emperor v. Ganesh Vaman Joshi, 1931 A. I. R. (Bom.) 140	520
Emperor v. Mahadeo, I. L. R. 32 All. 397	271
Emperor v. Mangu, 25 A. L. J. R. 866	103
Emperor v. Mansur Husain, I. L. R. 41 All. 587	40
Emperor v. Mathura, I. L. R. 41 All. 116=16 A. L. J. R. 884	166
Emperor v. Mohan Singh, I. L. R. 42 All. 522	162
Emperor v. Mukhtara, I. L. R. 46 All. 915	103
Emperor v. Padman Babul Mhatre, 14 Bom. L. R. 585	77
Emperor v. Piare Lal, 12 A. L. J. 254	581
Emperor v. Sayeed Ahmad, I. L. R. 35 All. 575=11 A. L. J. R. 33	106
Emperor v. Sheo Saran Lal, I. L. R. 32 All. 219	115
Emperor v. Umed Singh, I. L. R. 46 All. 64	76
Emperor v. Virji Bhagwan, 11 Bom. L. R. 638	77
Empress v. Mohim Chander Rai, I. L. R. 3 Cal. 765	1104
Empress of India v. Ganraj, I. L. R. 2 All. 444	163
Empress of India v. Kishne, I. L. R. 2 All. 713	802
Empress of India v. Mulu, I. L. R. 2 All. 646	163
Erlanger v. New Sanbrero Coy., 3 A. C. 1218	300
E. V. David v. The Judge Small Causes, 1931 A. L. J. R. 670	153
Ezra v. The Secretary of State for India, I. L. R. 32 Cal. 605 at 629	770

F

Faki v. Khotu, I. L. R. 4 Bom. 590	188
Fakira v. Tasadduq Husain, I. L. R. 19 All. 462	216
Fakir Baksh v. Sadat Ali, I. L. R. 7 All. 376	990

PAGE

Fakirchand Mandal v. Daiba Charan Parni, I. L. R. 54 Cal. 1052 732
Fatima v. Shaik Essa, I. L. R. 7 Bom. 266 295
Fatimatul-nissa Begam v. Sundar Das, I. L. R. 27 Cal. 1004 88
Fatmatul Kubra v. Achchi Begam, I. L. R. 36 All. 33 1122
Firm Partab Singh Pradhan Singh v. Firm Bhai Mewa Singh Jodha, A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 258 169
Forbes v. Ali Haider Khan, I. L. R. 53 Cal. 46 524
Ful Chand v. Nazab Ali Chowdhry, [1908] I. L. R. 36 Cal. 184 347
Furzund Hussein v. Janu Bibee, [1878] I. L. R. 4 Cal. 588 347

G

Gajadhar v. Kausilla, I. L. R. 31 All. 161 949
Gajapali Naida v. Teevammal, A. I. R. 1929 Mad. 765 952
Gajraj Mati Tewarin v. Swami Nath Rai, I. L. R. 39 All. 13 258
Ganesh v. Mullu Mal Girdhas Das, 1931 A. I. R. All. 375 281
Ganeshi Lal v. Nand Kishore, I. L. R. 34 All. 487 271
Ganga Pershad Sahu v. Jhalo, I. L. R. 38 Cal. 862 951
Ganga Prasad v. Beni Prasad, [1930] A. L. J. 601 450
Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal, I. L. R. 23 All. 502 83, 281
Gauri Shankar v. Manki, 21 A. L. J. R. 571 310
Gaya Din v. Jhumman Lal, I. L. R. 37 All. 400 915
Gaya Prasad v. K.-E., 1929 A. L. J. R. 175 225
Ghackjee Dadajee v. The E. I. Co., 2 Morley's Digest, 307 (1843) 847
Ghasitey v. Gobind Das, I. L. R. 30 All. 467 193
Ghulam Husain v. Dina Nath, I. L. R. 23 All. 467 291
Ghulam Mohammad v. Mst. Begam, 1930 A. I. R. (Lah.) 251 434
Gill v. Pearson, 6 East 173 713
G. I. P. Ry. Co. v. Jugul Kishore Mukat Lal, 1930 A. L. J. 297 790
Girdhari Lal v. Ram Lal, I. L. R. 21 All. 200 779
Girja Bai v. Sadashiv Dundiraj, [1816] L. R. 43 I. A. 151 924
Girwar Dayal v. Narain Singh, A. I. R. 1928, All. 211 676
Gobardhan v. Sujan, I. L. R. 16 All. 254 990
Gobind Chunder Roy v. Guru Churn Kurmokar, I. L. R. 15 Cal. 94 59
Gobind Das v. Sarju Das, I. L. R. 30 All. 268 82, 283
Gobind Singh v. Bijay Bahadur Singh, 1929 A. L. J. R. 1279 80
Gondu Ramashubbu Iyer v. Muthiah Kone, 1925 A. I. R. Mad. 968 613
Goorochurn Doss v. Goluckmoney Dossee, [1843] 1 Fulton 165 at 173-174 931
Gopal Chunder Manna v. Gosain Das Kalay, [1898] 25 Cal. 594 646
Gopal Dei v. Chunni Lal, I. L. R. 8 All. 67 360
Gottepati Subamma v. Gottepati Narasamma, 26 I. C. 16 442
Govindasami Pillay v. The Municipal Council, I. L. R. 41 Mad. 620 490
Govind Dayal v. Inayat Ullah, I. L. R. 7 All. 775 879
Govind Rao v. Kamta Prasad, I. L. R. 36 All. 376 587
Greedharee Lall Roy v. Bengal Government, 12 Moore's I. A. 448 (1868) 536
Gregory v. Molesworth, 3 Atkyns 626 440
Gujrati v. Sital Misir, I. L. R. 44 All. 459 885
Gulab Dei v. G. I. P. Ry., 24 A. L. J. 129 528
Gulab Singh v. Gokul Das, I. L. R. 40 Cal. 784 679
Gulzari Lal v. The Collector of Etah, 1931 A. L. J. R. 369 183
Gurusami v. Pandia Chinna, [1921] 44 Mad. 1 930

H

Habib Rowji v. The Standard Aluminium and Brass Works Ltd., I. L. R. 49 Bom. 715 355
Habibuddin v. Hatim Mirza, I. L. R. 6 Lah. 283 1009
Habibur Rahman Chowdhury v. Altaf Ali Chowdhury, [1921] 48 In. App. 114 347
Hafiz Abdullah v. Alli, 4 L. R. All. 139 432
Haidar Husain v. Abdul Ahad, I. L. R. 30 All. 117=5 A. L. J. 62 1032
Haigh v. Kaye, 7 Ch. 469 980
Haji Sheikh Sheikh Bodha v. Sukhram Singh, 22 A. L. J. 857 1011
Halim Shah v. Rahim Bux, 1930 A. I. R. (Oudh) 475 434
Hamira Bibi v. Zubaida Bibi, I. L. R. 38 All. 581 734
Hanmantapa v. Jivubai, 24 Bom. 547 442
Hardhan Chakravarty v. Hargobind Dutta, 6 Pat. L. J. 347 61
Hari Bhanji v. Secretary of State in Council, 4 Mad. 344 (1879) 847
Haridasi Debi v. Gopeshwar Pyne, 27 C. W. N. 646 601
Hari Har Prasad v. Ram Daur, I. L. R. 47 All. 172 545
Hari Mohan Dalal v. Parmeshar Sahu, I. L. R. 56 Cal. 61 725
Hari Nath Chatterjee v. Mothurmohun Goswami, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 8 at 18 491
Hari Saran Singh v. Sayed Md. Eradat Hussain, [1925] Pat. 162 19
Hari Singh v. Jagta, A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 694 881
Harris v. Knight, L. R. 15 P. D. 170 at 172 655
Harsaran Das v. Nandi, I. L. R. 11 All. 330 949, 958
Haur Kuar v. Munni Lal, 53 I. C. 441 490
Hazari v. Chunni Lal, I. L. R. 8 All. 259 870
Helby v. Mathews, [1895] A. C. 471 763
Het Ram v. Shadi Ram, I. L. R. 40 All. 407 60
Himanchal Singh v. Jatwar Singh, I. L. R. 46 All. 710 73
Hira Lal v. Wali Bhagat, 1889 A. W. N. 124 688
Hit Narayan Singh v. Brij Nandan Singh, 1931 Pat. A. I. R. 357 169
Hoghton v. Fiddey, L. R. 18 Eq. 573 440
Hriday Govinda Sur v. Emperor, I. L. R. 52 Cal. 148 524
Hridoymohan Sanyal v. Khagendra Nath Sanyal, A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 687 381
Humera Bibi v. Najm-un-nissa Bibi, I. L. R. 28 All. 147 671
Hunoomanpersaud Panday v. Mst. Babooee Munraj Koonweree, [1856] 6 Moo. I. A. 393 717, 900
Hurdman v. The North Eastern Ry. Co., [1878] 3 C. P. D. 168 760
Husaini v. Md. Zamir Abedi, 74 I. C. 802 392
Hussain Saib v. Hasan Saib, 31 I. C. 927 1050

I

Ibadullah Khan v. Ram Charan Sah, 53 I. C. 140 128
Ibrahim v. Ali Mohammad, 116 I. C. 890 434
Ibrahim Husain v. Ambika Prasad, I. L. R. 39 Cal. 527 629
Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, 45 I. A. 73 at 83 26, 204
Imami v. King-Emperor, 10 A. L. J. R. 426 17
Income Tax, Commissioner, Bombay Presidency v. National Mutual Life Association Limited, I. L. R. 55 Bom. 647 1004
In re Diamond Fuel Co., 13 Ch. D. 400, 405 832
In re Hemraj v. Emperor, 6 I. C. 250 103
In re Kajori Mal Kalyan Mal, 1930 A. L. J. 78 1004
In re Macleay, L. R. 20 Eq. 186 713

In re Mst. Munni Bibi v. Triloki Nath, 35 Cal. W. N. 661 at 667 609
In re Parbati Charan Chatterji, I. L. R. 17 All. 498 862
In re Rajendra Nath Mukerji, I. L. R. 22 All. 49 862
In re S. B. Sarbadhicary, 34 I. A. 41 862
In re The Official Receiver, 1930 A. L. J. R. 1497 153
In re Turner Morrison & Co., I. L. R. 56 Cal. 211 590
In re Ujagar Lal v. Mohan Kunwar, [1886] A. W. N. 312 388
Inspector Singh v. Kharak Singh, I. L. R. 50 All. 776 898
In the matter of John Thomas, 6 Beng. L. R. 180 818
In the matter of Thomas James Wallace, Vol. 1, L. R. Privy Council at 283 774
Isridat Koer v. Mst. Hansbutti Koerain, 10 I. A. 150 100, 876
Issur Chander Doss v. Juggut Chunder Shaha, I. L. R. 9 Cal. 79 252

J

Jado Singh v. Nathu Singh, I. L. R. 48 All. 593 907
Jadunandan Misra v. Sheophal, 1929 A. I. R. (All.) 272 40
Jagadamba v. Narain Singh, [1923] L. R. 50 I. A. 1 925
Jagardeo Singh v. Ali Hammad, 16 A. L. J. 249 608
Jagatdhar v. Brown, I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1133 629
Jagat Narain v. Mathura Das, I. L. R. 50 All. 969 896, 907
Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad, 18 A. L. J. R. 974 323
Jagdeo Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 51 All. 1020 368, 378, 863
Jagendra Nath v. Nitai Charan, 7 Cal. W. N. 384 655
Jageshra v. Durga Prasad Singh, 12 A. L. J. 844 417
Jagmohan Singh v. Gatali, [1930] 28 A. L. J. 1084 870
Jagmohan Singh v. Sheomangal Singh, 19 I. C. 332 236
Jaibahadur Jha v. Matukdhari Jha, I. L. R. 2 Pat. 548 393
Jalesar Sahu v. Raj Mangal, I. L. R. 43 All. 607 469
Jammu v. Mahadeo Prasad, A. I. R. 1922, All. 294 464
Jamna Prasad Raut v. Raghunath Prasad, I. L. R. 35 All. 307=11 A. L. J. 437 500
Jamun v. Nand Lal, I. L. R. 15 All. 1 281
Janeshar Das v. K.-E., 1929 A. L. J. R. 329 115
Janki Pershad Singh v. Dwarka Pershad Singh, [1913] L. R. 40 I. A. 170 929
Janki Prasad v. Baldeo Prasad, I. L. R. 30 All. 167 65
Janki Prasad v. Ishav Dar, I. L. R. 21 All. 374 193
Jatindra Kumar Das v. Gangan Chandra Pal, I. L. R. 46 Cal. 22 1036
Jivaji v. Ramchandra, I. L. R. 16 Bom. 123 732
Jiwan Ali Beg v. Basa Mal, I. L. R. 9 All. 108 189
John Joseph De Silva Sr. v. John Joseph De Silva Jr., 6 Bom. L. J. R. 403 731
Jorawan v. Mahabir, I. L. R. 40 All. 198 367
Joti Prashad v. King-Emperor, 1931 A. L. J. 986 520
Jugal Pershad Singh v. Parbhu Narain Jha, I. L. R. 37 Cal. 914 386
Juggi Lal v. Kishan Lal and Mool Chand, I. L. R. 37 All. 292 261
Jurawan Pasi v. Mahabir Dhar Dube, I. L. R. 40 All. 198 381
Jwala Prasad v. Hoti Lal, I. L. R. 46 All. 625 734
Jwala Singh v. Jaimal Singh, 1 I. C. 400 442

K

Kachera v. Kharag Singh, I. L. R. 33 All. 20=7 A. L. J. 842 388
Kader Bux Omer Hyat v. Bukt Behari, 36 Cal. W. N. 489 (490) 1001
Kahan Chand-daula Ram v. Daya Ram Amrit Lal, I. L. R. 10 Lah. 745 282

Kojori Mal Kalyan Mal of Generalganj, Cawnpore—In the matter of, 28 A. L. J. 78 390

Kaliappan Servaikaran v. Varadarajulu, I. L. R. 33 Mad. 75 . . . 126

Kali Din v. Madho, 1923 A. I. R. All. 169 . . . 613

Kalka Das v. Gajju Singh, 19 A. L. J. 439 403

Kalka Prasad v. Man Mohan Lal, I. L. R. 38 All. 302 . . . 450, 622

Kalka Singh v. Paras Ram, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 434 . . . . 80, 87

Kallan Khan v. Mardan Khan, I. L. R. 28 All. 155 989

Kallu v. Bhagirath Lal, 46 I. C. 58 . 85

Kallu v. Fiaz Ali Khan, 5 A. L. J. 367 . 1067

Kalyan v. Desrani, I. L. R. 49 All. 488 . . . 852

Kalyan Das v. Maqbul Ahmad, I. L. R. 40 All. 497 . . 734

Kamrakh Nath v. Sunder Nath, I. L. R. 20 All. 299 490

Kamta Nath v. The Chairman, Municipal Board, Allahabad, 2 A. L. J. R. 676 17

Kamta Prasad v. Bhulai Misir, A. I. R. 1927 All. 365 . 1067

Kandath Puthiyadath v. Chengaru Chandu, 1921 A. I. R. (Mad.) 417 727

Kandhya Lal v. Manki, I. L. R. 31 All. 56 141

Kandukuri Balasurya Row v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 44 I. A. 166 353

Kanhaiya Lal v. Girwar, 1929 A. L. J. 1106 . . . 993

Kapildeo v. Thakur Prasad, I. L. R. 36 All. 17 905

Karam Khan v. Daryai Singh, I. L. R. 5 All. 331 . . . 688

Karsan Das Natha v. Dadkavahu, I. L. R. 19 Bom. 571 . . 463

Kawal Nain v. Prabhu Lal, [1917] L. R. 44 I. A. 159 . . 924

Kedarnath Motilal v. Sukhamal, Bansidhar, I. L. R. 44 All. 481 1059

Kehar Singh v. Jahangir Singh, I. L. R. 47 All. 625 . 193

Kesar Kunwar v. Kashi Ram, 37 All. 634=13 A. L. J. 889 596

Kesavarapu Ramakrishna Reddi v. Kotta Kota Reddi, I. L. R. 30 Mad. 96 (F.B.) . . 386

Keshare Singh v. Secretary of State, I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652 . 535, 541

Keshav Jagannath v. Narayan Sakharam, I. L. R. 14 Bom. 236 252

Kettlewell v. Watson, 26 Ch. Div. 501 . . 974, 981

Khan Ali Khan v. Masihulzaman, [1931] A. L. J. 1068 508

Khandersa Hajee Bappu v. Puthen Veetil Ayissa, I. L. R. 34 Mad. 511 252

Khevaja Mohammad Khan v. Husaini Begam, I. L. R. 32 All. 410=7 A. L. J. R. 871 12

Khiali Ram v. Taik Ram, 14 A. L. J. 834 . . . 1011

Khuddo v. Durga Prasad, 3 A. L. J. R. 729 . 65

Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna Narain, I. L. R. 33 All. 356 at 366 . . 491

Khushal Jeram v. Emperor, I. L. R. 50 Bom. 680 . 524

King-Emperor v. Matan, I. L. R. 33 All. 163 . 1077

K.-E. v. Parbhu Shankar, I. L. R. 25 Bom. 680 . 1104

King-Emperor v. Saran Krishna, [1927] A. I. R. (Sindh) 104 . 485

King-Emperor v. Sikhdar, 1932 A. L. J. 570 1072

Kinu Ram v. Mozaffer Husain, I. L. R. 14 Cal. 800 . . 66

Kishen Sahai v. Raghunath Singh, I. L. R. 51 All. 473 . 898, 905

Koka v. Chunni, 25 A. L. J. R. 1057 . . . 138

Konammal v. Annadana, [1927] L. R. 55 I. A. 114 . . 925

Kripa Nath Pal v. Ram Lakshmi Dasya, [1897] 1 C. W. N. 703 . . 1109

Krishna Ayyangar v. Venkatrama Ayyangar, I. L. R. 29 Mad. 115 (P.C.) 545

Krishna Mohun Banerji v. A. K. Guha, 57 I. C. 829 51

PAGE
Krishnappa v. Bahiru, 8 Bom. H. C. R. 55 194
Kristo Komal v. Hurree Sirdar, 13 W. R. 411 375
Kruse v. Johnson, [1898] Q. B. D. 791 17
Kub Lal v. Gulzari Lal, [1927] 25 A. L. J. 564 . . 513
Kuldip Singh v. Khetrani Koer, I. L. R. 25 Cal. 869 825
Kulla Mal v. Umra, 61 I. C. 604.. 613
Kundan Gir v. Jaswant Singh, 27 A. L. J. 1270 721
Kunwarji Ananda v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa, A. I. R. 1931, Pat. 306 . . . 390
Kunwar Singh v. Abdur Ali Khan, [1928] A. I. R. All. 525 . 479
Kuray Mal v. Puran Mal, I. L. R. 2 All. 565 . 989
Kushal Singh v. Khawani Lal, 1906 A. W. N. 282 . 65

L

Lachmi Dayal v Sri Kishan Das, 2 A. L. J. R. 370 . 359
Lachmi Narain v. Balmakund, 6 Pat. L. J. 116 . . 841
Lachmi Narain v. Ram Charan Das, I. L. R. 35 All. 425 . 804
Ladd Gobindoss v. Ramdoss, 28 I. C. 376 .. . 373
Lakshmipattu v. Kandasami, [1893] 16 Mad. 54 930
Lala Bhugwat Sahay v. Rai Pashupati Nath Bose, 10 C. W. N. 564 731
Lala Durga Prasad v. Ganga Saran, 70 I. C. 763 138
Lal Bihari v. Parkali Kunwar, I. L. R. 42 All. 309=18 A. L. J. 110 624
Lal Chand Marwari v. Mahant Ramrup Gir, 24 A. L. J. 105 at 112 837
Lalla Sheo Churn Lal v. Ram Nandan Dubey, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 8 . 441
Lalman v. Chintamani, 17 A. L. J. 169 .. . 734
Lal Nar Singh Partab Bahadur Singh v. Mohammad Yakub Khan, 1929 A. L. J. 581 1094
Lalta Prasad v. Darshan Singh, [1924] A. I. R. 149 . 656
Lalta Prasad v. Suraj Kunwar, 20 A. L. J. R. 185 367, 377
Laycock v. Pickles, Best and Smith's Q. B. R. Vol. IV, 497 at 506 . 281
Lee v. Butler, [1893] 2 Q. B. D. 318 763
Licensed Victualler's Mutual Trading Association ex. P. Audain, 42 Ch. D. 1 968
Lila v. Mahange, 1931 A. L. J. R. 974 . 359
Liladhar v. Lalji, Vol. I Unpublished Decisions of Board of Revenue, 259 316
Loch v. John Blackwood, [1924] A. C. 783 830
Lolit Mohan v. Janoki Nath Roy, I. L. R. 20 Cal. 714 . . 1014
Longridge v. Atkins, I. L. R. 35 All. 29 271
L. P. E. Pugh v. Ashutosh Sen, 1929 A. L. J. R. 170 . 242
L. Ram Chander Sarup v. Munshi Mazhar Husain, 51 I. C. 55 786
Lulloobhoy Bappoobhoy v. Cassibai, [1880] 7 I. A. 212 639
Lyon v. The Fishmonger's Company, 1 A. C. 662 351

M

Mackenzie v. The Corporation of Chilliwack, [1912] 107 L. T. 570 847
Madan Lal v. Chhiddu, 1930 A. L. J. 1528 at 1533 1114
Madan Mohan Lal v. Sheoraj Kunwar, [1932] A. L. J. 503 867
Magan Lal Harjibhai v. Amichand Gulabji, I. L. R. 52 Bom. 521 283
Mahabir Prasad v. Mahesh Prasad, 1931 A. L. J. 45 683
Maha Mangal Rai v. Kishun Kandu, 100 I. C. 346 102
Mahant Parkas Das v. Mahant Janki Ballabh Saran, I. L. R. 2 Luck. 239 837
Maharaj Hari Ram v. Sri Krishan Ram, I. L. R. 49 All. 201 . 169
Maharana v. Emperor, [1929] A. I. R. (Pat.) 651 485

	PAGE
Mahip Narain Pandey v. Nannu Singh, I. L. R. 47 All. 778	1067
Mahomed Riasat v. Hasin Banu, 20 I. A. 155	252
Mahomed Roshan Sheikh Alli Kaskar v. Gulam Mohiddin, A. I. R. 1929 Bom. 135	169
Makhan Lal v. Nathi, 21 A. L. J. 382	414
Makund v. Bahori Lal, I. L. R. 3 All. 824	208
Makund Ram v. Ruqaiya Khatun, 1931 A. L. J. R. 150	46
Mallamma v. Venkappa, I. L. R. 8 Mad. 277	373
Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal, 25 A. L. J. 69	338, 347
Mangat v. Bharto, I. L. R. 49 All. 203	949
Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047	80, 284
Manjunatha Kamti v. Devamma alias Gomathiamma, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 186	282
Man Mohan Das v. Ram Dei, 1931 A. L. J. R. 550	122
Manni Lal v. Radhe Gopalji, I. L. R. 47 All. 502	780
Mannu v. Emperor, 18 A. L. J. R. 187	40, 581
Mannu Lal v. Bhagwan Das, I. L. R. 39 All. 114	1008
Mannu Mal v. Ram Chander, 1931 A. L. J. 273	994
Manohar Singh v. King-Emperor, 1929 A. L. J. 385	340
Manual Fraval v. Sanagapalli, 7 Mad. H. C. R. 104	194
Mashiat-un-nissa v. Rani, [1889] 13 All. 1	646
Matru Lal v. Durga Kunwar, I. L. R. 42 All. 364	60
Matungini Gupta v. Ram Rutton Roy, I. L. R. 19 Cal. 289 (F.B.)	950
Maung Tun Tha v. Ma Thit, 44 I. A. 42	252
Maung Tun U v. Maung Tun Aung, 5 Rang. 93	434
McCartney v. Londonderry and Lough Swilly Ry. Co., [1904] A. C. 301	352
Meghraj v. Bidyabati Koer, 21 Cal. L. J. 279	841
Merryweather v. Nixan, 8 T. R. 186=16 R. R. 810	216
Metropolitan Coal Consumers Association v. Scrimgeour, [1895] 2 Q. B. 604	968
Mewa Ram v. Ram Gopal, I. L. R. 48 All. 735	240
Mirza Kurratulain v. Peara Saheb, 32 I. A. 244	297
Misir Krishna Saroop v. Misir Raj Bahadur Singh, 1931 A. L. J. 962	863
Mohammad v. Sukha Singh, 13 I. C. 20	442
Mohammad Abdul Nayeem v. Jhonti Mahton, 41 I. C. 389	336
Mohammad Abid Husain Khan v. Bhagwan Das, 5 I. C. 418	85
Mohammad v. Zahur Ahmad, I. L. R. 44 All. 334	1067
Mohammad Ibrahim v. Nakched Ram, 7 A. L. J. 752	613
Mohammad Raza v. Abbas Bandi Bibi, 1932 A. L. J. 709	823
Mohammad Riyasat Ali v. Husain Banu, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 157	179
Mohammad Sadiq v. Ghaus Mohammad, I. L. R. 33 All. 101	414, 628
Mohammad Sadiq v. Laute Ram, I. L. R. 23 All. 291	449, 622
Mohammad Shafiq Ullah Khan v. Muhammad Sami Ullah Khan, 1930 A. L. J. R. 57	61
Mohammad Sharif v. Mohammad Moazzum Ali, A. I. R. 1923 All. 214	208
Mohammad Siddiq Khan v. Mohammad Nasirullah Khan, I. L. R. 21 All. 223	558
Mohammad Sulaiman v. Jhukki Lal, I. L. R. 11 All. 228	373
Mohammad Umar v. Mt. Man Kuer, I. L. R. 21 Cal. W. N. 906	951
Mohan Lal v. Nand Kishore, I. L. R. 28 All. 270	746
Mohan Lal v. Neki, 37 I. C. 195	442
Mohanlal Maganlal Sha v. Bai Jivkore, I. L. R. 28 Bom. 472	759
Mohanlal Saxena v. King-Emperor, 1930 A. I. R. (Oudh) 497	520
Mohsin Raza v. Haidar Baksh, 1928 A. I. R. All. 368	583
Mohsiuddin Ahmad v. K. Ahmed, I. L. R. 47 Cal. 713	204

Moniram Kolita v. Keri Kolitani, I. L. R. 5 Cal. 776 — 944, 950
Moti Begam v. Har Prasad, 16 A. L. J. R. 81 — 46
Moti Begam v. Har Prasad, I. L. R. 3 Pat. 640 — 386
Moti Ram v. Mewa Ram, Unpublished Decisions, Vol. II 720 — 145
Moti Singh v. Kaunsilla, I. L. R. 16 All. 308 — 386
Moung Tha Hnyeen v. Moung Pan Nyo, 27 I. A. 166 — 298
Mozharul Islam v. Abdul Gani Ala, 80 I. C. 914 — 783
Mst. Bibi Khozaima v. The Official Liquidator of the Kayestha Trading and Banking Corporation Ltd., I. L. R. 2 Pat. 168 — 884
Mst. Hari Piari v. Nathe Lal, 18 A. L. J. 1140 — 868
Mst. Jatti v. Banwari Lal, 21 A. L. J. 582 — 1020
Mst. Kaniz Abbas v. Lala Bala Din, A. I. R. 1925 Oudh 330 — 728
Mst. Parji v. Mangta, [1930] A. I. R. Lah. 1028 — 952
Muhammadi v. King-Emperor, [1932] A. L. J. R. 15 — 401
Mukta Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad, I. L. R. 38 All. 327=14 A. L. J. 385 — 488
Mula v. Partab, I. L. R. 32 All. 489 — 949
Mulhallen v. Marum, 3 Dr. and War. 317 — 300
Municipal Board, Benares v. Kandhiya Lal, 1931 A. L. J. 757 — 620
Munni Bibi v. Triloki Nath, 1931 A. L. J. 453 — 1065
Munni Bibi v. Triloki Nath, 58 I. A. 158 at 165 — 739
Munni Sonar v. The Emperor, 9 Cal. W. N. 438 — 106
Murari Lal v. E. V. David, 22 A. L. J. 1116 — 799
Murtaza Husain Khan v. Mahomed Yasin Ali Khan, 43 I. A. 269 at 280 — 635, 666, 929
Murugayi v. Niramakali, I. L. R. 1 Mad. 226 — 950
Mushaf Husain v. Mohammad Jawad, 21 Oudh Cases 194 — 25
Mushtaq Ali v. The Secretary of State, A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 242 — 772
Mustafa Khan v. Phulja Bibi and Yaqub Khan, I. L. R. 27 All. 526=2 A. L. J. 416 — 335
Muthusami v. Simambedu, 23 I. A. 83 — 536
Mysore Kopniah Sivananjiah v. K. Sithey Gouder, 41 Mad. L. J. 490 — 61

N

Nabakishore Mandal v. Upendrakishore Mandal, 20 A. L. J. 22 — 876
Nahanibai v. Nathu Bhau, I. L. R. 7 Bom. 414 — 281
Nandi Lal Agrani v. Jogendra Chandra, 28 Cal. W. C. 403 — 909
Narain Das v. Dilawar, 17 A. L. J. 141 — 656
Narain Singh v. Chaturbhuj Singh, I. L. R. 20 All. 362 — 746
Narpat v. Janka, 24 O. C. 11 — 961
Narsingh Das v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 52 In. App. at 135 — 743
Narsingrao Konher Inamdar v. Bondo Krishna, I. L. R. 42 Bom. 309 — 474
Nasiruddin v. Ahmad Husain, 1926 A. I. R. (P.C.) 109 — 994
Nasrullah Khan v. Wajid Ali, I. L. R. 52 All. 167 — 262
Nathe Singh v. Emperor, 1927 A. I. R. (All.) 829 — 40
Nathu v. Kundan, I. L. R. 33 All. 242 — 905
Nathu Mal v. Yasodha Devi, 1931 A. L. J. 1084 — 860
Nathu Ram v. Emperor, 15 A. L. J. 270 — 504, 866
Nathu Ram v. Kallan Das, I. L. R. 26 All. 522 — 375
Nawab Amjad Ally Khan v. Mst. Mohundee Begum, 11 Moo. I. A. 517 — 673
Nawab Mirza Mohammad v. Nawab Fakr Jahan Begam, (P.C.) A. 131 and 132 of 1929 — 932
Nawab Shujaul Mulk Bahadur v. Amirul Umra Bahadur, I. L. R. 48 Mad. 846 — 374

PAGE
Nazir Hasan v. Shibba, I. L. R. 27 All. 81 144
Nekho Tewari v. Kishun Prasad Pandey, I. L. R. 3 Pat. 640 386
Net Ram v. Tej Ram, 11 A. L. J. R. 445 145
Nirmal Singh v. Emperor, 17 A. L. J. 1047 532
Noor Mohamed Dawood v. Bilasiram Thakursidass, I. L. R. 47 Cal. 515 360
Noowoagar Ojain v. Sridhar Jha, 3 Pat. L. J. 194 688
Nurdin Najbudin v. Bu Umrao, I. L. R. 45 Bom. 519 252
N. Varada Pillai v. Jeevarath Nammal, 18 A. L. J. 274 433

O

Obla K. Subbayyan v. Thoppai Muthayyan, [1921] 42 M. L. J. 71 1109
Oliver v. Hinton, [1899] 2 Ch. 264 978
Ooregum Gold Mining Co. of India v. Roper, [1892] A. C. 125 967

P

Palani Ammal v. Muthuven Katacharla, 52 I. A. 83 1019, 1112
Palianappa Chetty v. Sreenath Devasikamony Pandara Sannadhi, 40 Mad. 709 34, 902
Palmer v. Wick, 1894 A. C. 318 216
Panachand Pomaji Marwari v. Sundrabai, 72 I. C. 861 233
Pancham v. Ansar Husain, L. R. 53 I. A. 187 917
Panna Lal v. Bhola Nath, A. I. R. 1930 All. 843 1109
P. and O. S. N. Co. v. The Secretary of State for India in Council, 5 Bom. H. C. R. Appendix (1861) 847
Parameswara Aiyar v. Land Acquisition Collector, Palghat, I. L. R. 42 Mad. 232 291
Paramhans Pande v. Sheodarshan Singh, I. L. R. 48 All. 397 820
Param Singh v. Lal Ji Mal, I. L. R. 1 All. 403 610
Parekh Ranchor v. Vakhat, I. L. R. 11 Bom. 119 951
Parmeshwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Sheo Dut Rai, 6 C. L. J. 448 442, 463
Parot Bhupalal Sevakaram v. Mehta Hari Lal Surajram, I. L. R. 19 Bom. 631 543
Parsotam Narain v. Chheda Lal, I. L. R. 29 All. 76 59
Parvathi Ammal v. Govinda Sami Pillai, I. L. R. 39 Mad. 803 1009
Parvatibai Kom Mahadeo v. Vishvanath Ganesh, I. L. R. 29 Bom. 207 688
Pateshwari Prasad v. Shankar Dayal, [1924] A. I. R. 217 656
Pattikadan Ummaru v. Emperor, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 243 1104
Pearce v. Bastable's Trustee in Bankruptcy, 2 Ch. Div. 122 38
Pehalwan Singh v. Sahib Singh, 19 A. L. J. R. 382 167
Pessumal v. Valoo, [1927] A. I. R. (Sindh) 197 485
Pestonji Nussurwanjee v. Manokjee & Co., 12 Moore's I. A. 1868, 112 333
Pirthi Pal Singh v. Husaini Jan, I. L. R. 4 All. 361 729
P. Purshotam Naidu v. Ponnarangam Naidu, 21 I. C. 576 38
Prafulla Kumar Bose v. Emperor, [1930] A. I. R. (Cal.) 209 485
Prag v. Emperor, 30 I. C. 143 108
Prahlad Singh v. Baru Mal, [1930] A. L. J. 1420 536
Pranjiwandas Mehta v. Chan Ma Phee, 43 I. A. 122 190
Prem Narain v. King-Emperor, [1929] A. L. J. 114 485
Premsukh Das v. Shah Gopi Saran, 4 Patna L. J. 323 46, 386
Protap Chandra Deo v. Jagadish Chandra Deo, L. R. 54 I. A. 289 927
P. Sanjivi Reddy v. K. Koneri Reddi, I. L. R. 49 Mad. 315 883

PAGE

Q

Qadri Jahan Begum v. Fazal Ahmad, I. L. R. 50 All. 748 .. . 510
Queen v. Saddlers' Co., 10 H. L. C. 404 at 420 300
Q.-E. v. Babu Lal, I. L. R. 6 All. at 542 and 543 . . 1126
Queen-Empress v. Dalip, I. L. R. 18 All. 246 181
Queen-Empress v. Dungar, I. L. R. 8 All. 252 802
Queen-Empress v. Lalli, I. L. R. 7 All. 749 . .. 802
Queen-Empress v. O'Brien, I. L. R. 19 All. 111 . . . 271
Queen-Empress v. Pukot Kotu, I. L. R. 19 Mad. 349 . . 106
Queen-Empress v. Sagal Samba Sajao, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 642 . . . 8
Queen-Empress v. Sangam Lal, I. L. R. 15 All. 129 . 571

R

Radha v. Kinlock, I. L. R. 11 All. 310 . 870
Radha Behari Dewan Singh v. G. B. Alexander, 2 Lah. 335 . . 1058
Radha Kishan v. Jumna Prasad, 5 I. C. 940 .. . 256
Radha Kishen v. Collector of Jaunpur, I. L. R. 23 All. 220 840
Radha Kishen Hokumji v. Balvant Ramji, I. L. R. 7 Bom. 530 . 676
Radha Krishna v. Ram Narain, 1931 A. L. J. 235 . . 467
Radha Mohan Datt v. Abbas Ali Biswas, [1931] A. L. J. 377 841
Raghubar Dayal v. Mulwa, I. L. R. 49 All. 440 . 306
Raghubar Dayal Sahu v. Bhikya Lal Misra, 12 Cal. 69 . 440
Raghunandan Prasad v. King-Emperor, 1931 A. L. J. R. 912 51
Raghunath Ganesh v. Gangadhar Vikaji, I. L. R. 10 Bom. 60 . 780
Raghunath Prasad v. Kashi Prasad, 13 I. C. 88 .. 375
Raghunath Prasad Singh v. Deputy Commissioner, Partabgarh, 56 I. A. 372 712
Raghuraj Chandra v. Subhadra Kunwar, [1928] 55 In. A. 139 638
Rai Brijraj v. Nauratan Lal, 3 Pat. L. J. 119 . 732
Raja Amir Hasan Khan v. Sheo Bakhsh Singh, L. R. 11 I. A. 237 at 239 807
Raja Bahadur Brij Narain Rai v. Mangala Prasad Rai, 1923 A. L. J. R. 934 34
Rajagopala Naidu v. Ramasubramania Ayyar, I. L. R. 46 Mad. 782 779
Rajah Kishendatt Ram v. Rajah Mumtaz Ali Khan, 6 I. A. 145 889
Rajah of Ramnad v. Sundara Pandiyasami Tevas, 42 Mad. 581 877
Rajai Singh v. Randhir Singh, 87 I. C. 30 . 1023
Rajani Kanta Pal v. Joga Mohan Pal, [1923] L. R. 50 I. A. 173 at 178 . 931
Rajindra Bahadur Singh v. Rani Raghabans Kunwar, 45 I. A. 134 .. 668, 932
Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi, I. L. R. 29 Cal. 68 141
Raj Narain Rao v. Ram Sarup, I. L. R. 52 All. 480 283
Rajpatti v. Emperor, 22 A. L. J. 806 . 767
Rakestraw v. Brewer, 2 P. Wms. 511 892
Ram Adhin v. Ram Bharose, 22 A. L. J. R. 1041 379
Rama Reddy v. Rangadasan, I. L. R. 49 Mad. 543 . 837
Ramasami v. Subbusami, I. L. R. 13 Mad. 508 388
Ramasami v. Sundaralingasami, [1894] 17 Mad. 22 930
Ramaswami Pillai v. Kuppuswami Pillai, 20 Mad. L. J. 656 283
Rambhujawan Thakur v. Bankey Thakur, I. L. R. 7 Pat. 794 725
Ram Brich Narain Singh v. Ambika Prasad Singh, 17 C. W. N. 586 891
Ram Chand v. Goverdhan Das, 18 A. L. J. R. 591 236
Ramchand Manjimal v. Goverdhandas Ratanchand, I. L. R. 47 Cal. 918 840
Ram Chander Dutt v. Dwarka Nath Bysack, I. L. R. 16 Cal. 530 .. 613

Ramchandra Martand Waikar v. Vinayak Venkatesh Kothekar, [1914] 41 I. A. 290 . . . 639
Ram Chandrapal v. Krishan Lal Pal, 17 Cal. W. N. 351 . 333
Ramchandra v. Vinayak, 41 I. A. 290=42 Cal. 384 535
Ram Charan v. Bhairon, [1930] A. L. J. 1561 . 658
Ram Das v. Habib Ullah, 1931 A. L. J. 1061 . . 984
Ram Dei v. Kishen Dei, 32 I. C. 338 961
Ram Dei v. Munna Lal, I. L. R. 39 All. 109 . . . 654
Ram Dei Misrain v. Jurawan Misir, 1930 A. L. J. R. 857 . . 220
Ramdeo v. Kishendei, 32 I. C. 338 . 949
Rameshar Prasad Lal v. Ghisiawan Prasad, 27 A. L. J. (1929) 665 . 562
Rameshar Upadhya v. Subkaran Upadhya, 8 A. L. J. 418 . . 488
Rameshwar Bux Singh v. Ridh Kunwar, A. I. R. 1925, Oudh 633 . . 464
Ram Gopal v. Piari Lal, I. L. R. 20 All. 441 193
Ram Gopal v. Tulshi Ram, 26 A. L. J. R. 952 . . 101
Ram Hit Singh v. Narain Rai, I. L. R. 26 All. 389 193
Ram Kishore Ahir v. Ram Nandan Ram, 25 A. L. J. 1086 596
Ram Kumar Singh v. Ali Husain, I. L. R. 31 All. 173=6 A. L. J. 135 498
Ram Lal v. Jwala, I. L. R. 3 Luck. 610. 692
Ram Lal Sah v. Allahabad Bank, A. L. J. R. 1929, 1059 . 305
Ram Prasad v. Arja Nand, 10 All. W. N. 161 . 216
Ram Prasad v. Bhikari Das, I. L. R. 26 All. 464 . 291
Ram Prasad v. Hari Das, 97 I. C. 768 . . . 373
Ram Raj Pandey v. Har Prasad, 1932 A. L. J. 109 . . 722
Ram Ratan v. Ram Lal Singh, 1929 A. L. J. R. 1095 . . 73
Ram Rekha Misra v. Lallu Misra, I. L. R. 53 All. 568 . 622
Ram Rikh Misra v. Lallu Misra, [1931] A. L. J. 307 . . 451
Ram Sahai Singh v. Debi Din, 24 A. L. J. 945 . . 586
Ram Sanehi Lal v. Janki Prasad, 1931 A. L. J. 729 . 994, 1117
Ram Saran Das v. Bhagwat Prasad, 51 All. 411 193
Ram Saran Singh and Munshi Syed Amir Ali v. Mst. Ram Pearey, 13 Moore's I. A. 551 610
Ram Saroop v. Emperor, 25 A. L. J. 97 862
Ram Sarup v. Dalpat Rai, I. L. R. 43 All. 60 1008
Ram Sarup Lal v. Shah Latafat Hossein, 29 Cal. 735 . . . 442
Ram Sia v. Bua, 22 A. L. J. R. 861 100, 545
Ram Sukh Pandey v. Prithi Singh, [1930] A. L. J. 1307 451
Ram Swarup Lal v. Shah Latafat Husain, I. L. R. 29 Cal. 735 . 463
Ramyad Singh v. Empress, 58 I. C. 686 8
Ramzan v. Bhukhal, 16 A. L. J. R. 747 . 102
Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden, 17 A L. J. R. 536 100
Rani Chattar Debi v. Mohan Vikram Shah, 58 I. A. 279=I. L. R. 10 Pat. 851 991
Rani Jagadamba Kumari v. Wazir Narain Singh, [1923] L. R. 50 I. A. 1 . 929
Rani Kanno Dei v. B. J. Lacy, 19 All. 235 (1897) . 563
Rani Srimati v. Khajendra Narayan Singh, 31 I. A. 127 298
Ranjit v. Radha Ram, I. L. R. 20 All. 476 . 949
Ranjit Singh v. Naubat, I. L. R. 24 All. 504 870
Rashidunnissa v. Mohammad, I. L. R. 31 All. 572 447
Rasul Jehan Begum v. Ram Sarun Singh, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 589 950
Rattan Lal Sultan Singh v. Bishan Sahai Bhagwan Das, I. L. R. 10 Lah. 143 794
Rayji Narayan v. Kishanji Lakshman, 11 Bom. H. C. R. 139 194

	PAGE
Read v. Brown, 22 Q. B. D. 128	491
Re Chheddu Khan, Cr. A. 754 of 1910 decided on April 22, 1911	163
Re Duke of Marlborough, [1894] 2 Ch. 133	980
Reeves v. Butcher, [1891] 2 Q. B. 509	915
Re King's Settlement, [1931] 2 Ch. 294, 299	980
Re petition of Kapur Singh, W. N. 1881, 20	163
Re Prag v. King-Emperor, A. I. R. 1930 Oudh 449	163
Re Suresh Chander Goyee, 23 C. W. N. 431	228
Rimmer v. Webster, [1902] 2 Ch. 163, 173	979
Rishikesh v. Manik Molla, I. L. R. 53 Cal. 758	1009
Rivers Steamship Co. Mitchell's Claim, L. R. 6 Ch. App. 822	86
Robins v. The National Trust, [1927] A. C. 515	298
Rohan Lal v. The Collector of Etah, 51 All. 765	744
Rohan Singh v. Bhau Lal, 31 All. 530	193
Romesh Chandra Banerjee v. Emperor, I. L. R. 41 Cal. 350	106
Ross v. Secretary of State, 37 Mad. 55 (1913)	847
Ross v. Buxton, 42 Ch. D. 190 [1889]	765
Rudra Pratap Singh v. Sharda Mahesh Prasad Singh, 1925 A. I. R. All. 471	874
Rukhmini v. Dhondo, I. L. R. 36 Bom. 207	1067
Runganayaki Ammal v. Virupakshee Rao Naidu, 45 Mad. L. J. 100	189
Rup Chand v. Fateh Chand, 8 A. L. J. R. 821	46
Rustam Khan v. Janki, I. L. R. 51 All. 101	252
S
Sabajit Partap v. Indarjit Pertap, [1905] 27 All. 203	930
Sadagopal Aiyengar v. Sellammal, 72 I. C. 861	233
Sadeck Abdulla v. Mahomed Abdulla Hasanali, A. I. R. 1929 Bom. 190	816
Saddu v. Behari Singh, I. L. R. 30 All. 282	145
Saiyid Mazhar Hossein v. Mst. Bodha Bibi, I. L. R. 17 All. 112	839
Sakha Ram Krishnaji v. Madan Krishnaji, I. L. R. 5 Bom. 232	189
Salig Ram Misir v. Lachhman Das, I. L. R. 50 All. 211	870
Salig-un-nissa v. Mati Ahmad, 25 All. 418	193
Samiya Mavali v. Minammal, I. L. R. 23 Mad. 490	688
Samu Patter v. Abdul Kadir Revuthan, I. L. R. 35 Mad. 607	661
Sankar Sahai v. Bechu Ram, I. L. R. 47 All. 381	905
Santala Bewa v. Badaswari Dasi, I. L. R. 50 Cal. 727	951
Sanyasi Charan Mandal v. Krishnadhan Banerji, [1922] L. R. 49 I. A. 108=49 Cal. 560	716
Sarat Chandra Singh v. Sudhan Hari Mukherjea, 14 I. C. 694	970
Sarbdawah Singh v. Babunandan, I. L. R. 36 All. 551	1024
Sardarni Datar Kaur v. Ram Rattan, 1 Lah. 192	563
Sarifun Mandalin v. Feradoul Khatun, A. I. R. 1923, Cal. 578	282
Sarjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Pershad, 2 C. L. J. 288	59
Sarkar Barnard & Co. v. Alak Manjari Kuari, [1925] A. I. R. (P.C.) 89	662
Saraswati v. The Land Acquisition Deputy Collector, Champaran, 2 Patna L. J. 204	770
Sartaj Kuari v. Deoraj Kuari, [1888] L. R. 15 I. A. 51	925
Sasi Kanta Achabji Chowdhury v. Sonaulla Munshi, 33 Cal. W. N. 965	283
Sathyabhama v. Kesavacharya, I. L. R. 39 Mad. 658	210
Satish Chandra Chowdhury v. Girish Chandra Chakravarty, [1920] 47 Cal. 813	646
Sat Narain v. Behari Lal, I. L. R. 6 Lah. 1	684

	PAGE
Saudagar Singh v. Pardip Narayan, I. L. R. 45 Cal. 510	100
Secretary of State v. Jivan Baksh, 67 P. R. 1916	772
Secretary of State for India v. Allah Ditta, Mohammad Amin, A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 120	219
Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Prasad, 1929 A. L. J. 1186	772
Secretary of State for India in Council v. Kasturi Reddi, 26 Mad. 268	847
Secretary of State v. Sukhdeo, [1898] A. W. N. 173	848
Sehr Mal v. Hukam Singh, I. L. R. 20 All. 100	193
Seth Chitor Mal v. Shib Lal, I. L. R. 14 All. 273	66
Shahzad Singh v. Hanuman Rai, I. L. R. 46 All. 562	1122
Shaik Moosa v. Shaik Essa, I. L. R. 8 Bom. 241	295
Shambhu Singh v. Daljit Singh, 38 All. 243	450
Sham Lal v. Ghasita, I. L. R. 23 All. 459	460
Shanker v. Mukta, I. L. R. 32 Bom. 513	85
Shanto Chandar Mukherji v. Nain Sukh, I. L. R. 23 All. 355	1009
Sharif Ahmad v. Qabul Singh, I. L. R. 43 All. 497	40
Shashi Bhushan Sarbadhicari, I. L. R. 29 All. 95	775
Sheikh Abdul Ghafoor v. Ashmath Bibi, 54 I. C. 385	434
Sheikh Ibraham v. Sheikh Sulaiman, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 146	670
Sheikh Jannat Hussain v. Sheikh Ghulam Kutubuddin Ahmad, 52 I. C. 522	984
Sheikh Mahomed Ahsanulla v. Amarch and Kundu, 17 I. A. 28	250
Sheikh Muhammad Mumtazahmad v. Zubeda Jan, 16 I. A. 205	670
Sheo Balak Pathak v. Sukhdei, 12 A. L. J. 185	787
Sheo Charan Lal v. Ram Nandan, I. L. R. 22 All. 8 at 12 and 13	463
Sheodayal Khemka v. Joharmull Manmull, 50 Cal. 549 at 558	1000
Sheo Nandan v. Manni, 21 A. L. J. 288	545
Sheo Prasad v. Anrud Singh, I. L. R. 2 All. 273	732
Sheo Prasad v. Commissioner of Income-tax, 1929 A. I. R. All. 819	1004
Sheopujan v. Bishnath, [1930] A. L. J. 842	757
Sheoraj v. Ajudhia, 4 Luck. 503	434
Sher Khan v. Swami Dayal, I. L. R. 44 All. 185	1023
Shiam Lal v. Basir Uddin, I. L. R. 28 All. 778	629
Shiam Lal v. Roshan Lal, 14 A. L J. 363	860
Shiam Saran v. Banarsi Das, 20 A. L. J. 258	989
Shiam Sundar Singh v. Jagannath Singh, 26 A. L. J. 28	661
Shib Chandra v. Lachmi Narain, 33 C. W. N. 1091 (P.C.)	59
Shib Dayal v. Sheo Ghulam and Lachman Prasad, I. L. R. 39 All. 241	654
Shibhajan Durga Prasad v. Secretary of State, 28 Bom. 314 (1904)	847
Shib Lal v. Azmatullah, I. L. R. 18 All. 265	277
Shiva Prasad Gupta v. Commissioner of Income-tax, U. P., A. I. R. 1929 All. 819	390
Shiva Sundari Dasi v. The Collector of Cawnpore, 2 A. L. J. 784	773
Shohrat Singh v. Jhagru, 13 A. L. J. R. 745	146
Shore v. Wilson, 9 Cl. and Fin. 355, 565	979
Shrimant Sagajirao v. Smith, I. L. R. 20 Bom. 736	386
Shrinbai v. Ratanbai, I. L. R. 43 Bom. 845	252
Shyam Lal v. Dwarka Prasad, 25 A. L. J. 109	562
Sita Ram v. Beni Prasad, I. L. R. 47 All. 263=22 A. L. J. R. 1097	286
Skippers & Co. Ltd. v. E. V. David, I. L. R. 48 All. 821	799
Sohan Lal v. Mohan Lal, I. L. R. 50 All. 986	994
Solai Naik v. Emperor, I. L. R. 34 Mad. 349	106

	PAGE
Solayyapa Naicker v. Shunmugasundaram Pillai, A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 510	169
Sonachala v. Manika, I. L. R. 8 Mad. 516	780
Sonet Kooer v. Himmat Bahadur, I. L. R. 1 Cal. 391	151
Spencer v. Devadoss, 1924 A. I. R. Mad. 241	434
Srimati Rani Parbati Kumari Debi v. Jagadish Chunder Dhadal, [1902] L. R. 29 I. A. 83	928
S. T. Garde v. Brij Nandan Saran, 21 A. L. J. R. 205	259
Subal Ram Dutt v. Jagadanunda Mazumdar, 1 I. C. 288	1068
Subbaraya Pillai v. Sathanatha Pandaram, 48 I. C. 940	1062
Subbiahpandaram v. Arunachala Pandaram, A. I. R. 1925, Mad. 379	464
Subedar Singh v. Komal Singh, A. I. R. 1929 All. 656	865
Subramania Chettiar v. Sunnammal, I. L. R. 53 Mad. 881	291
Subramanian v. Lutchman, 50 I. A. 77	190
Subroya Chetty v. Ragammall, I. L. R. 28 Mad. 161	141
Sukhai v. Ghulam Sattar Khan, I. L. R. 43 All. 469	60
Sukhdeo v. Ram Chandar Rai, I. L. R. 46 All. 706=22 A. L. J. R. 680	24
Sukhi v. Ghulam Safdar Khan, I. L. R. 43 All. 469	1117
Sultan Begam v. Debi Prasad, I. L. R. 30 All. 324 (F.B.)	810
Sumatra Devi v. Hazari Lal, A. L. J. R. 1930, 901	305
Sunder Koer v. Rai Sham Krishan, I. L. R. 34 Cal. 150 at 161 (P.C.)	60
Suppiah v. Emperor, [1930] A. I. R. (Mad.) 980	485
Suraj Jote Kuar v. Attar Kumari, I. L. R. 1 Pat. 706	962
Suraj Narain v. Ikbal Narain, [1912] L. R. 40 I. A. 40 at 46	924
Swindon Waterworks Co. v. Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Co., L. R. 7 E. and I 697	351
Syed Mohammad Gouse, 88 I. C. 209	780

T

Tan Seik Ke v. C. A. M. C. T. Firm, A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 109	169
Taylor v. Taylor, [1873] 28 L. T. 189	1052
Toprinessa v. Emperor, I. L. R. 46 Cal. 427	802
Thakoorain Sahiba v. Mohun Lal, 11 Moore's I. A. C. 386	34
Thakuri v. Bramha Narain, I. L. R. 19 All. 60	778
Thakur Prasad v. Faqir Ullah, I. L. R. 17 All. 106	373
The Administrator-General of Bengal v. Prem Lal Mullick, 22 I. A. 107	296
The Collector of Mirzapur v. Dawan Singh, I. L. R. 30 All. 400	318
The Collector of Muslipatam v. Cavaly Venkata Narrainpah, Cavaly Venkata Narrainpah v. The Collector of Muslipatam, 11 Moore's I. A. 619	151
The Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Bombay v. The National Mutual Life Association of Australasia Ltd., I. L. R. 55 Bom. 637	390
The Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. G. Angus & Co., [1889] 23 Q. B. D. 579	396
The East India Co. v. Oditchurn Paul, 5 Moore's I. A. 43	380
The Official Receiver v. P. L. K. M. R. M. Chettyar Firm, 1931 A. L. J. R. 444	53
The Queen v. Belat Ali Moonshee, 19 W. R. (Cr.) 67	163
The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Das, 25 A. L. J. R. 549	219
The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Prasad, 27 A. L. J. 1186	753
The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Harbans Prasad Viash, 28 A. L. J. 206	529
T. K. Parmeshwara v. The Land Acquisition Collector, Palghat, I. L. R. 42 Mad. 231	772

PAGE

Tobin v. The Queen, [1864] C. B. N. S. 310 at 349 848
Torap Ali v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 638 802
Tribhavan Gangaram v. Amina, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 516 281
Tula Ram v. Tulshi Ram, I. L. R. 42 All. 559 907
Tulsha Kunwar v. Jogeshar Prasad, I. L. R. 28 All. 563 65
Tulshiram v. Bishnath, 25 A. L. J. R. 753 310
Tulshi Ram Sahu v. Gur Dayal, I. L. R. 33 All. 111 (F.B.) 476
Tyrrel v. The Bank of London, 10 H. L. C. 26 300

U

U. Htin Gyaw v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 5 Rang. 26 at 37 303
Umaid Bahadur v. Udaichand, I. L. R. 6 Cal. 119 558
Umardaraz Ali Khan v. Wilayat Ali Khan, I. L. R. 19 All. 169 252
Umashankar v. Nageshwar, 3 P. L. J. 663 555
Umed Singh v. King-Emperor, 22 A. L. J. R. 79 77
U. Pyinnya v. U. Dipa, A. I. R. 1929, Rang. 134 779
Uttam Singh v. Hukam Singh, I. L. R. 39 All. 112 654

V

Vadapilli Gajrao v. Kala Venkamma, A. I. R. 1927, Mad. 497 464
Vadlamudi Sastrulu v. Thalluri Venkataseshayya, 110 I. C. 894 837
Vaipuri Chettiar v. Subramania Chettiar, 1929 A. I. R. Mad. 27 434
Vanmikalinga v. Chidambara, I. L. R. 29 Mad. 37 629
Vedachala v. Subramania, 48 I. A. 349 539
Veerappa Chettiar v. Subramania Ayyar, I. L. R. 52 Mad. 123 (F.B.) 658
Vellai Mira Ravuttan v. Mira Moidin Ravuttan, 2 M. H. C. R. O. 414 1050
Venkappu v. Nara Sinha, 10 Mad. 187 46, 386
Venkataramayyar v. Kothandaramayyar, I. L. R. 13 Mad. 135 970
Venkata Seetharamyya v. Venkataramyya, I. L. R. 37 Mad. 418 291
V. E. S. Subramanian Chetty v. Kasi Chetty, 1927 A. I. R. Mad. 937 234
Veyindramuthu Pillai v. Maya Nadan, I. L. R. 43 Mad. 696 291
Vidya Varuthi Thirtha v. Balusami Ayyar, 44 Mad. 831=20 A. L. J. 497 837
Virthu v. Govinda, 22 Bom. 321 960
Vishnu Shambhog v. Manjama, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 108 209
Vithu v. Gobinda, I. L. R. 22 Bom. 321 951
Vitta Fayaramma v. Chatakondu Sivayya, I. L. R. 41 Mad. 1078 944, 961
V. K. Kelu v. C. S. Siva Rama Pattar, I. L. R. 1928 Mad. 879 887
Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchumarti Venkata Sutharamachandra Rao, I. L. R. 39 Mad. 195 (F.B.) 369

W

Waghela Rajsanji v. Shekh Masludin, 14 I. A. 89 at 96 713, 1122
Walian v. Bankey Behari, [1903] 30 Cal. 1021 447
Whalley v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Ry. Co., [1884] 13 Q. B. D. 131 761
Wilson v. Brett, 11 M and W (1843) 113 457
Wright v. Sanderson, L. R. 9 P. D. 149 655

Y

Yad Ram v. Sundar Singh, I. L. R. 45 All. 425 805

Z

Zamir Hasan v. Sundar, I. L. R. 22 All. 199 (F.B.) 1014
Zarif-un-nisa v. Shafiq-uz-zaman Khan, 55 I. A. 303 at 316 668
Zebunnissa v. Parbhu Narain, I. L. R. 39 All. 618 989
Zohra v. Mangla, I. L. R. 28 All. 753 368

ALLAHABAD LAW JOURNAL

REPORTS

HIGH COURT

GANPATJI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
HANUMAN SINGH (Defendant)*

Civil

1931

July 1

MUKERJI, J.
ALLEN, J.

Tenancy Act of 1926, Sec. 226(3)—Suit for profit against lambardar—Court's power to estimate 'unrealizable arrears'—To be based on evidence—Evidence Act, Sec. 35—Income from chari*—Calculation of—Settlement officer's report—Whether admissible.*

Where in a suit for profits against the lambardar, it was found that the lambardar had not shown in his books the actual realisations and that his books were extremely unreliable and misleading, but the court, without giving any reason, allowed 'a rebate of 10%' on the gross rental as covering the possible arrears in the collections, held, that the estimate of unrealisable arrears should be based on some evidence which can be acted upon, and the deduction should not be merely conjectural, and the rebate should not have been allowed.

Where the Assistant Collector hearing the suit, finding that there was a difference between the estimated income from chari calculated by a Commissioner appointed by him for the purpose and by a certain settlement officer respectively, allowed a deduction of 50% on the estimate of the latter and fixed the income at Rs.1,500, but the District Judge reduced this figure on the ground that the settlement officer's report was inadmissible and that of the Commissioner vague, held, that the settlement officer's report was admissible under Sec. 35 of the Evidence Act as it was a relevant fact though not conclusive; and the Commissioner's estimate was a workable estimate though vague to some extent. The Assistant Collector's estimate should therefore be restored.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of L. S. WHITE ESQ., District Judge, Cawnpore, modifying a decree of M. S. HYDER ESQ., Assistant Collector, first class, of Banda.

A. P. Dube for the appellants.

S. S. Shastry for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit for arrears of profits claimed against the deceased defendant, Hanuman Singh, who is now represented in this appeal by his sons.

The claim was, according to the plaint, a rough estimate of the profits, the plaintiffs being usufructuary mortgagees, who were never before acquainted with the village. The plaintiffs clearly said in the plaint that if the profits were found to be larger than had been claimed in the plaint, they would pay additional court-fee for the sum found really due to the plaintiffs. The defence was that the lambardar had made certain collections, and the plaintiffs should have only their share, which was 0-5-0 in the village. The court of first instance granted a decree for Rs.4,210 with costs and interest.

---

*S. A. 348 of 1929

The defendant appealed, and the plaintiffs filed a cross-objection.

The learned District Judge reduced the amount of the decree to the sum of Rs.2,175-12-3.

In this Court the plaintiffs have filed an appeal, and the defendant has filed a cross-objection.

The points that have been raised by the parties are as follows: (1) Whether a 10 per cent deduction on the gross income was properly allowed by the courts below as probable arrears. (2) Whether the amount of the Chari income has been rightly estimated by the learned District Judge at Rs.800. (3) Whether the claim for weighment dues should have been allowed by the learned District Judge. (4) Whether the court below was wrong in levying additional court-fees on the ground of cross-objection filed by the plaintiffs. (5) Whether the village expenses have been estimated at too low a figure.

The first point arises in this way. The courts below are agreed that the lambardar has not shown in his books the actual realisations and that his books are extremely unreliable and misleading. The courts below were agreed that the plaintiffs were entitled to a share of the gross rental and other incomes, but have allowed what they call a 'rebate of 10 per cent' as covering the possible arrears in the collections.

It is on foot of the new Tenancy Act that the learned Judges of the courts below have allowed what they have called a 'rebate'. Before the Tenancy Act of 1926 was passed the decree used to be against the lambardar, where his negligence in collections was proved, upon the basis of the gross income of the village without any deduction.

Paragraph No. 3 of Section 226 of the Tenancy Act runs as follows:

> In any such suit (suit for arrears of profits) the burden of proving the amount collected shall be on the lambardar, and where he fails to discharge it, the court may presume that the profits have been collected in full, or with such deduction on account of unrealizable arrears as it considers reasonable.

It is on account of the words italicised above that the courts below have allowed a rebate.

There can be no doubt that it is open to a court hearing a suit for settlement of accounts and profits to make an estimate of unrealizable arrears, and to give the lambardar the benefit of that estimate. But we think that the estimate should be based on some evidence which can be acted upon; and the deduction should not be merely conjectural; for, in that case, it will be impossible to say why the deduction should not be, say, 25 per cent instead of 10 per cent.

In this particular case before us the courts below have not given any reason whatsoever for making a 10 per cent deduction as unrealizable income. The learned District Judge, it appears, thought that the court of first instance had shown leniency to the defendant by allowing a rebate.

At page 30, lines 41-43 the learned District Judge expresses himself as follows:—

> Considerable leniency has been shown to the appellant in allowing him 10 per cent rebate on the amount which he is supposed to have collected.

As we have already stated, the court of first instance did not give any reason for estimating the unrealizable assets at 10 per cent. At page 21 the learned Assistant Collector expresses himself as follows:

> I am of opinion that allowing a decree on the full recorded assets besides sayar would not be fair, as I think that about 10 per cent of gross rental remains ordinarily in arrears for some sudden reasons every year.

It will be seen that the estimate of the learned Assistant Collector is based on pure guess work, and if we accept the principle we shall have to allow a rebate in each case and every case where the lambardar fails to maintain a clear account, or deliberately keeps false accounts.

We come to the conclusion that this rebate should not have been granted in this case, and the appellants are entitled to a proportionate increase in their claim.

The second question relates to chari. It appears that there is a large area estimated at between four to six thousand bighas of land which is used for grazing purposes. The income from this large area had to be estimated, because it did yield some substantial income. The plaintiffs in their plaint estimated the amount roughly at Rs.800. The learned Assistant Collector deputed a commissioner for the purpose of enquiry, and he was of opinion that the owners of cattle paid Re.1 per head and the number of cattle that grazed was 2,000. At this estimate the income from chari was about Rs.2,000 a year. There was on the record an estimate of income from chari made by an Assistant Collector, one Mr. Desai, for the purposes of settlement. It appears that a settlement of land revenue is made every five years in this tract of the country. Mr. Desai's estimate was Rs.3,000 a year. The Assistant Collector hearing the present suit allowed a deduction of 50 per cent on the estimate of Mr. Desai, and held that the income from chari must be at least Rs.1,500 a year.

The learned District Judge was of opinion that the estimate made by the Commissioner was vague, and the report of Mr. Desai was not admissible in evidence. On the last point, we are not able to accept the opinion of the learned District Judge. The report of Mr. Desai was admissible under Section 35 of the Indian Evidence Act. His estimate was, at least, a relevant fact, though certainly not conclusive. The estimate made by the Commissioner was bound to be vague to some extent, but it was a workable estimate, seeing that the estimate made by Mr. Desai for the purposes of assessment of land revenue was at a much higher figure. We are of opinion that if the learned District Judge had not discarded the report of Mr. Desai as inadmissible in evidence, he would not have reduced the amount of Chari income estimated by the Assistant Collector. In the circumstances, we do not feel that we are bound by the finding of fact arrived at by the learned District Judge, and we are free to interfere with that finding. We do interfere, and setting it aside restore the finding of the learned Assistant Collector.

CIVIL 1931
GANPATJI
v.
HANUMAN
SINGH
Mukerji, J.

On the third point we agree with the learned District Judge that the present appellant, who was the respondent before him, failed to claim the weighment dues which had been disallowed by the court of first instance. In the circumstances, the claim cannot be reiterated in this Court.

As regards the court-fees realised by the District Judge, we think that he was right. The plaintiffs, as we have already stated, estimated the amount of their claim, as they said only roughly and it was open to them to claim a larger amount on the basis of the evidence led in the case. In the grounds of the objection framed, the plaintiffs claimed much larger sums, and indeed the total amount claimed by them came to over Rs.3,000 as the report of the Munsarim of the District Judge's court shows. That being so, the present appellants were bound to pay the deficiency in court-fees realised from them.

The fifth point arises out of the ground No. 4 of the cross-objection filed by Mr. Shastri on behalf of the respondent. The first three grounds have already been covered by the appellants' claim as to chari. This fifth point relates to village expenses. The court of first instance held that the lambardar was entitled to appoint a Karinda for making collections at Rs.10 a month, and a peon on Rs.3 a month. He accordingly allowed Rs.186 a year in all as village expenses. The learned District Judge thought that this was enough, though he remarked that the lambardar was not entitled to more because he had been very leniently treated as regards the rebate of 10 per cent. It is contended before us that if the learned Judge had not thought that the lambardar had been leniently dealt with in the matter of rebate, he would have increased the amount of village expenses. We cannot say what the learned District Judge would have done if he had not been of this opinion.

It is further argued that on the basis of the wajib-ul-arz a sum of Rs.279 a year should have been allowed as village expenses. But the entire village, with the exception of a pie, belongs to a single joint Hindu family of which the lambardar was the head. The wajib-ul-arz prepared in such circumstances could not carry any weight where a stranger is concerned. We have not been told that the lambardar needed more than one karinda and more than one peon. In the circumstances, we do not think that we can interfere in this matter.

The result is that the appeal succeeds in part, and the cross-objection fails in its entirety. We dismiss the cross-objection with costs, and allow the appeal with proportionate costs to the parties (according to their respective success and failure) as follows:—

The total amount of the estimated profits will be realised by disallowing the 10 per cent deduction made by the District Judge, and the calculation of the plaintiffs' share will be made accordingly. The income from chari will be taken at Rs.1,700 for the first year instead of Rs.1,000 at Rs.1,500 instead of at Rs.800 estimated by the learned District Judge for the 2nd and third years. The office will proportionately make a fresh account which, when approved by the counsel for the parties and by the court, will form the basis of the decree.

Appeal allowed in part

CRIMINAL

1931

July 13

KING, J.

LACHMI NARAIN
versus
KING-EMPEROR*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 252—Interpretation of—Trial of warrant case—Accused cannot, as a matter of right, cross-examine prosecution witnesses before framing of charge—But as a matter of practice some cross-examination should be permitted.

An accused has no absolute right of cross-examination of prosecution witnesses, in the trial of a warrant-case, before the framing of the charge; but as a matter of practice or discretion the magistrates would be well-advised to permit some cross-examination at least at that stage, otherwise, Sec. 253 would practically become a dead letter. Ashirbad Muchi v. Maju Muchini, 8 Cal. W. N. 838, Queen-Empress v. Sagal Samba Sajao, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 642 at 663 and Ramyad Singh v. Empress, 58 I. C. 686 referred to.

When a Magistrate has "to take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution", he has to record not only the examination-in-chief of the prosecution witnesses, but also their cross-examination and re-examination (if any), if no express provision is made for cross-examination. But when express provision for cross-examination is made, as in Sec. 256 or 208(2), then the phrase mentioned cannot be construed as giving a separate and independent right of cross-examination.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of P. C. PLOWDEN ESQ., Sessions Judge of Bareilly.

Nanak Chand for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment of the Court was delivered by

King, J.

KING, J.—This is an application in revision against an order passed by the Sessions Judge of Bareilly confirming the order of a magistrate of the first class refusing to allow the applicant to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses before the charge had been framed.

The complaint was instituted on January 26, 1931 alleging that the accused had committed offences under Ss. 420 and 467, I. P. C. When the complainant had been examined on April 1, 1931 an oral request was made to the Magistrate to permit his cross-examination at once. The Magistrate rejected this request. When the next witness had been examined the defence put in a written request that the Magistrate should permit the witness to be cross-examined before the framing of the charge. This request was rejected by the Magistrate in a wirtten order. The Magistrate took the view that S. 256 of the Code of Criminal Procedure did not indicate that prosecution witnesses are to be cross-examined twice, and he could not find any justification in the Code or in the Evidence Act for the proposition that the accused has a right to cross-examine prosecution witnesses both before and after the framing of the charge. After the prosecution witnesses had been examined, the Magistrate framed a charge under Section 420, I. P. C.

---

*Cr. Rev. 267 of 1931

The accused applied to the Sessions Judge of Bareilly asking that the Magistrate's order, refusing to allow cross-examination of prosecution witnesses before the framing of the charge, be set aside. The learned Sessions Judge discussed the point and recorded his opinion that the Magistrate was probably incorrect in his procedure, and that the accused was entitled to cross-examine a witness immediately after he had been examined and before the framing of the charge. Nevertheless, in view of the facts that all the prosecution witnesses had been examined-in-chief and the charge had been framed, and some of the witnesses had already been cross-examined after the charge had been framed, he rejected the application.

The question for determination is whether an accused person is entitled to cross-examine a prosecution witness, in the trial of a warrant-case, before the charge has been framed.

Section 138 of the Evidence Act merely lays down the order of the examinations of witnesses, namely, that they should be first examined-in-chief, and then (if the adverse party so desires) cross-examined, and then (if the party calling them so desires) re-examined. This does not indicate a right of cross-examination immediately after the examination-in-chief when express provision has been made for exercising the right of cross-examination at a later stage. It is perfectly clear that, under S. 256, Cr. P. C., the accused has the right of cross-examining a prosecution witness after the charge has been framed. So S. 138 of the Evidence Act does not seem to be of much assistance. It merely lays down that cross-examination shall be allowed at some stage after the examination-in-chief, and S. 256 may well be construed as indicating the proper stage for cross-examination in the trial of warrant-cases. Section 138 certainly does not indicate that the adverse party shall be entitled to cross-examine a witness more than once.

Section 252 of the Code is the section under which prosecution witnesses are examined in warrant-cases. This lays down that the Magistrate "shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution". It has been argued that the word "evidence" in this phrase must include not merely the examination-in-chief of a witness, but also his cross-examination and re-examination, if any. In support of this contention reference has been made to S. 244. This section lays down the procedure in the trial of summons cases, and enacts that the Magistrate "shall proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution" The phraseology in Ss. 244(1) and 252(1) is identical. It is argued that under S. 244 when the Magistrate proceeds to "take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution" he must certainly allow the witnesses to be cross-examined as well as examined-in-chief, and that, therefore, the word "evidence" in this phrase must include not only the examination-in-chief, but also the cross-examination and re-examination, if any. Section 244 does not contain any express provision for cross-examination. Cross-examination must certainly be allowed at some stage, and as no express provision is made for exercising this right in the trial of summons-cases, we must hold that the right is exerciseable under Section 244.

CRIMINAL

1931

LACHMI NARAIN
v.
KING-EMPEROR

King, J.

It is argued that as the phrase cited gives a right of cross-examination under Section 244, therefore the same phrase must be held to give a right of cross-examination under Section 252. There is some force in this argument, but it is far from conclusive. One cannot lose sight of the fact that no express provision for exercising the right of cross-examination has been made in the trial of summons-cases, whereas in the trial of warrant-cases such express provision is to be found in Section 256.

It must, moreover, be noted that when the same phrase occurs in S. 208 (1) (which lays down the procedure in taking evidence in inquiries into cases triable by the court of session) we find it expressly stated in Sub-section (2) that "the accused shall be at liberty to cross-examine the witnesses for the prosecution". Sub-section (1) enacts that the Magistrate shall "proceed to hear the complainant (if any) and take in manner hereinafter provided all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution " Once again we find the same phrase. If that phrase is construed as conferring a right of cross-examination, wherever that phrase may occur, then it must be conceded that Sub-section (2) is wholly redundant. But it must be presumed that the legislature does not enact wholly redundant provisions. The inference is that the phrase in question cannot be construed as necessarily conferring or including the right of cross-examination. I conclude that when a Magistrate has "to take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution, he has to record not only the examination-in-chief of the prosecution witnesses, but also their cross-examination and re-examination (if any), if no express provision is made for cross-examination. But when express provision for cross-examination is made, as in Section 256 or 208 (2), then the phrase mentioned cannot be construed as giving a separate and independent right of cross-examination.

The language of Section 256 supports the same conclusion. That Section requires the accused to state "whether he wishes to cross-examine any, and if so, which of the witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence has been taken". If the legislature had intended to confer an absolute right of cross-examination before the framing of the charge, then we should expect it to lay down explicitly that the accused should be required to state whether he wishes further to cross-examine any of the prosecution witnesses. The omission of the word "further" seems to indicate that the cross-examination is to be deferred, as a matter of right, until after the framing of the charge.

It must also be remembered that under S. 254 the Magistrate can frame a charge as soon as a prima facie case is established against the accused. It is not necessary to record the whole of the prosecution evidence before framing a charge. Hence, although there may be 12 prosecution witnesses, it is frequently possible and even desirable to frame a charge after only one or two witnesses have been examined. In such a case it is clear that all the "remaining witnesses" can only be cross-examined once under S. 256. I doubt whether the legislature intended that witnesses examined before the charge should be cross-examined twice, as a matter of right, while those examined after the charge should only be cross-examined once. Section 257 gives a right of second cross-examination if the Magistrate thinks it necessary in the interests of justice. The interests of the accused, therefore, are fully protected even if no cross-examination is permitted as a matter of right before the framing of the charge.

Sections 286(2) and 289(1) have also been referred to as showing that the examination of witnesses must include cross-examination and re-examination. This is no doubt the correct interpretation of the expression "examination of the witnesses" in Section 289(1) and of the expression "examine his witnesses" in Section 286(2), but that is not of much assistance in construing the language of S. 252 which is different. Moreover, there is no express provision for the cross-examination of prosecution witnesses in trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.

The only ruling relied upon by the learned advocate for the applicant is the case of Ashirbad Muchi v. Maju Muchini[1]. The judgment was very briefly expressed, but the learned Judges observed that the Magistrate should at once give the accused an opportunity to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses if they should so desire, even though the charge may not be framed.

This ruling does not purport to lay down the proposition that the accused has an absolute right of cross-examination before the charge is framed in the trial of a warrant-case. I think the ruling goes no further than laying down that a Magistrate would be well advised to permit cross-examination before the framing of the charge, and does not support the contention that he is bound to permit cross-examination at that stage.

Reference may also be made to the case of Queen-Empress v. Sagal Samba Sajao[2] in which the learned Judges remarked that Section 256 does not prohibit cross-examination before the charge has been framed. I quite agree. In Ramyad Singh v. Empress[3] a single Judge of the Patna High Court observed:

> The accused have got the right to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses once before the charge is framed, and, secondly, after the charge is framed under Section 256.

This observation certainly supports the applicant's contention, but it is a mere obiter dictum and no reasons are given. There is, therefore, no clear judicial authority, so far as I am aware, for holding that the accused is entitled, as a matter of right, to cross-examine prosecution witnesses in the trial of a warrant-case before the framing of a charge, and I am unable to interpret the relevant sections of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Evidence Act as giving the accused such a right.

As a matter of practice or discretion I think that Magistrates would be well advised to permit some cross-examination before framing a charge, otherwise, as pointed out by the learned Sessions Judge, S. 253 would practically become a dead letter. It is unlikely that a magistrate could discharge an accused person on the strength of the evidence of prosecution witnesses whose credit has not been impeached by cross-examination. Ordinarily the examination-in-chief of prosecution witnesses does make out a prima facie case against the accused, and it is only after the witnesses have been shown by cross-examination to be untrustworthy that the court would be justified in discharging the accused.

---

[1] 8 Cal. W. N. 838

[2] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 642 at 663

[3] 58 I. C. 686

In my opinion, although the accused has no absolute right of cross-examination before the framing of the charge, I think that Magistrates would generally be exercising a proper discretion if they did permit some cross-examination at least at that stage.

It has been contended that no prima facie case has been made out against the accused, but I agree with the learned Sessions Judge that, on the facts alleged, a criminal offence would be established against the accused.

As the Magistrate has not committed any irregualirty, in my opinion, in refusing to permit cross-examination before the charge, and at the most might be held to have failed to exercise a proper discretion, I see no grounds for interference at this stage. On the materials before me I cannot express any opinion whether the Magistrate should, in the exercise of his discretion, have permitted cross-examination in this case before framing the charge.

The application is rejected.

Application rejected

CIVIL 1931
July 17
SEN, J.
ALLEN, J.

LATIF JAHAN BEGAM alias SAKKAN BIBI (Plaintiff).
versus
MOHAMMAD NABI KHAN alias UMRAO DULAH KHAN (Defendant)*

Family settlement—Wife not living with husband—Father-in-law executes document—Agrees to pay allowance called Kharch-i-pandan—Allowance unconditional—Agreement amounts to family settlement—Consideration—Promotion of family peace.

Where the father-in-law of a Mohammedan lady, who had left her husband and was living with her parents, executed a document in her favour under which he agreed to pay her a monthly allowance called kharch-i-pandan and expressed his desire of bringing his daughter-in-law to his house so that she may live with her husband, but the document did not reserve to the executant any power of revocation either upon the happening of a future contingency or at his own sweet will and pleasure, held, (1) that the daughter-in-law was entitled to recover the arrears of the allowance which was not dependent upon the fulfilment of a condition precedent that she should return to her husband; (2) that the transaction partook of the nature of a family settlement the object of which was to promote good will between the daughter-in-law and her husband.

SECOND APPEAL from the decision of the District Judge of Bareilly.

Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and P. N. Sapru for the appellant.

K. N. Katju and M. A. Aziz for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal from the decree of the District Judge of Bareilly dated January 31, 1929 reversing the decision of the Subordinate Judge dated July 5, 1928 in a suit to recover arrears of a certain

---

*S. A. 370 of 1929

CIVIL 1931 LATIF JAHAN BEGAM
v.
MOHAMMAD NABI KHAN
Sen, J.

allowance called Karch-i-pandan by enforcement of an instrument dated February 28, 1921.

Karch-i-pandan is a recognised institution amongst Mohammedan families of noble descent and its nature and incidents have been defined by judicial pronouncement of final authorities.

In 1919, the plaintiff was married to Akhtar Ali Khan, son of the defendant-respondent and her dower was fixed at 1,25,500 of Mohammad Shahi ashrfis. A child was born of this marriage but died shortly afterwards. Sometimes after this event, the plaintiff left her husband's house and began to live with her parents.

On February 28, 1921, the defendant-respondent executed a document in favour of the plaintiff under which he agreed to pay her Rs.30 every month for her Kharch-i-pandan and other expenses, and in order to secure its due payment he hypothecated a three biswa zamindari share in Mouza Tanda. Under this instrument, he stipulated not to transfer the property to any third party and declared that the agreement was binding upon his heirs and legal representatives.

It is possible that the defendant's object in executing this document was to offer inducement to the plaintiff to return to her husband, but this object was not achieved.

On June 13, 1921, the defendant brought a suit in the court of the Subordinate Judge against the plaintiff. According to the plaintiff, the ostensible object of this suit was to seek a construction of the document dated February 28, 1921 but the real object was to procure its avoidance. This suit was withdrawn. On June 20, 1923 the defendant made a waqf of his entire property including the property hypothecated.

Since its execution, the defendant has not paid the allowance to the plaintiff; hence this suit to recover arrears for six years together with interest. The suit was resisted upon the following two grounds:—

(a) The agreement was procured from the defendant by undue influence and was not enforceable.

(b) The payment of the stipulated allowance was dependent upon the fulfilment of a condition precedent that the plaintiff should return to her husband and continue to live with him, and as this condition was not fulfilled the plaintiff was not entitled to the allowance claimed.

UNIVERSITY OF CALCUTTA * LAW DEPARTMENT * NOT TO BE REMOVED

The court of first instance overruled both of these pleas and gave the plaintiff a decree for the principal amount claimed but not for the interest.

Before the lower appellate court, the defendant did not urge the plea that the document had been obtained by undue influence. We are not surprised that the plea was abandoned. Where the parties are at arm's length and the party against whom undue influence is pleaded is not in a position to dominate the will of the other party, there can be no undue influence. In view of the fact that the plea has been abandoned, the matter need not be pursued any further.

But controversy appears to have centred upon the construction of the document; and the defendant contended that the agreement relating to the payment of the allowance was not unconditional but was dependent upon the plaintiff's return to her husband to fulfil her marital obligations.

CIVIL 1931 LATIF JAHAN BEGAM
v.
MOHAMMAD NABI KHAN
SEN, J

We have not the slightest doubt that in view of the pleadings this was the only point available to the defendant, and argument was addressed on this point. The learned Judge remarks as follows:—

> The only argument urged before me was whether the defendant was bound to pay the monthly allowance to his daughter-in-law, after she returned to her parties a second time, or whether the allowance was dependent on her remaining with her husband.
>
> It was argued on appeal that this was the vital point in the whole case.

The lower appellate court in agreement with the trial court overruled the defendant's contention on this point. It was definitely held that the alleged condition could not be traced in the four corners of the document. The defendant might well have had that object in view when he executed this document but he did not express it. The finding of the learned District Judge may be reproduced:—

LAW CAMPUS LIBRARY

LP 2200

> The lower court on the other hand considers that if this was the intention of the father-in-law he could have said so in clear terms so that there would have been no further discussion, but he has said that with his own free will he makes a monthly allowance of Rs.30 to his daughter-in-law and will put no objections in the way of payment. According to the lower court's argument it is possible that the daughter-in-law would not have returned to her husband at all if the intention of her father-in-law was merely to pay Rs.30 a month, while she lived with her husband but she might have returned and in fact did return for a short time understanding that she was to receive an allowance of Rs.30 a month for the rest of her life irrespective of the fact whether she was able after making the attempt to continue living with her husband. I agree with the lower court that this is the probable interpretation. The father-in-law was very anxious about his son's health and sanity and was willing to make a favourable offer to the plaintiff to return hoping that she would remain with her husband indefinitely, and if she did not he would still have to pay. It would have been very easy for him to enter in the document that the money was to be paid only as long as his daughter-in-law lived with her husband but this omission cannot be explained now on the ground that this was the intention.

The judgment of the trial court incorporates the following translation of the material portion of the disputed document:—

> Now having regard to the changes of time and the march of events I strongly apprehend that a disagreement will arise between the wife and the husband because my aforesaid daughter-in-law has gone to her parents. As my son has no movable and immovable property of any sort in his name with which he may meet his necessary expenses, the said Musammat is in great difficulties. Now it is necessary for and binding upon me to bring my daughter-in-law aforesaid to my house and keep her with her husband aforesaid.

There is nothing in the document to indicate that the agreement to pay the allowance was qualified by a condition precedent. The document does not reserve to the executant any power of revocation either upon the happening of a future contingency or at his own sweet will and pleasure. We are clearly of opinion that the construction put upon the instrument by the courts below was correct.

In view of the findings of the lower appellate court upon the points

Department of Law Library
Acc. No. 3107
Date................

Civil

1931

Latif Jahan Begam v. Mohammad Nabi Khan

Sen, J.

raised in the memorandum of appeal, there was no further point to arrest the attention of that court and the appeal should have been dismissed.

The lower appellate court appears to have gone astray in allowing the defendant to raise a new point which did not arise from the pleadings. The learned Judge observes:—

> Assuming it proved that the father-in-law made this allowance to her without any stipulation, the next point is whether this agreement which is without consideration is not void under Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act.

This plea was not taken in the written statement. No issue was framed on this point. No arguments were addressed to the trial court and the plea was not taken in the memorandum of appeal to the lower appellate court. The defendant ought not to have been allowed to break fresh ground during the progress of the argument in a court of appeal. The question did not involve a mere point of law. It required the determination of a question of fact, viz., whether the agreement was made on account of natural love and affection. The court below was not justified in recording a finding that the plaintiff had not proved that there was any affection between herself and her father-in-law. There was no occasion in this case for the plaintiff to offer any proof on a point which was not raised at the trial. We are of opinion that the learned District Judge has erred in entertaining and giving effect to this plea.

It has been argued before us that the agreement to pay the allowance is a nudam pactum, that it is not supported by consideration and that it is unenforceable. If this was the defendant's case, it ought to have been indicated in the pleadings and the defendant should have pressed for a distinct issue on this point. This was not done. To allow this plea to be raised at this stage of the case will be unfair to the plaintiff and to the courts below. For the same reason, we refuse to entertain the plea that the defendant revoked the instrument.

Our attention has been drawn to the decision of the Judicial Committee in Khwaja Mohammad Khan v. Husaini Begam[1]. In this case an agreement, resembling in certain respects an ante-nuptial settlement was made between the father of Husaini Begam and Khwaja Mohammad Khan, the prospective father-in-law, under which the latter agreed to pay Husaini Begam a certain allowance which was described as kharch-i-pandan. The allowance was specifically charged upon certain immovable property. Husaini Begam sued her father-in-law for recovery of the allowance which had fallen into arrears. It was held by the Privy Council that Husaini Begam was beneficially entitled to the allowance and that the common law doctrine propounded in Tweddle v. Atkinson could not be applied in India and among communities circumstanced as the Mohammedans, etc. (See page 413).

The points of divergence between that case and the present are that here the contract is post nuptial and that the daughter-in-law is a party to the agreement.

In our opinion, the transaction between the parties partakes of the

---

[1] I. L. R. 32 All. 410=7 A. L. J. R. 871

Civil

1931

Latif Jahan Begam v. Mohammad Nabi Khan

Sen, J.

nature of a family settlement. It was entered into between two members of the family and its object was to promote good will between Latif Jahan Begam, the daughter-in-law and her husband Akhtar Ali Khan.

The existence of a dispute or the assertion of a claim to any property is not essential for the creation of a family settlement. Where an arrangement has been arrived at between certain members of the family that is designed to promote peace and good will amongst certain of its members, this by itself is a good consideration to support the transaction. It is an established rule of law that in cases of family arrangement, courts will not scan too closely the quantum of consideration.

We allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the lower appellate court and restore that of the trial court. Plaintiff is entitled to her costs in this Court and in the lower appellate court.

Appeal allowed

Civil

1931

May 7

Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Smith, J.

ABDUL WAHID (Judgment-debtor)
versus
TRIBHAWAN DAS (Decree-holder)*

Civil Procedure Code (V of 1908), Or. 21, R. 89—Application for setting aside sale—R. 89 complied with—Poundage fee as required by R. 15, Chapter XVII, General Rules (Civil) not paid—Effect of—A mere irregularity—Court has power to entertain application and grant time—Sec. 122—Rules framed under—Can only regulate procedure of subordinate courts—Jurisdiction cannot be taken away.

The mere fact that a rule made by the High Court under Sec. 122 C. P. C. is imperative would not necessarily involve the conclusion that a breach of that rule would oust the jurisdiction of the subordinate court and make it helpless in the matter. Under Sec. 122 the High Court can only regulate the procedure of the subordinate courts, and cannot take away their jurisdiction.

Where all the conditions required by Or. 21, R. 89 were complied with by the applicant but as he failed to pay the poundage fee by affixing stamps to the application for setting aside the sale as required by R. 15 of Chapter XVII of General Rules (Civil) framed by the High Court under Sec. 122 C. P. C., the lower courts rejected the application on the ground that they had no jurisdiction held, that the failure to comply with R. 15 of Chapter XVII was a mere irregularity, and would not prevent the court from entertaining the application under Or. 21, R. 89, and granting time to deposit the poundage fee.

Civil Revision from an order of G. O. Allen Esq., District Judge of Agra.

Iqbal Ahmad, Mukhtar Ahmad and Mansur Alam for the applicant.
S. K. Dar and Gopi Nath Kunzru for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Sulaiman, A. C. J.—This is a judgment-debtor's application in revision from an order of the District Judge affirming the order of the Small

---

*Civ. Rev. 316 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL WAHID v. TRIBHAWAN DAS

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Cause Court Judge who declined to entertain an application under Order 21, Rule 89. After the sale had taken place the judgment-debtor deposited within the period allowed by law the amount specified in the proclamation of sale as well as a sum equal to 5 per cent of the purchase money as required by Order 21, Rule 89 and applied for the sale to be set aside. He did not at that stage pay the poundage fee. The Munsarim reported that the poundage fee ought to have been paid at the time the application was filed. On the very day that this office report was made the appellant applied asking for time to deposit the poundage fee.

The learned Judge remarked:

> I am sorry it does not lie within my jurisdiction to grant any extension under Order 21, Rule 89. Any deficiency in the deposited amount necessarily involves (?) a rejection of the objection. The application is rejected accordingly.

There is no doubt that the S. C. C. Judge thought that inasmuch as the poundage fee had not been paid along with the application within 30 days, he had no jurisdiction to grant any extension of time, and he had no option but to reject the application. This was a failure to exercise jurisdiction in case he really had jurisdiction to extend the time.

An appeal was preferred to the District Judge, who considered the applicability of Rule 15, Chapter XVII of General Rules (Civil) made by this High Court for regulating the procedure in the subordinate courts. He began with the remarks:

> Admittedly if it is held that it must be paid along with the two other sums mentioned in Order 21, Rule 89 no time can be allowed.

He concluded that the rule was imperative and that the poundage must be paid up in time, and it was contrary to common sense that a judgment-debtor should get an indulgence without first paying the Government dues. He "accordingly agreed with the view of the S. C. C. Judge." We think that the proper interpretation of the judgment of the learned Judge is that he came to the conclusion that the deposit of the poundage fee within the period of 30 days was a condition precedent to the hearing of the application, and that if that condition was not complied with, the first court had no jurisdiction to entertain it. If his view of the law were not correct, it would amount to a failure to exercise jurisdiction by the first court.

Of course, in most cases a failure to exercise jurisdiction is based on an erroneous view of the law that the court has no jurisdiction. The mere fact that the failure proceeds on an error of law would not take the case out of Section 115 (b) of the Civil Procedure Code.

Order 21, Rule 89 requires the deposit of only two sums (1) the amount specified in the proclamation of sale and (2) a sum equal to 5 per cent of the purchase money. Rule 89 does not in terms require the payment of any poundage fee. Rule 92, Sub-rule (2) provides that where in the case of an application under Rule 89 the deposit required by that Rule is made within 30 days from the date of the sale, the court shall make an order setting aside the sale. It would therefore appear that Rule 89 and Rule 92 were literally complied with. The High Court had power

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL WAHID v. TRIBHAWAN DAS

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

to amend Rule 89 and to add a third item like poundage fee in it. It has, however, not done this so far.

The High Court in the exercise of its powers under Section 122 has made certain rules for the guidance of the procedure in the subordinate civil courts. Rule 15 of Chapter XVII requires that a poundage fee "shall be paid by stamps affixed to the application to set aside the sale." The rule is no doubt imperative, and although it does not say in so many words that the fee cannot be paid after the expiry of 30 days, this is implied by the requirement that the stamps should be affixed to the application itself. But the mere fact that the rule is imperative would not necessarily involve the conclusion that a breach of that rule would oust the jurisdiction of the subordinate court and make it helpless in the matter. Under Section 122 the High Court can only regulate the procedure of the subordinate courts, and cannot take away their jurisdiction. There are many imperative provisions in the Civil Procedure Code, non-compliance with which has been held in numerous cases to amount merely to an irregularity. The failure to affix the stamps to the application for setting aside the sale would also be nothing more than a mere irregularity, and would not prevent the court from entertaining an application under Rule 89, if all the conditions required by that Rule are complied with. Had the courts below refused the application in the exercise of their discretion on the ground that this was not a fit case for showing indulgence, the position would have been different. They have declined to exercise jurisdiction on the supposed ground that none existed. This was clearly a failure to exercise jursidiction.

Accordingly we allow this application, and setting aside the orders of the courts below, send the case back to the first court through the lower appellate court for disposing of the application on the merits according to law. The costs will abide the event.

Application allowed

CRIMINAL

1931

May 18

KENDALL, J.

MUHAMMADI (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR THROUGH MUNICIPAL BOARD, AGRA (Opposite party)*

Municipalities Act, Sec. 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e)—Interpretation—To be one which encroaches less on rights of citizens—Whether Board has power to make bye-law prohibiting prostitutes from residing in the whole of the municipal area with the exception of a specified part.

The interpretation which must be placed on Sec. 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act is the one which is not only the more reasonable one but also the one that encroaches less on the rights of individual citizens, viz., that a Municipal Board has power to make a bye-law prohibiting prostitutes from residing in a specified street or area, but not to make a bye-law prohibiting them from residing in the whole of the municipal area with the exception of a certain specified part. Kruse v.

---

*Cr. Rev. 147 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931 MUHAMMADI
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Johnson, [1898] Q. B. D. 791, Kamta Nath v. The Chairman, Municipal Board, Allahabad, 2 A. L. J. R. 676 and Imami v. King-Emperor, 10 A. L. J. R. 426 followed.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of G. O. ALLEN ESQ., Sessions Judge of Agra.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the applicant.

N. P. Asthana for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Kendall, J.

KENDALL, J.—This is an application for the revision of an order of the learned Sessions Judge of Agra confirming the order of a bench of Magistrates imposing a fine on Mst. Muhammadi, a prostitute, under Section 299 of the U. P. Municipalities Act. The fine was imposed for the alleged infringement of a bye-law made by the Board, and the application for revision is made on the ground that the bye-law itself is ultra vires.

Under Section 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act a Municipal Board by special resolution is empowered to make bye-laws > prohibiting, in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes and keeping of a brothel, or the letting or other disposal of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel.

In 1917 the Municipal Board of Agra passed a bye-law under this Section of the Act to the following effect:—

> No public prostitute shall reside in any house or building or ply her trade within the municipal limits, excepting on both sides of the street beginning from shop Nos. 3215 and 3096 in Phulatti Bazar down to Kinari Bazar up to shop Nos. 2007 and 4765 and from there on both sides of the street in Kashmiri Bazar down to Malkabazar cross road shops Nos. 2723|11 and 2175 on each side of the street.

This bye-law on the face of it specified the area within which prostitutes were permitted to reside. It did not specify the area within which they were prohibited from residing, and it is argued that on a true interpretation of the Act, the Board had no right to pass a bye-law of this nature.

It has also been argued that the bye-law is unreasonable, but I have very little information on this point, and all I have been told by counsel is that the area in which they are permitted to reside is a busy market area not far from the centre of a large city—an area which may be very suitable for a few wealthy members of the profession, but difficult of access to numbers of unfortunate prostitutes who are for this reason practically prohibited from residing in the municipality.

The real question is whether the bye-law is ultra vires or not. The word "specify" as defined in Webster's dictionary is > to mention or name as a particular thing, to designate in words so as to distinguish from other things; as to specify the uses of a plant; to specify the articles one wants to purchase.

In the bye-law, it is argued, the only "street or area specified in this way" is "both sides of the street, etc.," as detailed therein, and it is this area which has been distinguished from the rest of the municipality and set aside as a residence for prostitutes, a procedure which is inconsistent with Clause (e) of Section 298 H. Mr. Asthana, on the other side, has argued that the bye-law also specifies "the municipal limits," with the result that the rest of the municipal area is distinguished from the area which is excepted, and thus notified as a "specified area" which is prohibited to prostitutes.

I think it must be admitted that the plain meaning of the Section is the one which Mr. Sinha would give to it, viz., that the smaller area is the one that is specified. It has been pointed out to me that in the note to some model bye-laws which were published with the Municipal Manual in 1917 the view is expressed that Section 298 H (e) only permits bye-laws to be made prohibiting in any specified area or street the residence of a public prostitute, etc. ; it does not authorise bye-laws prescribing distinct areas within which public prostitutes must reside, or prohibiting their residence anywhere else within municipal limits. It is true that though the Legislature may have intended this to be the interpretation of the law, it will not necessarily follow that the courts will interpret it in this way unless it can properly be so interpreted according to the judicial rules of interpretation. I have however not been given any reason why the more obvious interpretation should not be preferred. Moreover, if it be supposed for the sake of argument that the bye-law could "specify" the whole of the Municipal area in this way, it does not appear that the Act empowered the Board to go further and to specify a second smaller area in which prostitutes may reside. Mr. Asthana has referred to the case of Kruse v. Johnson[1] to show that a court ought to be slow to hold that a bye-law is void for unreasonableness. It is however not the unreasonableness of the bye-law that is attacked so much as the illegality of it. In more than one case which has come before this Court it has been held that in deciding a question between a municipal board and a resident in the municipality a very strict view will be taken of the Board's powers. In the case of Kamta Nath v. the Chairman Municipal Board, Allahabad[2] it was held that > a Municipal Act is an Act which encroaches on the rights of the subjects as regards property. The recognised rule of interpretation in such a case is that any words contained in it should be interpreted if possible so as to respect such rights.

A somewhat similar view was taken by a Bench of this Court in the case of Dassu v. King-Emperor[3]. Again in the case of Imami v. King-Emperor[4] a Bench of this Court has held that > the intention of the Legislature by framing Section 128 (b) (i) of the Municipalities Act does not seem to be to give a power to inspect and properly regulate all places of public resort. In interpreting an Act like the Municipal Act, which encroaches on the rights of the subjects, the Legislature is expected to manifest its intention clearly and beyond reasonable doubt.

On these principles I must hold that the interpretation which must be placed on Clause (e) of Section 298 H is the one which is not only the

---

[1] [1898] Q. B. D. 791

[2] 2 A. L. J. R. 676

[3] 6 A. L. J. R. 544

[4] 10 A. L. J. R. 426

CRIMINAL
1931
MOHAMMADI
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Kendall, J.

more reasonable one but also the one that encroaches less on the rights of individual citizens, viz., that the Board has power to make a bye-law prohibiting prostitutes from residing in a specified street or area, but not to make a bye-law prohibiting them from residing in the whole of the municipal area with the exception of a certain specified part. For these reasons I accept the application, set aside the order of the court below, and direct that the applicant be acquitted and that the fine if paid be remitted.

Application allowed

CIVIL 1931
July 22
BOYS, J.
SMITH, J.

LAKSHMI CHAND (Applicant)
versus
BEHARI LAL AND OTHERS (Opposite parties)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 22, R. 9—Application under—Ignorance of death of a respondent—No negligence or omission on the part of appellant—Whether amounts to 'sufficient cause' within Sec. 5 Limitation Act.

Sec. 5, Limitation Act, is expressly made applicable to an application to set aside the abatement of an appeal so far as a deceased respondent is concerned, and the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 171 can be extended, when 'sufficient cause' is shown.

Ignorance of the death of a respondent, in the absence of any negligence or other act or omission for which the appellant can be held responsible, is "sufficient cause" within the meaning of Sec. 5, Limitation Act.

Panna Lal for the applicant.

Baleshwari Prasad for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Smith, J.

SMITH, J.—This is an application by a defendant-appellant asking for the abatement of his appeal, as against one of the respondents, to be set aside; the abatement being due to the fact that Radhe Lal, the respondent in question, having died, no application had been made to bring his legal representatives on the record within the period of 90 days allowed by the Limitation Act. The application is made on the ground that the appellant was unaware, through no fault of his own, of the death of Radhe Lal. We have considered the three affidavits and heard counsel on the question of fact, and we are satisfied that the appellant has in this respect made out his case that he was ignorant of the death of Radhe Lal until the day he names when he heard of it, and that the respondent has been unable to make out a case that that ignorance was due to the negligence or to the deliberate omission of the appellant. It is next contended for the respondent that ignorance is no basis for extending the period of limitation, it being pointed out that not only have the 90 days elapsed for making the application for substitution, but so have the 60 days allowed for the application to set aside the abatement (Art. 171). Sec. 5 of the Limitation Act is expressly made applicable by O. 22, R. 9 itself to applications of this nature. There is some authority in the decisions of the Punjab Court for the broad proposition that ignorance of the date of the death is not sufficient cause within S. 5 of the Limitation Act. There is

---

*Application in F. A. 342 of 1929

CIVIL 1931
LAKSHMI CHAND
v.
BEHARI LAL
Smith, J.

no such authority in this Court, and we can find no jurisdiction for holding that ignorance of the death, in the absence of any negligence or other act or omission for which the applicant can be held responsible, should not be held to be sufficient cause within the meaning of the Limitation Act. In this we are in agreement with the view expressed in Hari Saran Singh v. Sayed Md. Eradat Hussain[1]. The result is that we allow the application, and setting aside the abatement direct that the appeal be restored to its original number for disposal according to law, and that the names of Shyam Lal and Ram Lal, majors, and Moti Lal, minor, under the guardianship of Shyam Lal, be substituted for the deceased Radhe Lal.

Application allowed

---

[1] [1925] Pat. 162

CIVIL 1931
June 29
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
SEN, J.

COLLECTOR OF FARRUKHABAD AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
KISHORE MOHAN alias MUNNA LAL (Plaintiff)*

Transfer of Property Act, Secs. 95, 82, and 100—One of several mortgagors redeems mortgage—Charge accrues in favour of mortgagor who redeems—Rule not limited to possessory mortgages—Art. 132 Limitation Act applicable to such a claim.

On redemption of the mortgage property by one of the several mortgagors, even in a case where the mortgage is not a possessory one, a charge accrues in favour of the mortgagor who discharges the mortgage, and he is entitled to enforce the charge against his co-mortgagors, and the right accrues on the date of payment, and Art. 132, Limitation Act is applicable to such a claim. Ahmad Wali Khan v. Shamsh-ul-Jahan Begum, I. L. R. 28 All. 482 followed.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU AGHOR NATH MUKERJI, District Judge of Farrukhabad, confirming a decree of BABU LAKSHMI NARAIN TANDON, Subordinate Judge.

G. S. Pathak for the appellants.

P. L. Banerji for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a defendants' appeal arising out of a suit for contribution which was treated by the first court as a suit for the enforcement of a lien of the vendor for the unpaid purchase money.

In 1911 a mortgage deed was executed by Raghunath Singh hypothecating a half share in a grove and a zamindari property to Chhange Lal. Later in the same year Raghunath Singh along with the guardian of Sita Ram Singh sold the grove to Azizuddin and Imamuddin, leaving money in the hands of the transferees for payment of the entire mortgage money due to Chhange Lal. Subsequently Azizuddin transferred his interest in the grove to Imamuddin and therefore the latter acquired the whole interest in the grove in 1916. There was a stipulation in the deed that Imamuddin would pay the whole of the mortgage money.

---

*S. A. 159 of 1928

CIVIL 1931
COLLECTOR OF FARRUKHABAD
v.
KISHORE MOHAN
Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Sita Ram instituted a suit for the cancellation of the deed executed by his guardian which succeeded. Then Sita Ram transferred to Lachhmi Narain his share in the grove. This share was obviously free from the mortgage of 1911. Later on Imamuddin transferred his interest in the remaining half of the grove to Lachhmi Narain in 1917. In the sale deed taken by Lachhmi Narain the property was professedly sold free from all incumbrances and there was no reference to the mortgage deed of 1911. Thus Lachhmi Narain contracted in express terms not to undertake the liability to discharge the amount due under the mortgage of 1911. The defendants-appellants are the representatives of Lachhmi Narain. The plaintiff Kishore Mohan in 1918 purchased half the zamindari share of Raghunath Singh, that is to say, his equity of redemption in the share subject to the mortgage of 1911.

The mortgagee of 1911 then brought a suit and obtained a decree and put up the entire mortgaged property for sale at auction. The plaintiff Kishore Mohan paid the whole of the decretal amount and saved the property of all the mortgagors from sale. This was on January 20, 1923. He then on January 23, 1924 filed the present suit claiming the whole of the amount which he had paid in discharge of the mortgage decree. The defendants pleaded that the claim was barred by limitation and that the plaintiff was not entitled to any amount whatsoever from the defendants. The courts below have held that the claim is not barred by limitation and that the plaintiff was entitled to the whole amount.

So far as the question of limitation is concerned the learned advocate for the appellants has to concede that the latest case of this Court, Aziz Ahmad Khan v. Chhote Lal[1] is against him. The payment was made at a time when the old Transfer of Property Act was in force. We are therefore not concerned with the effect of the recent amendment. With regard to Section, 95 of the old Act their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Ahmad Wali Khan v. Shamsh-ul-Jehan Begam[2] remarked that > the construction of Section 95 of the Transfer of Property Act should not limit its operation to mortgages under which possession passes, and therefore on redemption properly repasses: the better way is to construe it distributively, to make the condition of obtaining possession apply only to the cases in which its fulfilment is from the nature of the mortgage possible, and in other cases to make the charge follow on redemption.

It is clear that their Lordships intended to lay down that on redemption of the mortgage property by one of the several mortgagors, even in a case where the mortgage was not a possessory one, a charge accrued in favour of the mortgagor who discharged the mortgage. Reading Sections 82, 95 and 100 of the Transfer of Property Act in the light of the observation made by their Lordships of the Privy Council there can be no doubt that a mortgagor redeeming the whole mortgage was entitled to enforce the charge against his co-mortgagors. The right to enforce it obviously accrued on the date of payment. The Article applicable to such a claim would obviously be Article 132 of the Limitation Act. It was therefore impossible to hold that if 12 years had expired by the time the mortgage decree was passed on the mortgage and one of the mortgagors paid up the whole amount he had no remedy left. We are therefore of opinion that the suit was really one for contribution and was not barred by time.

---

[1] 26 A. L. J. R. 298

[2] I. L. R. 28 All. 482

On the other hand it is very difficult to say that the plaintiff should be allowed to recover the whole amount paid by him. He is a representative of Raghunath Singh so far as the zamindari share is concerned. This zamindari share was mortgaged along with the grove and was rateably liable for the mortgage money. Taking the case at its highest in favour of the plaintiff there was a lien on account of the unpaid purchase-money in favour of Raghunath, the vendor of the grove, and later on in favour of Azizuddin who transferred his interest in the grove to Imamuddin. The defendants' predecessor was the subsequent transferee of this grove. The plaintiff cannot claim to have acquired the lien of Raghunath Singh in respect of the unpaid purchase-money of the grove because he has only acquired the zamindari property which was distinct and separate from the grove. Whatever remedies Raghunath himself or for the matter of that Azizuddin might have had, it is difficult to say how the present plaintiff can enforce such a lien against the defendants. The plaintiff ought to contribute protanto to the extent of the value of the property purchased by him and can only get a decree for the proportionate amount against the defendants who have acquired the grove. As the rateable liabilities of the two properties have not been gone into by the courts below we think that it would be just and fair to send down an issue on this point. The legal position of the parties was not practically understood by the courts below and that is why no proper issue was framed as regards the rateable liabilities of the various properties.

What were the relative values at the time of the mortgage dated July 3, 1911, of the properties now held by the plaintiff and the defendants-appellants respectively?

As this is a new issue we direct that the parties should be allowed to produce any fresh evidence which they choose to produce.

The lower appellate court will be at liberty either to take the evidence itself or direct the court of first instance to record the evidence, but it will however submit its own finding on the evidence within three months.

Issue remitted

CIVIL 1931
July 2
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
SEN, J.

SIDDIQ-UN-NISSA BIBI (Applicant)
versus
NIZAM UDDIN KHAN AND OTHERS (Opposite party)*

Guardians and Wards Act, Sec. 19——Where contingencies mentioned in sub-clauses exist—Court has no power to appoint guardian—Personal law governing minor not touched—Sec. 25—'Custody'—Meaning of—Includes constructive custody.

The language of Sec. 19 Guardians and Wards Act implies that when any of the three contingencies mentioned in the Sub-clauses exists, there is no authority in the court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of the minor at all; that is to say, the jurisdiction of the court conferred

---

*F. A. F. O. 180 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

SIDDIQ-UN-NISSA BIBI
v.
NIZAM UDDIN KHAN

upon it by Sec. 17 to appoint or declare a guardian is ousted where the case is covered by Sec. 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act. The legislature apparently did not intend to settle the competition that may arise under the personal law governing the minor between the husband and the father of the minor.

Sukhdeo v. Ram Chandar Rai, I. L. R. 46 All. 706=22 A. L. J. R. 680, Annie Besant v. Narayaniah, I. L. R. 38 Mad. 807 at 822 and Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, 45 I. A. 73 at 83 relied on.

There is no reason to restrict the meaning of the word 'custody' in Sec. 25, Guardians and Wards Act, to the physical or actual custody of the minor. Even if the ward is in the actual custody of another person with the permission of the guardian, he or she would be under the guardian's constructive custody.

Where on the death of a Mohammedan mother, the father placed his minor daughter under the care of the maternal grand-mother who lived at a distance from the residence of the father, and the girl was brought up by the maternal grand-mother upto the age of 7, when the father served a notice upon the maternal grand-mother that the child should be delivered to him and followed it up by an application under Sec. 25, Guardians and Wards Act, held, (1) that the custody of the girl with the maternal-grand-mother was in law a constructive custody of the father, and the father, who was the guardian of her minor daughter, could maintain an application for obtaining the custody of the minor under Sec. 25, (2) that the refusal of the grand-mother to hand over the child to the father amounted to a removal from the constructive custody of the father, (3) that in the circumstances the minor was not under the care of the grand-mother by virtue of her right of hizanat.

The definition of the word 'guardian' in Sec. 4(2), Guardians and Wards Act does not necessarily mean a guardian duly appointed or declared by the court, and includes any person having the care of the person of a minor.

If a female relation is under the Mohammedan Law entitled to the custody of the minor and is not disqualified in any way and the minor is actually in her custody, it cannot be said that she has left or has been removed from the custody of the guardian having care of the person of the minor.

In cases where Sec. 17, Guardians and Wards Act, applies the personal law has to this extent been superseded that it is not absolutely binding on the court and can be ignored if the welfare of the minor requires that some one else, even inconsistently with that law, is the more proper person to be appointed guardian of the minor.

FIRST APPEAL from an order of BABU PIARE LAL, District Judge of Ghazipur.

Iqbal Ahmad and Munsur Alam for the appellant.

K. N. Katju and Ram Anugrah Narain Singh for the respondents.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an appeal by the maternal grand-mother of Mst. Wajida Khatun from an order of the District Judge of Ghazipur directing that she should make over the child who was about seven years old to the respondent, her father. The mother of the girl died a few days after her birth at Sasaram which is the residence of the father. The maternal grand-mother is residing in another district at Zamania. The girl was undoubtedly allowed to be brought by the grand-mother from Sasaram to Zamania and has for these years been maintained and brought up by the appellant. An application was made by the maternal grand-mother that she should be appointed the guardian of her person. Objections were filed by the father, the grand-father as well as the paternal grand-mother to the appointment of the maternal grand-mother as her guardian and there was also a prayer that either of these persons be appointed a gurdian of her person. The learned District Judge came to the conclusion that in view of the provisions of Section 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act he had no power to appoint a guardian at all, but he granted a separate application of the father made under Section 25 of the Act for the return of the girl to him. The grand-mother has accordingly appealed and challenges the propriety of the order passed.

The learned counsel for the parties have placed before us a large number of rulings which show that there has to some extent been a conflict of opinion on the interpretation of some of the sections of the Act.

There can be no doubt that so far as the power to appoint and declare the guardian of a minor under Section 17 of the Act is concerned the personal law of the minor concerned is to be taken into consideration, but that law is not necessarily binding upon the court, which must look to the welfare of the minor consistently with that law. This is so in cases where Section 17 applies. In such a cases the personal law has to this extent been superseded that it is not absolutely binding on the court and can be ignored if the welfare of the minor requires that some one else, even inconsistently with that law, is the more proper person to be appointed guardian of the minor. Section 19 then provides that:

> Nothing in the chapter shall authorise the court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person (a) of a minor who is a married female and whose husband is not, in the opinion of the court, unfit to be guardian of her person, or (b) of a minor whose father is living and is not, in the opinion of the court, unfit to be guardian of the person of the minor, or (c) of a minor whose property is under the superintendence of a Court of Wards competent to appoint a guardian of the person of the minor.

The language of the Section, as it stands, obviously implies that when any of the three contingencies mentioned in the sub-clauses exists there is no authority in the court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of the minor at all; that is to say, the jurisdiction of the court conferred upon it by Section 17 to appoint or declare a guardian is ousted where the case is covered by Section 19.

The learned advocate for the respondent has argued before us that the Section must be read as if it was meant that nothing shall authorise the court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of the minor 'other than the husband or the father as the case may be'. This, in my opinion, would be interpolating new words into the Section which are not there. If an application for appointment of a guardian is made to the court, and it is brought to its notice that the minor has a husband who is alive and is not unfit to be the guardian of the minor, or that he or she has a father who is living and is not unfit to be the guardian of the person of the minor, then there is no authority in the court to appoint or declare a guardian of the person of the minor. The section means not only that in the presence of the husband or the father no one else should be given preference, when either of them is fit to be appointed the guardian, but on its language it even ousts the jurisdiction of the court altogether and prevents it from appointing even the husband or the father as a guardian when both of them are not unfit to be the guardian. The legislature apparently did not intend to settle the competition that may arise under the personal law governing the minor between the husband and the father of the minor. In the same way no appointment or declaration of a guardian can be made when the property of the minor is under the superintendence of a court of wards which is competent to appoint a guardian of the person of the minor. This, in my opinion, is the plain meaning deduced from the language of the Section as it stands. The learned advocate for the respondent has argued that by enacting Section 19 the legislature intended to declare that the husband is the guardian of the married female minor and after him her father, and therefore the Section does not prohibit their being appointed or declared to be the guardian. In my opinion, the legislature intended that nobody should be appointed or declared the guardian at all when the husband and the father are alive and both of them are not unfit, without attempting to settle the competition between them which may arise under the personal law. There is no justification for interpreting the Section as if it is confined only to the appointment or declaration of a guardian other than the husband or the father.

This conclusion, though possibly not for the same reason, has been arrived at in several cases of which mention may be made of the case of Sukhdeo v. Ram Chandar Rai[1]. It may also be pointed out that in the case of Annie Besant v. Narayaniah[2] their Lordships of the Privy Council remarked:

> And further no order declaring a guardian could by reason of the 19th section of the Guardians and Wards Act, 1890, be made during the respondent's life unless in the opinion of the court he was unfit to be their guardian, which was clearly not the case.

It is not necessary to refer to cases which have taken a contrary view. But it can be briefly stated that the same view has been expressed in Oudh and Madras.

The learned advocate for the respondent has argued that the personal law of the minor has been completely abrogated and superseded by the Guardians and Wards Act for all purposes. He has further urged that there is no right of suit for obtaining custody of the minor independently of this Act. He has relied on a passage in the judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case quoted above. On the other hand, in another case the Bombay High Court has expressed the view that where no application can be made by a father under the Guardians and Wards Act he may maintain a regular suit. It is not necessary to express any opinion on this point.

[1] I. L. R. 46 All. 706=22 A. L. J. R. 680

[2] I. L. R. 38 Mad. 807 at 822

The personal law has been abrogated to the extent laid down in the Act. Where however the personal law is not in conflict with any provision of the Act, I would not be prepared to hold that it has necessarily been superseded.

It is urged before us that the husband and the father are the natural guardians of the minor child and are always entitled to apply under Section 25 as against the mother or other relations. Section 25 provides that if a ward leaves or is removed from the custody of a guardian of his person, the court, if it is of opinion that it will be for the welfare of the ward to return to the custody of his guardian, may make an order for his return. The necessary condition for the exercise of the discretion given by Section 25 is that the ward should have left or have been removed from the custody of the guardian of his person. If the ward has not left or has not been removed from such custody, it is difficult to see how the Section would apply. At the same time it must be conceded that the custody need not be the actual physical custody of the minor and may even be a constructive custody of the guardian. This view was expressed by Lindsay, J. in the case of Mushaf Husain v. Mohammad Jawad[8] and has been followed by other courts also, except perhaps in Bombay. There is no reason to restrict the meaning of the word 'custody' to the physical or actual custody of the minor. Even if the ward is in the actual custody of another person with the permission of the guardian he or she would be under the guardian's constructive custody. Section 25(3) indicates that the residence of a ward against the will of his guardian with a person who is not his guardian does not of itself terminate the guardianship. Accordingly the constructive guardianship will continue.

At the same time I would not be prepared to hold that if under the personal law governing the minor she is for the time being in the custody of the dejure guardian, the court has full power to remove the child from that custody and place it in the custody of another person who may also come within the definition of the expression 'guardian of the person' though not duly appointed or declared by the court. In my opinion in such a case the ward cannot be said to have left or have been removed from the custody of a guardian.

Under the Mohammedan Law a minor wife has the option of repudiating the marriage on attaining puberty. Dr. Katju has contended before us that the legislature by enacting Section 19 has laid down that the husband and after him the father is the natural guardian of a female minor and has superseded the personal law. I do not think that this is the result of the Section. If she were living with her female relation who is entitled under the Mohammedan Law to the custody of her person, I would be loath to hold that the District Judge would have power to direct that she should be handed over to her husband.

A question has been raised before us whether the right under the Mohammedan Law of the female relation of a minor girl under the age of puberty to the custody of the person of the girl is identical with the

---

[8] 21 Oudh Cases 194

CIVIL

1931

SIDDIQ-UN-NISSA BIBI
v.
NIZAM UDDIN KHAN

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

guardianship of the person of the minor or whether it is something different and distinct. The right to the custody of such a minor vested in her female relations, is not absolute and is subject to several conditions including the absence of residing at a distance from the father's place of residence and want of taking proper care of the child. It is also clear that the supervision of the child by the father continues in spite of the fact that she is under the care of her female relation, as the burden of providing maintenance for the child rests exclusively on the father. Mr. Ameer Ali in his treatise on the Mohammedan Law, Vol. II, page 587 (3rd edition) noted that the first and primary natural guardian of a minor is the father. In Imambandi v. Mutasaddi[4] their Lordships of the Privy Council in reviewing the provisions and principles of the Mohammedan Law remarked:

> It is perfectly clear that under the Mohammedan Law the mother is entitled only to the custody of the person of her minor child up to a certain age according to the sex of the child. But she is not the natural guardian; the father alone or if he be dead, his executor (under the Sunni Law) is the legal guardian.

It would therefore seem to follow that the mere fact that a female relation is entitled to the custody or care of the minor girl up to a certain age would not result in the father not being the guardian of the child.

Under the Guardians and Wards Act however the word 'guardian' has been defined as meaning a person having the care of the person of a minor or of his property, or of both his person and property. Thus the word 'guardian' is used in a very wide sense and does not necessarily mean a guardian duly appointed or declared by the court. Any person who has the care of the person of the minor is a guardian of the person, and any person who has the care of the property of the minor is a guardian of the property within the meaning of this Act. I would accordingly feel inclined to hold that if a female relation is under the Mohammedan Law entitled to the custody of the minor and is not disqualified in any way and the minor is actually in her custody, it cannot be said that she has left or has been removed from the custody of the guardian having care of the person of the minor.

In the present case, as already pointed out, the girl was born at Sasaram which is the residence of the father. She has the father's mother who is living at the place and her father is alive. The learned District Judge has found that the father is not unfit to be her guardian. There was some dispute as to the dower debt of the girl's deceased mother being still due, which was alleged by the appellant to amount to Rs.40,000 in which the minor's share would come to Rs.20,000. This amount was disputed by the husband, but at the direction of the court the father of the girl has executed a registered document settling property of the value of Rs.20,000 on the minor girl. There is no longer any apprehension that she would be deprived of this inheritance if she were placed in the custody of her father. On the other hand, it is pointed out by the court below that the maternal grand-mother has not got her name entered in the revenue papers in respect of her share in the inheritance left by her deceased mother, but that the grand-mother has got her own name entered as against the entire estate and is in possession of it. The girl has attained the age of seven and needs education, and the learned Judge is satisfied that the proper education as desired by the father cannot be had at Zamania which place the grand-mother according to her own admission is unwilling to leave. The mere fact that the father has married again is not necessarily a disqualification when he has got his own mother living with him who can take care of the child. We think that it is impossible to hold that the father is unfit to be the guardian of the person of the girl. On the other hand we are clearly of opinion that, having regard to the necessity of her being educated properly, it is for the benefit of the minor that she should be under the direction and control of her own father.

---

[4] 45 I. A. 73 at 83

Any right which the maternal grand-mother may have claimed under the Mohammedan Law disappeared when the girl was brought over from Sasaram which is the place of the residence of the father. From that moment she was under the care of the maternal grand-mother with the permission of the father and not by virtue of any right which the grand-mother could claim under the personal law. The Hizanat accordingly terminated and the next person of the minor would be the paternal grand-mother, who has joined in this application with the father and is living with him. It is therefore impossible to hold that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to proceed under Section 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act. The custody of the girl with the grand-mother was in law a constructive custody of the father with whose consent and permission she had so far been living at Zamania. When the father served a notice upon the maternal grand-mother that the child should be delivered to him and followed it up by this application, the permission was revoked as it was obviously revokable. The refusal of the grand-mother to hand over the child amounted to a removal from the constructive custody of the father. In these circumstances Section 25 applies and the order of the court below was not without jurisdiction.

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—I fully agree with the judgment delivered by the Hon'ble the Acting Chief Justice. The facts which have given rise to this appeal have been dealt with very fully by my learned colleague and need not be recapitulated. The weight of authority is in favour of the propositions that under Section 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act the learned District Judge had no jurisdiction to appoint or declare the father of the minor as her guardian and that the maternal grand-mother could not be appointed her guardian where the father of the minor was living and was not unfit to be the guardian. Section 19 of the Guardians and Wards Act overrides the provisions of Section 17. Under the Mohammedan Law, the maternal grand-mother is not the guardian of the person of the minor grand-daughter. She has the right of hizanat till the girl attains puberty, but hizanat is not the same thing as guardianship of the person. The guardianship of the person rests in the father. Mst. Siddiqunnissa Bibi, the maternal grand-mother is not resident of Sasaram, the place where the parents of the minor lived. Upon the death of the mother, the father

Civil

1931

Siddiq-un-nissa Bibi v. Nizam Uddin Khan

Sen, J.

took the girl to Zamania where the maternal grand-mother lived and put her into the possession and custody of the latter. This did not confer upon her the right of hizanat. On the other hand, she became the custodian of the girl by the leave and license of the father. Possession or custody may be either actual or constructive. The possession of the minor by the maternal grand-mother under the circumstances disclosed by this case was clearly constructive. The father therefore was entitled to put an end to this constructive custody and to claim restoration of the girl to him as the legal guardian under the Mohammedan Law. Moreover, the father has, under the Mohammedan Law, the right to put an end to the hizanat exercised by a female relative where the latter lived at a distance from the residence of the father with the result that it was not practicable for the father to exercise the rights of supervision and care over the minor. Although the father has not been appointed or declared the guardian under Act VIII of 1890, the definition of the term 'guardian' in Section 4, Sub-clause (2) is sufficiently wide to include a Mohammedan father, who has the right of supervision over his minor daughter for the ends of her welfare. The father was therefore the 'guardian' within the fold of Section 25 of the Act and could thus maintain an application for recovery of the custody of the minor from the maternal grand-mother. I would therefore dismiss the appeal with costs.

By the Court—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Criminal

1931

August 25

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

CHANCHAL (Applicant)

versus

KING-EMPEROR THROUGH THE SECRETARY, MUNICIPAL BOARD, ALIGARH (Opposite party)*

Municipalities Act (U. P. Act 2 of 1916), Sec. 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e)—Bye-law under—Prohibiting prostitutes from residing within specified areas and streets—But permitting those who owned and resided in houses in March 1925 to continue to live—Whether bye-law ultra vires.

The object of the Legislature in enacting Sec. 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act is that the prohibition must be general and of universal application within a specified street or area, and must not hit particular prostitutes, while leaving other prostitutes free to ply their trade.

Where a municipality framed a bye-law prohibiting public prostitutes from residing within specified areas and streets but permitted those who owned and resided in houses in March 1925 to continue to live there as before, held, that such a bye-law was not in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 298 because it did not amount to a prohibition of the residence of public prostitutes but merely to a prohibition against a particular class of prostitutes.

Emperor v. Balkishan, 22 A. W. N. 117 relied on.

Criminal Revision from an order of S. N. Dube Esq., Sessions Judge of Aligarh.

---

*Cr. Rev. 428 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

CHANCHAL
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Shiva Prasad Sinha and S. B. L. Gaur for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an application in revision from an order convicting the accused under S. 299 of the U. P. Municipalities Act for having committed a breach of a municipal bye-law.

On July 13, 1925, the Municipal Board of Hathras got a notification published in the Government Gazette under which the following bye-law, among others, was announced:—

> No public prostitute shall reside within the areas or in the streets specified below, provided that public prostitutes who at the end of March, 1925, owned and resided in houses and streets in areas mentioned below may continue to reside in those houses.

Then followed a list of no less than 13 items containing roads, bazars, abadi, lanes, etc. The bye-law was expressly not made applicable to public prostitutes who had owned and resided in houses and streets in the areas mentioned at the end of March, 1925. It was intended to apply to new comers only.

This notification was replaced by another notification of April 27, 1927, which contained the same bye-law.

The applicant, although she denied the fact, has been found by both the courts below to be a public prostitute and to have been carrying on her profession as such. This finding must be accepted in revision. There is no doubt that she has committed a breach of the bye-law mentioned above because the house occupied by her is situated in one of the streets which had been prohibited.

The learned advocate for the applicant impugns the validity of the bye-law and urges that the conviction is illegal because the bye-law itself was invalid.

Under S. 298 (1) a Board is empowered to make bye-laws applicable to the whole or any part of the municipality for the purpose of promoting or maintaining the health, safety and convenience of the inhabitants of the municipality, and for the furtherance of municipal administration. Group H in List I appended to the section in clause (e) for > prohibiting, in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes and the keeping of a brothel, or the letting or other disposal of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel.

There is no doubt that the prohibition against public prostitutes from residing in a particular street or area given may be for the purpose of promoting or maintaining the health, safety and convenience of the inhabitants of the mupicipality, and that therefore such a bye-law can be validly made.

But the bye-law must aim at prohibiting in specified streets or areas, the residing of public prostitutes or the keeping of a brothel, etc. It must not be discriminating in its effect. It would be illegal for a Municipal Board to single out any individual prostitute and prohibit her from residing in a particular area. Similarly, it would be illegal to pick out a group of prostitutes and prohibit them from residing in a particular area.

CRIMINAL
1931
CHANCHAL
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

The bye-law must be general and must prohibit the residing of public prostitutes in that area. The prohibition must be aimed against the residence of public prostitutes in general and not the residence of individual prostitutes or any particular class of prostitutes. It is obvious that when a discrimination is made, the object for which the bye-law was framed would be nullified, and there would be no promotion or maintenance of the health, safety and convenience of the inhabitants. Such a bye-law will merely create an invidious distinction and be beneficial to one class of prostitutes and injurious to the others. I am perfectly satisfied that this is not what is contemplated by the Legislature. The prohibition must be general and of universal application within a specified street or area, and must not hit particular prostitutes, while leaving other prostitutes free to ply their trade.

The language of the bye-law as quoted above not only permits prostitutes who owned and resided in houses in March 1925, to continue to live there as before, but even perhaps permits prostitutes who merely resided in the streets in the areas to carry on their profession undisturbed. Such a bye-law was not in accordance with the provisions of S. 298 because it did not amount to a prohibition of the residence of public prostitutes but merely to a prohibition against a particular class of prostitutes.

In Emperor v. Balkishan[1], learned Judge of this Court declined to give effect to a bye-law made by the Naini Tal Municipal Board where it appeared that an invidious and unreasonable distinction was drawn between a person who is a servant and a person of a similar degree who is not a servant.

I accordingly accept this revision, and setting aside the conviction of the accused, acquit her of the offence with which she was charged, and direct that the fine, if paid, be refunded.

The Municipal Board of Hathras would be well advised to redraft this bye-law so as to make it of general application.

Application allowed

---

[1] 22 A. W. N. 117

CIVIL 1931
May 13
SULAIMAN,
A. C. J.
KING, J.

BASDEO NARAIN SINGH AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
BIRJU SINGH (and after his death his sons) AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Pre-emption Act, Sec. 12(2)—Right of pre-emption—Confined to proprietors in same village—Not extended to shares sold in another village—Even though both villages are in the same mahal.

Sec. 12(2) of the Pre-emption Act contemplates that the right of pre-emption should not be exercised outside the village in which the pre-emptor is a co-sharer, that is to say, there would be no right of pre-emption in favour of a proprietor of one village in respect of a share sold in another village, even though both the villages happen to be within the same mahal. The policy of the legislature appears to be that the right of pre-emption should be confined to proprietors in the same village and not extended to shares sold in other villages. It should make no difference whether one mahal consisted of two or more complete villages or only portions of two or more villages.

---

*S. A. 977 of 1928

Civil

1931

Basdeo Narain Singh
v
Birju Singh

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of AGHOR NATH MUKERJI ESQ., District Judge of Azamgarh, confirming a decree of BABU MATHURA PRASAD, Munsif of Haveli.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the appellants.

N. C. Vaish for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. Mahal Mahwapar consists of portions of five villages. The plaintiffs are co-sharers in the same mahal Mahwapar but their shares are situated in the first village. The vendor was a co-sharer in the same mahal but his share was situated in the second village. The vendee had no share within mahal Mahwapar. At the same time part of the village in which the vendor had a share was situated outside the mahal and in two other mahals. Both the plaintiffs and the vendee were co-sharers in the second village Bharpur Pachhwar but outside mahal Mahwapur.

It is therefore quite obvious that the plaintiffs cannot claim a preferential right by virtue of their being co-sharers in village Bharpur Pachhwar alone because there the plaintiffs and the vendee are both on the same footing as they own shares in that village outside the mahal in dispute.

The plaintiffs certainly have an advantage over the vendee in this respect that they are co-sharers in mahal Mahwapar because they own shares in a village which is included in this mahal. The vendor, however, is a co-sharer in the same mahal but in another village.

If Sub-section 1 of Section 12 had stood by itself it would have given the plaintiffs a preferential right by virtue of their being co-sharers in the same mahal with the vendor, but Sub-section 2 restricts the right conferred upon them by Sub-section 1.

Under Sub-section 1 as against a vendee, who is a perfect stranger, co-sharers in the mahal, whether they are in the same village with the vendor or not, as well as co-sharers in the same village, whether in the same mahal with the vendor or not, have a preferential right. The legislature has not interfered with the right of pre-emption in favour of co-sharers in the same village which is conferred by Sub-section 1. But Sub-section 2 provides that where a mahal includes more villages than one, no person having proprietary rights in any such village shall be entitled by reason thereof to a right of pre-emption in respect of any other such village. It undoubtedly contemplates that the right of pre-emption should not be exercised outside the village in which the pre-emptor is a co-sharer, that is to say, there would be no right of pre-emption in favour of a proprietor of one village in respect of a share sold in another village, even though both the villages happen to be within the same mahal. The proprietor in one village by reason of his proprietary rights is necessarily a co-sharer in the mahal which includes this village along with the village of the vendor, but under Sub-section 2 he is not allowed a right to pre-empt a share in the other

CIVIL
1931
BASDEO NARAIN SINGH v. BIRJU SINGH
Sulaiman, A. C. J.

villages. The policy of the legislature appears to be that the right of pre-emption should be confined to proprietors in the same village and not extended to shares sold in other villages. In our opinion it would make no difference whether one mahal consists of two or more complete villages or only portions of two or more villages.

On the findings returned by the lower appellate court it is quite clear that the plaintiffs have no preference over the defendant-vendee. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CRIMINAL
1931
May 26
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.

PUTTU LAL (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Excise Act (IV of 1910), Sec. 64(c)—License for selling liquor—Condition of—Hours for sale fixed—Shop closed temporarily by licensee—Whether amounts to breach of condition of license.

Where one of the conditions in the license for selling liquor was that "the hours for the opening and closing of the shop have been fixed as follows It is necessary that shops should not be kept open at any other hour", and the licensee was convicted under Sec. 64(c) of the Excise Act (IV of 1910) for having broken the condition as the Excise Inspector had found it closed temporarily, held, (1) that the condition cannot be interpreted as meaning that at no time between the two limits the shop should be closed even temporarily. The object of the condition is to prevent the sale of liquor outside the fixed hours; (2) that there was no breach of condition and the conviction should be quashed.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by BABU TRILOKI NATH, Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad.

The applicant was not represented.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a reference against an order convicting the accused under Section 64(c) of the Excise Act (IV of 1910), for having broken one of the conditions of his licence.

When the Excise Inspector went to inspect his shop, he found it closed. When questioned later, the accused alleged that he had gone to a ware-house to bring four gallons of liquor which were entered in his register.

The learned Magistrate infers that it was not a case of temporary absence, but of the closing of the shop on account of picketing. He accordingly convicted the accused and sentenced him to pay a fine of Rs.50.

The Sessions Judge has recommended that either the conviction be set aside or the fine be reduced to Rs.5.

The fourth general condition in the license applicable to all licenses is in the following terms:—

---

*Cr. Ref. 228 of 1931

> The hours for the opening and closing of the shops have been fixed as follows. It is necessary that shops should not be kept open at any other hour.

It is note-worthy that the condition does not say that the shop should not, on any account, be closed during these hours.

It seems to me that the object of this condition is to prevent the sale of liquor outside the fixed hours. This condition cannot be interpreted as meaning that at no time between these two limits the shop should be closed even temporarily. If that be the intention of the authorities, they ought to lay down the condition in more express terms.

In my opinion there was no breach of the condition in the license. I accordingly accept this reference and setting aside the conviction and sentence, acquit the accused and direct that the fine, if paid, be refunded.

Application allowed

Civil 1931
June 23
Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Banerji, J.

BALZOR SINGH (Defendant)
versus
RAGHUNANDAN SINGH (Plaintiff) AND MAKUND SARUP (Defendant)*

Hindu Law—Alienation—Deed of Exchange—Executed by manager—When binding on family—Pre-emption Act, Sec. 20—'Indefeasible'—Deeds of exchange from individual members of joint Hindu family—Transferee does not acquire indefeasible title—Unless deeds are for 'benefit of the estate'.

A deed of exchange executed by a father or manager of a joint Hindu family is an alienation and is liable to be challenged by the other members of the family if it was not executed for legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate. Palianappa Chetty Sreenath Devasikamony Pandara Sannadhi, 40 Mad. 709 and Raja Bahadur Birj Narain Rai v. Mangala Prasad Rai, 21 A. L. J. R. 934 applied.

Where the vendee, who was a stranger at first, obtained, during the pendency of a co-sharer's suit for pre-emption, deeds of exchange from individual members of a joint Hindu family, and the exchanges were not for the benefit of the estate, held, that the vendee had not acquired an indefeasible interest in the property taken in exchange and therefore could not defeat the pre-emptor.

First Appeal from a decree of Babu Kedar Nath Mehra, Additional Subordinate Judge of Bulandshahr.

S. B. L. Gaur for the appellant.

K. N. Katju and Panna Lal for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Sulaiman, A. C. J.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. The defendant was a stranger at the time of the institution of the suit and the plaintiff was a co-sharer. During the pendency of the suit the defendant-vendee first obtained a deed of gift and then two deeds of exchange in order to defeat the claim for pre-emption. These gift and exchanges were obtained from persons who were members of joint

---

*F. A. 451 of 1929

CIVIL

1931

BALZOR SINGH
v.
RAGHUNANDAN SINGH

Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

Hindu families and all the members had not joined in these transactions. The learned Subordinate Judge has accordingly held that these acquisitions do not confer an indefeasible interest in the mahal on the defendant-vendee and so do not entitle him to defeat the plaintiff's claim. He has further found that the gift was obviously voidable at the option of the other members of the donor's family and that the exchanges also were liable to be defeated because they were not for the benefit of the family of those persons from whom they had been obtained by the vendee.

The learned advocate for the defendant-appellant argues before us that there is nothing in the Hindu law which allows a Hindu son or a minor member of a joint Hindu family to challenge an alienation by way of exchange made by the father or the manager. The argument is that the power of disposal vested in the father is absolute and is only restricted by certain texts which curtail his power. It is pointed out that the ancient Hindu texts do not speak of exchanges but only refer to sales and mortgages or gifts by the father. It is to be conceded that there is no express text which confers absolute authority on the father to transfer the joint family property by way of exchange. The learned advocate for the defendant argues that inasmuch as in transactions of sale, gift or mortgage the property is frittered away, which is not the case when an exchange is made, there ought to be a distinction.

It is not for us now to go back to the ancient texts behind the authoritative commentaries. As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Thakoorain Sahiba v. Mohun Lal[1]:

> To alter the law of succession as established by a uniform course of decisions, or even by the dicta of received Treaties, by some noval interpretations of the vague and often conflicting texts of the Hindu commentaries would be most dangerous, inasmuch as it would unsettle existing titles.

There can be no doubt that the principles governing the power of alienation of a father have been applied to transactions besides gifts, sales and mortgages. The same principles have been extended to the case of permanent leases. We may refer to the case decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Palaniappa Chetty v. Sreenath Devasikamony Pandara Sannadhi[2]. It has to be conceded that the old texts do not refer to leases just as they do not expressly refer to exchanges.

In the Benares School of Hindu Law the father is no longer the sole owner of the joint estate but all the members by birth acquire an interest in it. His status is probably that of a manager though as against his sons he has the advantage of their pious obligation to pay his personal debts. It would therefore follow that in the absence of any express authority there would be no power in the father to alienate joint family property in which other members are also interested and who do not consent. In numerous cases decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council, power regarding "alienations" has been referred to. An exchange is equally an alienation. We may refer to the case of Raja Bahadur Birj Narain Rai v. Mangala Prasad Rai[3], where the result of the authorities was summarised by their Lordships of the Privy Council and the restricted power of the manager in the family property was emphasized. We must therefore hold that a deed of exchange executed by a father or manager is liable to be challenged by the other members of the family if it was not executed for legal necessity or for the benefit of the estate. The transaction would however be binding on the other members if it was of such a nature as a prudent owner in the ordinary management of a estate would make.

---

[1] XI Moore's I. A. C. 386 at 403

[2] 40 Mad. 709

[3] 1923 A. L. J. R. 934

The court below has gone into the facts and come to the conclusion that the exchange by the transferors to the vendee was not for the benefit of the transferors' family. The learned Subordinate Judge has pointed out that obviously there was no necessity for them to make the transfers. As regards benefit, it is quite clear that the property given away by exchange was situated in the residential village of these transferors and was conveniently situated and was an advantageous property. On the other hand, the property taken by these transferors was situated in another village not their ancestral village and was at some distance and less convenient. It is not disputed before us that values of the two properties were about the same. There was, therefore, no reason why the transferors should give away a share in their ancestral village in lieu of a share in another village. The suggestion that they might possibly have intended to become co-sharers in the other villages was not made in the court below and this explanation was not offered by the transferors. As a matter of fact the learned Subordinate Judge was very sceptical about this transaction, and he was inclined to believe the oral evidence produced on behalf of the plaintiff which was to the effect that some cash consideration was secretly received by the transferors. That consideration would go into the pocket of the executants of the deed of exchange and would not necessarily benefit the family or the estate. The vendee was given a chance in the court below to show that the exchanges were of such a nature as would be binding on the other members of the family and that accordingly they were not defeasible. He failed to do this. We agree with the court below that the vendee has not acquired an indefeasible interest in the property taken in exchange and therefore cannot defeat the plaintiff pre-emptor.

The vendee claimed the amount due under a preliminary decree for sale on the basis of a mortgage deed which creates a charge on the property in dispute. The decretal amount was not part of the sale-consideration and therefore the plaintiff was not bound to pay that amount. The learned Subordinate Judge has rightly pointed out that the property will go to the plaintiff subject to the prior encumbrance, if it subsists.

The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1931

June 9

MUKERJI, J.
ALLEN, J.

NAND GOPAL DAS AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
BATUK PRASAD GUPTA (Plaintiff)*

Provincial Insolvency Act, Sec. 28—Liability arising out of a covenant in a sale deed of a house in favour of insolvent—Vendee undertook to remove certain constructions at vendor's pleasure—Whether receiver bound—Specific Relief Act, Sec. 27(b)—Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 11.

Plaintiff-respondent owned two houses with a lane running between them. The house to the south was sold by him to F. The sale deed contained a covenant that, if and when, the vendor wanted the vendee to remove the chhatta—a two-storeyed building constructed over the lane—which opened into the vendee's house, it would be removed by the vendee at his own cost. Further, it was agreed that each of the parties would be entitled to open sky-lights or clear-storey windows in their respective walls. After the sale, F was declared insolvent and the house was purchased by the defendants from the receiver. The plaintiff, therefore, instituted the present suit for compelling the defendants to remove the chhatta built over the lane. Held, (1) that the house vested in the receiver with the liability arising out of the covenant in the sale deed to remove the chatta at the vendor's pleasure. Pearce v. Bastable's Trustee in Bankruptcy, 2 Ch. Div. 122, and P. Purshotam Naidu v. L. Ponnarangam Naidu, 21 In. Cas. 576 relied on.

(2) that the covenant could be enforced against the receiver under Sec. 27(b) of the Specific Relief Act.

(3) that, as the chatta rested partly on the plaintiffs wall, it imposed a burden on that wall, and unless the chatta was removed the sky-lights, etc., could not be opened, and it was therefore for the beneficial enjoyment of the plaintiff's property that the defendants should be compelled to enjoy their property in a particular manner, viz., that agreed upon, and the case was covered by the proviso to Sec. 11, Transfer of Property Act.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU HARI HAR PRASAD, Subordinate Judge of Benares, modifying a decree of BABU NIRAJ NATH MUKERJI, City Munsif.

K. N. Katju for the appellants.

P. L. Banerji, B. Mlik, K. C. Mital and H. P. Sen for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The facts of the case are briefly these:—

There were two houses, one to the north of the other with a blind lane running between the two. Both the houses belonged to the plaintiff-respondent, Batuk Prasad Gupta. The house to the north is still in possession of the plaintiff, but the house to the south was sold by him to one Fateh Chand, by a sale deed dated January 13, 1920. It was agreed, among other matters, between the vendor and the vendee that, if and when, Batuk Prasad wanted the vendee to remove the chatta which had been constructed on the lane between the two houses and which opened into the defendant's house, it would be removed by the defendant at his own cost.

After the sale, Fateh Chand was declared insolvent and his property

---

*S. A. 1277 of 1928

CIVIL 1931
NAND GOPAL DAS
v.
BATUK PRASAD GUPTA
Mukerji, J.

was sold by the Receiver in insolvency and the house of Fateh Chand was purchased by the defendants who are the appellants before us. The plaintiff, thereupon, instituted the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, for compelling the defendants to remove the chatta built over the lane.

The chatta is in the shape of a building constructed over the lane all along the length of it and it appears that it consists of two storeys.

The plaintiff asked for the removal of the chatta and also for an injunction.

The suit was decreed in its entirety by the court of first instance, but on appeal by the defendants the learned Subordinate Judge upheld the decree so far as he directed the defendants to remove the chatta but dismissed the suit so far as the prayer for an injunction went.

The defendants have appealed and the plaintiff has filed a cross-objection in respect of that portion of the claim which was dismissed by the lower appellate court.

We may at once dispose of the cross-objection. It is clear on the facts that there was no occasion for the plaintiff to ask for an injunction. If the chatta was removed the plaintiff would get all the relief that the case called for and it was entirely unnecessary for the plaintiff to ask for an injunction "restraining the defendants from making an encroachment hereafter on the space so opened".

As a necessary result of the modification of the decree of the court of first instance the learned appellate court allowed the plaintiff only a part of his costs. The plaintiff's contention is that he should have the whole of the costs although a portion of his claim was dismissed. We do not see how the plaintiff can get the whole of his costs . if a portion of his claim was rightly dismissed. We accordingly dismiss the cross-objection with costs, including counsel's fees on the higher scale.

We now come to the appeal in which several points of law have been raised. The first contention of Dr. Katju is that the defendants do not claim under Fateh Chand and are therefore not bound by the covenant contained in the sale deed. The argument is that the receiver is not bound by the covenant and therefore the defendants, who derive their title through the receiver, are not bound by the covenant.

Reliance has been placed on Section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920, and it has been argued that all that vests in the receiver is the property of the insolvent and not any of his liabilities. This argument is fallacious. If the insolvent is under a liability, whether it arises out of an equity or as a matter of law, the Receiver cannot have any greater right than the insolvent himself. It is said that if this were so, something would have been found within the four corners of the Insolvency Act to justify an inference like that. But the scheme of the Insolvency Act is to vest the property of the insolvent in a person called the receiver in order that that property may be distributed. Under that scheme, there is no reason why the receiver should be given a property of greater value than the insolvent himself possessed. It is clear to us that if the power which vested in the plaintiff to remove the chatta be taken away from him, the

CIVIL

1931

NAND GOPAL DAS v. BATUK PRASAD GUPTA

Mukerji, J.

property of the insolvent would go up in value, because, in that case, the chatta would be always intact and cannot be removed.

No authority has been quoted by the learned counsel for the appellants in support of his case. On the other hand, the learned counsel for the respondent has quoted two cases before us, and one is Pearce v. Bastable's Trustee in Bankruptcy[1]. This case has been followed by the Madras High Court in P. Purshotam Naidu v. L. Ponnarangam Naidu[2]. These cases are entirely in keeping with the view we take of the case, and we follow them.

The next argument of the learned counsel for the appellants is that the covenant is a purely personal one and it cannot be enforced against the heirs or representatives of either party thereto. This argument entirely ignores the provisions of Section 27(b) of the Specific Relief Act. That rule of law says that specific performance of a contract may be enforced against either party thereto and against any other person claiming under him by a title arising subsequently to the contract except a transferee for value who has paid his money in good faith and without notice of the original contract.

The Receiver in this case is certainly a person claiming under the insolvent and by a title which has arisen subsequently to the contract. It is true that the title vests in the receiver not by virtue of any contract between the insolvent and himself, but by virtue of law, but nonetheless the Receiver is a person who gets all the interest which the insolvent had and therefore there is no reason to exclude him from the category of persons claiming under the insolvent.

It has been found that the defendants are persons who had notice of the provision in the sale deed and that is a question of fact. The sale deed being registered the registration would charge the defendants with notice of the covenant. The defendants, therefore, are bound by the agreement contained in the sale deed.

Then it was argued that under the provision of Section 11 of the Transfer of Property Act the agreement is not enforceable. Ordinarily a contract like this would not be enforceable by the vendor. But the vendor in this case is interested in the adjoining house, and it is for the beneficial enjoyment of that house that he is enforcing this contract. Section 11 of the Transfer of Property Act contains a proviso in the following language:—

> Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the right to restrain, for the beneficial enjoyment of one piece of immovable property, the enjoyment of another piece of such property, or to compel the enjoyment thereof in a particular manner.

The chatta was partly on the plaintiff's wall. It imposes a burden on that wall. Further, it was agreed in the sale deed between the parties that each of the parties would be entitled to open sky-lights or clear-storey windows in their respective walls and the other party would not be entitled to object to this. Unless the chatta is removed the clear-storey windows or sky-lights cannot be opened. For both reasons, it is for the beneficial enjoyment of the plaintiff's property that it is necessary that the defendants should be compelled to enjoy their property in a particular manner, namely, that agreed upon. Section 11 of the Transfer of Property Act, therefore, is no bar to the maintenance of the suit.

---

[1] 2 Ch. Div. 122

[2] 21 I. C. 576.

It was further contended that the grant of the relief is discretionary with a court and as no probable damage has been established, the decree should not be granted. But the discretion that vested in court is not arbitrary. The plaintiff and the predecessor-in-title of the defendants agreed with their eyes open that the chatta might be, at any time, removed if Batuk Prasad, the plaintiff, so wished. When Fateh Chand was the purchaser it may have suited Batuk Prasad to allow Fateh Chand to maintain the chatta, but when other people, who may be entire strangers to Batuk Prasad, have come into the house it may not suit Batuk Prasad to let the chatta stand. This is a matter which should rest entirely on the discretion of Batuk Prasad and the court should not interfere with that discretion. Besides, as we have pointed out, there is the burden on the wall of Batuk Prasad of the weight of the chatta and the chatta, if allowed to stand, would not enable Batuk Prasad to open the clear-storey windows. In the circumstances we do not see how we can disallow the relief to the plaintiff.

Lastly, it was argued that there should be some limit to the enforcement of the agreement contained in the sale deed. It was argued that it might be that in a far distant time, a descendant of the plaintiff might want a descendant of the defendants to remove the chatta and, in that case, to agree to the contention of the then plaintiff would be very hard on the then defendant. This case does not call for an answer to that contention but probably it is provided by the Full Bench case of this Court, in Aulad Ali v. Ali Athar[8].

The result is that this appeal fails and is hereby dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

[8] I. L. R. 49 All. 527

CRIMINAL
1931
Aug. 31
SULAIMAN, J.

BALKRISHNA SHARMA (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 435—Case under Sec. 124A Penal Code—Magistrate's order—Limiting number of witnesses defence should produce—Whether revision lies to High Court—Sec. 257—Scope of—Magistrate cannot arbitrarily limit number of witnesses.

An appeal, in a case under Sec. 124A Penal Code, lies from the order of the District Magistrate direct to the High Court, and the High Court is not precluded from entertaining an application for revision of the District Magistrate's order limiting the number of witnesses which the defence should produce, simply because the Sessions Judge had not been approached first.

Even a settled practice not to entertain a revision when the applicant could have gone to the Sessions Court, does not oust the jurisdiction of

*Cr. Rev. 535 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

BAL-KRISHNA SHARMA
v.
KING-EMPEROR

the High Court. Mannu v. Emperor, 18 A. L. J. R. 187, Sharif Ahmad v. Qabul Singh, I. L. R. 43 All. 497, Nathe Singh v. Emperor, 1927 A. I. R. (All.) 829 referred to.

Outside the provisions of Sec. 257 Cr. P. C. it is not open to a magistrate to limit the number of witnesses which the defence or prosecution should be allowed to produce. Where the Magistrate does not consider that the application has been made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice, he has no option but to issue process under Sec. 257(1) Cr. P. C.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of CAPTAIN A. W. IBBOTSON, District Magistrate of Cawnpore.

K. N. Katju and K. D. Malaviya for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is an application in revision from an order of the District Magistrate of Cawnpore directing that the defence should select three witnesses out of Nos. 1 to 10, and 8 other witnesses out of the remaining lists. The case pending before him is one under S. 124-A I. P. C.

A preliminary objection is taken that no revision lies because the applicant has not approached the Sessions Judge in the first instance. No doubt it is the general practice of this Court not to entertain a revision when the applicant could have gone to the superior court of the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge. But, of course, even a settled practice does not oust the jurisdiction of the High Court. In Mannu v. Emperor[1] and Emperor v. Mansur Husain[2] Piggott, J. referred to this practice and yet entertained the revisions. In the case Sharif Ahmad v. Qabul Singh[3], a Division Bench in clear terms declared that there was this practice. Nevertheless, they entertained that particular revision and set aside the conviction. In the case Emperor v. Bhure Mal[4], which was after the decision of the Division Bench, another learned Judge again referred to the same practice and yet decided the application on the merits. On the other hand, my attention has been drawn to two other cases decided by single Judges, where the applications were not entertained:—Nathe Singh v. Emperor[5] and Jadunandan Misra v. Sheophal[6].

The present case is, however, distinguishable. The offence under S. 124-A is triable by either the District Magistrate or the Sessions Judge. It is not triable exclusively by the latter. Under S. 408(c) Cr. P. C. an appeal lies from the order of the District Magistrate direct to the High Court and not to the Sessions Court. The propriety of the orders passed by the District Magistrate would, therefore, have to be considered by the High Court in appeal and not by the Sessions Judge. No case has been brought to my notice in which a revision from an order passed by the District Magistrate where an appeal would have lain direct to the High Court was not entertained simply because the Sessions Judge had not been approached first. I therefore think that I am not precluded from considering the application on the merits.

[1] 18 A. L. J. R. 187

[2] I. L. R. 41 All. 587

[3] I. L. R. 43 All. 497

[4] I. L. R. 45 All. 526

[5] 1927 A. I. R. (All.) 829

[6] 1929 A. I. R. (All.) 272

The learned District Magistrate has remarked that he did not make any suggestion of a deliberate attempt at obstruction by the defence, but that the remaining witnesses, if summoned, would in fact result in achieving the purpose of very great delay and defeating the ends of justice. The accused had summoned no less than 183 witnesses. I would not say that a court is not entitled to infer from the mere fact that an unduly large number of witnesses have been summoned, that the application has been made for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. But where the Magistrate does not consider that the application has been made for such a purpose, he has no option but to issue process under S. 257(1) Cr. P. C. The section is imperative and compels the Magistrate to issue such process, except in the case mentioned above. Where he refuses process he is directed to record his grounds in writing.

The number of witnesses which the prosecution or the defence might reasonably produce in a case depends to a large extent on the scope of the enquiry. Outside the provisions of S. 257 Cr. P. C., it is not open to a Magistrate arbitrarily to limit the number of witnesses which the defence should be allowed to produce, any more than the Magistrate can restrict the number of witnesses which the prosecution should produce.

The High Court has added R. 8 (correction slip No. 37) at the end of Chapter 3 of the General Rules (Criminal). Under this rule

> Every application for the issue of process for the attendance of witnesses shall, if the party presenting the application is represented in the case by a legal practitioner, contain a certificate signed by such legal practitioner that he has satisfied himself that the evidence of each of the witnesses is material in the case.

This Rule provides an ample safeguard against a reckless summoning of witnesses. The Magistrate should insist upon such a signed certificate being filed. That will enable the Magistrate to decide for himself whether any witnesses are being summoned for the purpose of vexation or delay or for defeating the ends of justice. If he cannot come to such a conclusion he has no jurisdiction to refuse to summon the witnesses, even though the number may be inconveniently large.

I accordingly set aside the order limiting the number of witnesses, and send the case back to the court of the District Magistrate with direction to proceed in the light of the above observations. I may add that Dr. Katju on behalf of his client assures me that his client will submit a shorter revised list of witnesses to the District Magistrate.

CRIMINAL

1931

Oct 13

NIAMATULLAH, J.

CHITESHWAR DUBE AND OTHERS
versus
KING-EMPEROR THROUGH NARSINGH DUBE*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 15, 16, and 350A—Bench of Magistrates—Whether presence of all magistrates on all hearings indispensable—Part of evidence recorded in absence of one magistrate—Conviction based on such evidence—Whether sustainable.

The presence of all the magistrates constituting the bench, under Secs. 15 and 16 of the Criminal Procedure Code, on all hearings is indispensable for a valid trial of a case pending before it. Individual magistrates constituting a bench have no jurisdiction to hear a case cognizable by the whole bench. If witnesses are examined by one or more magistrates in the absence of one or more of those constituting the bench, a conviction based on such evidence is unsustainable.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by BABU PIARE LAL, Sessions Judge of Ghazipur.

Kumuda Prasad for the applicants.

L. M. Roy for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Ghazipur in a case in which the applicants for revision have been convicted by a bench of honorary magistrates for offences under Sections 323 and 447 I. P. C. and sentenced to small amounts of fine.

The bench of honorary magistrates in question consisted of three honorary magistrates, namely, Pandit Paras Ram, Pandit Lachhmi Narain and Maulvi Abdul Mughni. The case was heard on a number of dates. Maulvi Abdul Mughni did not join the other members of the bench on several occasions when witnesses were examined. The learned Sessions Judge is of opinion that the presence of all the magistrates constituting the bench on all hearings is indispensable for a valid trial of a case pending before it. I think this is a correct view of the law applicable to proceedings taken before a bench of honorary magistrates constituted under Sections 15 and 16 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

Before the Amending Act of 1923 there was some difference of opinion as regards the legality of a trial by a bench whose constitution had been altered during the pendency of the trial. Sections 350A now added provides that "no order or judgment of a bench of magistrates shall be invalid by reason only of a change having occurred in the constitution of the bench in any case in which the bench by which such order or judgment is passed is duly constituted under Sections 15 and 16, and the magistrates constituting the same have been present on the bench throughout the proceedings." There is no question of the constitution of the bench of magistrates having undergone a change in the case under reference. The same magistrates constituted the bench throughout the pendency of this case. One of the magistrates did not however take part in the proceedings throughout but absented himself on some occasions when certain

---

*Cr. Ref. 469 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
CHITESHWAR DUBE
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Niamatullah, J.

witnesses were examined. The concluding part of Section 350A quoted above makes it perfectly clear that all the magistrates for the time being constituting the bench must take part in the proceedings though if during the pendency of the case the personnel of the bench undergoes a change, the new member can replace an outgoing member without necessitating a fresh trial.

Apart from the view which is deducible from Section 350A it is plain to my mind that individual magistrates constituting a bench have no jurisdiction to hear a case cognizable by the whole bench. If therefore any member of the bench is not present on any hearing no properly constituted bench can be said to have been in existence. If therefore witnesses are examined by one or more magistrates in the absence of one or more of those constituting the bench they cannot be considered to have been examined by the bench. In this view the order of conviction in this case is based partly on evidence recorded by the bench as such and partly on evidence not deemed to be recorded by the bench. A conviction based on such evidence is clearly unsustainable. Accordingly I accept the reference made by the learned Sessions Judge, set aside the conviction and sentence, and direct a retrial as recommended by the learned Sessions Judge.

Application allowed

CIVIL 1931
Oct. 23
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J

JANKI DAS AND ANOTHER (Applicants)
versus
SHEO PRASAD AND ANOTHER (Opposite parties)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 151 and Or. 41, R. 5—Appeal from preliminary decree —Final decree passed during pendency of appeal—No appeal from final decree —Whether appellate court empowered to stay execution of final decree.

The High Court has power, under Sec. 151 C. P. C., to order stay of execution of a final decree during the pendency of an appeal from the preliminary decree, if, having regard to the ends of justice, it is expedient.

It is generally expedient that proceedings for the preparation of the final decree should not be stayed pending an appeal from the preliminary decree because the mere passing of a final decree will not, in any way, affect the rights of the parties to the appeal from the preliminary decree.

S. K. Dar, Panna Lal, Gopi Nath Kunzru, Vishwa Mittra and U. S. Gupta for the applicants.

M. L. Agarwala, K. N. Katju and Banke Behari for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for stay of execution of a final decree passed in a suit based on a mortgage. A preliminary decree had been previously passed. The mortgagor preferred a first appeal to this Court impugning the correctness of the preliminary decree. In the meantime, an application was made by the mortgagee to the court of first instance for the preparation of a final decree. The mortgagor then made an application to this Court praying for stay of the proceedings in the

---

*Application in F. A. 284 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

JANKI DAS
v
SHEO
PRASAD

Niamatullah, J

court of first instance for the preparation of the final decree. It was held by a learned Judge of this Court that proceedings for the preparation of a final decree could be taken pending an appeal from the preliminary decree. A final decree has since been passed by the court of first instance, and the present application is for stay of execution of the final decree.

A preliminary objection has been taken by the learned advocate for the mortgagee (opposite party) that this Court has no power to order the stay of the execution of the final decree which is not itself under appeal. It is contended that in so far as the appeal pending in this Court is from the preliminary decree, which is not itself capable of execution no order for stay of execution can be passed under Order 41 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The contention is so far correct that an order for stay of execution of the final decree cannot be passed under Order 41 of the Civil Procedure Code, but the powers of this Court as regards stay of proceedings pending in the court below are not exhaustively defined by Order 41 of the Civil Procedure Code. If, having regard to the ends of justice, it is expedient that the execution of the final decree should be stayed pending the appeal from the preliminary decree, this Court has got ample power to stay it under Section 151 Civil Procedure Code. It cannot be denied that any interference with the preliminary decree in the appeal therefrom will have the effect of the final decree being vacated and that if execution of the final decree is allowed to proceed rights may come into existence before the disposal of the appeal from the preliminary decree. In order to avoid possible complications we think it is necessary in the ends of justice that the execution of the final decree be stayed pending the appeal from the preliminary decree. It may be and generally is expedient that proceedings for the preparation of the final decree should not be stayed pending an appeal from the preliminary decree because the mere passing of a final decree will not, in any way, affect the rights of the parties to the appeal from the preliminary decree. On the other hand, if the preliminary decree is affirmed on appeal, some further time will be needed for proceedings leading to the final decree.

We are clearly of opinion that this Court has power, under Section 151 of the Civil Procedure Code to order stay of execution of a final decree during the pendency of an appeal from the preliminary decree. We hold that the preliminary objection has no force, and is accordingly overruled.

As regards the merits, it is contended on behalf of the mortgagees (opposite party) that the value of the mortgaged property is very much less than the decretal amount and that any delay in having the property sold is likely to raise the mortgage money without any chance of its recovery in full from the mortgaged property. It is not disputed that the mortgagees' remedy under Order 34, Rule 6 Civil Procedure Code, is barred. It is also admitted that the value of the property is less than the decretal amount. In these circumstances, it is obvious that the mortgagees are not likely to obtain satisfaction of the mortgage money from any property other than the mortgaged property. The applicants (mortgagors) should indemnify the mortgagees against possible loss which may be consequent on the order of stay. We are of opinion that the equitable course

Civil

1931

Janki Das v. Sheo Prasad

Niamatullah, J.

is to order the stay of execution of the final decree on the applicants (mortgagors) furnishing security to the extent of one year's interest on the decretal amount at the rate of interest laid down in the decree. Such interest comes to Rs.8,000. Accordingly we allow this application on condition of the mortgagor applicants furnishing security for Rs.8,000 to the satisfaction of the lower court within three months. If security is not furnished within the aforesaid period execution of the final decree shall proceed.

Application allowed

Civil

1931

Oct. 28

King, J.

KUNDAN LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants) versus DULI CHAND AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Court-Fees Act (VII of 1870), Sch. II, Art. 17(iii) and Sec. 7(iv)(c)—When inapplicable—Suit for sale on mortgage—Appeal—Relief—Declaration that appellants were prior mortgagees—Ad valorem court-fee payable on value of subject-matter in dispute.

The appellants were impleaded as defendants in a suit for sale on a mortgage upon the allegation that they were subsequent mortgagees. They claimed to be prior mortgagees but the trial court found against them and decreed the plaintiff's suit. The appellants appealed to the High Court and sought for a declaration that they were prior mortgagees. The appeal was valued at Rs.1,600, but a court-fee of Rs.10 only was paid. Held, that Art. 17(iii) of Sch. II of the Court-Fees Act had no direct application to this case and that an ad valorem court-fee was payable on the value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal.

Rup Chand v. Fateh Chand, 8 A. L. J. R. 821 distinguished. Makund Ram v. Ruqaiya Khatun, 1931 A. L. J. R. 150, Moti Begam v. Har Prasad, 16 A. L. J. R. 81, Premsukh Das v. Shah Gopi Saran, 4 Pat. L. J. 323 and Venkappa v. Narasimha, 10 Mad. 187 referred to.

H. C. Mukerji for the appellants.

The following judgment was delivered by

King, J.

King, J.—This is a reference under Section 5 of the Court Fees Act, 1870. The question is what is the proper court-fee on a certain memorandum of appeal.

The appellants were impleaded as defendants in a suit for sale on a mortgage upon the allegation that they were subsequent mortgagees. They claimed to be prior mortgagees but the trial court found that they are subsequent mortgagees and decreed the plaintiff's suit against all the defendants.

The appellants appeal to this Court against the decree. The relief sought by the appeal is expressed as follows:—

> That the Hon'ble Court will be pleased to declare that the mortgage deeds held by Bhulla and Kundan are in effect prior to that of the plaintiff and allow the appeal with costs throughout.

The appeal is valued at Rs.1,600 but a court-fee of Rs.10 only has been paid. The Stamp Reporter objects that an ad valorem court-fee is payable on the value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal, namely, Rs.1,600 and there is therefore a deficiency of Rs.95 in the court-fee paid.

---

*Stamp Report in F. A. 10 of 1931

It is contended for the defendant-appellants that they seek a mere declaration that they are prior mortgagees, and do not pray for any consequential relief, and therefore the court-fee of Rs.10 is correct under Article 17 (iii) of Schedule II.

I hold that the clause mentioned has no application to the facts of this case. That clause applies to a memorandum of appeal in a suit to obtain a declaratory decree where no consequential relief is prayed. In the present case we have a memorandum of appeal in a suit of a totally different nature, namely, a suit for sale on a mortgage. If the appellants' contention were accepted, I think it would be always possible for a defendant, against whom a decree has been passed, to appeal against the decree on payment of a fixed court-fee of Rs.10, by the simple device of asking for a mere declaration that the decree is erroneous and not binding upon him. Supposing a money decree for Rs.10,000 is passed against a defendant. He might in his appeal ask for a mere declaration that the decree is erroneous and that he is not liable to pay anything to the decree-holder, and might thus claim to file the appeal on a fixed court-fee of Rs.10 only.

Whatever may be the view of the appellate court regarding the form in which the relief sought by the appeal has been framed, I think it is clear that Article 7 (iii) of Schedule II has no direct application and I see no reason for applying the principle of that clause by way of analogy.

The appellants obviously seek to get the decree of the trial court modified in their favour so as to get the property sold subject to their mortgage for which they claim priority. I think the substance of the relief sought, and not merely its form, must be considered. Their interest in the property is valued at Rs.1,600 and this must be the value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal.

The appellants rely on Rup Chand v. Fateh Chand[1] but that ruling is clearly distinguishable upon the facts. They also rely on Makund Ram v. Ruqaiya Khatun[2] but the decision is against them rather than in their favour. The appellant asked the court to grant a declaration and to modify the trial court's decree accordingly. It was held that the case was governed by Section 7 (IV) (c) of the Court Fees Act and the court-fee was payable ad valorem on the appellant's valuation of the relief sought. The view that the appellants must pay an ad valorem court-fee on the value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal finds support in Moti Begam v. Har Prasad[3], Premsukh Das v. Shah Gopi Saran[4] and Vemkappu v. Nara Sinha[5].

I hold that the appellants must pay an ad valorem court-fee on Rs.1,600 and make good the deficiency of Rs.95. This sum is exclusive of the court-fee payable in respect of ground No. 3, the liability for which is not contested.

---

[1] 8 A. L. J. R. 821

[2] 1931 A. L. J. R. 150

[3] 16 A. L. J. R. 81

[4] 4 Patna L. J. 323

[5] 10 M. 187

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 2

MUKERJI, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

KANHAIYA LAL (Plaintiff)
versus
MAHDEI AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Guardians and Wards Act, Sec. 35—District Judge assigns bond to minor—Whether order fixing surety's liability essential before assignment—Sec. 34—Scope of—Guardian to pay balance due on accounts submitted by himself.

An order by the District Judge fixing the liability of the surety is not called for, before he can assign the bond to the minor (or any guardian of his appointed by the District Judge) under Sec. 35 of the Guardians and Wards Act.

There is no provision in the Act for the surety being a party to any proceeding in which accounts may be taken, nor can the surety appeal against the District Judge's order fixing his liability.

Under Sec. 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act the court directs the guardian to pay such amount as may be due on the accounts submitted by the guardian himself.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of HARISH CHANDRA ESQ., District Judge of Benares, modifying a decree of V. MEHTA ESQ., Additional Subordinate Judge.

P. L. Banerji and H. P. Sen for the appellant.

K. N. Katju, M. N. Kaul and M. L. Chaturvedi for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is an appeal by one Kanhaiya Lal, who was a minor till lately, to recover a sum of money from defendants Nos. 2 to 5 as the legal representatives of his late certificated guardian, and from Mst. Mahdei, defendant No. 1 as the surety, and from Ramji Das, defendant No. 6 as the subsequent transferee of part of the property given by Mst. Mahdei as security for carrying out her engagements.

The court of first instance dismissed the suit altogether. The lower appellate court modified the decree of the court below and held that the defendants 2 to 5, the representatives of the deceased guardian, were liable and remanded the suit for determination of the amount of the liability. The order of the court of first instance dismissing the suit as against defendant No. 1 and defendant No. 6 was upheld. In this Court it has been urged that defendant No. 1 and defendant No.6 are also liable.

The courts below have proceeded mainly on two matters. The first is the language of the surety bond given by defendant No. 1, and secondly on the view that the liability of the defendant No. 1 could not be fixed till the District Judge had adjudicated upon that liability and found that a particular sum was due. In this Court Dr. Katju, the learned counsel for the respondent No. 1, has also urged that the order of the District Judge, dated January 24, 1924, is a complete answer to the claim.

We shall take the third point first, because it is very simple. This order of January 24, 1924 is before us and it shows that the amount of the liability determined thereby was the liability which was arrived at, on the face of the account submitted by the guardian. The order begins with the following words:—

---

*S. A. 270 of 1930

> Amongst other irregularities which have been committed are the following:

The amount of Rs.1,485 was found due on the guardian's own account and, therefore, in pursuance of the provision of Section 45 of the Guardians and Wards Act the guardian was ordered to make good the sum on penalty of being sent to jail. This argument, therefore, does not hold good.

The second question is whether a previous order of the learned District Judge is necessary in law in order to fix the liability of the surety. We have been referred to Section 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act, and it has been urged that the District Judge must find what is the amount due from the surety before he can assign the bond to the minor or any guardian of his appointed by the District Judge.

We have not been able to find any authority for this proposition. Section 34, Clause (d) runs as follows:—

> if so required by the Court, pay into the Court, at such time as the Court directs, the balance due from him on those accounts, or so much thereof as the Court directs.

Here the court directs the guardian to pay such amount as may be due on the accounts submitted by the guardian himself. This view of ours is emphasized by Section 35. By this section the court is authorised to assign the bond to some proper person who is to sue the guardian or the surety to realise the amount that may be due. If the Judge's decision is to be final, or if not final and if it is subject to an appeal to the High Court, a fresh campaign in the shape of a suit would be entirely uncalled for. We are, therefore, of opinion that an order by the District Judge fixing the liability of the surety was not called for. We may mention here that within the four corners of the Guardians and Wards Act there is no provision for the surety being a party to any proceeding in which accounts may be taken, and there is no provision by which the surety can appeal against the District Judge's order fixing his liability.

As regards the construction of the surety bond, we are of opinion that the construction contended for cannot hold good. Stress has been laid on the words bahukum apne. Paragraph 2 of the bond which has to be considered by us has been quoted at length by the learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment at page 18 and we need not quote those words again. Suffice it to say that in our opinion no special significance can be attached to the words bahukum apne. The District Judge is a party to the bond and the liability of the surety is to the District Judge. We do not think that it was in contemplation of the parties, namely, the District Judge on the one hand and the surety on the other, that the District Judge's decision as to the amount should be final as between the parties. The words were added only as being calculated to add to the dignity of the court and they have no other significance.

In the result we are of opinion that the liability of the defendant No. 1 and the defendant No. 6 does exist, and it is to be adjudicated upon by the

CIVIL 1931
KANHAIYA LAL
v.
MAHDEI
Mukerji, J.

court of first instance. Before we conclude, we may point out that by the deed of assignment the learned District Judge of Benares clearly signifies his opinion that something was payable by the guardian to the minor and, therefore, he was executing the deed of assignment in favour of the minor.

We modify the decree of the court below and remand the suit to the court of first instance for trial in its entirety. Costs here and hitherto will abide the result.

The cross-objection is dismissed.

Appeal allowed

[ED., A. L. J.—The security bond ran as follows:—"Narain Sahu mazqur se kisi qism ki jaidad nabaligh mazqur men khalal wa fitur waqai ho to us halat men A. G. P. Pullan Saheb Judge Bahadur Zila Benares ya jo koi qayam-mukam saheb judge bahadur mausuf ke hon ba hukum apne min muqirah ki zat wa jaidad mankulah wa ghair-mankula se naqd mubligh panch hazar rupaye jis qadr azruye hisab kitab tahwil wa jaidad na baligh men kami waqai ho to wasul kar lewen."]

LALMAN
versus BISHAMBHAR NATH*

CRIMINAL
1931
Nov. 5
PULLAN, J.

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 133—Licensed lime kiln—Magistrate empowered to take action in interests of public health—But it is expedient that matter should be left to the control of Municipal Boards.

A magistrate is empowered under Section 133 Cr. P. C. to order a licensed burner of lime to regulate his business in a manner that it may not be injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community. Krishna Mohan Banerji v. A. K. Guha, 57 I. C. 829 and Raghunandan Prasad v. King-Emperor, 1931 A. L. J. R. 912 followed.

Where the applicant had been working a lime kiln for the last 45 years, and had a municipal license, and there was no adequate evidence of any evil effects on the public health from the neighbourhood of the kiln; and on a complaint made, under Sec. 133 Cr. P. C., by a person who had recently deliberately occupied a house in a position where he was liable to be inconvenienced by the smoke and smell of the kiln, the magistrate ordered that the kiln should be stopped, held, that the High Court, in such cases, can look to the propriety of the order, which, under the circumstances, was unjustified.

It is generally inexpedient that a magistrate should take action in such cases, for these matters are left by the Legislature to the control of the Municipal Boards.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by SYED IFTIKHAR HUSAIN, Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad.

K. O. Carleton and Kumuda Prasad for the applicant.

S. N. Mukerji and M. L. Chaturvedi for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

PULLAN, J.—This matter comes before this Court in the form of a reference by the Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad. There is also an appli-

Pullan, J.

---

*Cr. Ref. 570 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
LALMAN
v.
BISHAMBHAR
NATH
Pullan, J.

cation in revision of that order on behalf of one Lalman. This Lalman, who owns property on both sides of the Fatehgarh-Farrukhabad road, within the limits of the Fatehgarh municipality, has been working a lime kiln on his land on the north-east side of the road for the last 45 years. According to the municipal bye-laws, which were published in the Gazette of September 15, 1928, no person is allowed to burn lime within municipal limits without a license from the municipal board. Lalman has obtained a license from year to year, and as far as the municipal board is concerned he is still authorised to conduct the business of burning lime on this site. One Bishambhar Nath, who occupies a house on the opposite side of the road, made a complaint to a magistrate of the first class under Section 133 Cr. P. C. in which he said that the working of this kiln is > noxious to the health of the residents of the vicinity, and has been a cause of death of several persons in the vicinity, and is a public nuisance.

The magistrate took proceedings on this complaint and passed an order directing Lalman to remove the lime kilns within 20 days and not to start them again on the present site. The Sessions Judge at first was of opinion that the magistrate's order should be set aside mainly on the ground that it was an application by an individual on account of a private grievance. He subsequently modified that order and came to the conclusion that the magistrate was entitled to order removal of the kiln; but he was of opinion that as the health officer of the municipal board had himself suggested the raising of a wall in front of the kiln, and was of opinion that if the wall were raised no body would be discomforted, this Court should set aside the order of the magistrate, but order Lalman to raise a wall seven feet high on the southern side of the kiln, and further "order the magistrate after that to see whether the kiln is still a nuisance to the public." It is open to this Court on a reference of this nature to consider both the legality and the propriety of the order of the magistrate. I have been asked on behalf of Lalman to consider in the first place that the order was passed without jurisdiction. I was referred to the first section of the Criminal Procedure Code by which it was enacted that the Code of 1898 would not affect any special or local law then in force; and it was argued that this restriction on the scope of the Code should be held to cover the Municipalities Act, although that act was passed after the Code. This view is based on a previous enactment, the N. W. P. Municipalities Act of 1883, but I am of opinion that there is nothing in that Act which could affect that the Criminal Procedure Code in its relation to the present Municipalities Act of the year 1916. But the Municipalities Act itself has given to the municipal boards control of all matters relating to public health within the municipal limits; and this municipal board of Fatehgarh has passed bye-laws dealing with the management of what are known as noxious trades, and which include the burning of lime. Under Section 318 of the Municipalities Act, any person aggrieved by an order of the Board on a question of this nature has a right of appeal to the District Magistrate; and under Section 321 of the Act it is laid down that no order or direction referred to in Section 318 shall be questioned in any other manner, or by any other party, than is provided therein. It was held by a Bench of this Court in an unreported case. First Appeal from Order No. 79 of 1928, by Sir Muhammad Sulaiman and myself that an aggrieved person under Section 318 does not mean only an aggrieved party, but includes any person who is really affected adversely by the order which may have been passed behind his back; and in that view of the law the present applicant would be a person aggrieved, if it can be considered that he is now objecting to an order passed by the municipal board under a bye-law framed under Clause (G) of Section 298. But it does not appear that the present complaint challenges directly any order passed by the municipal board; on the contrary it is a complaint under Section 133 Cr. P. C. and merely sets out that the working of the kiln is noxious to the health of the residents. That is to say, the complaint challenges not the order of the Board allowing Lalman to burn lime on a certain plot, but the manner in which Lalman carries out the permission given to him by the Board. In a parallel case decided by a Bench of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Krishna Mohan Banerji v. A. K. Guha[1], it was decided that a Magistrate was empowered to pass an order curtailing the rights of a certain person under a license. The licensee had an iron yard, but in the course of his business he made an intolerable noise which amounted to a nuisance to the public in the neighbourhood. The Judges laid down there that though the Magistrate would have acted more wisely in advising the complainant to set in motion the machinery of the local Act applicable to the case, the existence of an alternative remedy "does not deprive the Magistrate of jurisdiction"; and it appears that a similar view has been taken by this Court in the case of Raghunandan Prasad v. King-Emperor[2]. Although it is not expressly stated in that case that the factory, the noise of which was held to be injurious to the physical comfort of the community, was within municipal limits, it must be concluded that this was the case, as it was situated in a congested part of the town of Bareilly. In my own opinion the Magistrate had jurisdiction to pass an order under Section 133 Cr. P. C. to regulate the manner in which Lalman conducted his business if he found that in so doing Lalman was acting in a manner injurious to the health or physical comfort of the community. It is generally inexpedient that a Magistrate should take action in such cases, for these matters are left by the legislature to the control of the municipal boards who have a health officer to instruct them on matters of hygiene; and in this case I must consider whether the Magistrate's order was a proper order and necessary, even in a modified form, in the interests of the health of the public. As the order stands, it is a direction to remove the kiln in spite of the license given by the municipal board; and this Court would be loath to uphold such an order in toto as it would afford a disastrous precedent by allowing magistrates to interfere in matters which have been made over by the legislature to the municipal boards and the committees of public health appointed under them. But such an objection will not apply to the modification of the order proposed by the Judge and which had already been recommended by the health officer of the

---

[1] 57 I. C. 829

[2] 1931 A. L. J. R. 912

Board, if I were able to hold that such a modification was justified in the interests of the public health.

I have stated above that the learned Sessions Judge at first questioned the rights of the complainant coming forward with such a complaint on the ground that it was merely a personal matter and not a bona fide complaint in the interests of the public. There is abundant evidence to show that this kiln and a few temples are the only building on the north-east side of the road for a considerable distance, and on the other side of the road there are a few houses. It is clear from the evidence that people who use the road have no objection whatever to the kiln; and it comes to this that the only persons who object are those living in three or four houses, more or less opposite to the kiln. I cannot help noticing that the kiln is to the north-east of these houses, and this is not the prevailing direction of the wind in the United Provinces. A lime kiln as such causes at times a rather unpleasant smell and a very little smoke. I very much question whether the majority of the Indian public have any objection whatever to the near neighbourhood of a lime kiln. At any rate, the public of Fatehgarh appear to have put with this lime kiln for the last 45 years without making any objection, and there is, in my opinion, no adequate evidence that apart from slight discomfort there are any evil effects on the public health from the mere neighbourhood of the lime kiln. I do not dispute the statement of two medical witnesses who say that certain noxious gases are formed in burning lime; but there are also two medical witnesses, who saw the kiln when it was in action, who are of opinion that no gases are formed which could be injurious to anyone. A further objection can be taken to the complaint in this case, in that the complainant himself has only recently chosen to occupy the house opposite the kiln, which was built by the owner of the kiln, and when he did so he was well aware of any discomfort that might be caused by the burning of the lime. The complainant was a free agent, and I cannot see that he had any right to set himself down in front of somebody else's lime kiln and then say that he objects to the conduct by that person of a lawful trade for which he holds a license from the local health authority, and which he has been conducting for the last 45 years. I cannot consider any good purpose will be served by making Lalman build a wall 7ft. high in front of the kiln. In the first place, I do not consider that the kiln at present is in any way dangerous to the health of the public, and in the second, I am not prepared to find that any inconvenience that is being caused by it will be diminished by the erection of a wall such as that proposed by the Sessions Judge.

Thus, though I am of opinion that the Magistrate would not have been acting without jurisdiction in ordering a licensed burner of lime to take precautions so as to prevent his trade from being a nuisance to the community, I am of opinion that in any case such an order by a Magistrate is open to general objection in so far as it must inevitably reflect on the orders of the municipal board, and in this case in particular, that it has no justification because the lime kiln in question is not a danger to the

CRIMINAL
1931
LALMAN
v.
BISHAMBHAR NATH
Pullan, J.

community, and if it causes discomfort to anyone it is only to the complainant and his immediate neighbours who have deliberately chosen to reside in a position where they are liable to be inconvenienced by the smoke and smell from the kilns.

I accordingly allow the application in revision and accept the reference in the form in which it was originally submitted, and set aside the order of the Magistrate in toto.

Application allowed

CIVIL 1931
June 11
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BANERJI, J.

P. K. BANERJI, Official Liquidator, CAWNPORE (Applicant)

versus

MANGAL PRASAD (Opposite party)[*]

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), Sec. 53—"Valuable consideration"—Meaning of—Inadequate consideration—When sale can be set aside.

A consideration would be valuable if it is not so small as to be negligible when the value of the property is to be taken into account. An inadequate consideration may be evidence of want of good faith which may itself be sufficient for the setting aside of a transfer.

SECOND APPEAL from an order of J. J. W. ALLSOP ESQ., District Judge of Cawnpore.

K. N. Katju and M. L. Chaturvedi for the appellant.

P. L. Banerji and B. Mukerji for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an appeal by the official receiver from an order of the Insolvency Court refusing to set aside a sale dated October 4, 1926. It has now been finally settled by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of the Official Receiver v. P. L. K. M. R. M. Chettyar Firm[1] that the burden of proof is upon the receiver to show that the transfer sought to be impugned had not been made in good faith and for full consideration. In the present case the sale deed was ostensibly for Rs.1,500 out of which Rs.500 were set forth against an amount due on a usufructuary mortgage in favour of the vendee's son, Rs.500 were to be paid to one Shahzade Lal said to be due on a promissory note dated September 5, 1926, Rs.450 were to be paid to Kishore Lal on a promissory note dated May 2, 1926 and Rs.50 were paid in cash before the sub-registrar. The vendee led evidence to prove the due execution of the mortgage deed and the promissory notes, and the attesting witnesses showed the passing of consideration. As pointed out by the learned Judge there was no evidence whatsoever on the side of the receiver to contradict the statements of the witnesses. The learned Judge declined to presume that merely because the vendor became insolvent afterwards the promissory notes were fictitious and not genuine. There may be one or two points which might arouse one's suspicion but the burden being on the receiver to prove that no consideration had passed on these promissory notes he had to lead affirmative and substantive evidence to substantiate such a plea. The court of first instance had recorded a categorical finding that these promissory notes had been executed for good consideration. The learned Judge has not differed from that finding. He has further come to the conclusion that the consideration was for value inasmuch as it could not be disputed that Rs.500 due to the usufructuary mortgagee had been paid up.

---

[*] S. A. F. O. 5 of 1930

[1] 1931 A. L. J. R. 444

The learned advocate for the appellant contends that the expression valuable consideration must mean consideration which is fully adequate. 'Valuable consideration' in Section 53 of the Provincial Insolvency Act has been explained in Strouds' Judicial Dictionary as meaning money or money's worth and 'valuable' as meaning real as distinguished from a consideration that is merely illusory or nominal; but not necessarily meaning equivalent. The consideration would be valuable if it is not so small as to be negligible when the value of the property is to be taken into account. Of course, an inadequate consideration may be evidence of want of good faith which may itself be sufficient for the setting aside of the transfer.

In this particular case the learned Judge has found that there was no want of good faith. The property in question was the ultimate right of the insolvent or his successor to succeed to the estate after the death of certain ladies who had under a decree of court obtained possession for life in lieu of their maintenance.

In this case no objection was taken that no second appeal lay to the High Court. This question therefore has neither been considered nor decided.

We think that the order of the court below was right. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Civil 1931
June 30
Sen, J.
Bajpai, J.

MOTI CHAND AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
THE BRITISH INDIA CORPORATION LTD., CAWNPORE (Plaintiff)*

*Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 52—Explanation added by Act XX of 1929—Does not introduce a new rule of law—Mortgage suit—*Lis continued even after final decree and subsisted during pendency of execution proceedings—Sec. 70—Accession to mortgaged property—After final decree—Whether mortgagee entitled to such accession.

The explanation appended to Sec. 52, Transfer of Property Act, by the Amending Act XX of 1929, has not introduced a new rule of law, but has put the impress of legislature upon certain judicial pronouncements in which it has been held that in a mortgage suit the lis continued even after the final decree and subsisted during the pendency of proceedings in execution. See Sarjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Persad, 2 C. L. J. 288 and Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prashad, 7 C. L. J. 1.

The present defendant brought a suit for sale of a house and its compound on the basis of a mortgage (dated May 15, 1909) in the year 1915, and a final mortgage decree was passed by the High Court on December 23, 1918. The defendant purchased the property in execution of the decree, and the sale was confirmed on December 24, 1925. The defendant was obstructed in obtaining possession by the present plaintiff, and the Subordinate Judge passed an order directing delivery of possession to the defendant. Thereupon the present plaintiff instituted a suit for a declaration of his proprietary right. The defendant's mortgagor had sold the property to one M on June 20, 1917, and M sold the property to a Transport Co., on February 7, 1919, which subsequently went into liquidation, and the present plaintiff eventually purchased the property on July 26, 1921 from the Official Liquidators. (On March 1, 1920 the Transport Co. obtained a lease from the Secretary of State for India for a piece of land which included the land covered by the mortgage in favour of the defendant. There was no evidence on the record that the defendant's mortgagor had not full proprietary rights in the land but only limited rights terminable at the option of a superior proprietor.) The Transport Co. had built new structures in the compound after 1919, i.e., after the final decree in the mortgage suit. Held, (1) that the present plaintiff was bound by the auction sale dated December 24, 1925. (Sec. 25 Transfer of Property Act), (2) that the defendant was not entitled to obtain possession over the new structures built by the Transport Co. after the final decree in the mortgage suit. (Sec. 70 Transfer of Property Act), (3) that the lease taken by the Transport Co. from the Secretary of State did not enlarge the title acquired under the purchase dated Feb. 7, 1919 or confer upon them an independent title.

---

*F. A. 561 of 1927

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of W. E. J. DOBBS ESQ., Subordinate Judge of Naini Tal.

B. E. O'Conor, P. L. Banerji and Govind Das for the appellants.

K. N. Katju for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the British India Corporation Ltd., Cawnpore, against Raja Moti Chand and Lala Gokul Chand, defendants first party, and Lala Lalta Prasad, Jhabu Lal and Shri Kishen Chand, defendants second party. The defendants first party will for convenience's sake in this judgment be called as Raja Moti Chand and the defendants second party as Lalta Prasad. The plaintiffs prayed that (1) a decree be passed against the defendants declaring the proprietary right of the plaintiffs in the plaint properties and declaring that the said properties are not affected by a mortgage executed by Lalta Prasad in favour of Moti Chand on May 15, 1909 and are not saleable in execution of the decree obtained by Raja Moti Chand against Lalta Prasad; (2) it be declared that the sale in favour of Raja Moti Chand in November 1925 is null and void and ineffectual as against the plaintiffs; (3) an order of December 24, 1926 passed by the court of the Subordinate Judge and Deputy Commissioner of Naini Tal be set aside. The court below has passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs against the defendants for the property claimed on payment of Rs.8,000. Raja Moti Chand has filed the present appeal against the said decree.

It appears that on May 15, 1909 Lalta Prasad executed a simple mortgage in favour of Raja Moti Chand, hypothecating among other properties > one bungalow with pacca houses and sisam trees, etc., within the enclosure mortgaged, boundaries given, situate in Mohalla Kathgodam, district Naini Tal, purchased under the sale-deed executed and got registered on October 22, 1885.

The exact area of this land is not given in the mortgage-deed, but from other documents it appears that the area is 6¼ bighas, and it has not been contended before us by any party that the area was anything else. Raja Moti Chand brought a suit in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Aligarh upon the basis of this mortgage and obtained a simple money decree on April 15, 1915. On July 19, 1915, First Appeal No. 225 of 1915 was filed in the High Court by Raja Moti Chand in which he claimed that he should have been given a mortgage decree. On December 14, 1917, the High Court accepted the appeal of Raja Moti Chand and gave him a preliminary mortgage decree, and the decree was made final on December 23, 1918. This decree was transferred to Naini Tal for execution, and on November 24, 1925, the property mentioned above was purchased by Raja Moti Chand. The sale was confirmed on December 24, 1925 and the sale certificate was obtained on May 29, 1926. Raja Moti Chand was evidently obstructed in obtaining delivery of possession by the British India Corporation but on December 24, 1926, the Subordinate Judge of Naini Tal passed an order directing delivery of possession to Raja Moti Chand against the British India Corporation, and this last order has given the plaintiffs the cause of action to maintain the present suit. It may be mentioned here that in the mortgage litigation the British India Corporation was not a party and the entire proceedings connected with that litigation were conducted against Lalta Prasad (defendants second party alone) till we come to the time when the British India Corporation offered obstruction to Raja Moti Chand in his attempt to obtain possession.

We now propose to trace the title to this property, and the earliest that we can go is the year 1885. On October 22, 1885, one Mrs. Purcell sold this property which was described as > the house situated on the South of the railway station at Kathgodam, Kumaun district, consisting of four large rooms, four small rooms, two verandahs and its compound to the Right Reverend Bishop and Vicar Apostolic of Patna for a sum of Rs.6,000. On March 30, 1892, one Frederic Edward George Mathews, acting as the general attorney of the Bishop, sold the same to Lala Lalta Prasad. On June 20, 1917, Lalta Prasad and his two sons Jhabu Lal and Shri Kishan Chand sold the same to one Moti Singh, and in this sale-deed the property is described as having an area of 6¼ bighas. It might be mentioned that before this the mortgage in favour of Raja Moti Chand had been effected and Moti Singh obviously purchased this property with the burden of the mortgage in favour of Raja Moti Chand. Moti Singh sold the property on February 7, 1919 to Mr. J. E. da Fonseca, managing proprietor of the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company Limited, and in this document also the property is described as having an area of 6¼ bighas. On March 1, 1920, the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company obtained a lease from the Secretary of State for India for land measuring 8 bighas and odd for 30 years on an annual rental of Rs.202. It has been found by the court below that these 8 bighas and odd include an area of 6¼ bighas which is the subject of dispute in the present litigation. We have considered the evidence and are satisfied that this finding is correct. The Naini Tal Motor Transport Company subsequently went into liquidation, and the Official Liquidator of the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company sold this property to the British India Corporation on July 26, 1921. On August 17, 1921, the High Court at Fort William Calcutta ordered that the sale to the British India Corporation of the movable and immovable properties as also of the good-will of the business of the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company completed on the 26th day of July 1921 be confirmed. The British India Corporation have now enclosed the entire 8 bighas 11 biswas of land covered by the lease of March 1, 1920 and have made certain additions to the old buildings. The above statement of facts which are practically admitted will indicate the nature of the title advanced by the two contending parties, and we have got to adjudicate upon their rights. The court below has passed a declaratory decree in favour of the plaintiffs against the defendants with reference to the property claimed subject to a payment of Rs.8,000 to Raja Moti Chand. The plaintiffs are satisfied with this decree; but Raja Moti Chand in this appeal impugns this decree and contends that he has an indefeasible title to the property under his purchase. In the court below, it was argued on behalf of the Raja that he was entitled to the entire area of 8 bighas odd and to all the buildings that had been subsequently added as accretions to the original security, but in this Court Mr. Pearey Lal Banerji on behalf of the appellants has definitely abandoned this position and his prayer is that he should be given possession over land measuring 6¼ bighas and the buildings that stood thereon at the time of the mortgage and the sale and, if some portions of the old constructions have been demolished and new constructions erected instead, then he should get possession over such new constructions, or some other suitable orders passed which might adjust the equities between the parties. We shall decide the present appeal upon the basis of the position that has been taken before us by the learned advocate for the appellants.

The third issue before the court below was: "What are the existing boundaries and area of the land mortgaged in 1909"? and the finding upon this issue is in the following words:

> During the hearing of the suit I made an inspection of the locality; and the result of my inspection is embodied in a note, dated July 8, 1927 (page 13 of our record). A plan was prepared by an Amin, who proved it in court. I find that the area which I have shaded blue in the Amin's map (Exhibit B) is that which was mortgaged in 1909. The area is 6 bighas 3 biswas and the boundaries are as shown in the said map.

This finding has not been attacked by either party and we must take it that the present area of the mortgaged land is 6 bighas 3 biswas and the

Civil

1931

Moti Chand
v.
The British India Corporation Ltd., Cawnpore

Sen, J.

same has been demarcated by the court below in the Amin's map referred to above.

The fourth issue in the court below was:

> which or which portions of the existing buildings stand outside the boundaries referred to in issue 3?

and the finding thereon was as follows:—

> The map (Exhibit B) also shows the existing buildings which stand outside the limits referred to in the last issue. The big new Workshop; the Engineering Office, and the Store are entirely outside the mortgaged area.

This finding is based upon evidence and upon the Judge's inspection note and is not seriously challenged by either party. The fifth issue was: "Are any portions of the existing buildings unaffected by the mortgage?" and the decision thereon was:

> The buildings referred to under issue 4 are in any case unaffected by the mortgage. The extra land which was obtained on lease cannot be regarded as 'accruing' to the mortgaged area.

In view of the position taken by Mr. Banerji, it is not necessary for us to examine the legality or propriety of this finding and we must accept it correct. From the evidence of Mr. Vaughan it appears that there were formerly 4 main rooms and 4 bathrooms in the main building, a verandah in front and a small verandah behind. In 1915 the front verandah was closed and a room made and about the same time another room was made closing the back verandah. These alterations were made during the subsistence of the mortgage before it was put in suit, and it is contended that the mortgagee is entitled to these either as accessions or as substituted security unless his right to them is barred by some rule of law. From Moti Singh's evidence it appears that Mr. Fonseca built a room adjoining the bungalow and a long office and a kitchen. This room adjoining the bungalow, the long office and the kitchen were built after 1919, i.e., after the final decree obtained by Raja Moti Chand, and we shall have to consider whether the Raja can lay claim to these constructions.

The first contention that has been advanced on behalf of the appellants is that the plaintiffs being purchasers pendente lite could not set up their title by purchase as against the claim of the appellant mortgagee under the decree. It is quite clear that apart from certain complications, which we shall notice later on, Moti Singh who is in a certain sense the predecessor of the present plaintiffs purchased the property on June 20, 1917 during the pendency of the mortgage suit initiated by the appellants. It may be noted here that the court below is in error when it says:

> After he (Moti Singh) purchased the property, an appeal was preferred to the High Court and the decree was given against the property.

It is conceded that the appeal in the mortgage suit was filed on July 19, 1915, and Moti Singh's purchase was made on June 20, 1917 during the pendency of the appeal in the High Court which was decided on December 14, 1917. The provision of law which has been relied upon by the appellants is contained in Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. The active prosecution in this section must be deemed to continue so long as the suit is pending in appeal, since the proceedings in the appellate court are merely continuation of those in the suit. See the case of Gobind Chunder

Roy v. Guru Churn Kurmokar[1]. Further in a mortgage suit the lis does not terminate with the preliminary decree but must be deemed to continue at least till the passing of the final decree, vide Parsotam Narain v. Chheda Lal[2] and Shib Chandra v. Lachmi Narain[3]. It is obvious, therefore, that at least up till November 23, 1918 when the final decree in the mortgage suit was passed the property could not be transferred or otherwise dealt with by any party to the suit or his representative so as to affect the rights of any other party thereto under any decree or order which might be made therein. The sale by Lalta Prasad to Moti Singh on June 20, 1917 could not in any way affect the rights which Raja Moti Chand obtained under his decree.

The question that immediately arises is: what are the rights which Raja Moti Chand obtained under the decree and the auction sale, and to what extent are the plaintiffs affected by them? On November 24, 1925, Raja Moti Chand purchased one bungalow with pukhta houses and sisam trees, etc., within the enclosure mortgaged (boundaries given) situate in Kathgodam, district Naini Tal, acquired under sale-deed, dated and registered on October 22, 1885. It may be mentioned that neither the British India Corporation, nor the Secretary of State for India, nor the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company, nor Moti Singh were parties either to the mortgage suit of Raja Moti Chand or to the execution proceedings connected with the mortgage suit. We shall for the time being exclude out of our consideration the Secretary of State for India, but from what we have said above it is clear that every one of these persons is bound by the final decree obtained by Raja Moti Chand on November 23, 1918, so far as they are the successors-in-interest of Lalta Prasad. This follows from the text of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act of 1882 before its amendment. The amending Act of 1929 has not introduced a new rule of law in the following explanation appended to Section 52:

> For the purposes of this Section the pendency of a suit or proceeding shall be deemed . . . to continue until . . . the suit or proceedings has been disposed of by a final decree or order and complete satisfaction or discharge of such decree or order has been obtained but has put the impress of Legislature upon certain judicial pronouncements in which it has been held that in a mortgage suit the lis continued even after the final decree and subsisted during the pendency of proceedings in execution—see the case of Sarjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Pershad[4]. In the case of Bhawani Koer v. Mathura Prasad[5] Mukerjee, J. observes as follows:—

> It is quite clear, in the first place, that the mere fact that a judgment has been obtained on a mortgage does not extinguish the debt, and the mortgage continues as a lien till it is satisfied or the judgment is barred by the Statute of Limitations. This view is supported by the decisions of Lord Ellenborough in Drake v. Mitchel, [1803] 3 East 251, namely, that a judgment recovered in any form of action is still but a security for the original cause of action, until it be made productive in satisfaction to the party. This

---

[1] I. L. R. 15 Cal. 94

[2] I. L. R. 29 All. 76 at 80

[3] 33 C. W. N. 1091 (P.C.)

[4] 2 C. L. J. 288

[5] 7 C. L. J. 1 at 30

> principle has been recognized in the cases of the highest authority which will be found reviewed in the judgment of this Court in Sarjiram Marwari v. Barhamdeo Pershad, 2 C. L. J. 202 at 214. It follows, consequently, that the fact that the defendant obtained a decree on his mortgage did not extinguish his security.

Under Section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) when an order absolute under that section for sale of the mortgaged property was obtained the security was extinguished, and therefore, there are cases including decisions of the Privy Council which lay down that after an order absolute if the property should not be redeemed, "that matter passes from the domain of contract to that of judgment"—Sunder Koer v. Rai Sham Krishen[6], Het Ram v. Shadi Ram[7] and Matru Lal v. Durga Kunwar[8]. These cases are no longer law in view of the repeal of Section 89 of the Transfer of Property Act and the enactment of Order XXXIV of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. This matter has been clearly brought out in the decision of Sukhai v. Ghulam Sattar Khan[9], and, therefore, we think that the principle of law enunciated by Mr. Justice Mookerjee in Bhawani Koer's case is sound. The result is that the British India Corporation so far as they are the representatives of Lalta Prasad, are bound by the auction sale of November 24, 1925. Two consequences follow from this: (a) The British India Corporation have lost their right to redeem Moti Chand's mortgage and (b) Raja Moti Chand has acquired an indefeasible title as against them. Indeed the British India Corporation have never offered to redeem and we are inclined to hold that they are aware that they have no right to redeem. The auction sale is clearly binding upon the British India Corporation in so far as they are the successors-in-interest of Lalta Prasad.

Raja Moti Chand's purchase included the building and such rights in the land as Lalta Prasad possessed. We have now to see what rights Lalta Prasad possessed in the land which has now been found to have an area of 6 bighas and 3 biswas as marked in the Amin's map by the court below. Mrs. Purcell sold to the Bishop of Patna and the Bishop of Patna sold to Lalta Prasad and Lalta Prasad mortgaged to Moti Chand. There is no suggestion that the right in the land which was dealt with by these transactions was anything but proprietary right. It is true that Moti Singh says that he used to pay Rs.3 yearly rent to the Tahsil, but we have no other material on the record from which we could come to the conclusion that Mrs. Purcell, the Bishop of Patna or Lalta Prasad, had not permanent rights in the land but only limited rights terminable at the option of a superior proprietor. It has been argued by Dr. Katju who appeared on behalf of the respondent that on March 1, 1920 the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company obtained a 30 years' lease (renewable again after the lapse of 30 years) from the Secretary of State for India, and these rights could in no event be sold, for he says that, as these lessee rights were acquired after the final decree, there is no equity in favour either of the mortgagee or of the purchaser at the court auction to have such acquisitions taken away from the person who paid for them and attached to the property covered by the decree, and he relies upon the case of Hardhan Chakarvarty v. Hargobind Dutta[10] and Mysore Kopniah Sivananjiah v. K. Sithey Goudar[11]. Even if we were to agree that there can be no accession to the mortgage security after the passing of the final decree, we are of the opinion that the action of the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company in obtaining a lease from the Secretary of State for India does not enlarge their proprietary interest, acquired by them under the sale-deed dated February 7, 1919. As we said before, there is no material on the record from which we can gather that Lalta Prasad had limited rights in the land and, if therefore the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company in a spirit of caution or under the stress of certain unexplained circumstances took certain proceedings to ensure the continuance of their possession, this did not enlarge their title acquired under the purchase dated February 7, 1919 or confer upon them an independent title. It may be mentioned here that the Naini Tal Motor Transport Company paid no premium to the Secretary of State for India but only agreed to pay a yearly rent of Rs.202 and executed a building lease upon certain terms. The buildings which they have constructed outside the mortgaged area, will, as has been conceded by the learned advocate for the appellants, belong to the British India Corporation. There is thus no hardship cast upon them.

---

[6] I. L. R. 34 Cal. 150 at 161 (P.C.)

[7] I. L. R. 40 All. 407

[8] I. L. R. 42 All. 364

[9] I. L. R. 43 All. 469

The Secretary of State for India was no party either to the mortgage suit or to the execution proceedings and is not the successor-in-interest of Lalta Prasad and is of course not bound in any way by the decision of the suit.

Our conclusion, therefore, is that Raja Moti Chand is entitled, unless barred in some other way, to the land marked in the Amin's map by the court below. We have now to see what rights he has in the buildings. By parity of reasoning and in view of our findings it follows that Raja Moti Chand is entitled to obtain possession over the residential bungalow exclusive of the room adjoining the bungalow and long office and a kitchen, unless some other principle of law stands in his way.

It was finally argued before us on behalf of the respondents that we should not interfere with the decree of the court below by reason of the fact that Section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to the facts of the case, and that provision of law gives an option to the British India Corporation, and the court below has given effect to that option correctly. On the other hand, it was argued on behalf of the appellants that Section 51 cannot be taken advantage of by a person to whom Section 52 applies. This contention is founded upon the principle enunciated by a Division Bench of this Court in re: Mohammad Shafiq Ullah Khan v. Muhammad Sami Ullah Khan[12] by which we are bound. But we are of the opinion that the plaintiff-respondent is not entitled to the benefit of Section 51, and in our view Section 51 works out in a way different from the way in which the court below has worked it out. It runs as follows:

> When the transfer of immovable property makes any improvement on the property, believing in good faith that he is absolutely entitled thereto, and

---

[10] 6 Pat. L. J. 347

[11] 41 Mad. L. J. 490

[12] 1930 A. L. J. R. 57 at 60

> he is subsequently evicted therefrom by any person having a better title, the transferee has a right to require the person causing the eviction either to have the value of the imporvement estimated and paid or secured to the transferee, or to sell his interest in the property to the transferee at the then market value thereof, irrespective of the value of such improvement.

It is obvious that the British India Corporation are the transferees of immovable property and the persons subsequently evicted therefrom and Raja Moti Chand is the person having a better title within the meaning of the section. The consequence, therefore is that the British India Corporation have a right to require Raja Moti Chand either to have the value of the improvement estimated and paid to them or to ask Raja Moti Chand to sell his interest in the property to the British India Corporation at the then market value thereof irrespective of the value of such improvement. Upon this reading of the law it is clear that the British India Corporation can put Raja Moti Chand upon election, and it is for Raja Moti Chand to decide whether he will pay up the British India Corporation or whether he will sell his own interest to the British India Corporation. The court below, however, without putting Raja Moti Chand upon an election has compelled him to sell his interest to the British India Corporation, and therein we think it has fallen into an error, but we think that there is no occasion for Section 51 to come into play at all. So far as the 'improvements' are concerned there has been no improvement in the land according to our view and so far as the buildings are concerned, we have already held that Raja Moti Chand will not be entitled to the new room adjoining the bungalow, the long office and the kitchen built by Mr. Fonseca after 1919. Moreover, it is not made out by the evidence on the record that the British India Corporation believed in good faith that they were absolutely entitled to the immovable property in question. No body on their behalf has entered into the witness-box to state that they made any enquiries and that the result of those enquiries was that the Corporation was lulled into a sense of security. Neither the recitals contained in the sale-deed of July 26, 1921 nor the bald statement of Moti Singh Bhat that he had no information of any incumbrance can be of any avail to the plaintiff respondent. Moreover we are not impressed by the statement of Moti Singh. Section 51 of the Transfer of Property Act is, therefore, inapplicable. Our conclusion finally is that there is nothing in law which would stand in the way of Raja Moti Chand's claiming possession over the land marked in the Amin's map and over the residential bungalow. Here his right ceases. He has no right to the lands outside this area and to the room adjoining the main building, the long office and the kitchen built after 1919.

The result is that we allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the court below and substitute therefor a decree declaring the proprietary right of the plaintiffs over (1) the property mentioned in Schedule A, (excluding therefrom the land marked blue in the Amin's map and the residential bungalow) and (2) the end-room adjoining the main building, the long office and the kitchen which were built after 1919. It is also declared that the properties that have been secured to the plaintiffs by our decree are not affected by the mortgage and sale in favour of Raja Moti Chand. The

CIVIL
1931
MOTI CHAND
v.
THE BRITISH INDIA CORPORATION LTD., CAWNPORE
Sen, J.

order of December 24, 1926 passed by the court of the Subordinate Judge and Deputy Commissioner of Naini Tal so far as it affects the properties decreed to the plaintiffs, is set aside.

The plaintiffs have succeeded to some extent but have lost to a greater extent, and we think that the proper order to make on the question of costs is that the plaintiffs will get one-third of the taxable costs from the defendants first party and the defendants first party will get two-thirds of their taxable costs from the plaintiffs in both courts. Defendants second party will bear their own costs which they have incurred.

Appeal allowed

CIVIL 1931
July 6
MUKERJI, J.
ALLEN, J.

MUNNI BIBI alias AMBIKA DEI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
TIRLOKI NATH AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Contract Act, Sec. 69—'Person interested in payment'—Meaning of—Whether charge created by payment.

A creditor instituted a suit for a declaration of his right to attach and sell a house, which he alleged belonged to the judgment-debtor, in execution of his decree. He joined as defendants the present appellant to whom the house passed if the title was with the judgment-debtor, and one K, who claimed to be the owner of the house—the present first three respondents being the descendants of K. K died shortly afterwards. Thereupon K's son paid off the decree and retained possession of the house. The present appellant instituted a suit for possession within limitation. The High Court dismissed the suit, and held that the previous judgment did not operate as res judicata. On appeal the Privy Council took a contrary view on the question of res judicata and decreed the suit. The respondents however contended that they were entitled to get the money paid by K's son as a condition precedent to the plaintiff getting possession. The Privy Council remanded the case to the High Court for decision on this point. Held, that the question whether the previous decision operated as res judicata was a difficult question of law, and K's son had occasion to believe and did believe that the judgment in the creditor's suit was not conclusive as between the defendants, and that an earlier judgment in which K's title to the house was upheld yet stood in his favour, and therefore K's son acted as a person interested in payment within the meaning of Section 69 of the Contract Act. Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 142 approved. Tulsha Kunwar v. Jageshwar Prasad, I. L. R. 28 All. 563, Radha Madhub v. Sasti Ram, I. L. R. 26 Cal. 825, Janki Prasad v. Baldeo Prasad, I. L. R. 30 All. 167 and Chedi Lal v. Bhagwan Das, I. L. R. 11 All. 234 referred to. (2) that Sec. 69 gave only a personal remedy to K's son and there was no charge in favour of K's son on the particular property now in suit. Accordingly the present plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for possession without any condition sought to be attached by the defendants. Seth Chitor Mal v. Shib Lal, I. L. R. 14 All. 273 followed.

APPEAL against the decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Agra.

Kailas Nath Katju, B. Malik and G. Agarwala for the appellants.

Sir T. B. Sapru, N. P. Asthana and S. N. Seth for the respondents.

---

*P. C. A. 12 of 1925

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

MUKERJI, J.—The present proceedings arise out of F. A. No. 79 of 1922 of this Court, from the decree in which an appeal was filed before their Lordships of the Privy Council as Privy Council Appeal No. 12 of 1925. Their Lordships of the Privy Council decided the appeal, reversed the judgment of this court but left one point to be determined by this Court and that point is, whether in the circumstances of the case, the plaintiffs cannot recover possession of the property decreed to them except on payment of a sum of Rs.7,200 and interest thereon or any other sum?

The judgment has been reported in the local law journal (1931 A. L. J. 453) and is of course also on the record. The facts are given there and we shall not state them in detail again.

Two questions have been argued before us. The first is whether the claim on behalf of the descendants of Gokul Nath comes within the purview of Section 69 of the Indian Contract Act? And secondly, if it does, whether the defendants can insist on being paid as a condition precedent to the plaintiffs getting possession?

On the first point we do not feel any difficulty in holding in favour of the defendants. Section 69 of the Indian Contract Act runs as follows:—

> A person who is interested in the payment of money which another is bound by law to pay and who therefore pays it, is entitled to be reimbursed by the other.

In the litigation that took place at the instance of Narain Singh and which ended with the decree in his favour in this court on January 18, 1912 (page 292) there can be no doubt that the title of Gokul Nath's mother Kashi Dei was entirely negatived. There were two judgments and each party relied on one of them. For the defendants it was argued that the judgment of April 18, 1895 (page 221) operated as res judicata against the plaintiffs and on behalf of the plaintiffs it was contended that the judgment of January 18, 1912 (p. 292) operated as res judicata. The court of first instance held that the later judgment operated as res judicata. This Court held that the earlier judgment operated as res judicata and their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the first court was right.

There can be no doubt that it was a difficult proposition of law to decide, viz., whether in spite of the decree given to Narain Singh, the question of title was or not open as between the defendants? This Court thought that the judgment in Narain Singh's favour, although it allowed Narain Singh to sell the property in suit as the property of Amar Nath, left the question of title open as between the heir of Amar Nath and the heirs of Kashi Dei and her son Gokul Nath. In their judgment which was reversed by their Lordships of the Privy Council, the learned Judges held that the payment of Gokul Nath was a payment made in good faith and in the belief that his title to the house was a good one (see page 97 of the printed record). It is impossible to believe that Gokul Nath would go and raise money on the security of his own property, besides the property in suit, and pay the large sum of Rs.7,200 to Narain Singh, if he had not believed that the judgment obtained by Narain Singh did not settle the question of title as between himself and Amar Nath's heirs.

That being the case, the question is whether Gokul Nath acted as a person interested in payment within the meaning of Section 69 of the Indian Contract Act?

There are numerous cases including a decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in which it has been held, in effect, that the words "a person who is interested" do not mean that the person who makes the payment must prove that he had such an interest as would stand the test of a judicial trial. The decisions point to the conclusion that all that is necessary for a person making a payment to recover it is that he should really believe and honestly believe that he must make the payment in his own interest. If we accept this interpretation we should have no hesitation in holding that Gokul Nath came within the rule of law.

In the case of Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy[1] the plaintiff paid the money when he had a decree in his favour, which decree was subsequently reversed in appeal. At page 148 of the report their Lordships of the Privy Council are reported to have said:

> Now, it seems to their Lordships to be common justice that, when a proprietor in good faith pending litigation makes the necessary payments for the preservation of the estate in dispute, and the estate is afterwards adjudged to his opponent, he should be recouped what he has so paid by the person who ultimately benefits by the payment, if he has failed through no fault of his own, to reimburse himself out of the rents.

It has been argued that this case does not apply because Gokul Nath had the judgment of this court dated January 18, 1912 before him and as a sane person should have seen that that judgment took away any vestige of title that might have otherwise remained in him. We have however already met this point and have shown that in spite of this judgment Gokul Nath had occasion to believe and did believe that the judgment was not conclusive as between the defendants and that the earlier judgment yet stood in his favour.

Several other cases, viz., Tulsha Kunwar v. Jageshar Prasad[2], Kushal Singh v. Khawani Lal[3], Bindubashini Dassi v. Harendra Lal Roy[4] and Radha Madhub v. Sasti Ram[5] have been cited on behalf of the defendants.

As against these cases, the learned counsel for the plaintiffs has cited three cases decided by this Court, viz., Janki Prasad v. Baldeo Prasad[6], Khuddo v. Durga Prasad[7] and Chedi Lal v. Bhagwan Das[8].

We have examined all the cases cited by either side. These cases may be divided into two lots. In one set of cases, it was found that the person who made the payment was actually interested in making the payment and did make the payments in good faith. In the other set of cases it was found, and in this set come the cases cited on behalf of the plaintiffs, that where the plaintiff knew perfectly well and had no occasion to believe otherwise, that he had no vestige of title under which he could make a payment, he could not recover.

---

[1] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 142
[2] I. L. R. 28 All. 563
[3] 1906 A. W. N. 282
[4] I. L. R. 25 Cal. 305
[5] I. L. R. 26 Cal. 825
[6] I. L. R. 30 All. 167
[7] 3 A. L. J. R. 729
[8] I. L. R. 11 All. 234

There is no difficulty really in the law itself, but the difficulty arises in the application of it to the particular facts of a case. We are of opinion that Section 69, as interpreted by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Dakhina Mohan Roy v. Saroda Mohan Roy[9] does apply and Gokul Nath was interested in making the payment and if he had brought a suit within the period of limitation, the plaintiffs could not possibly have resisted it on the ground that they were not bound to reimburse him.

The second point raised is of some difficulty and no case has been cited on behalf of either side in support of the arguments advanced.

The argument on behalf of the defendants is that Section 69 is based on equitable principles and that no question of limitation arises when the claim is made by the defendants. On the other hand, the argument for the plaintiffs is this. Supposing that Section 69 applied, it gave only a personal remedy to Gokul Nath against the heirs of Amar Nath and there was no charge in favour of Gokul Nath on the particular property now in suit. It is further argued that there being no charge, it was open to Gokul Nath, if he had brought a suit to recover his money, to realise it by sale of any property belonging to the heirs of Amar Nath and, therefore, it cannot be said that the payment is particularly connected with the property now in suit and with no other property.

There is a difference of opinion among the High Courts of India as to whether a person, who makes a payment on account of another, in respect of an immovable property, acquires or not a lien or charge on the property so saved, by way of a salvage lien. In this High Court the principal case is that of Seth Chitor Mal v. Shib Lal[10] and the same view is taken in Calcutta in Kinu Ram v. Mozaffer Husain[11]. In Madras a contrary view was taken and a charge was granted and Bombay followed Madras. In Bombay, however, a contrary view was taken later on and in accordance with the view of the Allahabad High Court. In England no charge is allowed (see Coote's Law of Mortgage 1927, page 1381). As members of the Allahabad High Court, we are bound to follow the Full Bench decision of this Court and must hold that no charge is created by the payment. That being so, it appears to us that it is not open to the defendants to say that this particular property now in suit must make good the money which Gokul Nath was entitled to recover at the hands of the heirs of Amar Nath.

We decide accordingly, and hold that the plaintiffs are entitled to a decree for possession as was granted to them by their Lordships of the Privy Council without any condition sought to be attached by the defendants. We see no reason to alter the order as to costs as made by the Subordinate Judge whose judgment was ultimately upheld by their Lordships of the Privy Council. As to further costs incurred since the case was remitted to this court, it should follow the event and, therefore, we direct that the defendants shall pay the costs of the plaintiffs of the present hearing.

[9] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 142 [10] I. L. R. 14 All. 273 [11] I. L. R. 14 Cal. 800

CRIMINAL

1931

Sep. 3

SULAIMAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

KING-EMPEROR
versus
PATRAKHAN*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 438 and 435—Sec. 435 applies exclusively to proceedings before inferior courts—Case decided by Sessions Judge—District Magistrate makes reference to High Court—Reference improper—Duty of District Magistrate.

Where the District Magistrate examined the record of a case decided by the Sessions Judge, and made a reference to the High Court recommending that the sentence of transportation for life should be altered to one of death, held, that Sec. 435 Cr. P. C. applies exclusively to the proceedings before an inferior court, and the District Magistrate acted with impropriety.

A District Magistrate is inferior as a court to the Sessions Judge. It is no business of a District Magistrate, on the judicial side, to criticize the propriety of the view taken by the superior court. It is his imperative duty to abide by the conclusion of the sessions court loyally and faithfully. If however he considers that there is room for reconsideration, he may on the administrative side approach the local Government or the Government Advocate with the request, that the High Court should be moved by means of a revision to consider the propriety of the sentence. He cannot sit in judgment over the Sessions Judge and bring his own views to the notice of the High Court.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by BABU LAKSHMI NARAIN TANDON, Sessions Judge of Shahjahanpur.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

S. C. Mittra for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, J.—It is difficult to characterise this matter although it has been treated as a criminal reference by the District Magistrate. The Sessions Judge in a sessions trial convicted the accused under S. 302 I. P. C. but for reasons given in the concluding portion of the judgment he inflicted the lesser sentence of transportation for life. Sulaiman, J.

The local Government pleader appears to have addressed a letter to the local District Magistrate giving reasons why the sentence of death should have been passed. On this, the District Magistrate sent a letter to the Registrar of the High Court enclosing the Government pleader's letter and recommending that a death penalty instead of transportation for life should be imposed on the accused. The Registrar very properly returned this letter and the record to the District Magistrate and declined to entertain it when it was sent direct. He however suggested that the record may be resubmitted through the Sessions Judge as laid down in Chapter X, R. 6 of the General Rules (Criminal). We may add that this rule refers to cases which can be properly referred by District Magistrates. The District Magistrate then submitted the two letters to the Sessions Judge for being forwarded to the High Court and the Sessions Judge has forwarded them with his own remarks. He has taken serious objection to two expressions used by the District Magistrate in his original letter addressed

---

*Cr. Ref. 249 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
KING-EMPEROR
v.
PATRA-KHAN
Sulaiman, J.

to the Registrar, as well as to its general tone.

A learned Judge of this Court ordered notice to issue to the accused to show cause why the sentence should not be enhanced and remarked that the complaint of the Sessions Judge would be considered at the hearing.

No doubt, as the record has come to the High Court, though in a most irregular manner, we have jurisdiction to intervene in revision and consider the propriety of the sentence, but we are not bound to do so.

It has been pointed out by this Court times out of number that a District Magistrate is inferior as a court to the Sessions Judge. It is no business of a District Magistrate, on the judicial side, to criticise the propriety of the view taken by the superior court, namely, the sessions court. It is his imperative duty to abide by the conclusion of that court loyally and faithfully. If however he considers that there is room for reconsideration, he may on the administrative side approach the local Government or the Government advocate with the request that the High Court should be moved by means of a revision to consider the propriety of the sentence. The District Magistrate cannot be allowed to sit in judgment over the Sessions Judge, and criticise the views of the Sessions Judge and bring his own views to the notice of the High Court.

This case is still worse because even the criticisms of the Government pleader on the judgment of the Sessions Judge have been attempted to be placed before the High Court.

The only section under which a court is competent to call for or examine the records of a criminal case is S. 435 Cr. P. C. But that section applies exclusively to the proceedings before an inferior criminal court and not those before a superior court. The District Magistrate has therefore acted with impropriety in examining the record of the case decided by the superior court, and making a reference to the High Court.

As remarked above, we have jurisdiction to consider the matter on its merits as the record has come before us somehow. But it would be encouraging district magistrates to adopt a course authorised by law if after condemning the action we were to entertain the reference. We think that the best way of marking our disapproval of the way in which the matter has been forwarded to the High Court is to decline to consider the matter on its merits.

We must also point out that the Sessions Judge has very properly taken objection to at least two expressions in the letter of the District Magistrate. He remarked:

> The Sessions Judge in his judgment talks about extenuating circumstances.

The word "talks" is a colloquial word most unbecoming for a district magistrate to use in reference to a judgment passed by a court of law superior to him. We are astonished that he should have used such a word. Similarly, the reasons which were given by the Sessions Judge might be good, bad or indifferent, but we think that it was improper on the part of the District Magistrate to call them "quite inscrutable". It is the duty of the subordinate courts to show respect and be courteous to superior courts. We trust that our remarks will be borne in mind by the District Magistrate in future. Let the record be returned.

Civil

1931

Nov. 3

Mukerji, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

NANHI (Defendant)
versus
KETKI (Plaintiff)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 55 (2)—Sale deed—Covenant—Entitling vendee to recover consideration by sale of property sold—On being dispossessed from whole or part of property—Whether implied covenant of title in terms of Sec. 55 (2) excluded.

Where there was an express covenant in the sale deed entitling the vendee, on being dispossessed from the whole or part of the property sold, to recover the whole of the consideration by sale of the property transferred or from other property; held, that there was nothing in the sale deed which excluded an implied warranty of title, contemplated by Sec. 55 (2) T. P. Act, nor was there anything in the sale deed which limited the vendee's remedy to the rescission of the contract; and the covenant was an enabling clause, intended for the benefit of the vendee, and conferred a right, which he would not otherwise possess, and which he could exercise in addition to any right which the law gave him.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RATAN LAL, Additional Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, reversing a decree of BABU MOTI LAL, Munsif.

P. N. Sapru for the appellant.

U. S. Bajpai and G. S. Pathak for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant and arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for damages for breach of a covenant, alleged to be express and, in the alternative, said to be in a sale-deed dated March 22, 1912, executed by the defendant-appellant in favour of the plaintiff-respondent for a sum of Rs.2,000, conveying certain house property. The court of first instance dismissed the suit. The lower appellate court has decreed the plaintiff's claim for a smaller amount than that claimed by the plaintiff.

The deed recites that the vendor has placed the vendee in possession of the entire vended property and that part of the property was the subject of a deed of gift in favour of one Jwala Prasad but that the vendor subsequently cancelled it by executing a deed of annulment. The implication of these recitals is that the vendor is the absolute owner of the property in spite of the infructuous deed of gift referred to.

One of the clauses of the sale-deed provided that:

> If, God forbid, the whole of the property transferred, or any portion thereof, goes out of the possession of the vendee on account of any transfer or incumbrance, etc., by her, or by her ancestors, or by any person who claims to be the owner of the property, on the basis of any law, custom or Shastra, the vendee shall have a right to recover his consideration money along with damages and costs from the property transferred or from other movable or immovable property of hers.

The vendee was resisted in taking possession of the property to which the deed of gift and the deed of annulment, already referred to, related. The

---

*S. A. 347 of 1929

CIVIL 1931
NANHI
v.
KETKI
Niamat-ullah, J.

vendee and the vendor both instituted proceedings for recovery of the property covered by them; but they were unsuccessful. Thereupon, the plaintiff-respondent brought the present suit for recovery of a proportionate amount of the consideration paid under the sale-deed.

The defence was that no warranty of title was given by the vendor to the vendee and that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover a proportionate part of the consideration paid under the sale-deed. There were other defences also, which it is not necessary to mention for the purposes of this appeal.

The court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim, as already stated, holding that the covenant, contained in the sale-deed, did not entitle the plaintiff to a proportionate amount of the consideration. The lower appellate court has taken a contrary view on that question and has held, in addition, that there is an implied warranty of title under Section 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act.

The learned counsel for the defendant-appellant argues, (1) that the implied covenant of title in terms of S. 55 (2) of the Transfer of Property Act is excluded by the express covenant, contained in the deed and relied on by the plaintiff, and (2) that the plaintiff-respondent is bound to have the sale transaction rescinded, as provided in the covenant. According to this contention, the only remedy which the plaintiff-respondent has under the covenant referred to is to restore to the vendor so much of the vended property as came into his possession under the sale-deed and then claim refund of the consideration of the sale-deed. The express covenant undoubtedly entitles the vendee, on being dispossessed from part of the property sold, to recover the whole of the consideration, and the fact that he can do so by sale of the vended property clearly indicates that the vendee should treat such property as belonging to the vendor. Such a procedure clearly implies annulment of the sale. It is contended that the warranty of title and the vendee's remedy in case of a breach thereof being thus provided for, he cannot avail of the implied warranty under S. 55 (2) Transfer of Property Act, or claim damages on its breach. We are of opinion that the covenant in question is an enabling clause, intended for the benefit of the vendee, and confers a right, which he would not otherwise possess, and which he can exercise in addition to any right which the law gives him. There is nothing in the sale-deed which excludes an implied warranty of title, contemplated by S. 55 (2), T. P. A., nor is there anything in the sale-deed which limits the plaintiff's remedy to the rescission of the contract referred to in the covenant in question. In this view, the plaintiff-respondent is entitled to damages for breach of the implied warranty of title. As a measure of such damages, the lower appellate court has decreed to him a proportionate part of the price, having regard to the value of the property which the plaintiff could not recover and the value of the property in his possession. No question has been raised as regards the amount of damages awarded by the lower appellate court being excessive.

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Civil

1931

Nov. 5

Sen, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

BASDEO SINGH (Defendant)

versus

RAM RAJ SINGH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 23, R. 3—Parties agreeing to abide by statement of a certain individual—Effect of agreement—When agreement may be resiled from—Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 115—Munsif dismissing case behind back of parties on date not fixed for hearing—Whether revision lies.

The agreement to abide by the statement of a certain individual nominated by the parties to a pending action, amounts to an agreement to accept an adjustment of the case which might ensue as the result of the statement made by the nominee, the said statement furnishing the agreed data whereon the adjustment is to be founded; and one party or the other has the right to resile from the agreement any time during the pendency of the suit and so long as no proper statement is made by the referee in terms of the agreement. Himanchal Singh v. Jatwar Singh, I. L. R. 46 All. 710, Deoraj Misra v. Abbai Raj Singh, 25 A. L. J. R. 729, Ram Ratan v. Ram Lal Singh, 1929 A. L. J. R. 1095 and Bishambhar v. Radha Kishunji, 1931 A. L. J. R. 393 followed.

Where the munsif took up a case on a date which was not fixed for hearing and dismissed the suit behind the back of the parties by accepting the sworn testimony of the referee, held, that the munsif's order was irregular and without jurisdiction, and was open to revision under S. 115 C. P. C. Chandu Lal v. Koka Mal, I. L. R. 43 All. 334 distinguished.

SECOND APPEAL from the decision of BABU MATHURA PRASAD, Second Additional Subordinate Judge of Benares, confirming a decree of MR. D. P. MEHROTRA, Additional Munsif.

K. Verma for the appellant.

B. S. Shastry for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This second appeal and the connected civil revision are interdependent and proceed upon common grounds.

On November 29, 1928, Ram Raj Singh, Ram Deo Singh and Mt. Parkali instituted a suit against Basdeo Singh for a declaration of title to certain property situate in village Rajwari and for the cancellation of an award, dated September 17, 1928, made by Raghunandan Singh and others consequent upon an agreement of reference to arbitration, dated June 2, 1928. The plaintiffs alleged that the agreement of reference was vitiated by fraud and that the award was not binding upon them. This suit was registered as No. 688 of 1928 in the court of the Havali Munsif of Benares City. Basdeo Singh filed a written statement on January 22, 1929. which amounted to a traverse of all the material facts whereon the claim was founded.

On January 25, 1929, Basdeo Singh presented an application in the same court under para 20, Sch. II, C. P. C., and prayed that the award, dated September 17, 1928, be filed and that a decree be passed in accordance therewith. This application which was subsequently registered as suit

---

*S. A. 680 of 1930 (connected with Civ. Rev. 307 of 1930)

CIVIL

1931

BASDEO SINGH
v.
RAM RAJ SINGH

Sen, J.

No. 46 of 1929, was directed against Ram Raj Singh and Ram Deo Singh. Mt. Parkali was no party to it. She appears to have been omitted from the array of defendants presumably on the ground that she had no interest in the subject-matter in dispute. Ram Raj Singh and Ram Deo Singh filed a written statement on February 15, 1929. The grounds of attack in suit No. 688 of 1928 constituted, in substance, the grounds of defence in this proceeding.

Both the cases were fixed for hearing on August 31, 1929. On that date, the parties made a statement in court whereby they agreed to abide by the statement of one Thakur Baldeo Singh about the subject-matter in dispute. This statement was recorded in the order sheet. The word used in the order sheet is not 'bayan' but 'faisla' (decision); but reading the order-sheet as a whole, there can be doubt that the intention of the parties was to abide by the statement of Thakur Baldeo Singh. Mt. Parkali does not appear to have joined in the said statement before the court. The court ordered that a 'parwana' be issued to the referee and that the latter be directed to file his 'faisla' in two days.

A similar statement was recorded in the order-sheet of suit No. 46 of 1929. The court directed that a 'parwana' be issued to the referee directing him to file his 'faisla' till September 4, 1929 and that the case be put up for disposal on September 4, 1929.

On September 3, 1929, Mt. Parkali appears to have signified her assent to a reference to Thakur Baldeo Singh. A 'parwana' was directed to be issued to Thakur Baldeo Singh. The record shows that this 'parwana' never reached the hands of the Thakur.

On September 3, 1929, Thakur Baldeo Singh came to the court of the learned Munsif of Havali. Oath was administered to him, and he made a certain statement. This statement was recorded in suit No. 46 of 1929. The learned Munsif gave effect to that statement and dismissed the suit of Basdeo Singh for filing an award.

Suit No. 688 of 1928 was taken up by the Munsif on the following day. Thakur Baldeo Singh does not appear to have made any verbal statement before the court; but he filed a statement in writing, which is to be found at page 15 of the paper book. He stated that he had already given his decision in court on September 3, 1929, and his decision in the present case was just the same and that, as the result of his decision the plaintiffs' claim should be decreed with costs. The learned Munsif accepted the 'decision' of the referee and decreed the suit No. 688 of 1928 with costs.

Two appeals were preferred to the learned District Judge from the orders of the learned Munsif in the two cases referred to above. These appeals were transferred for hearing to the court of the 2nd Additional Subordinate Judge of Benares. He took up the appeal from the order in suit No. 46 of 1929 first, and came to the conclusion that there was no reference to arbitration within the purview of Sch. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the agreement of reference amounted to an agreement to abide by a 'statement' on oath and that the said statement having been given by the referee on oath, the court was bound to pass a decree in accordance

CIVIL

1931

BASDEO SINGH
v.
RAM RAJ SINGH

Sen, J.

therewith. He accordingly affirmed the order of the trial court and dismissed the appeal. He next took up the appeal in the connected suit and decided that case upon the ground that the order in the connected suit operated as res judicata.

The orders of the 2nd Additional Subordinate Judge of Benares have given rise to the second appeal and the application for civil revision that we are now dealing with.

We have considered the agreement of reference as embodied in the two order-sheets in the two cases and are of opinion that there was no agreement of reference to arbitration and that the transaction did not amount to an agreement to abide by the sworn testimony of the referee. The agreement amounted to an undertaking on the part of the disputants that they would be bound by the statement of Baldeo Singh, the nominee. The agreement to abide by the statement of a certain individual nominated by the parties to a pending action, amounts to an agreement to accept an adjustment of the case which might ensue as the result of the statement made by the nominee, the said statement furnishing the agreed data whereon the adjustment was to be founded. This appears to be the view which has been taken by this Court in a number of cases, notably in Himanchal Singh v. Jatwar Singh[1], Deoraj Misra v. Abhai Raj Singh[2] and Ram Ratan v. Ram Lal Singh[3]. It follows that we do not accept the construction put upon the agreement by the lower appellate court, that the statement referred to was to be a statement on oath.

Where the agreement of the parties is not to refer their dispute to arbitration within the purview of Sch. 2 C. P. C. nor is an agreement to abide by the sworn testimony of a particular referee within the meaning of Ss. 9 and 11 of the Oaths Act, the agreement in question may be withdrawn or resiled from by one party or the other before the statement has been made in court and action taken thereon. (Vide in Bishambhar v. Radha Kishunji[4].

It is abundantly clear from the facts we have stated above that the procedure adopted by the trial court in disposing of suit No. 46 of 1929, was irregular and not in accordance with law. September 3, 1929 was not the date fixed for the hearing of the case. On that date, the parties did not appear in court either in person or through their pleaders. The learned Munsif, however, for some reasons which do not appear from the record, took up the case on that date, and behind the back of the parties dismissed the suit by accepting the sworn testimony of the referee.

A preliminary objection has been taken by Mr. Shastri that the order of the lower appellate court is not open to revision under S. 115, C. P. C. and reliance has been placed upon a decision of this Court in Chandu Lal v. Koka Mal[5]. The facts of this case were that a certain plaint was returned by the trial court for presentation to the proper court. An appeal was preferred to the learned District Judge, who differed from the trial

[1] I. L. R. 46 All. 710

[2] 25 A. L. J. R. 729

[3] 1929 A. L. J. R. 1095

[4] 1931 A. L. J. R. 393

[5] I. L. R. 43 All. 334

CIVIL 1931
BASDEO SINGH
v.
RAM RAJ SINGH
Sen, J.

court and, setting aside the order of that court, remanded the suit for trial on the merits. An application for revision having been filed under S. 115, C. P. C., this Court held that the appellate court had jurisdiction to entertain the appeal and to pass such orders as it considered fit, and that even if the order were erroneous, it was passed by a court having jurisdiction and consequently was not obnoxious to the provisions of S. 115. We are of opinion that the facts of this case are entirely different from the case now in hand. The learned Munsif had no jurisdiction to take up the case on a date which was not fixed for hearing and to pass orders on the case behind the back of the parties. On this short ground, we would accept the application for revision, set aside the orders of the courts below and send back the case to the trial court for disposal of the application according to law.

It was open to one or the other parties to the reference to resile from the agreement on September 3, 1929. A telegram was sent to the Additional Munsif of Havali, which was worded thus:—

> Basdeo Singh v. Ramraj Singh, etc., case No. 46 of 1929. Baboo Baldeo Singh Panch decision not required being uncle of Baboo Jagannath Singh pleader who is pleader of against party hence no judgment hoped kindly try case yourself he is under pressure—Basdeo Singh.

It was received in court before September 4, 1929, which was the date fixed for the hearing of the suit. As a matter of fact, it was received on September 3; but the learned Munsif paid no attention to it upon a two-fold ground:—Firstly that no representation made through a telegram was entitled to attention and, secondly, that the suit had already been disposed of. There can be no manner of doubt that the suit was decided by the learned Munsif with indecent haste. Basdeo Singh had the right to resile from the original agreement any time during the pendency of the suit and so long no proper statement had been made by the referee in terms of the agreement. We have examined the statement of Baldeo Singh in detail and are of opinion that his so-called 'decision' is extremely vague; and we find it extremely difficult to hold that he had made any pronouncement upon any of the questions which were really in dispute between the parties. It has got to be remembered that the plaintiffs claimed to sweep aside the award dated September 17, 1928, upon the ground that the initial agreement of reference, dated June 2, 1928, had been procured by fraud, that the award itself was the outcome of fraud and collusion and that the property in dispute was the exclusive property of the plaintiffs because of a partition which had taken place nearly half a century before the action. Th. Baldeo Singh does not appear to have applied his mind to this part of the case at all and he sweeps aside the award with the observation that the agreement to refer to arbitration is wrong. It is true that he states that the parties have been separate for a fairly long time and that there was no necessity to enter into an agreement of reference to arbitration about the division of the property but he makes no attempt to definitely tackle the cardinal issues in the case.

The order of the Munsif in suit No. 46 of 1929 having been set aside, the said order does not operate as res judicata in the connected suit. The

CIVIL 1931
BASDEO SINGH
v.
RAM RAJ SINGH
Sen, J.

statement in writing filed by the referee in the said suit is open to the same criticism which his sworn testimony was exposed to. The learned Munsif was not justified in accepting that statement as one in due accordance with the agreement arrived at between the parties on August 31, 1928 or as one deciding the points in controversy.

The result is that we set aside the decree of the courts below in suit No. 688 of 1928, and remand the suit to the trial court under O. 41, R. 23, C. P. C., for disposal according to law. The agreement, dated August 31, 1928, having been already resiled from, the suit has to be tried by the learned Munsif himself. Basdeo Singh is entitled to his costs in both the suits throughout. The suit No. 46 of 1929 must also be tried on the merits by the learned Munsif.

Decree set aside
Suit remanded

CRIMINAL
1931
June 17
BAJPAI, J.

DASAI AND ANOTHER (Applicants)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Penal Code, Sec. 499, Exception 9—Complainant excommunicated by panchayat—Punches informed members of brotherhood—Good faith to be presumed—No direct evidence of malice—Communication privileged.

A communication by the punches to the members of the community, incorporating the resolution of the panchayat excommunicating the complainant (who absented himself when summoned to answer a charge), must be presumed to have been made in good faith, and in the absence of direct evidence of malice, the communication must be deemed to be privileged, even though the resolution was not worded in an absolutely regular and formal manner. Emperor v. Umed Singh, I. L. R. 46 All. 64=21 A. L. J. R. 765, Ayyaswami Iyer v. Annan Thirumala Iyer, 47 Mad. L. J. 8, Emperor v. Virji Bhagwan, 11 Bom. L. J. 638 and Emperor v. Padman Babul Mhatre, 14 Bom. L. R. 585 relied on.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of R. K. AGHA ESQ., Sessions Judge of Meerut.

M. A. Aziz for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bajpai, J.

BAJPAI, J.—The two applicants before me were convicted by a Magistrate of the first class under Section 499 of the Indian Penal Code and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs.100 each. Their convictions were upheld by the Additional Sessions Judge of Meerut but in view of the fact that the complaint was perhaps actuated by some malice, the learned Judge thought fit to reduce the fine to Rs.25 each.

The case for the prosecution was that the complainant was a member of the community of Ghagarpars to which the accused belonged, but the accused in the course of certain letters addressed to other members of the community stated that the complainant had mixed with Jaswara Chamars and had thus lapsed from his religion and exhorted the members of the community not to associate with the complainant. These facts, the complainant alleges, brought about his excommunication and lowered him and his prestige in the eyes of the members of the community. This accusation, the complainant further alleges, was made without good faith and out of malice. It might be mentioned that the Ghagarpars are Kabir Panthi Julahas and the Binoudhas and Jaswaras are the other sub-divisions of the Julahas, yet the Ghagarpars perhaps claim for themselves superiority as amongst the various sub-divisions of the community. There can be no doubt that the allegations made in the circulatory letters were defamatory, but it is contended before me that it was made for the public good inasmuch as it was made in the interest of the community to which the parties belonged. The facts are that certain allegations were made against the complainant in which he was charged with having killed a buffalo and a pony, and the complainant was asked to attend various Punchayats for the purpose of declaring his character. The complainant paid no heed to the various summonses issued by the Punchayat, nor did he conform to the penance imposed by the Punchayat. The obvious result was that on a particular meeting he was excommunicated, and in the Punchayat, as would appear from the evidence of Ram Autar one of the punches, there was an allegation to the effect that Gur Din was mixing with the Jaswaras which was a sub-caste with which the Ghagarpars could neither intermarry nor interdine. The punches communicated the result of the Punchayat to the various members of the community residing in different parts and stated that they had excommunicated Gur Din the complainant, because he had lapsed from his religion and had become like the Jaswara Chamars. The position of law taken on behalf of the accused is that this communication must be deemed to have been made in good faith without malice incorporating the decisions of the Punchayat for the purpose of protecting their own interests. In the case of Emperor v. Umed Singh[1] Mr. Justice Walsh observes that > if a person really was out-casted, a statement to the members of the brotherhood that he was out-casted was the kind of statement contemplated by the expression 'for the public good'. So long as caste prevails and it must be remembered that it is sanctified by religious and racial traditions going back for centuries and forming one of the fundamental characteristics of social life in India, any attempt to minimize, ignore or brush on one side existing regulations, existing sanctions, or respect for existing decisions, must be regarded from the Indian point of view as contrary to the public good.

---

*Cr. Rev. 193 of 1931

It must further be remembered that the accused are not men of education and culture, but more or less illiterate men, and they cannot be expected to incorporate the resolutions of the Punchayat in an absolutely regular and formal manner. The fact, however, remains that certain charges were made against the complainant. Those charges were investigated. The complainant was given full opportunity to meet those charges and not

---

[1] I. L. R. 46 All. 64

Criminal
1931
Dasai
v.
King-Emperor
Bajpai, J.

having availed himself of that opportunity he is himself to blame if as a matter of fact the resolution was not worded in a highly regular fashion. It has been proved, that the Punchayat did excommunicate the complainant, and under those circumstances, I am of opinion that good faith must be presumed, and in the absence of direct evidence of malice the communication must be deemed to be privileged. I am supported in my view by the cases of Ayyaswami Iyer v. Annan Thirumala Iyer[2], Emperor v. Virji Bhagwan[3], Emperor v. Padman Babul Mhatre[4] and Umed Singh v. King-Emperor[5].

The result is that I allow this application, set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the fine or any portion of it, if paid, must be refunded.

Application allowed

---

[2] 47 Mad. L. J. 8

[3] 11 Bom. L. R. 638

[4] 14 Bom L. R. 585

[5] 22 A. L. J. R. 79

ABDUL RAFIQ (Plaintiff)
versus
BHAJAN (Defendant)*

Civil 1931
May 12
Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Niamatullah, J.

Accounts—Examination of—Unconditional acknowledgment of indebtedness—Whether constitutes a new cause of action—Inclusion of time-barred debts in acknowledgment—Burden of proof—Contract Act, Sec. 25—Limitation Act, Sec. 19—Stamp Act, Art. 1.

Per Niamatullah, J.—Where two persons examine their mutual dealings and one of them formally acknowledges his indebtedness to the other to a certain extent in a document which complies with all the formalities of the law, for example, Stamp Act, the natural inference is that he promised to pay the amount. The promise is a new contract, the consideration for which is the old debt, and such promise constitutes a new cause of action. In short, an unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay and affords a new cause of action to the obligee. If in making the acknowledgment he has included time-barred debts which he might have well repudiated, it may still be open to him to plead failure of consideration to that extent. The creditor places himself in a disadvantageous position in this respect by omitting to take a bond containing an express promise to pay, which alone can successfully meet the plea of want of consideration. This is the effect of Sec. 25 Contract Act. Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand, I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047 relied on.

Per Sulaiman, A. C. J.—A mere acknowledgment of liability is not always evidence of a new contract which can be the basis of a suit. There may be recitals in the written acknowledgment or there may be other direct or circumstantial evidence, which may show that the transaction in which the acknowledgment was made amounted in reality to a novation of the contract for a valid consideration. Ganga Prashad v. Ram Dayal, I. L. R. 23 All. 502 relied on.

The question whether a mere acknowledgment or a simple receipt can be made the basis of a suit is one more of procedure than of substantive law. If the transaction has amounted to a new contract it can undoubtedly be made the basis of a suit. But if it is nothing more than a mere acknowledgment then, if made beyond the period of limitation, it cannot be the basis of a fresh suit which can succeed. If the acknowledgment had been made within limitation, then the cause of action is kept alive and all that would be at most necessary would be an amendment of the plaint, if the original debt is not referred to therein.

---

*Civ. Rev. 242 of 1930

There is no justification for holding that a simple acknowledgment of a liability to pay a debt throws the burden of proof that the debt was barred on the person who has acknowledged it. When Sec. 19 Limitation Act requires proof that the period had not expired, it would be contrary to the provisions of Secs. 101 to 104 of the Evidence Act to require that the burden lies on the defendant who acknowledged the liability.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of MAULVI ZAMIRUL ISLAM KHAN, Judge, Small Cause Court, Pilibhit.

Mushtaq Ahmad for the applicant.

G. S. Pathak for the opposite party.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision directed against the decree passed by the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Pilibhit dismissing the plaintiff-applicant's suit for recovery of Rs.250 principal and Rs.30 interest on what purports to be an acknowledgment of liability but has been wrongly described by the court below as a promissory note. As considerable importance has come to be attached to its contents in course of the argument before us, it is desirable to quote it in extenso. It runs as follows:—

> A sum of Rs.250, half of which is Rs.125 has been found due by me to Shaikh Abdur Rafiq on settlement of account (fahmid hesab kitab) in respect of dealings between me and him (Abdur Rafiq) up to date. These presents are, therefore, executed to be of service in case of need.

The plaintiff's case as set out in the plaint is that dealings between the parties were taken account of on May 3, 1929 when the sum of Rs.250 was found due to the plaintiff from the defendant who executed the acknowledgment already referred to and promised to execute a hypothecation bond later but did not do so. The defence was a total denial of every thing alleged by the plaintiff and no positive case of any kind was set up. In particular it should be noticed that neither limitation nor want of consideration for the acknowledgment was pleaded in the alternative if the acknowledgment were found to have been made. The only issue set down for hearing was "whether the defendant owed Rs.250 to plaintiff as alleged in the plaint." The finding of the Judge is so brief that it may be quoted in its entirety:

> I am not satisfied that the plaintiff has succeeded in proving that the defendant owed him Rs.250 for which the acknowledgment was executed. The plaintiff ought to have submitted a statement of account. His (?) mere words cannot be accepted as true. The issue is decided against the plaintiff though I hold that the receipt relied on by the plaintiff was executed by the defendant.

I fail to understand what the learned Judge meant in stating that "his mere

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL RAFIQ v. BHAJAN

Niamat-ullah, J.

words cannot be accepted." If "his" refers to the plaintiff, as I think it does, there must have been some misapprehension in the mind of the learned Judge. The plaintiff does not rely upon his own words but those of the defendant who acknowledged his liability by executing the document, handed over to the plaintiff, and which established that the defendant was on its date indebted to the plaintiff to the extent of Rs.250. What a party himself admits to be true should be accepted to be so until the contrary is proved, a proposition so well established that no authority need be quoted in support of it. The narrow issue which arose in the case could only have been answered in the affirmative, and the indebtedness of the defendant having been thus found and no other defence having been raised, a decree in favour of the plaintiff should have followed.

The learned advocate for the respondent has argued before us that the acknowledgment in question not being "account stated" to which Art. 64 of the Indian Limitation Act refers or the statement of a "balance due on a mutual, open and current account" to which Art. 85 of the aforesaid act refers cannot be the foundation of a suit and that the only use which can be made of an acknowledgment like the one in question is to save limitation under S. 19, Limitation Act provided it can be shown that all the items which had been brought into account were within limitation on the date of the acknowledgment. To my mind every one of these arguments assumes some fact or other and puts the plaintiff to proof of the contrary at a stage when it is impossible for him to do so and when it is highly unjust to require him to substantiate it. I see no reason why we should assume that the transactions between the parties were not of a character that the balance acknowledged cannot be said to be account stated or that it was not the balance of a mutual, open and current account. Such a plea should have been taken at the earliest stage to give the plaintiff notice of the ground on which his right of suit is challenged. If the plea had been taken he might have produced his accounts to show that it was a case of the kind which, according to defendant's argument, entitles the plaintiff to sue on a mere acknowledgment. I am of opinion that the defendant is not entitled to take the plea involved in the argument addressed to us. Nor is it open to the plaintiff or to the defendant to ask us to treat the acknowledgment as one merely saving limitation in respect of advances made prior to the acknowledgment, as the plaintiff's suit is not based on the original debt which became merged in the acknowledgment. The only question is whether the plaintiff is entitled to sue basing his claim on the acknowledgment itself. Granting it is open to the defendant at this stage to ask us to assume that the acknowledgment has no reference to such transactions as would make it an account stated or that the balance therein acknowledged is not the balance of a mutual, open and current account, I am, nevertheless, of opinion that it could be the foundation of a suit. It is clearly an acknowledgment of the description given in Art. 1, Sch. 1 of the Stamp Act which provides a duty of one anna for Rs.20 or more acknowledged therein. The language of the article is important and may be usefully quoted:-

> Acknowledgment of a debt exceeding twenty rupees in amount or value, written or signed by, or on behalf of, a debtor in order to supply evidence of such debt in any book (other than a banker's pass book) or on a separate piece of paper when such book or paper is left in the creditor's possession: provided that such acknowledgment does not contain any promise to pay the debt or any stipulation to pay interest or to deliver any goods or other property.

The acknowledgment in question fulfils all the requirements of the article. It contains no express promise to pay or any stipulation as to interest. There can be no doubt that it was intended by the parties to supply evidence of the debt and was not executed merely to satisfy the curiosity of one of the parties nor was it brought into existence for information only of the debtor or the creditor. It is a formal document handed over by the debtor to the creditor and bears the requisite stamp duty. I entertain no doubt that it was intended by the parties to embody an agreement that the amount therein entered should be taken to be due as the result of settlement of account which took place immediately before its execution. It was clearly intended by the parties that their mutual rights and obligations arising out of past dealings should stand on the new footing then agreed on. The bahi khata account was taken as closed.

We have the high authority of their Lordships of the Privy Council that an unconditional acknowledgment always implies a promise to pay. Apart from any authority, the only rational inference, to be drawn from the conduct of the parties to an unconditional and formal acknowledgment, is that the debtor agreed to pay, otherwise he would not have gone the length of signing a duly stamped paper and handing it over to his creditor. No other explanation is conceivable, and none has been suggested before us for the acknowledgment in suit. In no less than two cases their Lordships of the Privy Council have laid down the aforesaid rule: see Kalka Singh v. Paras Ram[1] and Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand[2] from which relevant passages were quoted by me in Govind Singh v. Bijay Bahadur Singh[3] in which the same question arose before this Bench which, as I read the judgment of my learned brother, held that an acknowledgment clear and unconditional can be the foundation of a suit, there being an implied promise to pay. It was said in course of the arguments before us that the observations of their Lordships were in the nature of obiter dicta and should not therefore be treated as any authority for the proposition that an unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay. It is not a mere casual or passing remark, but is part of a rule enunciated for the purposes of the case. It has never been the practice to treat dicta of the Judicial Committee going beyond the requirements of the case in which they were pronounced as no authority, otherwise most of what has been laid down by their Lordships in the cases of Sahu Ram Chander and Brij Narain in defining the rights of a Hindu father and other members of a joint Hindu family shall have to be disregarded. Their Lordships have quoted in the judgment in question English cases in which it was clearly laid down that an unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay and such cases,

---

[1] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 434 at 444

[2] I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047

[3] 1929 A. L. J. R. 1279 at 1282

Civil

1931

Abdul Rafiq
v.
Bhajan

Niamat-ullah, J.

at any rate, are quite good authority for the proposition. I would take the same view unaided by any case-law. I may, however, refer to Chuni Lal v. Laxman Govind[4] in which it was said that:

> If, then, the acknowledgment, which in this case was made before the limitation period expired, implies a promise to pay, I can see no reason why it should not form the basis of a suit.

The Privy Council case already referred to was accepted as an authority for holding that an unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay. That the debt acknowledged should not be a time-barred debt is made necessary not because it is treated as an acknowledgment under Section 19 of the Limitation Act which certainly saves the bar duly if the acknowledgment was made before the debt had become barred, but because of Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, which provides, inter alia, that > an agreement made without consideration is void unless it is a promise made in writing and signed by the person to be charged therewith to pay wholly or in part a debt of which the creditor might have enforced payment but for the law for the limitation of suit.

It follows that time-barred debt is not a valid consideration unless there is an express promise made in writing and signed by the debtor. If, therefore, the promise is only inferable, and not expressly made, as in case of an acknowledgment, it is open to the debtor to plead absence of consideration and to show that the debt had become barred by time on the date of the acknowledgment or to put the creditor to proof of the fact that the debt had not become barred by time, according as the onus is on one or the other (I leave alone the question of onus for the present). Acknowledgment being a new contract a simple plea of limitation will have a reference to the period commencing on its date. A suit brought within three years of its date to enforce the implied promise therein contained is not barred. That the original debt had become barred by time is not a plea of limitation in reference to the acknowledgment on which the suit is founded but is the background of the plea of want of consideration for the acknowledgment and should be taken in that form.

It may be said that an acknowledgment of this kind has no real value, as the necessity of proving that the original debt had not become barred by time exists in either case, the only difference being that where there is such acknowledgment it goes to prove consideration and in the other case it bears directly on the question of limitation. This objection is easily answered. Without acknowledgment the creditor has to prove his case item by item while if he has taken an acknowledgment after adjustment of past dealings the amount due is established by proof of it.

In the case before us, as already pointed out, the defendant did not take the plea of want of consideration or of limitation. He cannot at this stage call upon the plaintiff to establish that there was valid consideration by showing that the original debt had not become barred by time.

> Where a contract is alleged in a pleading, a bare denial of the same by the > opposite party shall be construed only as a denial in fact of the express contract alleged or of the matters of fact from which the same may be implied, and not as a denial of the legality or sufficiency in law of such contract.

[4] I. L. R. 46 Bom. 24

(Or. 6, R. 8, C. P. C.). Reference was made in this connection to Anup Singh v. Fateh Singh[5] which was a case of redemption of an ancient mortgage of which the date was not known and to prove his subsisting title, the plaintiff relied on an acknowledgment, made within 60 years of the suit, in which the factum of mortgage had been admitted. The argument was that in admitting the mortgage the mortgagor should be deemed to have also admitted that on the date of the admission the mortgage subsisted, that is, it had been made less than 60 years before the admission. On the construction of the wajibularz in which the admission was recorded the majority of the full bench held that the admission did not prove that the mortgage had been made less than 60 years before the date of the admission. Banerji, J. held that it did. In the first place, the acknowledgment in question in that case was one under S. 19, Limitation Act, which makes it essential that the party relying on an acknowledgment should prove, to start with, that at the date of the acknowledgment the claim acknowledged had not become barred by time. It was not a case where acknowledgment is a new contract in which limitation runs from its date. In the second place, there is nothing in that case to suggest that in no circumstances, howmuchsoever clear the language may be, an acknowledgment can serve the dual purpose of saving limitation and of establishing that the original liability had been incurred at a time which was within the prescribed period counted backwards from the date of the acknowledgment. In each case, it is a question of construction of the acknowledgment. I must, however, say that the acknowledgment in question before us does not expressly state that the original debt had not become barred by limitation before its date, but it is a legitimate inference that the defendant, who like all others is presumed to know the law of limitation applicable to his transactions, would not have deliberately accepted his liability, unless it existed and had not become barred by time. This could not be said in the reported case above referred to, as the occasion on which the acknowledgment was made was the inquiry into the origin of the defendants' possession which was admitted to be a mortgage transaction. The mortgagee did not say, and there was no occasion for him to declare, that his position at the date of the acknowledgment continued to be that of a mortgagee liable to be redeemed. In this case the debtor admits that a certain sum was due by him on the date of acknowledgment. As already said, it is a matter of inference of one fact from another, and no hard and fast rule can be laid down. As Piggott, J. put it:

> we are dealing with a question of circumstantial evidence, inferring one fact from another, applying the principles laid down in Section 114 of the Indian Evidence Act.

The case of Gobind Das v. Sarju Das[6] is authority only for the proposition that the promise in writing to pay a time-barred debt, as contemplated by S. 25 of the Indian Contract Act, should be an express promise

---

[5] 18 A. L. J. R. 789

[6] I. L. R. 30 All. 268

CIVIL 1931
ABDUL RAFIQ
v.
BHAJAN

Niamat-ullah, J.

and that a promise implied in an acknowledgment of time-barred debt is not enough. The result is that a time-barred debt is a valid consideration for a bond or a promissory note in which there is an express promise to pay but is no good consideration for an acknowledgment of the kind to which Art. 1, Sch. 1, Stamp Act, relates, which cannot contain an express promise to pay, otherwise the stamp of one anna, provided for by the aforesaid article, will not be enough. The case referred to above is no authority for the proposition that an unconditional acknowledgment does not imply a promise to pay or that it cannot be the basis of a suit even though the parties intended that it should be evidence of the amount due on its date from one to the other. This case might have been applicable to the present case if it could be said that the acknowledgment, now in question, was made in respect of a time-barred debt and was therefore without valid consideration; but, as already said, such a plea has not been raised in this case, and if it be entertained at this stage, sufficient opportunity should be afforded to the plaintiff to establish by evidence (which would include the recitals contained in the acknowledgment) that the debt was not barred by limitation and could form a valid consideration of the acknowledgment.

The only case which requires examination and which appears to be in conflict with the view I am disposed to take is Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[7]. In that case "the defendant having examined his account acknowledged a balance of Rs.549-11-0 to be due by him, and affixed his signature to the plaintiff's account book. Allowing for sums since received and adding interest to the balance, the plaintiff claimed Rs.508-11-0, stating that the cause of action accrued on July 21, 1897." No words were used, and the acknowledgment was to be inferred merely from the act of signing the balance in the creditor's book. No stamp appears to have been affixed. It was held that the transaction did not amount to 'account stated'. It was further held, on the authority of certain cases that "a mere acknowledgment did not create a new obligation." In the cases referred to only the question of limitation arise and they dealt with oral acknowledgments or those to be inferred from the act of the debtor in signing the creditor's book. Such cases are, therefore, authority for the proposition that an oral acknowledgment of that species did not save limitation. Incidentally it was said that such acknowledgment did not imply a fresh contract. The learned Judges who decided the case of Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal proceed to observe:

> no doubt, as pointed out in the Bombay case (Shanker v. Mukta, I. L. R. 22 Bom. 513) in England an acknowledgment, if unconditional, is held to be sufficient evidence of a new contract which can be sued upon, but there no difficulty arises with reference to the law of limitation because an unconditional acknowledgment takes a case out of the statute of limitation whether it is made before or after the period of limitation expires. In India it is otherwise. An acknowledgment in writing signed by a debtor provides a fresh period of limitation only if it is made before the period of limitations expires. After the period expires nothing short of a fresh contract will revive the debt and provide a fresh period of limitation. If it > were held that an acknowledgment of debt is evidence of a new contract which may be sued upon, then Sec. 19 of that Act would be a dead letter.

---

[7] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

I say with the utmost respect, that the last sentence is based on a misapprehension of the scope of Section 19 of the Limitation Act which contemplates a large variety of admissions which cannot amount to new contracts.

An acknowledgment under S. 19 of the Limitation Act may not be unconditional, need not be stamped, may be accompanied with a refusal to pay, and may be addressed to any person. An acknowledgment of debt in the above circumstances will be useful as saving limitation, but cannot be evidence of a new contract. It is difficult to see how S. 19 will be a dead letter if an unconditional acknowledgment of liability be taken to amount to a new contract. Moreover, S. 19 is not confined to acknowledgments in respect of debts, but applies to cases in which a plea of limitation is raised to bar a claim to movable or immovable property. It also applies to acknowledgments saving the bar of limitation in cases of applications for execution of decrees.

In Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand[8] the rule of English law according to which an unconditional acknowledgment of liability implies a promise to pay, was referred to, and their Lordships saw > no reason for drawing any distinction in this respect between the English and the Indian law. The question is whether a given state of circumstances falls within the natural meaning of a word, which is not a word of art but an ordinary word of the English language, and this question is clear of any extraneous complications imposed by the statute law either of England or India.

The rule of English law on the subject is thus stated in Halsbury's Law of England, Vol. 19, pp. 58-59:

> A debt may be taken out of the operation of the Limitation Act, 1623, by an express unconditional promise to pay, or by an unconditional acknowledgment of the debt from which a promise to pay is implied, or by a promise to pay on the fulfilling of a condition, or on the expiration of a specified time or the happening of a certain event, if the condition is fulfilled, or the specified time has elapsed or the specified event has happened. Time begins to run afresh from the making of such an unconditional promise or acknowledgment, or, in the case of a conditional or contingent promise, from the fulfilment of the condition, or the lapse of the specified time, or the happening of the specified event. The promise, express or implied, is a new contract, the consideration for which is the old debt, and such a promise constitutes a new cause of action.

This rule is based on a principle of universal application and common sense, and is not peculiar to any particular system of law. Where two persons examine their mutual dealings and one of them formally acknowledges his indebtedness to the other to a certain extent in a document which complies with all the formalities of the law, for example, Stamp Act, no other explanation than that he promised to pay the amount is conceivable. If in making the acknowledgment he has included time-barred debts which he might have well repudiated, it may still be open to him to plead failure of consideration to that extent. The creditor places himself in a

---

[8] I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL RAFIQ
v.
BHAJAN

Niamatullah, J.

disadvantageous position in this respect by omitting to take a bond containing an express promise to pay, which alone can successfully meet the plea of want of consideration. I take this to be the effect of S. 25 of the Indian Contract Act as interpreted by this Court in Gobind Das v. Sarju Das[9].

The case of Shanker v. Mukta[10] relied on by the learned Judges who decided Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[11] has since been dissented, from in a later case of the same Court, Chuni Lal v. Laxman Govind[12], following the Privy Council case of Muniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand[13].

The trend of later decisions in this Court has also been to the contrary. Muhammad Abid Husain Khan v. Bhagwan Das[14] was a case in which a suit had been based on a 'sarkhat' which acknowledged receipt of a sum of money, including a time-barred debt. It was held by a Division Bench that the transaction amounted to a new contract, and not merely to an acknowledgment of a statute-barred debt. The 'sarkhat' contained no express promise to pay.

Kallu v. Bhagirath Lal[15] is another case in which the same view was taken and which is irreconcilable with Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[16]. The nature of the acknowledgment is not stated in detail in the judgment, but the report of the facts clearly shows that it was not a case of "account stated" in the technical sense.

The only case which supports the opposite view is that of Dharamsala Lala Reoti Ram v. Lachhman Prasad[17] in which a learned single Judge of this Court applied Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[16] to a case in which a "sarkhat" containing an acknowledgment had been sued upon. The Privy Council case Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand[18], which had since been reported, and the cases of this Court, to which reference has already been made, were not brought to the notice of the learned Judge. As against it, reference may be made to Gobind Singh v. Bijay Bahadur Singh[19] decided by this very Bench.

For the reasons explained above, I am of opinion on principle and authority, that an unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay and affords a new cause of action to the obligee. Where the acknowledgment is not unconditional and is qualified by some recital or otherwise, different considerations may arise. In the absence of a plea by the defendant of want of consideration and of an alternative case by the plaintiff seeking a decree on the original debt I would have disposed of the case as it stands but I understand that my learned brother would like to remit certain issues which imply that the aforesaid pleas are now entertained. I do not object to this course being adopted and concur in the order he proposes to pass.

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—The facts of this case have been set forth in the

---

[9] I. L. R. 30 All. 268

[10] I. L. R. 32 Bom. 513

[11] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

[12] I. L. R. 46 Bom. 24

[13] I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047

[14] 5 I. C. 418.

[15] 46 I. C. 58

[16] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

[16] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

[17] 23 A. L. J. R. 900

[18] I. L. R. 33 Cal. 268

[19] 1929 A. L. J. R. 1279

CIVIL 1931
ABDUL RAFIQ
v.
BHAJAN
Suleman, A. C. J.

judgment of my learned brother which I have had the advantage of perusing. As much turns on the remarks made by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maniram Seth v. Seth Rupchand[20], which, even if obiter dicta, command our highest respect, I would begin with a consideration of that case.

Before the expiry of the period of limitation for the recovery of the debt, the representatives of the debtor in a written statement referring to the creditor acknowledged that ' for the last 5 years he had open and current accounts with the deceased.' Their Lordships accepted this as a clear admission that there were open and current accounts between the parties at the death of the debtor with the legal consequence of a right as against the other to an account, which necessarily involved an acknowledgment of liability to pay the debt, if the balance should be ascertained to be against him. As observed by their Lordships at the foot of page 1057 the only question was whether this was sufficient by the Indian law to take the case out of the statute. Their lordships at the bottom of that page emphasised 'it has been already pointed out that the acknowledgment was made before the statutory period had run out'. Their Lordships remarked that that requisite of Section 19 was complied with and so was the necessity of signature. As it was not necessary that the acknowledgment should be addressed to the person entitled, the bare question that remained was 'Whether an acknowledgment of liability, if the balance on investigation should turn out to be against the person making the acknowledgment, is sufficient'. It was with reference to this question that their Lordships immediately after stating the question remarked, "their Lordships can see no reason for drawing any distinction in this respect between the English and the Indian Law." Their Lordships then proceeded to state the English law as laid down by Lord Justice Mellish in re. Rivers Steamp Company, Mitchell's claim[21] that > an acknowledgment to take the case out of the Statute of Limitation, must be either one from which an absolute promise to pay can be inferred, or, secondly, an unconditional promise to pay the specific debt, or, thirdly, there must be conditional promise to pay the specific debt, and evidence that the condition has been performed.

This statement of the law was immediately followed by the remark > an unconditional acknowledgment has always been held to imply a promise to pay, because that is a natural inference, if nothing is said to the contrary.

There is no doubt that the conditions laid down by Lord Justice Mellish under which an acknowledgment would take the case out of the statute of limitation were conditions necessary in England and not conditions as are required by the Indian Limitation Act, under which an acknowledgment has to be made within the period of limitation. The remark of their Lordships that 'an unconditional acknowledgment has always been held to imply a promise to pay' was obviously made with reference to the case-law in England as the whole paragraph refers to the English Law. This is further clear from the passage at the bottom of page 1059 'an acknowledgment unconditional in the first instance, from which, in English law, a promise

---

[20] 21 I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047

[21] L. R. 6 Ch. App. 822, 828

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL RAFIQ
v.
BHAJAN

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

to pay has always been inferred.' Their Lordships further observed:

> The Indian Limitation Act, Section 19, however, says nothing about a promise to pay and requires only a definite admission of liability, and then concluded that > there was no reason for departing from the English principle that an unqualified admission and an admission qualified by a condition, which is fulfilled, stand upon precisely the same footing.

As their Lordships had previously pointed out that in the case before them the acknowledgment had been made before the period had run out, and that requisite of Section 19 was complied with, the rule applied to a case where no question of limitation arises.

It is therefore clear to me that this case cannot be extended so as to be an authority for the proposition that in India every unconditional acknowledgment implies a promise to pay to such an extent, as to override the provisions of the Indian Limitation Act, the Indian Contract Act, the Indian Stamp Act, or the Indian Evidence Act.

That, if the context indicates the contrary, an unqualified admission of a debt does not necessarily imply an unconditional promise to pay, is shown by the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Kalka Singh v. Paras Ram[22].

It seems to me that it would not be correct to say that every acknowledgment of liability amounts to a new contract. There may be recitals in the written acknowledgment or there may be other direct or circumstantial evidence, which may show that the transaction in which the acknowledgment was made amounted in reality to a novation of the contract for a valid consideration. A new contract may well be entered into under which there is a fresh adjustment of rights and liabilities which would amount to a fresh agreement. In the case of Gobind Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh[23], I pointed out that the contents of a receipt or other circumstances may point to the conclusion that there was a fresh promise to pay which, if for consideration, would be a new agreement. I held in that case that the previous debt had either been acknowledged afresh or had been substituted by a new contract including a fresh promise to pay. Similarly in Muhammad Abid Husain Khan v. Bhagwan Das[24], the circumstances showed that the transaction by which a sarkhat was executed amounted to a new contract and was not merely an acknowledgment of the barred debt. But in order to become a new contract it is necessary that the circumstances should show consideration other than a mere implied promise to pay a time barred-debt.

As their Lordships of the Privy Council remarked in Maniram Seth's case, it is the natural inference from an unconditional acknowledgment that the person who acknowledges, promises to pay the debt, that is what every honest man would mean to do. An acknowledgment would ordinarily imply a promise to pay. The whole object of acknowledging a debt would be an implied promise to pay or, at any rate to give a fresh start for purposes of limitation.

---

[22] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 434 at 444

[23] 1929 A. L. J. R. 1279 at 1284-85

[24] 5 I. C. 418

But limitation only bars the remedy and does not extinguish the debt. A promise to pay a debt does not therefore necessarily imply an admission that the debt on the date of the acknowledgment had not become barred by time. Many a person would consider a plea of limitation to be a dishonest plea, and may unhesitatingly promise to pay a debt knowing that it is time-barred and is not recoverable through a court of law. In Fatimatul-nissa Begam v. Sundar Das[25] their Lordships of the Privy Council pointed out that people may admit liability even though a statute has actually barred it, but such an admission is ineffectual in law by the express terms of the statute. As a person may promise to pay a debt which has become barred by time and also a debt which is not time-barred, there can be no presumption that the promise to pay it necessarily implies an admission that the debt was not time-barred at the time.

The Indian Legislature in order to protect debtors has considered it necessary to make acknowledgments ineffective, unless they have been made before the expiry of the period of limitation. Section 19 of the Indian Limitation Act undoubtedly shows that the Legislature contemplated that there may be an acknowledgment of a time-barred debt, and enacted that such an acknowledgment would be of no avail. In order to enforce the law of limitation strictly, it has thought fit to throw on the creditor the burden of proving that the acknowledgment was made within time. Mere acknowledgment is not enough under Section 19 unless it is shown that it had been made before the expiration of the prescribed period. No doubt Section 19 is of a much wider application and covers cases other than those of mere acknowledgments of debts, but it cannot be denied that the acknowledgments of money debts are equally governed by the provisions of that Section. It follows that it is not sufficient for the plaintiff to merely prove the acknowledgment of liability to pay a money debt and throw the burden of showing that the acknowledgment was made beyond time on the debtor by invoking the aid of a general principle of common law that an acknowledgment necessarily implies a promise to pay it. The aid of any such principle cannot be sought to override the express provisions of the statute of limitation and be made the excuse for casting the onus of proof on the defendant. If such an indirect evasion of the law were permitted, it would have the effect of nullifying the express provisions of Section 19 so far at any rate as acknowledgments of money debts are concerned.

A second difficulty in the way of assuming that the Common Law principle is of universal application in India arises under the provisions of the Indian Contract Act. Even if an acknowledgment of a liability implies a promise to pay, such a promise has no binding effect unless it is for a fresh consideration so as to amount to a novation of the contract or is embodied in a duly signed written document. Under Section 25(3) an agreement to pay a time-barred debt, unless it is made in writing and signed by the person to be charged therewith or by his duly authorised agent, is one made without consideration and is void. Every one seems to be agreed that the implied promise to pay involved in a mere acknowledgment would not be sufficient under Section 25 of the Indian Contract

[25] I. L. R. 27 Cal. 1004 at 1012

Civil

1931

Abdul Rafiq
v.
Bhajan

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Act. To avoid such a result, recourse must be had to reading Section 25 as if the word 'express' were interpolated before the word 'promise' so as to exclude implied promise. The distinction between Section 25 of the Contract Act and Section 19 of the Limitation Act is obviously this that in the case of the former a duly written and signed promise to pay a debt is good, whether the promise was made before or after the expiry of the period of limitation. In the case covered by the latter section the acknowledgment is utterly useless unless it was made before the expiration of the prescribed period.

Once it is conceded that the supposed implied promise would not fulfil the requirements of Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, then apart from any question of burden of proof which I shall consider later, the assumption that there is such an implication is really of no avail. Let us leave aside the cases where a new contract has been made. An acknowledgment of liability may have been made either before the period of limitation or after its expiry. In the first case, it is fully sufficient because a written acknowledgment of that kind gives a fresh start for limitation, and it is wholly unnecessary to treat it as a fresh promise to pay which can be independently enforced. In the second case, it is useless as an acknowledgment and it is equally ineffective as an implied promise to pay a time-barred debt. An implied promise to pay a time-barred debt admittedly does not amount to a valid agreement or to a fresh binding contract, unless of course there be some other consideration for it.

In the interest of debtors the legislature has thrown the burden of proof on the creditor that the acknowledgment was made within the period of limitation. Apart from anything that there may be in the language of the acknowledgment itself, I see absolutely no justification for holding that a simple acknowledgment of a liability to pay a debt throws the burden of proof that the debt was barred on the person who has acknowledged it. Such a conclusion would, in my opinion, be directly opposed to the express intention of the legislature as shown by Section 19. There is no rule which allows of any Common Law principle to circumvent a statute law. The burden of proof cannot be made to shift by supposing not only that there was an implied promise to pay, but further supposing that there was an admission that the debt had really not become barred by time and was still capable of being enforced in a court of law. When Section 19 of the Limitation Act requires proof that the period had not expired, it would be contrary to the provisions of Sections 101 to 104 of the Indian Evidence Act to require that the burden lies on the defendant who acknowledged the liability.

It seems to me that the opinion expressed by the majority of the Full Bench in Anup Singh v. Fateh Chand[26] is directly in support of this view, and so long as that decision is not overruled by a higher authority, I must loyally follow it. With regard to the acknowledgment of the mortgage which came up for consideration before the Full Bench, it was strenuously argued on behalf of the appellant that it was an acknowledgment of an existing liability, which raised the presumption that it was made within time, and therefore it was for the defendant to prove by positive evidence that the acknowledgment was beyond time. The majority repelled this contention. From the acknowledgment of the mortgage, Piggott, J. declined to infer an admission that the mortgage was redeemable in law. He remarked:—

[26] 18 A. L. J. R. 789

> In one sense it is possibly correct to say that a man does not ordinarily acknowledge a liability which he knows to have become statute-barred; but the possibility of such an acknowledgment was clearly contemplated by the Legislature when drawing up the relevant clause of the Indian Limitation Act. It required to be laid down that in order to save limitation an acknowledgment must be made before the period of limitation in respect of the liability so acknowledged had expired; and in so doing the Legislature clearly contemplated the possibility of acknowledgments being made of statute-barred debts. If the courts are in a general way to act upon the sort of principle involved in the words which I have quoted from the judgment of Mr. Justice Pearson, the result will be that an acknowledgment made within sixty years of the limitation period prescribed for the institution of any suit will have to be treated as ordinarily sufficient to save limitation, unless and until the party bound by that acknowledgment is able to prove affirmatively that it was made beyond limitation. I do not think this is a sound principle, or was intended by the Legislature.

Similarly Walsh, J. observed:

> I agree with my brother Piggott, that the express language of Section 19 of the Limitation Act contemplates the possibility of an acknowledgment of liability given after the expiration of the statutory period and shows by its terms that a plaintiff before he can succeed upon an acknowledgment at all must establish that it was made before the expiration of the statutory period. In this case it is not suggested that he has established that fact by any direct evidence. In my opinion no inference can be drawn from the acknowledgment, however fully it may have admitted liability, so far as the actual date of the original mortgage is concerned.

The question whether a mere acknowledgment or a simple receipt can be made the basis of a suit is one more of procedure than of substantive law. If the transaction has amounted to a new contract it can undoubtedly be made the basis of a suit. But if it is nothing more than a mere acknowledgment then, if made beyond the period of limitation, it cannot be the basis of a fresh suit which can succeed. If, however, the acknowledgment had been made within limitation, then the cause of action is kept alive and all that would be at most necessary would be an amendment of the plaint, if the original debt is not referred to therein. The learned Judges of the Bombay High Court in Chunni Lal v. Lakshman[27], although they expressed the opinion that the acknowledgment having been made before the limitation period had expired, implied an unconditional promise to pay and could be made the basis of the suit, also remarked at page 28 that 'in any event the only penalty which could fall on the plaintiff would be to have to amend his plaint so as to implead the previous transaction.' It is thus obvious that the question whether an acknowledgment can be made the basis of a suit is not of considerable importance provided it was made when the limitation had not expired. There is a preponderance of authority of this Court that a mere acknowledgment is not always evidence of a new contract which can be the basis of a suit. Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[28]. As a single Judge I felt myself bound to follow this Division Bench ruling in Dharamshala of Lala Reoti Ram v. Lachchman Prasad[29]. I may also refer to the case of Gobind Das v. Sarju Das[30]. In an earlier case Shanker v. Mukta[31] the Bombay High Court considered that the suit could not be brought by treating an acknowledgment as a fresh contract.

[27] I. L. R. 46 Bom. 24

[28] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

As indicated above, I consider this question as one of minor importance for the ultimate success or failure of the suit will depend on whether the acknowledgment had been made within or without or beyond the prescribed period of limitation.

Yet another difficulty would be created by the provisions of the Stamp Act, if the contrary view were to be upheld. Article 49 of the Indian Stamp Act prescribes a duty payable up to four annas for promissory notes payable on demand, while only one anna is required for an acknowledgment under Article 1 or a receipt under Article 53. If a mere acknowledgment or a receipt implies such a promise to pay as can be made the basis of a fresh suit, a creditor can evade the Stamp law and either not take a promissory note at all and evade payment of the necessary duty or even withhold an insufficiently stamped promissory note, and simply bring a suit on the basis of an acknowledgment or a receipt as the case may be. Can he be allowed to set at naught the requirement of the payment of the necessary duty under Article 49 and escape by paying only one anna? It may also be pointed out that the definition of acknowledgment of a debt in Article 1 contains a proviso that such an acknowledgment does not contain any promise to pay the debt. To get over the difficulty created by this definition one would have to say that an acknowledgment contains an implied promise to pay but the Article requires an express promise.

The case of Kallu v. Bhagirath Lal[32] did not lay down any new principle, but merely followed the case of Bhola Nath v. Net Ram[33]. The latter case was in no way inconsistent with Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[34] which had been professedly distinguished. The learned Judge pointed out that in Ganga Prasad's case no evidence had been given regarding the acknowledgment of the balance due which was entered and signed in the plaintiff's account book. On the other hand in Bhola Nath's case the suit was for monies lent and advanced. In addition to the written acknowledgment of the account books of the plaintiffs, there was oral evidence to prove the plaintiff's claim. That evidence established that the amount claimed was due. It was accordingly held that the acknowledgment was an acknowledgment of the accuracy of the details of the accounts as appearing in the plaintiff's books and that Ganga Prasad's case had no application and the suit could not fail.

In view of all the points stated above I am not able to depart from the course of decisions of this Court and hold that by invoking the Common Law principle that an acknowledgment implies a promise to pay, we can either treat every acknowledgment of liability as a fresh binding contract for consideration or bring about the shifting of the onus of proof on the opposite party by its means.

---

[29] 23 A. L. J. R. 900

[30] I. L. R. 30 All. 268

[31] I. L. R. 22 Bom. 513

[32] 40 I. C. 58

[33] 3 A. L. J. R. 801

[34] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

I agree with my learned brother that the judgment of the Judge of Small Cause Court is very unsatisfactory. Although he remarked that he was not satisfied that the plaintiff had succeeded in proving that the defendant owed him the debt for which the acknowledgment was executed, he also held that the receipt had been duly executed by the defendant. He has not at all considered the question whether the transaction in the course of which the receipt was executed amounted to a new contract between the parties. Nor has he applied his mind to the question whether the receipt executed by the defendant had been executed before the period of limitation for the original debt had expired.

I would accept the translation of the receipt as made by my learned brother with this exception that the original words "Bad Fahmid Hisab Kitab" literally mean 'after understanding the accounts; and not necessarily a settlement or adjustment of account. The verb "Fahmidan' means 'to understand'. I am not prepared to assume, in the absence of a clear finding, that there was necessarily a novation of the original contract.

I would accordingly require findings on the two following issues:—

1. Did the transaction, in the course of which the receipt signed by the defendant was executed, amount to a fresh contract between the parties for valid consideration, or whether the receipt was a mere acknowledgment of the amount due as shown by the account?

2. If the receipt was nothing more than a mere acknowledgment of liability was it executed before the expiration of the period of limitation during which the debt could be recovered?

BY THE COURT—The following issues are remitted to the lower court for findings to be returned within two months. On receipt of the findings ten days shall be allowed for objections.

ISSUES

1. Did the transaction, in the course of which the receipt signed by the defendant was executed, amount to a fresh contract between the parties for valid consideration, or whether the receipt was a mere acknowledgment of the amount due as shown by the account?

2. If the receipt was nothing more than a mere acknowledgment of liability, was it executed before the expiration of the period of limitation during which the debt could be recovered?

Parties shall be at liberty to produce fresh evidence if so advised.

Civil

1931

June 2

Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Young, J.

MOHAMMAD ABDUL JALIL KHAN (Defendant)
versus
MOHAMMAD ABDUS SALAM KHAN (Plaintiff)*

Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Sec. 226(2)—Suit for profits against lambardar—When decree to be passed on basis of gross rental—Collections exceed 75% of gross rental—Presumption of no negligence—Sec. 225 (2)—Co-sharer entitled to simple interest at 1% p. m. on net profits—From date when profits became divisible till actual realisation—Sec. 225 (1)—Profits divisible on a prescribed date—Profits accrue from day to day and vesting not postponed—Principle of Sec. 36 Transfer of Property Act applicable.

In a suit for profits by a co-sharer against the lambardar, if the lambardar succeeds in showing the actual collections, then unless those collections are so low that the court may presume negligence on the part of the lambardar, the decree has to be made on the basis of the actual collections and not on the gross rentals. On the other hand, if the discrepancy between the gross rental and the actual collection is very large, then, in the absence of any satisfactory explanation on the part of the lambardar why he was not able to collect a larger amount, the presumption would be that he was negligent and the decree should be on the basis of gross rental. In the absence of any definite evidence either way, those cases in which collections exceed 75% of the gross rental should be taken as cases in which no negligence can be presumed, and in cases in which collections are less than 75% there is prima facie a presumption of such negligence.

There is no reason why the principle underlying Sec. 225 should not be applied to future interest after the decree up to the date of realisation. Accordingly in a suit for profits against the lambardar, the plaintiff co-sharer is entitled to simple interest at the rate of 1% per mensem on his share of net profits from the date when they became divisible till actual realisation.

Applying the principle of Sec. 36, Transfer of Property Act, the profits accrue from day to day and become vested in the co-sharers, and although the time for payment is postponed for the sake of convenience till the following August, it does not imply that the right to a share in the income does not vest till the arrival of that date.

Litigation is not a part of the ordinary expenditure in the management of a mahal; but where it is unavoidable, it is a necessary part of the expenditure incurred by a lambardar and it is undoubtedly incurred for the benefit of the entire coparcenary body, and there is no reason why the lambardar should not be credited with the taxable costs of the litigation.

First Appeal from a decree of Mr. Abdul Wahid Khan, Assistant Collector first class of Bulandshahr.

T. A. K. Sherwani for the appellant.

A. M. Khwaja for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Sulaiman, A. C. J.—Three out of the 34 appeals which were connected with one another were dismissed by us yesterday, as no appeal lay to the High Court. These appeals arise out of suits for profits brought by one brother as co-sharer against the eldest brother as the lambardar.

---

*F. A. 402 of 1927

They relate to different mohals, but the points which arise in most of them are more or less common.

In some cases the defendant was not allowed to file his written statements as applications for adjournment of the cases on his behalf were rejected. In two cases he filed his written statements which gave us an idea of the pleas raised on his behalf.

It is convenient to dispose of the points which are common in all these appeals.

The plaintiff claimed his shares of profits on the basis of gross rentals. The court below has given him decree on the basis of the gross rentals in all the cases. It is quite clear that if the defendant succeeds in showing the actual collections, then unless those collections are so low that the court may presume negligence on the part of the lambardar, the decrees have to be made on the basis of the actual collections and not on the gross rentals. On the other hand, if the discrepancy between the gross rental and the actual collection is very large, then, in the absence of any satisfactory explanation on the part of the lambardar why he was not able to collect a larger amount, the presumption would be that he was negligent and the decree should be on the basis of gross rental. In the absence of any definite evidence either way, we would roughly take those cases in which collections exceed 75% as cases in which no negligence can be presumed. In cases in which collections are less than 75% of the rent there is prima facie a presumption of such negligence.

The defendant further claimed that under a deed of relinquishment executed by the mother and other lady relations of the parties there was a liability to pay certain annual allowances out of the income of the entire estate and that the defendant had paid these allowances. He claimed a set-off on account of these allowances in the suit for profits. The assistant collector has rightly disallowed this set-off. It is quite obvious that no set-off can be allowed in the revenue court for any amount that is not due under a decree, unless the amount can be treated as part of the ordinary expenses of collection. In this particular case it is impossible to treat the payment of these allowances as an expenditure incurred in the collection of profits because the amount has to be paid in a lump sum out of the entire income of the estate and it is not easy to apportion it separately for each village. Strictly speaking it is a discharge of liability under a registered deed of hypothecation and not a part of the ordinary expenses of collection. It is not necessary for us to express any final opinion whether the defendant will have a separate remedy to recover these allowances in case he has paid them. It may be that inasmuch as there was a joint liability under a registered deed of hypothecation creating a charge on part of the estate, the defendant as one of the co-debtors having paid off the amount has his remedy by a suit for contribution by enforcement of that charge, for which the period of limitation may be 12 years. As mentioned above we would leave this point open. We have however no doubt in our minds that the allowances cannot be set off in these suits.

The next point in dispute is the amount of the expenditure which the lambardar can claim from his co-sharers. Oral evidence was led on his behalf to show the number of employees like siyaha navis, karinda, peon,

CIVIL

1931

MOHAMMAD ABDUL JALIL KHAN
v.
MD. ABDUS SALAM KHAN

Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

etc., who were employed in the estate for the purpose of collecting rents. It is clear from the evidence that the same staff is employed for a number of villages and it is very difficult to apportion expenditure incurred in the payment of their salaries for each village. In some cases the total income of the village is very small, in other cases it is very large. On the other hand, it is quite clear that some staff must be employed by the lambardar defendant so that he may successfully make collections in so many villages which are scattered all over the district. We think that it would be highly impracticable to go into each case separately and apportion the expenditure separately. The most just and equitable way would be to fix upon a rough flat rate which would cover the expenses and give satisfactory result. Having considered the matter we are of opinion that in addition to the lambardari dues of 5% which the lambardar is entitled to get under the Land Revenue Act he should get 5% on the actual collections made by him towards the expenses of collection.

Another point in dispute between the parties is the costs of litigation. It is quite clear that litigation is not a part of the ordinary expenditure in the management of a mohal. In some years litigation may be very expensive and heavy and in others it may be practically nil. Where it is unavoidable, it is a necessary part of the expenditure incurred by a lambardar and it is undoubtedly incurred for the benefit of the entire coparcenary body. There is no reason why the defendant should not be credited with the taxable costs of the litigation incurred. As regards the costs incurred out of court there would be considerable uncertainty, part of which ought to be included in the salaries of the staff. We therefore think that the defendant should be allowed credit for any taxable costs of litigation which have remained unrealised from the tenants of the various villages in suits by or against them, provided the same are shown by documentary evidence.

Another point in dispute between the parties is as to whether the plaintiff is entitled to interest on the arrears of profit. The court below has allowed him interest at the rate of 6¼ per cent. It has not given any reasons why the rate of 1 per cent per mensem, which is specified in Section 225 of the Agra Tenancy Act of 1926, was not adhered to. There is now a statutory provision which entitles a co-sharer to claim interest on arrears of profit as 1 per cent per mensem. After accounts have been taken, and an amount has been found due to the plaintiff, there is no reason why he should be debarred from claiming the rate which is allowed by the Tenancy Act. We, therefore, think that there can be no doubt that the plaintiff should be given interest at the rate of 1 per cent per mensem on the principal amount of the net arrears of profit found due to him from the date when they became divisible till at least the date of the decree of this Court.

If we were to consolidate the principal sum and interest up to the date of decree, we might under Section 34 C. P. C. have allowed future interest at the rate of 6 per cent on the consolidated amount. The learned Advocate for the plaintiff, however, urges that the plaintiff does not claim interest on the consolidated amount, but should be given 1 per cent per mensem simple interest on the principal amount of arrears up to the date

CIVIL

1931

MOHAMMAD ABDUL JALIL KHAN
v.
MD. ABDUS SALAM KHAN

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

of realisation. We see no reason why the principle underlying Section 225 should not be applied to future interest after the decree up to the date of realisation. We would accordingly allow the plaintiff simple interest at the rate of 1 per cent on his share of net profits from the date when they became divisible until actual realisation.

The learned advocate for the defendant contends that the plaintiff had previously brought a suit for accounts against the defendant treating him as his trustee and agent for the period of the alleged agency, which was dismissed because the court was satisfied that the plaintiff had himself removed the necessary papers, and that accordingly he is not entitled to sue for profits in the revenue court for the same period over again for which his civil suit had been instituted. On the other hand, the learned advocate for the plaintiff replies that the defendant held a dual capacity of the plaintiff's agent and the lambardar and he was not bound to pay the profits as lambardar to the plaintiff co-sharer, whose agent he may be supposed to have been, before the date on which the profits became divisible. Admittedly the profits became divisible as between the lambardar and the co-sharers on August 1, following the year for which they are claimed. In the previous suit the plaintiff had alleged that the agency of the defendant terminated either on November 22, 1924 or December 19, 1924, on account of certain letters sent by the plaintiff revoking the agency. This fact was denied by the defendant. The learned Subordinate Judge in his findings on issues Nos. 3 and 15 came to the conclusion > that the defendant continued to manage the estate as an agent on behalf of the plaintiff after the expiry of the period of the minority up to November or December 1924, when the plaintiff expressly revoked the powers given to him by means of written letters.

In the earlier portion of his judgment he pointed out that the plaintiff alleged that he had sent a letter on (?) November 22, 1924 and one on December 19, 1924, and that in this last mentioned letter he had clearly expressed his intention of putting an end to the relationship of agent which up to that time existed between the parties. There is no doubt that the learned Subordinate Judge was inclined to take the view that the agency terminated on December 19, 1924; but his actual finding was in the alternative, namely, that it terminated either in November or December 1924.

The previous civil suit was for recovery of the amount found due on the taking of the accounts between the parties, and it was up to the end of the period of the agency. The defendant no doubt held two capacities. If the plaintiff had sued him in the revenue court merely as a lambardar, his suit for recovery of profits as a co-sharer would have been premature if it were brought before August 1, following. But the suit was not brought by a co-sharer against the lambardar under the Tenancy Act, but it was by a principal as against an agent or trustee in the civil court. If the suit had been decreed, the civil court would without doubt have passed a preliminary decree for an account to be taken up to the end of the period of agency which would have been either November or December 1924. The decree of the first court came to be passed long after the expiry of August 1, 1925 when the profits against the lambardar had also become divisible.

It seems to us that the date fixed for the division of profits is nothing more than a date fixed for the payment of those profits. That date does not imply that the right to a share in the income does not vest till the arrival of that date. The profits accrue from day to day and become vested in the co-sharers, although the time for payment is postponed for the sake of convenience till the following August.

Section 36 of the Transfer of Property Act in terms can not apply to this case, because that deals with the case of a transfer of immovable property. But the principle underlying that section is of a wider scope and certainly lays down the rule regulating the rights of proprietors to the receipt of income from their properties. As between two rival owners, in the absence of a contract or local usage to the contrary, all rents, annuities, pensions, dividends and other periodical payments in the nature of income accrue due from day to day, and are apportionable accordingly, but they are payable on the days appointed for the payment thereof. Under that principle, although the day for the payment of the share or income may not have arrived the income does accrue from day to day and is apportionable accordingly, although the actual apportionment would not in fact be given effect to till that date has arrived.

It seems to us that if it were established that the defendant, who was, according to the view taken in the civil suit, acting as the agent and trustee of the plaintiff, and in fact as the managing member of the family had in reality realised the income of the estate during the period of his agency, then, even though the actual date for the division of the profits as between co-sharers and lambardar arrived after the expiry of the period of the agency, he would have been liable to render accounts for the plaintiff's share in the net profits. The civil court in its decree for accounts would undoubtedly have made the defendant liable to pay to the plaintiff his due share in the net profits of all the income that was realised by him during the period of his agency. The previous suit, therefore, did involve a claim of the plaintiff for recovery of his share in the net income actually realised by the defendant before his agency terminated. Unfortunately for the plaintiff the civil suit was dismissed and no relief was granted to him. The result, therefore, is that the plaintiff's claim for recovery of his share in the income received by the defendant during the period of his agency was made in the civil court, and was dismissed. It seems to us that the plaintiff cannot now be allowed to come to the revenue court and ask for profits for a period which would overlap, that is to say, he cannot be given a decree for his share of the profits with regard to the period which was included in the former civil suit.

In the present suits the plaintiff is claiming profits for the whole of 1332 and 1333 Faslis. Kharif of 1332 Fasli terminated on December 31, 1924, and would therefore include a part of the period which was under consideration in the civil suit. We think that the plaintiff cannot be allowed to claim profits for that part. On the other hand, if the defendant did not actually realise any part of the profits before the termination of his agency, and those profits were realised subsequently, it cannot be assumed that that amount had been claimed in the previous suit. The plaintiff, therefore, would not be disentitled from claiming his share of such profits.

By the expression 'net income' or ' net profits' which we have used, we mean the plaintiff's share in the net profits of the village after deducting the proportionate amounts of the Government revenue, the lambardar's dues, the expenses of collection and the costs of the litigation that may be allowed. The next point in dispute in the remaining cases is as to whether the defendant had been rightly prevented from filing his written statements in some of these suits. The suits were filed on December 23, 1926, and the Christmas holidays followed. On January 5, 1927 an application was made on behalf of the defendant to the revenue court in which it was admitted that he had knowledge of the institution of these 34 suits. Subsequently on January 15, 1927 the suits were transferred to the court of another assistant collector on an application of the plaintiff for which apparently notice was not issued to the defendant. The new court issued summonses to the defendant fixing February 10. These summonses were sent to him at his village Dharampur and not at his house in Aligarh. On January 21, 1927 the process server reported that the defendant was not at Dharampur but had gone to Aligarh and he accordingly brought back the summonses. The reports did not say that he had shown these summonses to any of the servants of the defendant or to any of the inmates of the house at Dharampur or that he had affixed copies of them at the door of the defendant's house. In the application before the court the plaintiff also admitted that the defendant was residing at Aligarh. On an application by the plaintiff the cases were again transferred to another court on February 8, 1927. Again there was no notice of this transfer given to the defendant formally. Curiously enough the court did not make any order that summonses should be issued to the defendant according to his address at Aligarh, but ordered that there should be substituted service. It directed that the summonses should be published in an Aligarh paper. The order was passed on February 10, 1927, the publication appeared in the paper bearing the date February 13, 1927 fixing February 15, 1927 for the hearing. On February 14 an application was filed on behalf of the defendant stating that he had no knowledge of the suits from before and that time should be given to him for filing written statements. The court did not consider that there was a satisfactory explanation and rejected the application not on that date but either on February 15 or 16. In these circumstances the defendant was not allowed to file his written statements. After considering the circumstances we have come to the conclusion that it would be unfair to the defendant to debar him from taking any special pleas that may be open to him in addition to those which he had already taken in the suits which were contested.

Having dealt with the general aspects of the case and the points which were common to most of the appeals, we would now take up these appeals separately. We have already noted that three appeals, namely, Nos. 380, 390 and 396 of 1927 have already been dismissed.

First appeals Nos. 402 and 403 of 1927 arise out of suit in which the defendant had an opportunity of filing his written statements and of leading evidence. No case is made out for allowing him to produce any fresh evidence. The collections in these cases were much more than 75 per cent of the gross rentals and there is no justification for decreeing the claim on the basis of gross rentals. The defendant will however get 5 per cent on

CIVIL

1931

MOHAMMAD ABDUL JALIL KHAN
v.
MD. ABDUS SALAM KHAN

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

the actual collections as his expenses in addition to the 5 per cent of the Government revenue as the lambardar's dues. But in these appeals the plaintiff has filed no cross-objections as regards any further interest. He is not therefore entitled to any interest in excess of that awarded by the decree. But the plaintiff is entitled to support the decree of the court below even on a ground which was decided against him. We are therefore inclined to think that he should be given interest at the rate quoted above provided that the principal amount plus interest up to the date of the first court's decree does not exceed the amount of that decree in each case. Further interest in excess of that allowed by the judgment in each case will not be allowed. If on the account being taken afresh it is found that the amount due to the plaintiff up to the date of the first court's decree is less than that awarded by that court, the plaintiff would be entitled to an addition on account of the extra rate of interest up to 12 per cent per annum calculated on the principal amount of profits from August 1 following the year for which they were due till the first court's decree. In case the result is an excess amount, the plaintiff will not be entitled to the excess, but the decree of the court below will be maintained. The costs in both the courts will be in proportion to success and failure.

In the remaining appeals we have already held that the defendant is entitled to file written statements and produce evidence. The question of the rate of interest is left open in these cases which are to be sent back and in which the defendant is allowed to file written statements. As the cases have been disposed of without this opportunity having been accorded to him, we must allow these appeals and setting aside the decrees of the court below sent the cases back to that court for disposal according to law. The costs in these cases will abide the result.

RAGHUNATH BARAIE (and after his death) RAM RAJI
AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
JAINARAIN BARAIE (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL

1931

June 25

MUKERJI, J.
ALLEN, J.

Hindu Law—Widow—Gift by—Suit for declaration by reversioner—That gift void after widow's life-time—Whether court should grant declaration—Specific Relief Act, Sec. 42—Declaration to be refused at a preliminary stage—And not by court of appeal.

A deed of gift by a Hindu widow could not possibly be held to be evidence of alienation for value for purposes of necessity, and taken by itself the document could not stand as a deed of title; and if the next reversioner files a suit for a declaration that the deed of gift was void after the lifetime of the widow, the court should refuse the declaration. Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden, 17 A. L. J. R. 536 at 549 relied on.

Where a declaration is to be refused, it should be refused at a preliminary stage of litigation and not by a court of appeal after the issues on fact and law have been decided. Isri Dat Koer v. Hansbutti Koerain, 10 I. A. 150= 10 Cal. 324 approved.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU SARUP NARAIN, Second Addi-

---

*S. A. 436 of 1929

CIVIL

1931

RAGHUNATH v. JAINARAIN

Mukerji, J.

tional Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur, confirming a decree of MAULVI MAZHAR HUSAIN, Second Additional Munsif.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the appellants.

P. L. Banerji and M. A. Aziz for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

MUKERJI, J.—This is an appeal by one who was the defendant No. 1 in the suit. The plaintiff-respondent Jai Narain propounded a pedigree printed at page 6 of the record and said that he was the next reversioner to the estate of Harnandan, the last male owner of the property in suit. He complained that the mother of Harnandan, Mst. Batasi, the respondent No. 2, who was in possession had executed a deed of gift in favour of the defendant No. 1 who was her brother's son, that this deed of gift was void after the lifetime of the widow, and the plaintiff, accordingly, asked for a declaration to that effect. The defence was that the defendant No. 1 had been adopted by Harnandan's father, Sarup. The suit was decreed by the courts below, and a second appeal was filed on the ground that on the pedigree propounded and found established by the court below the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit for they are no bandhus.

The point taken is covered by the decision in Ram Sia v. Bua[1]. No attempt has been made to show that that decision to which one of us was a party was wrong. This concludes the appeal.

During the hearing a point arose, namely, whether it was open to the plaintiff to maintain a suit for a declaration seeing that the alienation was by way of a gift in which there was no question of legal necessity, and, therefore, there was no object to be gained by filing a suit for a pure declaration.

There seems to be great force in this point, but the fact remains that this point was not raised before. In Isri Dut Koer v. Hansbutti Koerian[2] their Lordships of the Privy Council remarked that where a declaration is to be refused, it should be refused at a preliminary stage of litigation and not by a court of appeal after the issues on fact and law have been decided. Further, it appears that in Saudagar Singh v. Pardip Narayan[3] their Lordships of the Privy Council approved of a declaratory decree having been granted in favour of certain plaintiffs, where the only transfer impeached was a tamlik-namah or a deed declaring that the transferee was the owner of the property.

It has been argued with a good deal of force by Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha that their Lordships themselves in Rangasami Gounden v. Nachiappa Gounden[4] said that a deed of gift could not possibly be held to be evidence of alienation for value for purposes of necessity, and that taken by itself the document could not stand as a deed of title, and, therefore, if the document in the case of Saudagar Singh v. Partap Narayan Singh had been a deed of gift their Lordships would have decided otherwise.

As the point has been raised late in the day we do not think we should give effect to it.

In the result the appeal fails and is hereby dismissed with costs

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] 22 A. L. J. R. 861

[2] I. L. R. 45 Cal. 510

[3] 10 I. A. 150=10 Cal. 324

[4] 17 A. L. J. R. 536 at 549

CIVIL

1931

March 16

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BAJPAI, J.

HALKA alias DARIYAO (Plaintiff)
versus
NANNHON (Defendant)*

Mortgage—Plaint framed as in a redemption suit—Relief—Possession—Mortgage deed unregistered—Plaintiff's title proved independently—Defendants claimed possession as mortgagees for more than 12 years—Plaintiff entitled to possession on paying amount due to defendants.

The plaint was framed as if it were one in a suit for redemption, and the substantive relief claimed was one for possession. The mortgage deed being unregistered was invalid and no suit for redemption could lie. The defendants had never set up adverse possession and had claimed possession as mortgagees for more than 12 years. The plaintiff succeeded in proving his title independently of the mortgage; held, that the defendants must be deemed to have acquired at least the mortgagee's rights, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession on payment of the mortgage money admitted by him in the plaint.

APPEAL under Sec. 10 of Letters Patent from the judgment of the HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE YOUNG.

Iqbal Ahmad and Mansur Alam for the appellant.

Basudeva Mukerji for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for possession. According to the plaint a mortgage had been made by the plaintiff's father in 1899 for a sum of Rs. 199 and the defendants' predecessor was put in possession of the mortgaged property which consisted of occupancy holdings. The plaintiff offered to pay the amount due on the mortgage and sought recovery of possession. There were several defendants to the suit. Defendant No. 1 did not admit the title of the plaintiff or the existence of any mortgage at all. Other defendants admitted the plaintiff's title, but pleaded that the mortgaged deed alleged by the plaintiff not having been registered, the plaintiff could not claim any right under it and was not entitled to recover the property. Both the courts below overruled the pleas raised by the defendants and decreed the claim on payment of the amount admitted by the plaintiff.

The lower appellate court held that the mortgage deed being unregistered was admissible for the purpose of proving the nature of the defendants' possession.

On appeal to this High Court a learned Judge of this Court allowed the appeal and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. He came to the conclusion that in view of the provisions of Sections 17 and 49 of the Indian Registration Act the document in question was inadmissible in evidence for the purpose of proving any transaction and that under Section 91 of the Indian Evidence Act other evidence was also inadmissible for showing the nature of the transaction.

With the exception of the Full Bench case of Ram Gopal v. Tulshi Ram[1], which was not on all fours with the present case, the attention of the learned Judge was not drawn to some other cases of this High Court, Ramzan v. Bhukhal[2] and the single Judge case of Maha Mangal Rai v. Kishun Kandu[3] and the unreported decision in S. A. No. 1631 of 1927 decided on April 29, 1930 (Srimati Radha Bai v. Debi Das).

---

*L. P. A. 3 of 1930

[1] 26 A. L. J. R. 952

We agree with the learned Judge of this Court that in view of the imperative provision of Section 49 of the Registration Act the un-registered document could not be received as evidence of any transaction affecting the property. It is also quite clear that when the contract was reduced in the form of writing oral evidence was not admissible to prove the contract independently of the document. It does not however follow that the plaintiff is debarred from proving his title to the occupancy holdings independently of that document. As pointed out above, all the defendants other than the defendant No. 1, admitted the plaintiff's title. The defendant No. 1, although he denied the plaintiff's title in his written statement, admitted in the witness box that the lands in suit are the occupancy holdings of the plaintiff. There is also independent oral evidence in proof of the plaintiff's title. It was not at all necessary for him to rely upon this unregistered document in order to show that the occupancy holdings belonged to him. We therefore think that there is no legal bar to the establishment of such a claim. In the absence of proof of adverse possession which would extinguish the plaintiff's claim, he would be entitled to a decree. The learned advocate for the respondent contends before us that the suit as framed does not entitle the plaintiff to a decree for possession. His contention is that the plaint was framed as if it were one in a suit for redemption, and inasmuch as the mortgage does not exist, no suit for redemption lies. In our opinion this is too technical an objection. The substantive relief claimed in the suit is one for possession and if the plaintiff is entitled to such a relief even if the mortgage is invalid there is no reason why he should be denied that relief. The burden of proving that the plaintiff's right is extinguished lay on the defendants. All the defendants except defendant No. 1 admitted that they were holding these lands as mortgagees. The defendant No. 1 was not able to explain how he was in possession; but as pointed out by the lower appellate court the defendants do not allege adverse possession over the land as proprietors. It is therefore obvious that the defendants have not acquired full proprietary rights by adverse possession over the plots. According to the entry in the revenue paper they have all along been recorded as usufructuary mortgagees. They must therefore be deemed to have claimed possession as mortgagees against the plaintiff. Although the mortgage was invalid the defendants claimed possession as mortgagees over the plots in suit for more than 12 years and must be deemed to have acquired at least the mortgagee's rights. In equity the plaintiff cannot be entitled to recover possession of the property after the lapse of so many years without paying the amount which is due to the defendants; but the burden of proving the amount due was on the defendants. We doubt very much whether the unregistered deed would be any evidence to prove the amount of the mortgage money inasmuch as that was a part of the contract which was reduced into a form of writing. But fortunately for the defendants the plaintiff himself admitted that Rs.199 was the mortgage money. In the face of this admission the defendants were not called upon to prove it. We therefore think that the decree of the court below was correct and should be restored.

---

[2] 16 A. L. J. R. 747

[3] 100 I. C. 346

We accordingly allow this appeal and setting aside the decree of this court restore that of the lower appellate court with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

RAM NARESH RAI AND OTHERS
versus
KING-EMPEROR*

Penal Code, Sec. 215—Offence under—Necessary to prove—That property lost by commission of an offence—And accused was screening offender.

> Where the accused merely undertook to endeavour to trace out and restore the lost property on payment of some remuneration, he could not be convicted of an offence under Sec. 215 Penal Code, unless over and above that the prosecution proved that the property had been lost by the commission of an offence and that the accused was endeavouring to screen the offender from justice and was not using all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence. In re Hemraj v. Emperor, 6 I. C. 250 and Emperor v. Mangu, 25 A. L. J. R. 866 relied on. Emperor v. Mukhtara, I. L. R. 46 All. 915 distinguished.

Criminal Revision from an order of Piare Lal Esq., Sessions Judge of Ghazipur.

Kumuda Prasad for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bajpai, J.—The three applicants before me have been convicted of an offence under Section 215 of the Indian Penal Code. It appears that on the night of April 23-24 the complainant Hari Ram lost two of his bullocks and therefore on April 24, 1930, he informed the police in the following terms:— Bajpai, J.

> On Wednesday in the evening my four oxen were fed and then tied to pegs. When every body was asleep two of them began to fight with one another and broke the tying strings and strayed away.

It is clear, therefore, that when the bullocks were lost to the complainant, they were lost not by reason of the commission of any offence but by sheer accident. About six days later, on May 1 there was a transaction between the complainant and the accused by which the accused took Rs.50 and restored the bullocks to the complainant. I must accept the finding of the court below that the money was demanded and received by the accused, but that alone is not sufficient to bring the conduct of the accused within the purview of Section 215 of the Indian Penal Code. On behalf of the applicants the case of In Re Hemraj v. Emperor[1] and the case of Emperor v. Mangu[2] has been cited. The Assistant Government Advocate has cited the case of Emperor v. Mukhtara[3]. This last case is distinguishable because

*Cr. Rev. 132 of 1931

---

[1] 6 I. C. 250

[2] 25 A. L. J. R. 866

[3] I. L. R. 46 All. 915

CRIMINAL
1931
RAM NARESH RAI
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Bajpai, J.

in that case there was a finding that the bullocks had been stolen. In the case before me there is no evidence that the bullocks were stolen. Indeed the first information report would go to show that the bullocks had simply strayed away and it is not fair to presume that later on somebody finding the bullocks committed an act of criminal misappropriation in the absence of any evidence on that point. There is also no evidence and no finding in this case that the accused knew the offender, and, therefore, it is obvious that he cannot be said to have failed in his efforts to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of an offence which he might have committed. Where the accused merely undertakes to endeavour to trace out and restore the lost property on payment of some remuneration then upon this circumstance alone the accused cannot be said to be guilty of an offence under Section 215 of the Indian Penal Code, unless over and above that the prosecution proves that the property has been lost by the commission of an offence and that the accused is endeavouring to screen the offender from justice and is not using all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence which he has committed. I am, therefore, of the opinion that the conviction of the applicants is illegal.

I, therefore, set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the fine or any portion of it if paid be refunded. The bail bonds should be discharged.

Conviction quashed

CRIMINAL
1931
June 19
BAJPAI, J.

MOHAMMAD BASHIR AND ANOTHER
versus
KING-EMPEROR*

Excise Act (Local Act IV of 1910), Sec. 60(a)—Conviction under—Irregularity in search—Search without warrant—Effect of—Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 103—Search witnesses—To be invariably produced by prosecution—But conviction may be based on other evidence.

Irregularity in a search and the failure to obtain warrant would always afford ground for scrutiny, but if after close scrutiny the court comes to the conclusion that an excisable article was recovered from the possession of the accused, then a conviction under Sec. 60(a) of the Excise Act (Local Act IV of 1910) would be sound. Romesh Chandra Banerjee v. Emperor, I. L. R. 41 Cal. 350, Queen-Empress v. Pukot Kotu, I. L. R. 19 Mad. 349 and Emperor v. Allahdad Khan, I. L. R. 35 All. 358=11 A. L. J. R. 442 relied on.

The search lists and the search witnesses should invariably be produced by the prosecution, and they will be guilty of suppression of material evidence if they did not produce the same. But the prosecution can prove the recovery of the incriminating article by other evidence as well. Munni Sonar v. The Emperor, 9 Cal. W. N. 438 and Solai Naik v. Emperor, I. L. R. 34 Mad. 349 followed.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of J. J. W. ALLSOP ESQ., Sessions Judge of Cawnpore.

K. D. Malaviya and S. Majid Ali for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

---

*Cr. Rev. 256 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

MOHAMMAD BASHIR v. KING-EMPEROR

Bajpai, J.

The following judgment was delivered by

BAJPAI, J.—Two persons Mohammad Bashir and Bassan alias Bashir were convicted by a magistrate of the first class under Section 60 (a) of the United Provinces Excise Act and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine. On appeal their convictions were maintained by the learned Sessions Judge of Cawnpore. They have applied in revision to this Court and their case has been presented before me by Mr. Kapil Deo Malaviya and he has asked me to consider the cases of the two applicants separately.

It appears that Mohammad Bashir is the occupant of the house which was raided at 6 p.m. on December 8, 1930. Some cocaine was found in his house at three or four different places. It is quite clear that the excise inspector went to the house with his peon without having taken a warrant from a magistrate and without having taken a couple of respectable witnesses of the locality. These were irregularities and a great deal has been made by the defence out of these irregularities. It is of the utmost importance that search should be conducted in a highly regular manner, so that the defence might have no opportunity to question the bona fides of the prosecution. When the excise inspector and his peon reached the house, they found Muhammad Bashir and Bassan in a room. On the approach of the party Mohammad Bashir ran away and the excise inspector ordered his peon to arrest Bassan who was in the room and Bassan was accordingly arrested. The excise inspector also told his peon that after arrest Bassan should be brought out of the room and the house then chained. The excise inspector in the meantime went in pursuit of Mohammad Bashir and after having arrested him brought him back to the house when he sent for search witnesses. The door remained chained during this time, but the fact remains that for some short time the peon entered that house when he went to effect the arrest of Bassan, and he did so in the absence of any search witnesses. Later on in the presence of the search witnesses and after the usual formalities the house was searched and, as I said before, certain quantity of cocaine was recovered at various portions of the house.

The learned Sessions Judge in appeal has been very fair to the defence and has not attached any importance to the cocaine that was recovered from places where there was a possibility of the cocaine having been planted by an outsider or an enemy, but he has attached a great deal of importance to the cocaine that was discovered in a cupboard, and he has attached some importance to certain pieces of paper that were found lying about in the room and which when sent to the Chemical Examiner were reported to contain traces of cocaine. I myself am not prepared to attach any importance to those pieces of paper, but the cocaine recovered from the cupboard has influenced my judgment to a great extent. I am, however, told by Mr. Kapil Deo Malaviya that the conviction of Mohammad Bashir is unsound for various reasons. He contends that there was irregularity in the search inasmuch as a warrant was not obtained. He further contends that the search witnesses ought to have been at the spot from the very beginning. Irregularity in a search and the failure to obtain warrant would always afford ground for scrutiny, but, if after close scrutiny the

CRIMINAL

1931

MOHAMMAD BASHIR
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Bajpai, J.

court comes to the conclusion that an excisable article was recovered from the possession of the accused, then I am of the opinion that the conviction would be sound. This view has been taken by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Romesh Chandra Banerjee v. Emperor[1] and by the Madras High Court in the case of Queen Empress v. Pukot Kotu[2]. The same is the view of our own High Court as would appear from the cases of Emperor v. Allahdad Khan[3], Emperor v. Sayeed Ahmad[4] and the case of Abdul Hafiz Khan v. Emperor[5]. There is yet another argument advanced on behalf of the accused. It appears that the search witnesses were examined on behalf of the prosecution, and they instead of supporting the prosecution help the defence. The search lists and the search witnesses should invariably be produced by the prosecution, and they would be guilty of suppression of material evidence if they did not produce the same. This was held in Munni Sonar v. The Emperor[6] but the prosecution can prove the recovery of the incriminating article by other evidence as well. As was held by the Madras High Court in the case of Solai Naik v. Emperor[7], the court having due regard to the statements of the search witnesses and of any other witnesses that might be produced on behalf of the prosecution has got to form an opinion of its own regarding the truth of the Crown case and the trial court and the appellate court are the final Judges on this point. In the present case I find that both the trying magistrates as well as the learned Sessions Judge have thought fit to rely upon the evidence of the excise inspector and the excise peon in preference to the evidence of the search witnesses, and I am not prepared to accept the contention on behalf of the defence that the courts had no jurisdiction to do so. It is contended that in view of the provisions of Section 103 of the Criminal Procedure Code the competent witnesses in the case were the search witnesses. This argument contravenes the provisions of Section 133 of the Evidence Act, and I am not prepared to give effect to it. Sitting as a Court of revision I must accept the finding of the courts below on the credibility of witnesses. The result is that the finding of the court below on the question that cocaine was discovered in the house which was in the occupation of Mohammad Bashir must be upheld. His conviction is sound and I maintain the same and the sentence.

Now I pass on to the case of Bassan alias Bashir. All that the prosecution have been able to prove against him is that he was in the house of Mohammad Bashir sitting with him in the same room, at least that is what I can gather from the judgment of the trying magistrate and from the arguments of the Assistant Government advocate. This in itself without other incriminating circumstances would be a very slender foundation for basing a conviction, but apart from that I have looked into the judgment of the trying magistrate and I find that he was discussing at length the case of Mohammad Bashir and has very very incidentally considered the case of Bassan. On appeal the learned Sessions Judge starts his judgment by saying that "the appellant Mohammad Bashir has been sentenced, etc., etc.", and all along he speaks of the case of the appellant (in the singular). He has mentioned the name of Bassan only casually in the fifth line of his judgment and nowhere else do I find any discussion of his case. That being so, I have got to choose between two alternatives: (1) to quash his conviction and (2) to remand his case either to the lower appellate court or to the trial court. As I said at the very outset, all that I could gather so far as the prosecution case regarding this accused is concerned was that he was found in the same room with Mohammad Bashir, and upon this material no useful purpose would be served by remanding the case. I, therefore, adopt the first alternative, allow his application and set aside his conviction and sentence. He need not surrender to his bail and his bail bond is discharged.

---

[1] I. L. R. 41 Cal. 350

[2] I. L. R. 19 Mad. 349

[3] I. L. R. 35 All. 358=11 A. L. J. R. 442

[4] I. L. R. 35 All. 575=11 A. L. J. R. 33

[5] A. I. R. 1926 All. 188

[6] 9 Cal. W. N. 438

[7] I. L. R. 34 Mad. 349

CRIMINAL
1931
July 3
BAJPAI, J.

CHEDI (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Excise Act (Local Act IV of 1910), Secs. 3(2), 70 and 60—Sub-Inspector of police—Whether an 'Excise officer'—Whether empowered to file complaint under Sec. 60.

A Sub-Inspector of police, who is invested with certain powers in connection with seizure of excisable articles and the arrest of suspected persons under Sec. 10 of the Excise Act, is an 'Excise Officer' within the meaning of Sec. 3 (2); and is therefore empowered by Sec. 70 to file a complaint under Sec. 60. Emperor v. Chhater Singh, 21 A. L. J. R. 922 relied on.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of HARISH CHANDRA ESQ., Sessions Judge of Benares.

Saila Nath Mukerji for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

BAJPAI, J.—Chhedi has been convicted by a Magistrate of the first class under Sec. 60 (a) of the United Provinces Excise Act and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs.50. His conviction was affirmed in appeal by the learned Sessions Judge of Benares, but the imprisonment was reduced to three months. He has come up in revision before this Court and Mr. Saila Nath Mukerji appearing on his behalf has taken the point that the Magistrate having no jurisdiction to try the case the conviction is bad in law. Bajpai, J.

The way in which this contention has been developed before me is that under Section 70 of Local Act IV of 1910 no Magistrate can take cognizance of an offence punishable under Section 60 except on his own knowledge or suspicion or on the complaint or report of an Excise Officer. The present trial proceeded on the report of a Sub-Inspector of police, and it is argued that a Sub-Inspector of Police is not an Excise Officer within the meaning of Section 3, Sub-clause (2) of the Act. That provision says that an Excise Officer means a Collector or any officer or person appointed or invested with powers under Section 10, and when one looks to Section 10 it appears that by no notification of the Local Government has a police officer

---

*Cr. Rev. 103 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

CHEDI v. KING-EMPEROR

Banerji, J.

been invested with the power of filing a complaint under Section 60. The answer by the Crown is that, if a person or officer has been invested with any power under Section 10, then he becomes an Excise Officer for the purposes of Section 70, and my attention has been drawn to Government Notification dated July 13, 1910, as amended by notifications, dated October 11, 1913, June 6, 1917 and September 8, 1920, the conjoint effect of which Notifications is that a police officer is invested with certain powers in connection with the seizure of excisable articles and the arrest of suspected persons. A reference to all these Notifications would be found at one place on page 7 of the supplement to the Excise Manual, Volumes I and II, corrected up to July 1, 1922. I am in perfect agreement with the way in which Clause (2) of Section 3 is interpreted by the learned Assistant Government Advocate. I am supported in this view by the case of Emperor v. Chhater Singh[1], the case of Prag v. Emperor[2] and the decision of the Oudh Chief Court in Criminal Revision No. 67 of 1926 Kallu v. King-Emperor, decided on July 6, 1926. A Sub-Inspector has the power under the notifications to arrest without warrant a person found committing an offence punishable under Section 60. He has further been given the power to seize and detain excisable articles, and as was pointed out in Chhater Singh's case, it was unnecessary, and would have complicated matters, for the Local Government, to issue a further notification authorising persons on whom it had already conferred powers, for the purposes of the Act, to do some thing which the Act says any Excise Officer may do, that is to say, to issue a separate notification authorising him to submit a report or complaint to the Magistrate.

I am of the opinion that there is no force in this revision and I dismiss it. The accused who is on bail will surrender to his bail bond and serve out the remainder of the sentence.

Application dismissed

---

[1] 21 A. L. J. R. 922

[2] 30 L. C. 143

CIVIL

1931

June 11

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BAJPAI, J.

BHIM SHAH AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
UDE RAM SHAH AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Pre-emption—In Kumaun—Not governed by Pre-emption Act but custom—Record does not give preference to relatives within third degree inter se.

Where, in a suit for pre-emption in Kumaun, to which the Pre-emption Act did not apply, the plaintiffs were step-brothers of the vendor, and the vendees were descended from the same grand-father as the vendor, and according to the custom prevailing in Kumaun "a relative of the vendor within the third degree has a right of pre-emption against any purchaser Who is an unrelated or a more distantly related co-sharer," held, that the record of custom did not mean that if both the plaintiff-pre-emptor and the vendee were within the third degree, the plaintiff would have preference if he was a nearer relation; and therefore the plaintiffs were not entitled to pre-empt.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of F. D. SIMPSON ESQ., District Judge of Kumaun, reversing a decree of L. D. JOSHI ESQ., Assistant Collector first class of Chamoli.

---

*S. A. 687 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

BHIM SHAH
v.
UDE RAM SHAH

Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

L. M. Roy for the appellants.
Ram Nama Prasad for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a plaintiffs' appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption in Kumaun. It is not suggested that by any notification the local Government has extended the provisions of the Agra Pre-emption Act to the Scheduled districts in Kumaun. The Pre-emption Act accordingly does not apply.

The case depends on the custom prevailing in Kumaun. Mr. Stowell in the Manual of Land Tenures of the Kumaun Division at page 46 has stated the custom in the following words:

> A relative of the vendor within the third degree has a right of pre-emption against any purchaser who is an unrelated or a more distantly related co-sharer.

It is obvious that that record does not give preference to relatives within the third degree inter se: a relative within third degree has a right against a purchaser who is either unrelated to the vendor or is related more distantly than the third degree. It does not mean that if both the plaintiff and the vendee are within the third degree the plaintiff would have preference if he is a nearer relation. On page 27 there is the record of the same custom in different words. That too does not indicate that there is any right of pre-emption inter se if both the plaintiff and the vendee are within the third degree.

On page 47 Mr. Stowell has pointed out that the third degree of relationship is to be ascertained by counting back to the common ancestor who is to be No. 1.

The plaintiffs are the step-brothers of the vendor and the vendees are descended from the same grand-father as the vendor. They are therefore within the third degree. There being no preference inter se the suit was rightly dismissed by the lower appellate court. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1931

June 11

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BANERJI, J.

RAM RAJ PANDEY (Plaintiff)
versus
HAR PRASAD AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Pre-emption Act, Sec. 19—Pre-emptor—Entitled to maintain suit—If status of co-sharer not lost till passing of first court decree—Not necessary to establish that his status could not have been challenged.

If the plaintiff-pre-emptor has the status of a co-sharer up to the time the first court passes its decree, he would be entitled to maintain the suit. It is not necessary for him to establish further that no suit to challenge his interest as a co-sharer could have been brought. Where such a suit is brought against him and decreed before the first court passes the decree in the pre-emption suit, the position would of course be different.

*S. A. 1363 of 1929

Civil

1931

Ram Raj Pandey v. Har Prasad

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SECOND APPEAL from a dercee of BABU JAGANNATH SINGH, Subordinate Judge of Basti, confirming a decree of BABU KRISHNA CHANDRA, Munsif.

Harnandan Prasad for the appellant.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. The plaintiff had acquired some property and became a co-sharer by virtue of a sale deed within twelve months of the sale deed in question. Before the suit was filed there was a compromise decree under which his rights as a co-sharer were finally confirmed. The claim was resisted on the ground that the plaintiff's status as a co-sharer at the time of the sale deed was not determined and his title was inchoate and that therefore he was not entitled to maintain the suit. The argument is that the plaintiff must establish that from the time of the sale deed till the time of the passing of the decree he all along had an indefeasible interest as a co-sharer.

It seems to us that it is not for the court to start any such enquiry. If the plaintiff had been given a chance he might well have shown that the other interested co-sharers had acquiesced in the sale and they had been estopped from claiming pre-emption. In addition to this the latter portion of Section 19 itself contemplates that a right of pre-emption may be lost after the passing of the first court's decree and nevertheless his right of suit would subsist. If the plaintiff had the status of a co-sharer up to the time the first court passed its decree, he would be entitled to maintain the suit. It is not necessary for him to establish further that no suit to challenge his claim could have been brought. Had a suit been brought against him and decreed before the first court passed its decree, the position would of course have been different.

The plea of estoppel raised in the trial court was not substantiated by any evidence and does not appear to have been pressed before the lower appellate court and could not be pressed as the defendant did not lead any oral evidence at all.

We think that the view taken by both the courts below that the plaintiff had no right to sue was wrong.

We accordingly allow this appeal and setting aside the decree of the courts below decree the plaintiff's claim for pre-emption of the property claimed on payment of Rs.175 within two months from this date. In case the amount is paid within the time allowed, the plaintiff will have his costs in all courts. If the amount is not deposited within the time fixed the suit shall stand dismissed with costs in all courts.

Appeal allowed

GANGA KALWAR (Defendant)
versus
BENI MADHO PRASAD SINGH (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL

1931

June 22

BOYS, J.
SMITH, J.

Abadi—Site in—Customary right of transfer by tenant to stranger—When proved—Transactions relied on to be of the same nature.

The most cogent evidence is required before a customary right of transfer of the sites of houses in a village can be held to be established.

Where in an agricultural village containing 600 houses, the transfer by a perpetual lease, was by an agricultural tenant in favour of a non-agricultural tenant, and the defendants justified the lease of the site by the production of 22 sale-deeds and 8 mortgages spread over 100 years, while the zamindar produced 14 kabuliats and 4 instances of "parjot," held that the custom was not established.

Where an agricultural tenant purports to transfer the right to a site in the village, and on the transfer being challenged by the zamindar, the transferee, who is a stranger to the village, sets up a custom in virtue of which a tenant has a right to transfer sites of house in the village, and relies on sale deeds and mortgages by tenants, he must satisfy the court that the transactions relied on by him were not transactions between two agricultural tenants, and the vendee or mortgagee, as the case may be, was a stranger to the village.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of B. S. KISCH ESQ., District Judge of Allahabad, confirming a decree of MAULVI MOHAMMAD TAQI KHAN, Additional Subordinate Judge of Mirzapur.

Janaki Prasad and Ambika Prasad Dube for the appellant.

Shambhu Nath Chaube for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—This is another of those cases in which the defence which is so common now-a-days is made that there is a customary right of transfer of the sites of houses in a village. We are of opinion that, as has often been said, the most cogent evidence is required before such a custom can be held to be established. It is true that zamindars like everybody else must be watchful of infringement of their rights, but that is very different matter from saying that they must be perpetually harassing their tenants and watching them to see every little thing they do. It may constantly happen that a particular tenant may exceed his rights even by the execution of a sale-deed purporting to transfer the right to a site, but the transaction may take place in circumstances in which the zamindar is either ignorant of it, or even knowing of it does not think it worth his while to worry about it. We may give an illustration of this. An agricultural tenant may part with his house and purport to part with the site also to another agricultural tenant, and the zamindar, even if he knows of it, may not feel it worth worrying about it, much less worth instituting a suit about it. On the other hand, an agricultural tenant may purport to transfer his house and site to a non-agricultural tenant, even a total stranger in the village. This may be a very serious matter for the zamindar, for if such a transfer is winked at by him and in course of time a custom is held

---

*S. A. 918 of 1930

Civil

1931

Ganga Kalwar v. Beni Madho Prasad Singh

Boys, J.

to be established he is manifestly in danger of losing the whole of his rights in a village site, and having to take up further sites from the agricultural area in order to provide room for his agricultural tenants. Now, in the present case, Bindhyachal is found to be an agricultural village. The transfer, by a perpetual lease, is by an agricultural tenant in favour of a non-agricultural tenant. The defendants seek to justify the lease of the site by the production, we are told, of 22 sale-deeds and 8 mortgages, while the zamindar, on the other hand, has produced 14 kabuliats and 4 instances relating to "parjot." Both courts have held that no custom is established. The transactions relied upon by the defendants are spread over 100 years, while there are 600 houses in Bindhyachal. The lower appellate court has, even giving to the defendant full benefit of the transactions upon which he relies, held that they were not sufficient to establish the custom, and we agree. But we may add that even if we had any doubts, we should have to be satisfied that the transactions relied upon by the defendant were of the same nature as that which he endeavours now to maintain. We are told by counsel for the appellant that he has no information as to whether the transactions relied on were transactions between two agricultural tenants, or whether the vendee or mortgagee as the case may be, was a non-agricultural tenant, or whether he was a stranger to the village. In the present case it is admitted that the lessee is a stranger to the village, that is to say, he is not already a tenant of any description, and it is more than possible that none of the transactions relied on by the defendant would apply to the present case; but for the reasons that we have given we do not think it necessary to enter into this further, or to send down any issue. We agree with the lower appellate court, and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Criminal

1931

Sep. 3

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Niamatullah, J.

KING-EMPEROR (Applicant)

versus

BAHADUR SINGH (Opposite party)*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 121—Bond executed under Sec. 109 Cr. P. C.—Accused again found in suspicious circumstances and unable to give satisfactory explanation—No forfeiture of bond—Liability of sureties.

The accused was proceeded against under Sec. 109 Cr. P. C. Two persons stood sureties for him for his good behaviour. Shortly before expiry of the period for which the sureties had bound themselves, he was again found concealing himself under suspicious circumstances without any means of livelihood and unable to give a satisfactory account of himself, held, (1) that in view of the provisions of Sec. 121 Cr. P. C. there had been no forfeiture of the bond because the action of the accused did not amount to an attempt to commit an offence punishable with imprisonment, (2) that if the bond had been forfeited the sureties would have been liable whether proceedings were started against them or after the expiry of the period for which they had bound themselves.

Criminal Reference made by P. Mason Esq, District Magistrate of Dehra Dun.

---

*Cr. Ref. 184 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR
v.
BAHADUR SINGH

Sulaiman,
A. C. J.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a reference by the District Magistrate of Dehra Dun recommending that proceedings may be ordered against the sureties for the accused. He was proceeded against under Section 109 Cr. P. C. Two persons stood sureties for him for his good behaviour. Shortly before the expiry of the period, he was again found concealing himself under suspicious circumstances in a lonely and abandoned water-mill without any ostensible means of livelihood and unable to give a satisfactory account of himself. He was accordingly sent up again under S. 109 Cr. P. C. The Magistrate was not able to take any action against the sureties before the expiry of the period. He expressed the opinion that he was unable to take any action against the sureties. The District Magistrate considers that there was no objection to the proceedings being taken against the sureties even though there was some delay.

So far as this last matter is concerned, we agree with the District Magistrate that if the bond was forfeited on account of any act of the accused person within the period for which the sureties had bound themselves, they would be liable whether the proceedings were started against them before or after the expiry of the period.

We however think that in view of the provisions contained in S. 121 Cr. P. C. there has been no forfeiture. A breach of the bond is committed when the accused commits or attempts to commit or abets any offence punishable with imprisonment. The mere fact that he is again found in suspicious circumstances without any means of livelihood or is unable to give a satisfactory explanation of himself, which may justify a fresh proceedings against him under Section 109 Cr. P. C. would not result in the forfeiture of the first bond because that does not amount to the commission of or attempt to commit or abetment of an offence punishable with imprisonment. At most, it might be a preparation for the commission of an offence, but short of an attempt. We accordingly direct that the record may be returned.

CRIMINAL

1931

Sep. 22

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

KASHINATH AND ANOTHER
versus
EMPEROR*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 235 and 236—Conjoint application—Whether permissible—Several charges rightly framed under Sec. 235—Whether one of such charges can be framed in the alternative under Sec. 236.

Several charges being rightly joined against the same accused under Sec. 235 Criminal Procedure Code, there can be no objection to one of such charges being in the alternative as provided by Sec. 236; nor can there be any objection to another accused being joined under Sec. 239 as regards one of those charges.

Janeshar Das v. King-Emperor, 1929 A. L. J. R. 329 and Emperor v. Sheo Saran Lal, I. L. R. 32 All. 219 distinguished.

*Cr. Rev. 432 of 1931

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of BABU GOVIND SARUP MATHUR, Sessions Judge of Mainpuri.

Kumuda Prasad for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The applicants Kashinath and Dhoomi Mal have applied in revision from the order of the learned Sessions Judge, Mainpuri, who dismissed their appeal from the order of conviction passed by a Magistrate, First Class, of that district for an offence under S. 419 I. P. C. Kashinath was also convicted by the trying Magistrate of an offence under S. 411 I. P. C. or 403 in the alternative, but the learned Sessions Judge set aside his conviction on the latter charge.

It appears that both the accused travelled without tickets and on being questioned at the railway station Etawah, Dhoomi Mal represented that he was a relative of Kashinath who held a pass entitling them to travel without tickets. Kashinath produced a pass which he said entitled him as a railway servant and Dhoomi Mal his relative to travel without tickets. It was found on enquiry that the pass had been granted to one Jagannath Prasad, a railway servant, but was lost, and in some inexplicable manner came into the possession of Kashinath who, though a railway servant, was not entitled to make use of the pass which he showed at Etawah railway station on the occasion already referred to. Both the courts below have held that the applicants committed an offence of cheating. On the facts stated above there can be no doubt that they were right. Kashinath was also convicted by the trying Magistrate of an alternative charge, to which reference has already been made. The Magistrate held that apart from the offence of cheating, Kashinath being in possession of a pass which belonged to another, must have either misappropriated it or received it knowing it to be stolen from the rightful person, or misappropriated. The learned Sessions Judge, for reasons given in his judgment, set aside Kashinath's conviction of an offence under S. 411 or 403. But the learned advocate for the applicants has contended before me that there was nevertheless a misjoinder of charges which vitiates the whole trial before the Magistrate.

It is not disputed that the two accused could be jointly tried for an offence under Sec. 419 I. P. C. under S. 239 Cr. P. C.

Nor is it disputed that Kashinath could be tried under Sec. 235 Cr. P. C. for two offences, namely, an offence under Sec. 419 I. P. C. and 411, or in the alternative, of 419 and 403. It is, however, argued that in so far as a charge in the alternative could be framed and was framed with reference to S. 236 Cr. P. C., and as Secs. 235 and 236 are mutually exclusive, they should not have been invoked to justify charges contemplated by Secs. 235 and 236. I am unable to accept this contention. S. 235 Cr. P. C. permits joinder of several charges in respect of offences committed by the same person if the acts constituting such offences are so connected together as to form the same transaction. The use of the pass by Kashinath, constituting an offence under S. 419, and his possession at the time he made use of it, which constituted another offence, are acts so connected together as to form the same transaction within the

CRIMINAL
1931
KASHI-NATH
v.
EMPEROR
Niamat-ullah, J.

meaning of S. 235 Cr. P. C. So far as this reasoning is concerned, the learned advocate for the applicants has not much fault to find with it. He contends that as it could not be said positively that possession of the railway pass constitutes an offence under S. 411 as, if Kashinath himself had misappropriated the pass, he would be guilty of the offence of misappropriation under S. 403 but not one under S. 411 I. P. C. and that for this reason an alternative charge of the character described in S. 236 Cr. P. C. was rendered necessary, and such a charge could not be added without recourse to S. 236. If, therefore, the learned advocate argues, Secs. 235 and 236 are mutually exclusive, joinder of charges which necessitated the combined operation of two antagonistic sections, like Secs. 235 and 236, vitiates the trial. I am unable to accept this view. There is no reason why, if both the sections are in terms applicable to a case, and if their application does not lead to any anomalous result, they should not be applied. Reference has been made to Janeshar Das v. K.-E.[1]. It was a case of joinder of charges of misappropriation. A learned Judge of this Court held that Secs. 234 and 236 are mutually exclusive. Similarly in Emperor v. Sheo Saran Lal[2], another learned Judge of this Court thought that Secs. 234 and 235 Cr. P. C. could not operate in harmony. No case has been quoted in which the conjoint operation of Secs. 235 and 236 was considered to be obnoxious so as to vitiate the trial.

I find nothing in the language of Secs. 235 and 236 which supports the contention put forward on behalf of the applicants. Several charges being rightly joined against the same accused under S. 235, there can be no objection to one of such charges being in the alternative as provided by S. 236 nor can there be any objection to another accused being joined under Sec. 239 as regards one of those charges. No conflict arises in consequence of joinder of charges and joinder of accused in the same trial in the manner indicated above. In this view it is not necessary to consider the further question whether Kashinath having been acquitted of the charge with which he alone was concerned, any question of misjoinder of charges could vitiate the trial.

Kashinath was sentenced by the Magistrate to a fine of Rs.100 and Dhoomi Mal to a fine of Rs.75. The Sessions Judge reduced the fine in case of Kashinath to Rs.75 and of Dhoomi Mal to Rs.25. I do not think any further leniency can be shown in the matter of sentence.

The revision is dismissed.

Application dismissed

[1] 1929 A. L. J. R. 329

[2] I. L. R. 32 All. 219

CIVIL 1931
Nov. 16
MUKERJI, J.
KING, J.

A MUKHTAR OF GORAKHPUR—In the matter of[*]

Legal Practitioner—Threatened zemindar that tenants would stop rendering 'begar' and payment of rent—Convicted under Sec. 506 Penal Code—Appeal —Released by Local Government—In accordance with Government of India Notification dated March 5, 1931—Proceedings before High Court relating to suspension dropped—Threat did not imply violence either to person or to property.

The High Court issued a notice to a mukhtar to show cause why he should not be suspended or dismissed in as much as he was convicted under Sec. 506 of the Penal Code on the ground that he had threatened a zemindar with this consequence that his tenants would stop rendering "begar" and payment of rent. His appeal was not heard as he was released by the Local Government in accordance with the Government of India Notification dated March 5, 1931 granting general amnesty to political prisoners who had been convicted in connection with the civil disobedience movement for offences not involving violence or incitement to violence. Held, (1) that the release of the mukhtar amounted to an expression of opinion on the part of the Local Government that he was convicted of an offence which did not imply "violence or incitement to violence"; (2) that the threat to the zemindar, although it came within the definition of criminal intimidation, did not imply any violence either to person or to property and therefore the proceedings before the High Court should be dropped.

U. S. Bajpai (Government Advocate) for the Crown.

K. N. Katju for the Mukhtar.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—In this case a notice was issued by the High Court to Mr. Ram Dawan Singh, a Mukhtar, ordinarily practising in the district of Basti > to show cause why he should not be suspended or dismissed inasmuch as he was convicted by a criminal court of the offence of criminal intimidation under Section 506 of the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. Ram Dawan Singh has appeared by counsel to show cause.

Among other matters, Dr. Katju, the learned counsel appearing for Mr. Ram Dawan Singh, has drawn our attention to the notification issued by the Government of India in the Home Department, bearing date March 5, 1931 and published at page 89 of the Gazette of India Extraordinary bearing the same date. It appears that by the said notification, the Government of India issued a sort of amnesty to political prisoners and to prisoners who were being tried for political offences. Clause 12 (iii) runs as follows:—

> Where a local Government has moved any High Court or has initiated proceedings under the Legal Practitioners' Act in regard to the conduct of legal practitioners in connection with the civil disobedience movement, it will make application to the Court concerned for permission to withdraw such proceedings, provided that the alleged conduct of the persons concerned does not relate to violence or incitement to violence.

Clause 13 (i) runs as follows:—

> Those prisoners will be released who are undergoing imprisonment in connection with the civil disobedience movement for offences which did

---

[*] Mis. Case 539 of 1931

Civil

1931

A Mukhtar of Gorakhpur in re

Mukerji, J.

not involve violence, other than technical violence, or incitement to such violence.

We have been informed that the opposite party, who was convicted under Section 506 of the Indian Penal Code and was sentenced to undergo two years' rigorous imprisonment, filed an appeal but was released by the Local Government in accordance with the notification issued by the Government of India stated above. The result was, the appeal was not heard and the appellant before the court was released.

The release of Mr. Ram Dawan Singh amounted to an expression of opinion on the part of the Local Government, that he was convicted of an offence which did not imply "violence or incitement to violence".

We have ourselves examined the judgment of the criminal court. That court found that Mr. Ram Dawan Singh threatened one Mr. Sakhawat Ali with this consequence that his tenants would stop rendering of unpaid labour or "Begar" and payment of rent. In our opinion, this threat, although it did come within the definition of criminal intimidation, did not imply any violence either to person or to property. This being our view, we think that the proceedings before us should be dropped. We note that the Board of Revenue has renewed the certificate of Mr. Ram Dawan Singh to practise as revenue agent in the revenue courts. We direct that the proceedings be dropped. We make no order as to costs. The certificate to practise will be renewed accordingly.

MUNICIPAL BOARD, ETAH through THE CHAIRMAN (Defendant) versus ASGHARI JAN alias LAPPO (minor) THROUGH BISMILLA (Plaintiff)*

Civil

1931

Nov. 30

Sen, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

Municipalities Act (Local Act 2 of 1916), Sec. 298, List I, Group H, Cl. (e)—Bye-law under—Prohibiting public prostitutes from residing within specified areas and streets—'Public Prostitutes'—Interpretation of—Civil Procedure Code, Or. 26—Whether court can issue commission to a person—To hear a woman sing and report whether she was a public prostitute.

A minor girl, whose mother and other relations were prostitutes, and who lived in the city with her mother, was served with a notice by the municipality forbidding her to carry on her occupation as prostitute in her house, in pursuance of a bye-law framed under Sec. 298 of the Municipalities Act prohibiting prostitutes from residing within specified areas and streets. It was found that the girl carried on the occupation of singing and dancing and lived for about two months as a concubine of a certain man and there was nothing to show that their intimacy was not of an exclusive character. Held, that the plaintiff was not a public prostitute and the bye-law could not apply to her case.

A public prostitute is a woman who openly and habitually offers her person to promiscuous sexual intercourse for gain, and who advertises and acknowledges her occupation by word of mouth, deportment or conduct.

For the bye-laws framed under Section 298 of the Municipalities Act to be applicable a woman should be not only a prostitute but a public prostitute.

---

*S. A. 886 of 1929

CIVIL

1931

MUNICIPAL BOARD, ETAH v. ASGHARI JAN

There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure authorizing a court to issue a commission to a person directing him to hear a woman sing and then report not only as to her skill as a singer but also as to her occupation in life so far as it could be deduced from her musical talents.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of ALI AUSAT ESQ., Additional District Judge of Aligarh reversing a decree of BABU HARI SHANKAR, Munsif of Etah.

K. Verma for the appellant.

A. M. Khwaja for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant from the appellate decision of Mr. Ali Ausat who on February 28, 1929, overset the judgment of B. Hari Shanker Vidyarthi, Munsif of Etah, in a suit in which the plaintiff-respondent had asked for the following relief:—

> It may be declared that the notice dated December 6, 1927 sent and signed by the secretary of the defendant and issued to the plaintiff is illegal, null and void, that the rule relied on and referred to in the notice does not apply to the plaintiff and that under it, the defendant has no legal remedy (sic.) or right to take proceedings against the plaintiff in case of breach of order by her.

The suit was instituted by Asghari Jan alias Lappo, caste prostitute, with her mother Mst. Bismilla for her next friend and was directed against the Municipal Board of Etah. The plaintiff with her mother lived in a house situate on the Grand Trunk Road in the city of Etah. The house presumably belonged to Mst. Bismilla, the plaintiff's mother. On December 6, 1927, a notice was served upon the plaintiff in which she was asked not to carry on her occupation as a prostitute at her place of residence, after a week from the date of the notice, otherwise legal steps would be taken against her. It was stated in this notice that bye-laws had been framed by the Municipal Board and sanctioned by the Local Government whereby prostitutes were prohibited from carrying on their occupation in houses on the Grand Trunk Road, Kutcherry Road, Naththa Park Road and Mst. Bismilla Road and that information of this fact had been given to the public generally by proclamation and by beat of drum, but that notwithstanding this, the plaintiff was carrying on her occupation within the prohibited area. Hence the warning.

The plaintiff alleged that she was a virgo in tacta, that her profession was singing and dancing, that no sort of fornication was practised in the house occupied by her "and that the bye-laws framed by the Municipal Board were therefore not applicable to her". These allegations were traversed by the defendant in the written statement dated March 28, 1928. This written statement was signed and verified by the Municipal Vice-Chairman Pundit Shiva Datt, B.A., LL.B., Vakil, Etah courts. He declared that paragraphs 1 to 13 of his written statement were true to his belief which was founded upon a perusal of papers. In paragraph 7 of the written statement he denied that the plaintiff was a minor. In paragraph 8 he stated as follows:—

> The plaintiff's allegation that she follows the profession of dancing and singing only and is not a public prostitute is absolutely wrong. The plaintiff is a public prostitute. This is the means by which she earns her

CIVIL 1931
MUNICIPAL BOARD, ETAH
v.
ASGHARI
JAN
Sen, J.

> livelihood and this is her ordinary profession.

Pt. Shiva Datt did not figure as a witness in this case and we are not aware of the documents, if any, on which the allegations contained above were founded.

Three issues were framed by the trial court:—

> 1. Whether the plaintiff is an adult, if so, how does it affect the case?
> 2. Whether the plaintiff is not a public prostitute and is she entitled to a declaration sought for?
> 3. Whether the suit is barred by limitation?

The learned Munsif decided the first and the third issues in favour of the plaintiff. On the first issue he remarked as follows:—

> The statement of the Civil Surgeon supported by the entry in the defendant's own birth register very satisfactorily proves that the plaintiff is merely 15½ years of age By appearance too the plaintiff does not appear to be an adult.

On issue No. 2, the plaintiff produced a number of persons who deposed that they had approached the plaintiff through her mother and had made overtures to her but she had refused to have sexual intercourse with them. The Munsif disbelieved this evidence. The Municipal Board produced certain witnesses who deposed that they were on terms of intimacy with the plaintiff and had sexual connection with her. One of these witnesses was ryot of Rai Inder Narain, the Chairman of the Municipal Board. Another witness was the cousin of the Municipal contractor. The Munsif believed this evidence and he drew an adverse presumption against the plaintiff on account of her refusal to submit to a medical examination. He accordingly dismissed the suit.

Plaintiff appealed. The procedure adopted by the appellate court was curious, and his theories were somewhat farfetched. The learned Judge says:

> When the case was first argued before me and the oral evidence was read over, I thought that having regard to the age of the plaintiff, she could not remain a virgin and so I asked her counsel to produce her and get her examined by a lady doctor about this point. The counsel agreed to this course and then plaintiff appeared and plaintiff's counsel stated to the court that the girl lost her virginity two months ago as she is in the keeping of a gentleman (sic) at some place. Still I was not satisfied with the story that plaintiff lost her virginity only two months ago and I asked the plaintiff's pleader to get the plaintiff examined by a lady doctor about the fact whether she had been used to cohabitation only for two months or for two years, but plaintiff's mother appeared and said that she does not want to examine her daughter by a lady doctor nor has she got the fee. The statement that she has got no fee is not correct, so it is fair to infer that the girl is given to cohabitation since two years.

We are not aware if any scientific data could be available to a medical expert to enable him to give an opinion with anything like reasonable certainty as to the probable period for which a fairly grown up woman was carrying on sexual intercourse. We are also not aware of any law which renders it permissible for a judge to draw an inference against a woman from her refusal to submit to a medical examination that she was "given to cohabitation since two years." At another place the learned Judge makes an observation which appears to us to be inconsistent with what he has said before:—

> It is true that plaintiff has connection with some person, whether since two months or one year, it is difficult to say

The learned Judge discards the oral evidence produced by the parties and we are of opinion that there was ample justification for this.

During the progress of the hearing of the appeal, the learned Additional District Judge passed a long order, couched in the following terms:—

> The defendant's counsel says that though defendant's vakil in the court below admitted that plaintiff knows singing and dancing but that is not her chief profession and she does not practise singing and dancing as an art. On the other hand, plaintiff's counsel says that plaintiff practises as an art and follows it as a profession. As the question largely hinges on the point whether the chief business of plaintiff is public prostitution or her chief business is singing and dancing as an art, so in order to decide this point it is necessary that some one who is an expert in this art should be examined. The expert should see the girl's singing and dancing and then should give his evidence before this Court. The expert's fee will have to be paid by the plaintiff. Mr. A. A. Jilani, M.A. LL.B., Vakil is present in court. He says that he can work as an expert. I appoint him as an expert. He should have the performance of singing and dancing of the girl at some place and give evidence before this Court on February 26, 1929. His fee will be fixed later on.

Mr. A. A. Jilani got a performance of music of Mst. Asghari Jan made on the night of February 25, 1929. The performance lasted from 9-30 p. m. to 1-30 a. m. He had "invited the best educated singers of the city to hear the singing and to help him as assessors." He "took help from them". He "weighed their opinion with his opinion in forming the opinion about the art of the plaintiff." Mr. A. A. Jilani was examined in court on February 27, 1929. The following portions of his statement may be reproduced:—

> 1. In my opinion she is a tolerably fair singer and knows the art.
> 2. She is a trained girl in the art of music and is not an ordinary public prostitute.
> 3. I noted seven special features in her performance.
> 4. A girl who is habituated to promiscuous cohabitation like a public prostitute can in no way possess a melodious and sustained voice and from this I say that plaintiff is not a public prostitute.

While candidly admitting that he had not received training in music in any school Mr. Jilani tried to support his pretentions as expert in the art of vocal music:—

> I have been regularly hearing singing of dancing girls since twelve years. Last year when the Municipal Board of Aligarh were intending to pass a resolution that prostitutes should be segregated and removed from the various quarters of the city then I was appointed by S. M. Koil to make a local inspection and ascertain the value of the houses at present occupied by such prostitutes and submit a report. In connection with that enquiry I made a thorough inspection and became acquainted with a large number of public prostitutes. With the exception of one or two public prostitutes in Aligarh, the rest had no arrangement for singing and so I could not hear their singing. I am generally engaged by prostitutes in Aligarh in their cases and so I had many opportunities of mixing with them. I have heard singing of only 2 or 4 public prostitutes in Aligarh because public prostitutes here generally do not know singing.

The procedure adopted by the learned Additional District Judge in requiring the production of additional evidence in the case is no less novel and startling than the nature and character of the evidence itself. The parties had closed their case. No evidence available to the plaintiff or necessary for the decision of the case had been improperly shut out by the trial court. The question in issue in the case was whether the plaintiff was a public prostitute within the meaning of that expression in the bye-laws framed by the Municipality of Etah. It is a matter of common knowledge that in this country, women who habitually allow the use of their person for sexual intercourse in lieu of hire do also cultivate the art of singing and dancing as an adjunct, as much for purposes of gain as for additional attraction. All the world over, some women take to the life of a public prostitute either from choice or by force of circumstances. In the oriental countries, not uncommonly, there is a caste of public prostitutes. In India, such is the case amongst Hindus and Mohammedans and the occupation of a public prostitute descends from mother to daughter. These prostitutes carry on the occupation of sexual intercourse for a consideration and also associate with themselves the occupation of a singing and dancing for hire. The fact that some of these women are more respectable than the rest, in so far as they earn more by singing and dancing, does by no means place them in a category different from that of public prostitutes.

The plaintiff has been described in the plaint as belonging to the caste of prostitutes. Her mother had admittedly been a public prostitute. Her mother's sisters excepting one are still carrying on this occupation. In view of her antecedents and environment, it may not be difficult to make a forecast of the plaintiff's future life.

But the question is whether the lower appellate court was justified in recording the evidence of Mr. A. A. Jilani and using that evidence in support of the conclusion that the plaintiff was not a public prostitute. The deduction of Mr. A. A. Jilani that because the plaintiff had a trained, melodious and cultivated voice and that she could sustain her voice at a loud pitch for a considerable length of time, therefore she could not be a public prostitute—does not appear to us to be an infallible, unerring or even a necessary deduction. The musical characteristics noticed by Mr. A. A. Jilani may well be found in a person given to sexual excess or sexual abuse. The presence or absence of those characteristics may vary with the changeable phases of temperament and physical constitution in individuals. Upon his own showing Mr. A. A. Jilani is not an expert in music and his statement is not of any value in deciding the main issue.

As we have noticed already, the learned Additional District Judge has rejected the oral evidence produced by the parties. He accepts the statement of Mr. A. A. Jilani in its entirety > the whole thing turns to a great extent upon the evidence of Mr. Jilani commissioner It is clear to me from the evidence of Mr. Jilani that a public prostitute hardly knows her singing and dancing and it is a matter of common knowledge that the girls who carry on the profession of singing and dancing and know the art do not generally carry on the profession of a public prostitute because thereby they lose their tone and melody.

The saying is that one cannot blow hot and cold in the same breath. We hope the learned Additional District Judge understood and appreciated the application of the saying last-quoted to the facts that he was dealing with.

The powers of a court to issue a commission have been provided for in Section 75 and Order 26 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Commissions may be issued for holding a local investigation, to examine accounts or to make partitions. But there is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure authorising a court to issue a commission to a person directing him to hear a woman sing and then to report not only as to her skill as a singer but also as to her occupation in life so far as it could be deduced from her musical talents. Further there is nothing in law to authorise the commissioner so appointed to try the issue referred to him with the aid of assessors. This is what has in effect been done.

Under Order 41, Rule 27(1)(b), an appellate court may allow a witness to be examined, where the said court requires such witness to be examined to enable it to pronounce judgment or for any other substantial cause. In Clause (2) it has been provided that where additional evidence is allowed to be produced by an appellate court, the court shall record the reasons for its admission. Rule 29 provides that where additional evidence is directed or allowed to be taken, the appellate court can specify the points to which the evidence is to be confined and record on the proceedings the points so specified. The appellate court has admitted additional evidence in this case in utter disregard of the provisions referred to above. There was no justification for the evidence of Mr. A. A. Jilani and his statement should be ruled out. In taking this view, we are supported by the decision of the Privy Council in re Man Mohan Das v. Ram Dei[1].

History illustrates that prostitution has been inseparable from human society in large communities. It has been observed that

> In different countries and ages it (prostitution) has in turn been patronised and prohibited, ignored and recognised, tolerated and condemned, regulated and let alone, flounted and concealed.

(Encyclopaedia-Britannica, Vol. 22). In different ages and climes, laws and regulations had to be introduced to minimise the evil of prostitution as far as possible, with a view to preserve public order and decency. There is a reference to houses known as the dicteria so far back as the laws of Solon. These were houses of prostitution and were confined to certain local areas. The dicteriades were forbidden the superior parts of the town. In all countries, legislation with a view to combat or uproot this evil has met with varying degrees of unsuccess. The Municipality is entitled to make bye-laws with a view to preserve order and decency; but the bye-laws must be strictly construed where they trench upon the rights of a citizen.

Section 247 of the U. P. Municipalities Act (II of 1916) provides as follows:—

> When a Magistrate of the first class receives information
> (a) that a house in the vicinity of a place of worship or an educational institution or a boarding house, hostel or mess used or occupied by students

---

[1] 1931 A. L. J. R. 550

> is used as a brothel or for the purpose of habitual prostitution or by disorderly persons of any description, or > (b) that any house is used as aforesaid to the annoyance of respectable inhabitants in the vicinity or > (c) that a house in the immediate neighbourhood of a cantonment is used as a brothel or for the purpose of habitual prostitution.
>
> We may summon the owner, tenant, manager or occupier of the house to appear before him either in person or by any agent; and if satisfied that the house is used as described in Clause (a), Clause (b) or (c) may by a written order direct such owner, tenant, manager or occupier, within a period to be stated in such order not less than 5 days from the date thereof, to discontinue such use;
>
> Provided that action under this Sub-section shall be taken only—
> (i) with the sanction or by the order of the District Magistrate,
> (ii) on the complaint of three or more persons residing in the immediate vicinity of the house to which the complaint refers, or
> (iii) in the case referred to in Clauses (a) and (c) of this Sub-section, on the complaint of the Board.
> 2. If a person against whom an order has been passed by a Magistrate under Sub-section (1) fails to comply with such order within the period stated therein; the Magistrate may impose on him a fine which may extend to Rs.25 for every day after the expiration of the period during which the house is so used.

The procedure indicated herein was not adopted in this case, nor was this section utilised or enforced.

Section 298 of the Act authorises a Municipal Board to make certain bye-laws (E) (b), permitting, prohibiting or regulating the use or occupation of any or all public streets or places by itinerant vendors, or by any person for the sale of articles or for the exercise of any calling or for the setting up of any booth or stall, and providing for the levy of fees for such use or occupation. The same section under the heading of Public Safety and Convenience (H) in Sub-clause (e) authorises the making of bye-laws for prohibiting, in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes and the keeping of a brothel, or the letting or other disposal of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel.

The Municipal Board of Etah in pursuance of Section 298 framed a bye-law which provided that "no public prostitute shall reside within the areas or in the streets specified below." The streets "specified below" are those which are referred to in the notice dated December 6, 1927.

It has been argued that the Municipal Board of Etah was not competent to frame the bye-law in question and, that this bye-law is ultra vires. We are of opinion that the use of the word "and" between the words "prohibiting in any specified street or area the residing of public prostitutes" and "the keeping of a brothel" is unhappy and that the intention of the legislature was to provide against two evils and not one. The residence or occupation of public prostitutes is an item separate and distinct from the keeping of a brothel. This meaning is apparent from the words which follow, namely, 'the letting of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel'. In our view, the bye-law framed by the Municipal Board is not ultra vires and is in keeping with the object and intention of the statute.

The term "public prostitute" has not been defined in the U. P. Municipalities Act. The common type of a public prostitute is a woman who exhibits herself on the balcony or other prominent part of her house to attract people. In our view, a public prostitute is a woman who usually and generally offers her person to sexual intercourse for hire and who openly advertises and acknowledges her occupation by word of mouth, deportment or conduct. For the bye-laws to be applicable, a woman should be not only a prostitute but a public prostitute. A great degree of moral degradation alone will attract the application of a drastic law which involves the consequence of a woman being compelled to leave her house in which she might have invested her fortune or might have other associations. It could not have been said at the date of the notice issued by the Municipal Board or when the suit was instituted that the plaintiff was a public prostitute simply because she belonged to the caste of prostitutes or that her mother and mother's sisters were public prostitutes.

Even eliminating from the record the statement of Mr. Jilani, there were materials before the court below for coming to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not a public prostitute. She is a minor of about 16 years of age. She carries on the occupation of singing and dancing for the present and lived for nearly two months as a concubine or mistress of a certain man in the district of Etah and there is nothing to show that their intimacy is not of an exclusive character or that it may not assume the form of a more lasting alliance. In the present circumstances and on the facts established by evidence it cannot be said that she has so far led the life of a public prostitute. It is, however, possible her occupation may in future take a turn which is inconsistent with any other hypothesis than that she is a public prostitute. Upon these facts, it could not be said that she was a woman who openly and habitually offered her person to promiscuous sexual intercourse for gain. It follows therefore that the plaintiff is not a public prostitute and the bye-law cannot apply to her case.

The lower appellate court has found that the plaintiff is about 16 years old. As quaintly put by the learned Additional District Judge "the suit was properly instituted under the next friendship of mother." We are of opinion that there is no defect in the frame of the suit. The appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Civil

1931

June 18

Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Allen, J.

JAGANNATH PRASAD (Decree-holder)
versus
JAMUNA BAI AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 47 and Or. 21, R. 58—Suit filed after debtor's death against his daughter's son only—Decree—Execution—Daughter's objection that her property cannot be attached allowed—Objection under Or. 21, R. 58 and not under Section 47.

Where, after the death of his debtor, plaintiff sued deceased's daughter's son only alleging that he was the sole legatee of the deceased under a will, and having obtained a decree against the assets of the deceased in the hands of the son, he tried to execute it by attachment and sale of the property in the hands of the daughter, but an objection by her that the property was her own was allowed, held, that the objection was under Or. 21, R. 58 and not an objection under Section 47 C. P. C. as there was no dispute between the parties to the decree or their representatives. No appeal therefore lay from the order. Kaliappan Servaikaran v. Varadarajulu, I. L. R. 33 Mad. 75 relied on.

Execution First Appeal from a decree of Babu Radha Kishen, First Subordinate Judge of Cawnpur.

M. L. Chaturvedi for the appellant.

S. N. Seth and G. S. Pathak for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

Sulaiman, A. C. J.—This is an appeal by the decree-holder from an order passed by the execution court allowing the objection of Mst. Jamna Bai.

A preliminary objection is taken that no appeal lies from this order as she was not a judgment-debtor.

Hazari Lal was the plaintiff's debtor and after his death the plaintiff filed a suit against his daughter's son Achhey Lal alleging that he was the sole legatee of the deceased under a will executed by him. He did not implead his daughter Mst. Jamuna Bai or any other relation. A money decree was obtained against the assets of the deceased Hazari Lal which, if any, may be in the hands of Achhey Lal.

The decree-holder then tried to execute the decree by attachment and sale of some property in the hand of the deceased's daughter Mst. Jamuna Bai who at once objected and alleged that the property sought to be attached was her own property and no part of the deceased's assets at all. Her objection has been allowed and the decree-holder's application dismissed. It is quite obvious that no appeal lies from the order inasmuch as the dispute cannot be said to have been one under Section 47 C. P. C. between the parties to the suit in which the decree was passed. If the objection of Mst. Jamuna Bai was in the nature of an objection by a stranger to the suit under Order 21, Rule 58, the order passed by the court would be final and no appeal would lie therefrom. The learned advocate for the decree-holder has cited before us some cases in which it has been laid down that if a party dies during the pendency of the suit and the court brings one person on the record as his legal representative, the decree may be

---

*E. F. A. 413 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

JAGANNATH PRASAD v. JAMUNA BAI

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

executed against other persons who are in possession of the assets and who may be heirs though they were not impleaded.

He has also cited some cases showing that even if after the decree the execution is sought against one heir at first, proceedings may be continued against the other heirs of the deceased. In our opinion neither of these sets of rulings is at all applicable to the case before us. If death takes place during the pendency of a suit it is the duty of the court under Order 22, Rule 5 to determine who is the legal representative of a deceased plaintiff or a deceased defendant, and a 'legal representative' is defined in Section 2 as meaning a person who in law represents the estate of a deceased person and includes any person who intermeddles with the estate of the deceased. In the same way it is equally clear that no question of substitution of the names of heirs in the ordinary sense in which it is understood arises when the death takes place after the decree. Rule 12 of Order 22 expressly provides that nothing in Rules 3, 4 and 8 of that Order shall apply to proceedings in execution of the decree. The decree-holder in such a case therefore is not bound to implead all the heirs in the first instance.

The case before us is one in which the debtor had died before any suit was brought against him. The suit was brought against Achhey Lal who was treated as the heir of the deceased and the decree was against the assets of the deceased which may be in the hands of Achhey Lal. It is Achhey Lal who is the judgment-debtor under the decree. Mst. Jamuna Bai was not a judgment-debtor. If she is setting up her own independent title in the property which is sought to be attached, her capacity was that of an entire stranger to the suit. Her objection was under Order 21, Rule 58 and was not an objection under Section 47 C. P. C. as there was no dispute between the parties to the decree or their representatives. A similar view was expressed in Kaliappan Servaikaran v. Varadarajulu[1]. We agree with the view expressed therein.

It is therefore clear that no appeal lies. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] I. L. R. 33 Mad. 75

CIVIL

1931

June 30

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
SEN, J.

HAKIM MOHD. FAZIHZZAMAN (Defendant)

versus

ANWAR HUSAIN (Plaintiff)*

Transfer of Property Act, Secs. 108 and 111(a)—Second lease to take effect after first lease for 10 years had expired—First lease expired by efflux of time under Sec. 111(a)—First lessee holding over—Whether second lessee entitled to eject first lessee.

Defendant obtained a lease of a house for a period of ten years. A few months before the expiry of the lease, the lessor executed another lease in favour of the plaintiff for a further period of ten years. The second lease was to take effect a few days after the expiry of the first lease. As the first lessee, whose lease determined by efflux of time under Sec. 111(a) T. P. Act, was holding over, the second lessee brought a suit for ejectment of the first lessee from the house, held, that under Sec. 108 T. P. Act the second lessee was entitled to eject the first lessee who was holding over. Achayya v. Hanumantraydu, I. L. R. 14 Mad. 269 relied on.

---

*L. P. A. 45 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

HAKIM MOHD. FAZIHZZAMAN v. ANWAR HUSAIN

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL against the judgment of the HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE BOYS.

A. M. Khwaja for the appellant.

G. S. Pathak for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is a defendant's appeal arising out of a suit for ejectment of the defendant from a house and shops. A lease had been granted by plaintiff No. 1 Mst. Muhammadi Begam to the defendant for a period of ten years on July 23, 1917. Before the expiry of that period, namely, on May 6, 1927 she executed another lease in favour of Anwar Husain plaintiff No. 2 for a further period of 10 years. The former lease was to expire on July 22, 1927 and the second lease was to take effect from August 1, 1927.

The suit was originally filed jointly by Muhammadi Begam and Anwar Husain and it was for ejectment and mesne profits. Later on Mst. Muhammadi Begam's name was transferred from the array of the plaintiffs to that of the defendants. The plaint however was not substantially amended. The courts below have decreed the claim for possession and that decree has been affirmed by a learned Judge of this Court. The claim as regards mesne profits for the period prior to the lease in favour of Anwar Husain has been disallowed by the learned Judge.

The defendant has filed this appeal in Letters Patent and there is no cross-appeal on behalf of the plaintiff.

It is contended on behalf of the defendant that the frame of the plaint as it stands disentitles Anwar Husain from getting a decree. This is wholly a technical plea inasmuch as the parties have all along had knowledge what the dispute between them was and no substantial injustice has been done inspite of the omission to amend the plaint so as to put it in a proper form.

The main contention is that the plaintiff Anwar Husain is not entitled to a decree for possession against the defendant lessee. The first argument is that there was a contract for the grant of a fresh lease between Mst. Muhammadi Begam and the contesting defendant and the second lease was given to the plaintiff Anwar Husain in breach of that contract. It is therefore urged that the suit must fail. If there was any such contract it can be specifically enforced by a separate suit and if Anwar Husain had knowledge of that previous contract it can be enforced as against him also. As no registered lease was executed in favour of the contesting defendant we cannot take this circumstance into account at this stage. As a matter of fact both the courts below have come to the conclusion that there was no completed contract in favour of the defendant-respondent which would bind Mst. Muhammadi Begam and that the amount of Rs.10 which had been sent to her was not by way of earnest money but with a view to inducing her to come to Bareilly.

The main ground urged in defence is that the subsequent lessee has no right to eject the previous lessee who is holding over. It is contended

Civil

1931

Hakim Mohd. Fazihzzaman v. Anwar Husain

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

that his remedy is only as against the lessor for the recovery of possession and mesne profits and he alone can maintain a suit for ejectment against the previous lessee. Strong reliance is placed on the case of Ibadullah Khan v. Ram Charan Sah[1]. That was however a case where the property in dispute consisted of an agricultural tenancy and the previous tenant could lawfully have been ejected only through the revenue court. A suit brought by a subsequent lessee in the civil court was held not to be maintainable. It is not necessary for us to express any opinion on that case as the facts of that case are quite different. In the present case the lease in favour of the defendant was for a fixed period of 10 years and was governed by the Transfer of Property Act. Under Section 111 (a) it was determined by the efflux of time limited by the lease as a period was fixed. It must be presumed that notice was by implication given at the time when the lease was executed. No notice under Section 106 was accordingly required for the termination of this lease. Section 108 provides that the lessor is bound on the lessee's request to put him in possession of the property, and further provides that the benefit of such contract shall be annexed to, and go with the lessee's interest as such, and may be enforced by every person in whom that interest is for the whole or any part thereof from time to time vested. There can therefore be no doubt that the lessee is entitled to enforce his right to obtain possession of the land leased to him so that he may enjoy its usufruct. There seems to be no reason why he should not be allowed to enforce his right against another person who is holding under his lessor, who is bound to put him in possession. The defendant's lease terminated automatically. A Bench of the Madras High Court in Achhayya v. Hanumantraydu[2] came to the same conclusion on general grounds and independently of the express provisions of the Transfer of Property Act.

Of course, if there were any estoppel against the lessor arising out of circumstances which existed previous to the grant made to Anwar Husain, the plaintiff may not succeed. But nothing done by the lessor subsequent to the grant of the lease by him would disentitle him because the lessor could not be allowed to derogate from it. The mere fact that Mst. Muhammadi Begam in the course of the present suit entered into a compromise with the defendant which had been called by the lower appellate court as collusive would not disentitle the plaintiff lessee from obtaining his decree.

The only other point urged was that the plaintiff has obtained a lease from Mst. Muhammadi Begam and did not himself execute a counterpart of the lease. It was urged that the lease was imperfect and could not be enforced. This contention in our opinion has no force whatever. Some doubts have been expressed as to the validity of a lease where only a counterpart has been executed by the lessee and no lease by the lessor; but it has never been suggested that the execution of a lease by the lessor does not create a valid lease in favour of the lessee. There is therefore no forçe in this contention.

The result therefore is that this appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] 53 I. C. 140

[2] I. L. R. 14 Mad. 269

CIVIL

1931

July 21

MUKERJI, J.

KANHAIYA LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
R. H. SKINNER AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Tenancy Act (II of 1901), Secs. 165 and 194—Suit for profits against co-sharers—Lambardar included as a co-sharer—Collections by co-sharers—Basis of division—Co-sharer—Position of—In relation to other co-sharers.

A co-sharer is not an agent for the other co-sharers and holds no fiduciary position as regards the other co-sharers of the village. If a co-sharer is not entitled to make any collections under any village custom, he may be sued in the civil court for usurping the shares of other co-sharers. If a co-sharer has been, by custom, allowed to make collections for other co-sharers, he may be treated as the de facto lambardar, and may be sued under Sec. 164 of the Tenancy Act of 1901 (=Sec. 226 of Act III of 1926). The mere fact that a man who is not an agent has acted contrary to his rights, will not make him an agent for other co-sharers.

In a suit under Sec. 165 of Act II of 1901 (=Sec. 227 of Act III of 1926) the lambardar, in the array of the defendants, cannot be treated as a lambardar, but must be treated as a co-sharer; and therefore he is entitled to deduct out of the collections made by him his full share of the profits of the mahal, the balance alone being divisible among the other co-sharers.

Where in a suit under Sec. 165 of Act II of 1901 it was proved that a karinda made collections on behalf of certain co-sharers, one of whom was the lambardar, the collection must be treated as a collection by the defendant co-sharers, and not as a collection on behalf of the lambardar alone, and the liability of the co-sharers must be a joint one.

FIRST APPEAL from the decision of the Assistant Collector First Class of Meerut.

This appeal was heard by Pullan and Niamatullah, JJ. who delivered dissentient judgments, and a reference was made to a third Judge, Mukerji, J. The dissentient judgments are reproduced below.

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—These four appeals arise out of two suits for profits brought by R. H. Skinner and others for their share of the profits of the villages of Karanpur Jatta and Dhaulana respectively under S. 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act (No. II of 1901). Both these villages are included in the Skinner etsate of thirteen villages belonging to the late Stuart Skinner, and on the death of the said Stuart Skinner, the property devolved on his three sons and two daughters. Each son received a one-fourth share and the two daughters received a one-fourth share between them. The one-fourth share of Robert Skinner, one of the sons of Stuart Skinner, was purchased at an auction sale by R. H. Skinner, the husband of Ada Skinner, one of the daughters of the late Stuart Skinner, and as the result of this purchase R. H. Skinner, his wife Ada Skinner and her sister Fanny Skinner, became the owners of one-half in both these villages. One of the two remaining shares, the share of George Skinner, another son of Stuart Skinner, was sold and purchased first by one Dargahi Lal and afterwards on April 4, 1923 by three persons, Banarsi Das, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. The present suits were filed against these persons and also against Victor Skinner, the son of Robert Skinner, who was in the year 1330 Fasli the lambardar of the village Karanpur Jatta, and James, son of George Skinner, who was for the same period the lambardar of the village of Dhaulana, and the suits are for settlement of accounts and profits said to be due to the plaintiffs from these their other co-sharers. The fact that Banarsi Das became the lambardar of these two villages in the year 1330 Fasli is not mentioned in either of the plaints; nor is this fact stated in any of the written statements. The cases are brought by a co-sharer for profits against other co-sharers under S. 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act (No. II of 1901).

---

*F. A. 328 of 1927 (connected with F. A. 329, 337 and 338 of 1927)

The assistant collector found that these co-sharers had collected in excess of their shares and he passed decrees in both suits. In respect of the village of Karanpur Jatta he gave a decree for Rs.971 odd against Victor Skinner and for Rs.1,674 against Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal but exempted Gobind Sarup. In respect of the village of Dhaulana he gave a decree for Rs.1,219-12-0 against James Skinner and for Rs.3,749 against Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, again exempting Gobind Sarup. The two Skinners, Victor and James, have not appealed, but appeals have been preferred in each case by Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal on the one hand and by the plaintiffs on the other. The case set up by the defendant-appellants in the lower court was that there was a partition in the year 1918 among the members of the Skinner family by which each member collected his own share, and that consequently the defendants having purchased the share of George Skinner the plaintiffs had no concern with the defendants' collections. This question, however, is not raised in appeal because it is not now disputed that the defendants-appellants have collected rents much in excess of their one-fourth share which they purchased from George Skinner. Their main grounds of appeal are, first, that the suits were not validly presented on behalf of Ada and Fanny Skinner; secondly, that the defendants have not received credit for certain expenses incurred by them, and, thirdly, that decrees should have been passed against Gobind Sarup also. The first two grounds of appeal carry no weight. The suits were presented in a legal manner on behalf of the two ladies who were duly represented by their general attorney. The attempt made to show that this man's power to act for the ladies had been cancelled and not restored has been rightly rejected by the court below.

As to the question of expenses, the lower court has certainly adopted an improper method for calculating village expenses. He should have allowed a certain percentage on the actual collections. But the amount allowed is a reasonable amount in whichever way it is calculated. I would not be prepared to interfere with the discretion of the lower court in this matter.

The last question as to the liability of Gobind Sarup must be considered in connection with the appeals filed by the plaintiffs. In these appeals the main question raised is whether the whole amount collected by the defendants should have been divided rateably among the co-sharers including the plaintiffs, or whether the plaintiffs were entitled only to a share of the balance after the defendants had taken for themselves their own proportionate share of the profits. The learned assistant collector says, "The plaintiffs' contention that the defendants should have got their profits only rateably cannot possibly stand in a suit for settlement of accounts under S. 165 of Act II of 1901." This view of law has been challenged before us on behalf of the plaintiffs. But, in my opinion, the view taken by the assistant collector is correct. A co-sharer as such is not required to make any collections on behalf of other co-sharers. Where there is no arrangement to the contrary, a co-sharer can collect from the tenants the amount due to himself, and there is no law which requires him to make good any defect in collections of his other co-sharers. A co-sharer, therefore, can only be sued under S. 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901) for any amount which he has collected over and above his own share. It is only where the duty of making collections has been entrusted to one person such as a lambardar that a suit can be brought against him for the rateable distribution of the profits of a mahal. The Agra Tenancy Act applies only to the territory within the jurisdiction of the Allahabad High Court. The views taken by other courts as to the rights and duties of co-sharers under similar enactments elsewhere cannot be taken into account by this Court. I can find no case in which the Allahabad High Court has ever expressed the opinion that a co-sharer as such can be held liable for anything more than the excess which he has collected and which is due by him to other co-sharers. This is clearly the view underlying the decision of a Bench of this Court in the case of Koka v. Chunni, 25 A. L. J. R. 1057 where the learned judges observed: "It must be shown by figures that the other co-sharers had no claim to the excess which the particular co-sharer who is plaintiff is claiming." To hold otherwise would, in my opinion, involve the treatment of all co-sharers as though they were lambardars, and that is not the intention of the Tenancy Act. It is true that in this particular case one of the defendants, namely, Banarsi Das, was the lambardar of both villages from the year 1330 Fasli till the year 1332 Fasli, and he is still the lambardar of the village of Dhaulana, but the suits have not been brought under S. 164 of the Tenancy Act, and there is no mention anywhere in the plaints or in the written statements that Banarsi Das is being sued as a lambardar. If the plaintiffs have chosen to treat the suits at those for profits between co-sharers they must, in my opinion, accept any disadvantage which may result from their own choice. They have wrongly in their plaints asked for decrees based upon gross rentals which could only be done in a suit brought against the lambardar in which negligence was alleged, yet to suit their own purposes they have declined to sue Banarsi Das as lambardar. In my opinion, the assistant collector is right in holding that the plaintiffs are only entitled to their share of the excess profits over and above that which has been collected by the other co-sharers in respect of their own shares.

This leads to the question of the liability of the several defendants. The learned counsel for the appellants has pointed out that the decision of the lower court that Gobind Sarup should be exempted has not been given effect to in the decrees. If Gobind Sarup made no collections the amount collected on his behalf by Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal should be regarded as an excess collection and should be subjected to a division among the other co-sharers. This plea is, in my opinion, right, but I am not satisfied with the decision of the lower court that Gobind Sarup should be exempted from the decrees. No doubt both Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup stated at one time or another that they made no collections, yet the decrees have been passed against Kanhaiya Lal, and not against Gobind Sarup, apparently because certain receipts were signed by Kanhaiya Lal and none were signed by Gobind Sarup. But the evidence shows that the share of George Skinner was purchased jointly by these three persons, Banarsi Das, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, and the evidence of their agent Sri Ram, which is supported by that of the village Patwari, shows that all the collections were made by Sri Ram on behalf of all these three persons. I consider, therefore, that the collections were made by Gobind Sarup in the same way that they were made by Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, and, consequently, all these three co-sharers are able to take from their joint receipts the amount due to themselves and they are all similarly liable to make good to the other co-sharers their share of the balance. The decrees of the lower court should be extended to Gobind Sarup, and this ground of appeal is met by the necessary alteration in the decrees.

In both suits a commissioner was appointed at the request of the plaintiffs for going through the accounts of collections made by the defendants. The lower court has said that no appreciable difference was detected by the commissioner between the actual collections and those admitted by the defendants, and he has refused to burden the defendants with the expenses incurred on account of the commissioner's fees and the diet money of a large number of tenants who were summoned to court uselessly. This decision is challenged in appeal in both suits. But in my opinion the assistant collector exercised a proper discretion in the matter and was right in not taxing these costs.

The last point raised relates only to the village Karanpur Jatta where there is a tenant named Bhuria whose rent of Rs.72 was omitted from the list of collections given by the defendants. The assistant collector gave half this amount to the plaintiffs, but as he had himself found that the defendants had already collected their own dues none of this sum could be claimed by them. Consequently three-quarters of this amount is due to the plaintiffs and one-quarter to the other co-sharers who took no part in the proceedings. Thus the amount to be added to the sum due from the defendants in the appeal relating to the village of Karanpur Jatta should be not Rs.46 as decreed by the lower court but Rs.69.

CIVIL

1931

KANHAIYA LAL v. R. H. SKINNER

In my opinion, therefore, the defendants' appeals in both cases should be allowed to this extent only that the decrees should be passed against Gobind Sarup as well as against Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, and the plaintiffs' appeal in the case of Dhaulana should be dismissed and their appeal in the case of Karanpur Jatta should be allowed to this extent only that the sum decreed against the defendants will be Rs.1,697 instead of Rs.1,674.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—I agree with the conclusions arrived at by my learned brother in these appeals on all the points, except:—

(1) The principle on which the plaintiffs' share of profits has been worked out, and

(2) The extent of liability of the lambardars, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup.

The facts, which are not in dispute, are as follows:—

Villages Karanpur Jatta and Dhaulana belonged to the following persons in the following shares:—

Victor Skinner	4 annas.
James „	4 annas.
Thomas „	4 annas.
Ada „	2 annas
Fanny „	2 annas.

Victor Skinner's share was sold to R. H. Skinner in execution of a decree. James Skinner's share was sold to one Durgahi Lal and subsequently purchased by Banarsi Das, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, defendants 1 to 3, who are not members of the same family and whose shares inter se are not specified. Victor Skinner was lambardar of village Karanpur Jatta up to Kharif 1330 Fasli, and he alone made collections up to that time. James Skinner was lambardar of village Dhaulana up to the same period, and he alone made collections in that village up to that time. Banarsi Das, defendant No. 1, was appointed lambardar of both the villages with effect from Rabi 1330 F., and held that office till the end of 1332 F. One Sri Ram alone made collections during that time. He says he acted as the 'karinda' of Banarsi Das, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. R. H. Skinner, Ada Skinner and Fanny Skinner, representing an eight anna share, brought two suits for profits under Sec. 165 of the Tenancy Act against all the co-sharers, including the past and present lambardars, for their shares of profits for the years 1330 to 1332 F. No question of misjoinder of defendants or of causes of action was raised in the lower court or in appeal. No notice thereof need, therefore, be taken of a possible defect on that score.

The plaintiffs' shares of profits payable by Victor Skinner in respect of village Karanpur Jatta for Kharif 1330 F., and that due by James Skinner in respect of village Dhaulana for Kharif 1330 F. have been separately ascertained. Similarly, their shares of profits in respect of the two villages for the period Rabi 1330 F. to the end of 1332 F. payable by Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal have been ascertained and decreed, Gobind Sarup having been exempted by the trial court.

The method of calculating the plaintiffs' share of profits was as follows:—

From the collections made by Victor Skinner in respect of Karanpur for Kharif 1330 F. was deducted his share of the entire gross rental, and the plaintiffs were given half of the balance. Similarly, from the collections made by James Skinner in respect of Dhaulana for Kharif 1330 F. his share of the entire gross rental was deducted, and the plaintiffs were given half of the balance. Collections made by Sri Ram were considered to have been made by Banarsi Das and his immediate co-sharers Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. Accordingly, the full share of all the three in the gross rental was deducted, and half of the balance was given to the plaintiffs. Each of the co-sharers was debited with his share of the Government revenue, public charges and village expenses. There is no question as to this. The result of this mode of calculation is that the lambardars together with Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup received every pie of what was due to them in respect of the gross rental of the village, collected and uncollected, while the plaintiffs got half of the balance and half of the uncollected rental which must include a fair percentage of bad debts. On the face of it, this mode of division is inequitable.

The assistant collector has held that the "plaintiffs' contention that the defendants should have got their profits only rateably cannot possibly stand in a suit for settlement of accounts under Section 165 of Act II of 1901". My learned brother has accepted this view on the ground that if a suit had been brought under S. 164 of the Act collections would have been divisible rateably among the co-sharers; but inasmuch as the plaintiffs chose to bring a suit under S. 165, the lambardar is entitled first to deduct his own share of the gross rental from the collections in his hands and divide the balance. Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup who are not lambardars, are a fortiori entitled to do so according to the above view. I regret I am unable to hold that such result necessarily follows from the plaintiffs' action in framing their suit as one under S. 165. I am of opinion that if the issue arising between the parties is identical, it does not matter whether the suit is under one or the other of the two sections. In other words, if the rights and the liabilities of the lambardar are in question in a suit under Section 165, the answer to the issue cannot be different to that to be given to an identical issue arising in a suit under S. 164. This remark is however applicable only to the collections made by the lambardar, against whom the suit is substantially one under S. 164. For reasons, which I shall presently explain, collections, said to have been made by Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, should be considered as those made by Banarsi Das, the lambardar, in the peculiar circumstances of the case.

Sec. 164 of the Tenancy Act (II of 1901) entitles a co-sharer to "sue the lambardar for his share of the profits of a mahal or any part thereof". It also makes a lambardar liable for what has been left uncollected through his negligence. The section merely defines the rights and obligations of the co-sharers and the lambardar inter se. Such rights and obligations are to be enforced between them whenever a question arises in any proceeding. S. 165 of the same Act, likewise, entitles a co-sharer to "sue another co-sharer for a settlement of account and for his share of the profits of a mahal or any part thereof." It defines the rights and obligations of co-sharers inter se in respect of the "profits of the mahal" of which every one of them should have a share. Every lambardar must also be a co-sharer, so that, if a suit is brought under S. 165, a lambardar must be made a party along with other co-sharers in whose presence the accounts are to be settled. It is to be noted that in either case, whether it is one under S. 164 or S. 165, what the plaintiffs is to sue for is "his share of the profits of a mahal or any part thereof." "Part of a mahal" in this connection can mean nothing more or less than a definite share of a mahal, such as "thok' or 'patti'. Similar expression has been used in S. 106 of the Land Revenue Act, which provides for partition of "a mahal or part thereof."

Another section, which must be taken into account in determining the question is S. 194 which provides as follows:—

"(1) Where there are two or more co-sharers in any right, title or interest, all things required or purported to be done by the possessor of the same shall be done both conjointly, unless they have appointed an agent to act on behalf of them all.

(2) Nothing in Sub-section (1) shall affect any legal custom or special contract by which a co-sharer in an undivided property is entitled to receive separately his share of the rent payable by a tenant".

We have it from the patwari that, according to the 'dastur dehi' only the lambardar can make collections in the villages in suit.

The conjoint effect of Ss. 164, 165 and 194 in the absence of a custom entitling a co-sharer to make collections for himself alone and in respect of his share, is that the lambardar alone is entitled to collect the rent and to divide the profits in his hands among the co-sharers, including himself, in proportion to their shares, after deducting public charges and incidental expenses. He is not entitled to do otherwise. If, with the consent of co-sharers, collection of rent is to be made, not by the lambardar but by another co-sharer, not in respect of his share alone but in respect of the entire gross rental, his liability is the same as that of the lambardar for the obvious reason that he occupies a fiduciary position with reference to other co-sharers. If any authority is needed for this proposition, Harcharan v. Bindu, I. L. R. 32 All. 389 may be referred to. It is, however, open to question whether such co-sharer is liable, like a lambardar, for neglecting to collect —a point on which I express no opinion.

As already stated, lambardar alone is entitled to collect rents in the villages in question according to the 'dastur dehi' or village custom. It follows that no co-sharer is entitled to collect part or whole of the rent of a tenant, and a tenant making payment to any one of them, not being the lambardar, cannot get a discharge in a suit for arrears of rent brought against him by the lambardar, who will be entitled to a decree in respect of the entire rent, the tenant having his remedy of refund from the co-sharer who collected in contravention of S. 194 and the local custom referred to.

A lambardar, being a representative of all co-sharers, cannot give himself the first charge on the collections in respect of his share of the entire gross rental. Having collected as a representative of the co-sharers, he must distribute his collections among the co-sharers, including himself, in proportion to their shares.

As to whether collections made by Sri Ram should, in the circumstances of the case, be considered to be those made by Banarsi Das lambardar or by all the three, including Kanhaiya Lal and Govind Sarup, I am of opinion that former should be taken to be the case. Sri Ram has stated that "in the said villages all the servants used to remain under my supervision, and I also used to distribute their pay. It was I who used to prepare accounts The account relating to collections which has been filed is quite correct to my knowledge and belief There was a 'roznamcha' in which I used to enter daily the amounts of collections and the expenditure I used to work under the supervision of all the three co-sharers, and the one who would come to me would take money from me. I did not ever take a receipt from them." Banarsi Das, the lambardar, had no right to associate with himself two favoured co-sharers to the detriment of others; and if he did so for his own convenience or theirs the rights of other co-sharers cannot be prejudiced. Sri Ram cannot, in my opinion, be implicitly trusted when he says that he made collections on behalf of all the three. Banarsi Das is a pleader. It is probable that he is attempting to make out such a case to enable Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup to recover their whole share of the gross rental from the collections, leaving the balance in his hands and the uncollected rent divisible among other co-sharers. Sri Ram holds no power of attorney. We have not been told how much of the collections has been appropriated by Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. The latter says he got nothing. It is not stated by Banarsi Das as to whether Kanhaiya Lal has been allowed to take one-third of the collections made by Sri Ram. I am of opinion that Banarsi Das, the lambardar, who alone is entitled and responsible to make collections, should be considered as having made them. Where a lambardar delegates his functions in whole or in part to another co-sharer, he is as much responsible for collections made by such co-sharers as for those made by a Karinda appointed by a lambardar is liable not only for what he actually collects, but also for what he neglects to collect.

Assuming, for the sake of argument, that each of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup collected, through Sri Ram, one-third of the total collections, I think their liability is not different from that of Banarsi Das. Sri Ram made collections of the entire rental of the villages and did not profess to collect only the shares of his masters. Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup should, therefore, be deemed to have collected jointly with Banarsi Das not their shares alone but what was payable to all the co-sharers. It is not suggested that by arrangement or local custom they were entitled to collect their own shares.

Except in a case where a co-sharer acts for himself and is entitled, under an arrangement or local custom, to collect his share of rent payable by each tenant or his share of the entire rental payable by all the tenants, he should be deemed to be acting for the whole body of co-sharers. The fact that he demands the whole rent payable by a tenant clothes him with a fiduciary character. To my mind, there is no difference, in principle, between a case where one of the co-sharers appropriates part of the common land and where a co-sharer collects part of the rent due to all the co-sharers. In the first case, it is settled law that other co-sharers can recover joint possession and it would be no defence to their claim, by the co-sharer who has taken exclusive possession of part of the common land, to say that there are other lands of a similar quality with similar advantages and the complaining co-sharer can appropriate to himself such land in proportion to his share, the principle being that no co-sharer can make a partition for himself by taking possession of what he thinks is less than his share. Similarly, in the second case, if a co-sharer collects part of the rent which belongs to all the co-sharers jointly he must allow them to participate in the collections made by him and should not be allowed to direct other co-sharers to recoup themselves by collecting the arrears. In such a case, law fastens a constructive trust on the co-sharer who collects money due to himself and others jointly. Section 90 of the Indian Trust Act, which occurs under Chap. IX, headed as "On certain obligations in the nature of trust", provides, inter alia, that:—"Where a co-owner or other qualified owner of any property by availing himself of his position as such, gains an advantage in derogation of the rights of the other persons interested in the property or where any such owner, as representing all persons interested in such property gains any advantage, he must hold for the benefit of all persons so interested the advantage so gained, but subject to repayment by such persons of their due share of the expenses properly incurred, and to an indemnity by the same persons against liabilities properly contracted in gaining such advantage."

There can be no doubt that Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup availed themselves of their position as co-sharers, and collected the rent due to themselves and other co-sharers. They could not have made any collections, except under cover of their position as co-sharers. Every tenant who made payment to them must have thought that he was discharging his obligation to all the co-sharers to whom the rent was payable. They, on the other hand, must have, expressly or impliedly given the tenants to understand that they would secure a discharge as against all the co-sharers by making payments to them through their 'karinda' Sri Ram. There is, therefore, no doubt that they availed themselves of their position as co-sharers. It was obviously in derogation of the rights of other co-sharers in so far as they collected not only their own shares but what was payable to all. To hold otherwise would be to open a door for endless scramble. An influential and resourceful co-sharer may, in disregard of the power of the lambardar, steal a march over him and other co-sharers by collecting from the best tenants to the extent of his share of the gross rental and leaving irrecoverable rents for the rest. This state of things, if permitted by law, would be intolerable and will lead to gross abuse in certain cases. I am clearly of opinion that Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, assuming they acted through Sri Ram, must be taken to have occupied a fiduciary position in reference to other co-sharers, including the plaintiffs, and that they must throw their collections into the hotchpot for proportionate share among all the co-sharers.

The rights being what I have stated them to be, effect should be given to them in a suit for settlement of account and "for profits of the mahal" under Section 165. If money collected by Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup is part of the "profits of the mahal" within the meaning of that Section, as I hold them to be the plaintiffs are entitled to sue for their share of it. In my opinion there is no rule of law which deprives the plaintiffs of what is in law due to them, or allows the defendants to retain what they in law are bound to pay to the plaintiffs. The claim was laid under S. 165, because the suit was directed not against the lambardar alone but also against other co-sharers, specially Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. The plaintiffs could not for obvious reasons have confined it to a claim against Banarsi Das alone without running the risk of being met with the plea that Banarsi Das made no collections and that Sri Ram made collections on behalf of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup. Moreover, Victor Skinner and James Skinner had also collected rents in Kharif 1330 F. The suits may possibly be considered to be defective for misjoinder of defendants and causes of action; but no such question has been raised. The plaintiffs cannot, in my opinion, be penalised for having instituted a suit for settlement of account. They made no incorrect allegations. The facts being all admitted, such reliefs should be granted to them as the law entitles them to.

The result of my findings is:—

(1) That a decree should be passed against Victor Skinner in respect of village Karanpur for Kharif 1330 F., James Skinner in respect of village Dhaulana for Kharif 1330 F., and against Banarsi Das who alone should be considered responsible for collections in respect of both the villages for Rabi 1330 and the whole years of 1331 and 1332 F.

(2) That collections should be divided among all the co-sharers in proportion to their shares.

(3) That Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup should be left to settle their accounts with Banarsi Das in the manner they deem fit.

(4) That in any case collections made by Victor Skinner, James Skinner and Banarsi Das should be divided in the manner mentioned in (2) above.

(5) That the liability of each defendant should be specified by the decree, as required by the mandatory provision of S. 165(2).

BY THE COURT—The members of this bench having delivered dissentient judgments a reference of the following questions is made to a third Judge or a larger bench as the Hon. Chief Justice may be pleased to nominate:

[The questions are reproduced in the judgment of Mukerji, J.]

As the decision of a learned Single Judge (Sulaiman, J.) in Lala Durga Prasad v. Ganga Saran (70 I. C. 763) may possibly be so construed as to make it in conflict with the opinion expressed by one of us and in view of the questions involved, we think it is a fit case in which the reference should be made to a bench of three Judges.

Panna Lal for the appellants.

B. Malik, M. A. Aziz and S. N. Seth for the respondents.

CIVIL 1931
KANHAIYA LAL
v.
R. H. SKINNER
Mukerji, J.

The following judgment was delivered by

MUKERJI, J.—This is a reference by two learned Judges of this Court, who have differed on certain questions of law. The points that have to be decided by me are as follows:—

> 1. Whether in a suit purporting to be one under Section 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act, II of 1901, a plaintiff is entitled to a proportionate share of the collections made by a lambardar or only to a proportionate share of the balance left after deduction of the lambardar's full share of the gross rental of the mahal?
>
> 2. Whether all the collections made by Sri Ram should be considered to have been made by Banarsi Das the lambardar?
>
> 3. Assuming that collections made by Sri Ram were in part, made for and on behalf of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup,
>
> (a) whether Banarsi Das, the lambardar, is liable to the plaintiffs for their share in such collections?
>
> (b) Whether, if Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup are liable, the plaintiffs are entitled to a proportionate share of the balance left after deduction of the full shares of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup in the gross rental of the mahal?

The facts are given in the judgment of the two learned Judges, and I need not mention them again. Suffice it to say that there were ten co-sharers in the village of Dhaulana, and there were seven co-sharers in the village of Karanpur Jatta. In respect of each of these villages separate suits were brought for settlement of accounts and recovery of a share of profits. The two suits are, in their main features, similar, and therefore they have been decided together.

The plaintiffs asked, as I have already said, for a settlement of accounts, and asked for their share of the profits. In paragraph 2 of the plaint in suit No. 8 out of which appeals Nos. 328 and 338 have arisen, it is stated that > the defendants had been co-sharers in the said village in the years in question, and had made collections, and therefore they are liable for the profits of the plaintiffs.

A similar statement was made in the connected suit No. 7 of 1926.

It happens that two of the defendants, Banarsi Das and James Skinner, in suit No. 8, and Banarsi Das and Victor Skinner in suit No. 7 of 1926, were lambardars, the Skinners for kharif 1330 Fasli, and Banarsi Das for the rest of the period in suit. The court of first instance found that James Skinner and Victor Skinner had actually made collections during the period for which they were lambardars and giving credit to them for their shares of the profits, directed that the balance should be divided among the co-sharers, and gave the plaintiffs a decree for half the sum (the balance), because the plaintiffs owned a half share. As regards the collections made for the remaining period of the years in suit, the first court found that Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, defendants Nos. 1 and 2 alone had made the collections, and the Assistant Collector similarly dealt with the amount collected. In other words, he gave Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal credit for the shares of the profits due to them, and directed the balance to be divided.

The learned Judges have differed as to this point, namely, whether the whole of the amounts collected by Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal for one period, and James Skinner and Victor Skinner for the other, should have been divided pro rata among the co-sharers, thus giving the plaintiffs a half share in the collections.

One of the learned Judges was of opinion that although the suit was framed as a suit under Section 165 of the Tenancy Act of 1901, it was virtually a suit under Section 164 of the same Act, and that Banarsi Das or James Skinner or Victor Skinner could not escape liability because the suit was framed under Section 165 of the Act. It was found by the first court that the actual collections were made by a karinda, Sri Ram, on behalf of Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, and that Kanhaiya Lal, also made some collections. One of the learned Judges thinks that this collection of Sri Ram should be taken, in law, as a collection by Banarsi Das, the lambardar alone and as being a collection made at the instance of him. The other learned Judge is of opinion that the collection made by Sri Ram should be treated as a collection made on behalf, not only of Banarsi Das and Kanhaiya Lal, but also on behalf of Gobind Sarup, the three gentlemen having jointly made the purchase of a 0-4-0 share

Before I come to give my answer to the several questions put by the learned Judges in their order of reference, I would like to say a few words on the principle on which the questions that have arisen must be decided.

A lambardar's position is well known. He is an agent on behalf of all the co-sharers for certain purposes, principally for the collection of the rent payable by tenants and payment of land revenue. At some places, he is entitled to let out the vacant land to tenants and do similar things for the benefit of the entire body of co-sharers. In this Court it has been held that he is not an agent on behalf of the co-sharers, when they have any claim against some of themselves. See Koka v. Chunni[1]. Thus, the position of the lambardar is well defined, and there is no dispute about that. But as regards a co-sharer, is he also an agent for the other co-sharers. I have not been able to find any authority for the argument that a co-sharer, merely as a co-sharer, holds any fiduciary position as regards the other co-sharers of the village. As a co-sharer, a person is entitled to certain privileges, and is also subject to the liability to pay the land revenue, not only for his own share, but for the share of his co-sharers, where the liability is joint. But beyond this no liability exists in a co-sharer. He is not an agent for the other co-sharers, and there is nothing in the constitution of a village which makes a co-sharer an agent for other co-sharers. Nobody has appointed a co-sharer an agent for others, and the position in the village of a co-sharer does not make him an agent for other co-sharers. The only authority that has been found in this Court is a decision of a learned single Judge of this Court, and is reported in Lala Durga Prasad v. Ganga Saran[2]. It was held there that a co-sharer was not an agent for other co-sharers, and I entirely agree with this view.

It has been urged that, having regard to Section 194 of the Tenancy Act of 1901, it is the duty of all co-sharers to join to make collections, and where only one co-sharer has attempted to make collections for himself, he should be treated as an agent for other co-sharers. This would

[1] 25 A. L. J. R. 1057

[2] 70 I. C. 763

Civil

1931

Kanhaiya Lal
v.
R. H. Skinner

Mukerji, J

mean that a mere usurper may be treated as an agent for the person whose property he has usurped. If a co-sharer is not entitled to make any collections under any village custom, he may be sued in the civil court for usurping the shares of other co-sharers. If a co-sharer has been, by custom, allowed to make collections for other co-sharers, he may be treated as the de facto lambardar, and may be sued under Section 164 of the Tenancy Act of 1901. The mere fact that a man who is not an agent has acted contrary to his rights, will not make him an agent for other co-sharers.

Holding the view of the law explained above, I proceed to examine the questions propounded by the learned Judges in their order of reference.

The first question is "whether in a suit purporting to be one under Section 165 of the Agra Tenancy Act, II of 1901, a plaintiff is entitled to a proportionate share of the collections made by a lambardar, or only to a proportionate share of the balance left after deduction of the lambardar's full share of the gross rental of the mahal?"

As to this question, my answer is that if the suit is under Section 165, no question of one of the defendants being a lambardar can arise. The plaintiffs claimed as against, not the lambardar, but against all the co-sharers, as co-sharers, the lambardar being treated not as a lambardar, but as a co-sharer. In the circumstances, I fail to see how a plaintiff can be allowed to change his case, unless he is permitted by the court to amend his plaint for good reasons given by him. This being my view, my answer to the question is that the lambardar, in the array of the defendants, cannot be treated as a lambardar, but must be treated as a co-sharer, and therefore he is entitled to deduct out of the collections made by him his full share of the profits of the mahal, the balance alone being divisible amongst the other co-sharers.

The point No. 2 is "whether all the collections made by Sri Ram should be considered to have been made by Banarsi Das the lambardar?"

This question may appear to a person who has not studied the facts of the case as a question of fact, and not as a question of law. I take it, however, that it was meant to be a question of law, because only a question of law can be referred to a third Judge. The idea underlying the question undoubtedly is "whether the collection made by Sri Ram, although he professed to have collected, not on behalf of Banarsi Das, the lambardar, alone, but on behalf of Banarsi Das, Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, can be treated as a collection by Banarsi Das alone?" In my opinion, there is no reason for ignoring the other co-sharers on whose behalf Sri Ram may have made the collections. The question to be decided by the learned Judges of the Division Bench is whether Sri Ram's collection is on behalf of Gobind Sarup also or not. If it be found that Sri Ram collected for all the three co-sharers, defendants Nos. 1 to 3, or if it is found that Sri Ram collected on behalf of only the first two defendants, in either case. the collection must be treated as a collection by co-sharers, and not as a collection on behalf of the lambardar alone. This is my answer to the question.

The third question is divided into two portions. The first portion would be read as follows:—

> 3 (a) Assuming that collections made by Sri Ram were, in part, made for and on behalf of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, whether Banarsi Das,

CIVIL 1931
KANHAIYA LAL
v.
R. H. SKINNER
Mukerji, J.

the lambardar, is liable to the plaintiffs for their share in such collections.

As I have said above, Banarsi Das as lambardar has no existence in the present proceedings. The accident that Banarsi Das is a lambardar has been completely ignored by the plaintiffs, and, in my opinion, the question cannot be revived. That being so, the liability of the first two defendants, or the first three defendants, as the case may be, must be a joint one and Banarsi Das's liability cannot be separated from the liability of the other co-sharers who may have jointly collected the profits with Banarsi Das.

The last question is:—

> 3 (b) Assuming that the collections made by Sri Ram were, in part, made for and on behalf of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, whether, if Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup are liable, the plaintiffs are entitled to a proportionate share of such collections or only to a proportionate share of the balance left after deduction of the full shares of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup in the gross rental of the mahal.

I have already given my answer to this question in discussing the general principles on which a suit for profits and a suit for accounts should be decided. In the view already expressed, a deduction should be made for the entire shares of Kanhaiya Lal and Gobind Sarup, along with the share of Banarsi Das, and after full credit has been given for the shares of the three defendants the balance alone will be divisible amongst the other co-sharers.

Let these answers be laid before the Bench who made the reference.

CIVIL 1931
July 27
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BAJPAI, J.

AVINAS CHANDRA BANERJI—IN THE MATTER OF*

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Sec. 291 and Contract Act, Secs. 129 and 130—Administration Bond—Surety to—Whether can claim as of right to be released from future liability—Court's power to release surety from future liability—When to be exercised.

A surety to an administration bond cannot claim as of right to be relieved of all further liability by merely expressing his intention to do so either by notice or by a proper application to the court. Secs. 129 and 130 of Contract Act do not apply to such a surety.

The court has power to release a surety for the administrator of the estate of a deceased person from all liability for future transactions from a date when full accounts are rendered and the assets duly accounted for, if it is satisfied that there is ground for it, and after providing safeguards for the heirs of the deceased. Such release however will only be operative after the date of the release and the surety will continue to be liable for any maladministration that might hereafter be discovered and which was committed prior to the date of release.

Dabendra Nath Dutt v. Administrator-General of Bengal, I. L. R. 35 Cal. 955 distinguished. Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi, I. L. R. 29 Cal. 68 referred to.

O. M. Chiene for the applicant.

K. N. Katju, Banke Behari and R. N. Basu for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an application by the surety for Dr. P. D. Banerji who was at one time appointed an administrator of the estate

---

*Testamentary Case 23 of 1929

CIVIL
1931
AVINAS CHANDRA BANERJI in re
Sulaiman, A. C. J.

of his deceased father Dr. Abinash Chandra Banerji.

A preliminary objection is taken to the hearing of this application on the ground that there is no provision of law under which a surety can be discharged and the High Court has no jurisdiction to entertain such an application. Reliance is placed by the learned counsel for the opposite party on the case of Kandhya Lal v. Manki[1] but in that case the learned Judges did not expressly lay down that they had no jurisdiction to direct that a surety be discharged. They certainly held that he could not of his own free will withdraw from his suretyship and they also remarked that there was no express provision in the Probate and Administration Act. But that case is no authority for the proposition that the High Court to which the security bond is given has no power whatsoever to relieve the surety from all future liability. The case directly in favour of the applicant is Raj Narain Mookerjee v. Ful Kumari Debi[2], although it went to a length to which it is not necessary for us in this case to go. That case accordingly was not approved of by the Madras High Court in the case of Subroya Chetty v. Ragammall[3]. The case decided by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Debendra Nath Dutt v. Administrator-General of Bengal[4] is distinguishable because their Lordships merely held that the security bond given by the surety did not become void when the letters of administration were cancelled, and that, while they remained unrevoked, the grantee was to all intents and purposes administrator of the estate, and for his acts and defaults as administrator the sureties were and remained responsible.

It seems to us that although it is true that a surety cannot claim as of right to be relieved of all liability by merely expressing his intention to do so either by notice or by a proper application to the court and although it is also true that the case of a surety whose security has been accepted by a court, cannot be treated as one falling under Sections 129 and 130 of the Indian Contract Act so as to entitle him to put an end to the guarantee at his will, yet that is quite a different thing from saying that the High Court to which the guarantee is given has itself no power to exonerate the surety from all liability for future transactions. It may well be that at the time when the surety furnished security, the administrator was honest and was believed to be capable of administering the estate in a proper way but he might subsequently become dishonest or might mismanage the estate, and so it would be astonishing if there were no provisions of law which would give the surety remedy by way of applying to the court and asking to be relieved. He cannot merely sit idle and watch the administrator committing waste and misappropriation, knowing full well that the liability will be his own. Similarly there may be a case where the security bond becomes inoperative subsequently, as where after a security bond is accepted by the court the surety becomes an insolvent. If the preliminary objection is sound, the court would become functus officio after the earlier document was filed, and would be unable to direct a fresh security to be filed by another surety. It seems to us that when the guarantee or undertaking is given to the court itself, there is

---

[1] I. L. R. 31 All. 56
[2] I. L. R. 29 Cal. 68
[3] I. L. R. 28 Mad. 161
[4] I. L. R. 35 Cal. 955

CIVIL

1931

AVINAS CHANDRA BANERJI in re

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

nothing to prevent the court, if satisfied that good cause is shown, from cancelling that undertaking. In the present case the letters of administration were subsequently revoked because it was found that the administrator had omitted to bring to the knowledge of the court certain facts relating to a will of the deceased, and the administrator ceased to be liable for the administration of the estate. We think that this is a sufficient ground for the surety to be relieved from all further liability from a date when full accounts are rendered and the assets duly accounted for. In ordinary cases of surety for appearance of the parties there is express provision in the Code of Civil Procedure for release. Similarly the surety can under certain circumstances be relieved from further liability under the Contract Act. On the same analogy it would seem that we have full power to grant release if satisfied that there is ground for it, after providing safeguards for the heirs of the deceased. Such release however will only be operative after the date of the release and the surety will continue to be liable for any maladministration that might hereafter be discovered and which was committed prior to the date of release. We accordingly overrule the preliminary objection.

It however appears that the opposite party does not think that the account has been fully rendered. We accordingly allow three months time for the opposite party to file written objections of which a copy should be supplied to the applicant.

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 17

MUKERJI, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

GOPI SHANKER (Plaintiff)

versus

LILAWATI (minor) THROUGH SHIMBHU NATH NAZIR AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Abadi—House in—Whether appurtenant to holding—Question of fact—No presumption of law—House appurtenant to holding—Meaning of.

There is no presumption of law that the house occupied by a cultivator in a village is appurtenant to his holding, and either the house or the site must be given up, simply because the tenancy has either been lost or has lapsed by death in favour of the zemindar.

Dubri Lal v. Dholu Rai, 3 A. L. J. R. 619, Nazir Hasan v. Shibba, I. L. R. 27 All. 81, Shobrat Singh v. Jhagru, 13 A. L. J. R. 745 and Bhaddar v. Khairuddin Husain, I. L. R. 29 All. 133 referred to.

Per NIAMATULLAH, J.—When it is said that a house is an appurtenant to a holding, what is meant is that the site was let to the tenant for the construction of his residential house on the express or implied understanding that it would go with the holding and that, if he be ejected from the latter or voluntarily relinquished it, his right to occupy the site would cease.

There is no presumption that a tenant is entitled to occupy the site of his house so long as he retains his holding, and the landlord must establish by direct evidence or proof of circumstances which justify the inference that the defendant's right to the site is dependent on his right to retain the holding.

---

*S. A. 73 of 1929

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RATAN LAL, Additional Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad, reversing a decree of BABU SHEOBARAN SINGH, Munsif of Kanauj.

U. S. Bajpai for the appellant.

K. C. Mital for the respondents.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This appeal has been referred to a Bench of two Judges, because the learned Judge before whom it came thought that the matter under consideration required careful examination. The plaintiff is the zemindar of the village and the defendant, who is a minor, is the daughter of a tenant who cultivated some of the plaintiff's lands in the village. The tenant having died and, under the tenancy law, the daughter not being an heir to the tenant, the tenancy lapsed to the plaintiff. He, thereupon brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, to recover possession over the house occupied by the late tenant, on the allegation that the house also lapsed to the zemindar. The plaintiff accordingly asked for possession over the house. In the plaint, the plaintiff suggested that the court might, if it thought necessary, allow the defendant to remove the materials of the house leaving the site to be occupied by the plaintiff.

The defence was that the plaintiff had no right to turn the defendant out of the house, that the house had been occupied for a hundred years by the defendants' ancestors and that the mere fact that the tenancy lapsed to the plaintiff would not be any ground for the plaintiff to take possession of the late tenants' house. The court of first instance decreed the suit for possession of the site and allowed the defendant three months' time to remove the materials. On appeal the learned Additional Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad dismissed the suit in its entirety. He held that the house was not an appurtenance to the holding of the late tenant Girwar.

In this Court it was urged that the presumption of law was that the house was an appurtenance to the holding, especially as the house in dispute was the only one occupied by the deceased. Other points were taken in the grounds of appeal but they were not pressed.

The only point of law that we have to decide is whether there is any presumption in the case of a house occupied by a tenant cultivating land in the village that the house is an appurtenance to the holding and when the holding lapses to the zemindar, the house also lapses to him, or in any case the zemindar is entitled to take away the site leaving the lawful heir of the late tenant to remove the materials.

I have always held that whether a house is an appurtenance to a holding or not is not a question of law but is a question of fact. That this must be so ought to be clear on a consideration of what follows.

To enable the residents of a village to receive a supply of their many necessaries of life the zemindar must allow many such people to occupy the site of the abadi as do not cultivate the land. For example, a blacksmith, a carpenter, a presser of oil seeds, a grain parcher, a weaver of cloths and others carrying on similarly useful but humble professions would be needed to be settled in a village. These artisans need not necessarily cul-

CIVIL 1931
GOPI SHANKER
v.
LILAVATI
Mukerji, J.

tivate land. Some of them, if and when the family grew up might think of adding to their income by cultivating some land, taking it not necessarily, from the zemindar but from tenants of the village or other holders of land. If these artisans should, later on, give up the land which they cultivate, can it be said that their house was an appurtenance to their holding? Again suppose these artisans after they have been settled take a lease of certain lands for cultivation from the zemindar himself, can it be said that their residential houses are appurtenances to their holdings? The answer must be in the negative.

If it had been the case that none but a cultivator of land was necessary in the village economy, it might have been argued that a cultivator settled in the village simply because he is a cultivator and nothing else. I have omitted to mention an important class of people who are found settled in villages and who are very useful as labourers, but who do not necessarily cultivate lands. These are chamars, sweepers and others who mostly work as labourers, and cultivate lands, if ever, mostly as sub-tenants. In their case, the cultivation is more or less nominal. The chamars supply the shoes, the leather bags for drawing water, the whips for driving cattle, and they are remunerated, sometimes, by a share in corn and sometimes by cash and sometimes by being given a few bighas of land to cultivate. It is always a question of fact at what time the cultivator came to live in the village and at what time did he take up the cultivation of land. There is not the least reason to suppose that the cultivation of every man in the village synchronizes with his occupation of a site in the village abadi.

On general considerations I feel bound to entertain the opinion which I have always entertained and which I have described above.

Looking to the authority, I do not find that there is any uniformity in the decisions. In the case of Dubri Lal v. Dholu Rai[1] the zemindar sued to eject the defendants from his two houses, on the allegations that they had been newly built without his consent. The defence was that the defendants were cultivating land in the village, that the houses were more than fifty years old and had been erected with the zemindar's consent. The first court decreed the suit on the ground that the defendants were mere licensees and could be ejected at any time by the zemindar. The lower appellate court dismissed the suit holding that the houses were more than twelve years old and the plaintiff appealed. Banerji, J. remarked that as the defendants were cultivating land in the village, they were entitled to live in the village and occupy the sites so long as they cultivated the land. Then he said:

> If they are not in possession as tenants, their possession would be deemed to be adverse. In either case the plaintiffs were not entitled to eject them.

This decision recognizes the fact that a person could be occupying a village site otherwise than a cultivatory tenant. His lordship did not decide that every cultivator's house was necessarily a part of the holding and must be given up when the holding is lost. In deciding this case Banerji, J. professed to follow an earlier case, viz., Nazir Hasan v. Shibba[2]. There the suit was for the ejectment of the defendants from a room. The two learned Judges who decided the case said:

---

[1] 3 A. L. J. R. 619

[2] I. L. R. 27 All. 81

> Now it is apparent that either the tenants are entitled to the room in question as appurtenant to their holding or, if it be not appurtenant to their holding, they have acquired it by adverse possession.

This observation clearly recognizes that a man occupying a portion of a village site does not necessarily occupy it as a cultivator.

In the case of Moti Ram v. Mewa Ram[3] it was definitely laid down by Banerji, J., who had a considerable experience of this part of the country, that there was no legal presumption that every dwelling house belonging to an agriculturist was appurtenant to his holding. He remarked:

> A house may or may not be appurtenant to the holding, and the fact that it was appurtenant to the holding must be established in each case upon evidence.

A similar view was expressed by Rafiq, J. in Net Ram v. Tej Ram[4].

The same view was adopted in the case of Moti v. Munna mentioned in the Reporter's Diary at page 3 of the Journal portion of 10 Allahabad Law Journal.

No doubt there are cases in which it has been remarked that so long as a tenant cultivates land in a village, he is entitled to stick to the abadi land on which his residential house is, but these remarks cannot be construed as meaning that whenever the tenancy is lost the right to the house is also lost. In the Full Bench case of Saddu v. Behari Singh[5] there was a partition in the village and a tenant's holding fell into the share of one co-sharer and his residential house fell into the share of another co-sharer. The co-sharer in whose mahal the tenant's residential house had fallen demanded rent from the tenant, and in the alternative sought his ejectment. It was held that so long as the tenant cultivated the land in the village, he was entitled to occupy the site of his house, and the mere fact that the zemindar co-sharers had divided the village lands could not put the cultivator in a worse position. This case only lays down this that a person cultivating land in the village has a right to occupy his house if one is there in the village, so long as he cultivates the land. As I have said, the converse proposition does not follow, viz., when the cultivator ceases, the house must go.

Devolution of property other than cultivatory holding is regulated by the personal law of the tenant, while the rule as to devolution of a tenancy holding is liable to fluctuate and has indeed been fluctuating from time to time. Under Act XII of 1881 (N. W. P. Rent Act Section 9) the rights of an occupancy tenant devolved "as if it were land." If that law had still been in force, the daughter of the deceased tenant would have inherited the cultivatory holding as much as she has inherited her father's house. The law of inheritance as to cultivatory holding was changed in 1901 and a daughter was excluded from inheritance. Unless, therefore it can be established as a matter of fact that the house is nothing but a part and parcel of a tenancy, it cannot be said that the daughter is not entitled to inherit the house. If she is entitled to inherit the house, she is entitled to live in it, unless it is proved that there was a contract to the contrary.

In Dalel v. Bhajju[6] a cultivator used a piece of land for a long time as threshing floor. The zemindar sought to eject the cultivator from his threshing floor, and it was held that the tenant held it as part of the contract of tenancy. This decision implies that what is the contract of tenancy is a question of fact. This decision was followed by myself and Sulaiman, J. in Letters Patent Appeal No. 121 of 1923 decided on July 24, 1924.

---

[3] Unpublished Decisions, Vol. II 720

[4] 11 A. L. J. R. 445

[5] I. L. R. 30 All. 282

[6] I. L. R. 16 All. 191

There can be no doubt that in the case of Shohrat Singh v. Jhagru[7] Knox, J. went so far as to lay down, as the general law of the land, that where a tenant is ejected from his tenancy or abandons it, unless there be some special custom to the contrary, the site on which he has built his house reverts to the zemindar and the tenant must remove the materials therefrom. With all respect I am unable to accept this view of the learned single Judge. It lays the burden of proof on the defendant and not on the plaintiff. The village site may be the property of the zemindar. but under Section 110 of the Evidence Act when a person is shown to be in possession of any property the presumption is that he is the owner of that property, and any person who asserts to the contrary must prove that fact. In view of the fact that a zemindar is usually the owner of all the village sites, it may be conceded that the zemindar has the proprietary right in the site, but it does not follow that the man in possession of the house is liable to be ejected at the sweet will of the proprietor of the site.

It is not the case here that the plaintiff-zemindar is seeking ejectment of the minor daughter of his deceased cultivator, on the ground that he is the owner of the site and he asked the minor to vacate the land, and, therefore, she must prove her right to continue in occupation of the site. It has been proved in this case "that the appellant and her ancestors have been occupying the house since over a hundred years and on plaintiff's evidence themselves built it." Even if the original right to occupy the house started as a matter of license from the zemindar, it may very well be said that, on the basis of the license, a permanent building has been erected and the right to revoke the license has come to an end.

I have so far not considered the case of those persons who were once zemindars of a village and in that capacity lived on the village site and subsequently lost the zemindari right but continued to cultivate certain lands in the village either as ex-proprietary tenants or as ordinary tenants with no rights of occupancy. How can it be said in the case of such persons that the house is appurtenant to the tenancy.

Enough has been said to establish, and I hold accordingly, that there is no presumption of law that the house occupied by a cultivator in a village is appurtenant to his holding, and either the house or the site must be given up, simply because the tenancy has either been lost or has lapsed by death in favour of the zemindar.

In the result I would dismiss the appeal with costs throughout.

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—I agree with the view expressed by my learned brother on the sole question arising in this appeal, namely, whether the site of a tenant's house should be presumed to be an appurtenant to his holding, so that, in case he is ejected from the latter or voluntarily relinquishes it without a fresh arrangement with the landlord as regards the site, he must surrender the site also. It is clear to me that, if the site of a house occupied by a tenant in an agricultural village is not an appurtenant

---

[7] 13 A. L. J. R. 745

Civil

1931

Gopi Shanker v. Lilawati

Niamat-ullah, J.

to his holding, the landlord is not at liberty, in the absence of a custom to the contrary, to require the tenant to vacate the site of his house on payment of the value for the superstructure by the landlord or by requiring him to remove the materials if the tenant so desired. In such a case, the landlord and the occupier of a house on a village site stand in the relationship of a licensor and licensee. If, acting upon the license, the licensee executed a work of a permanent character and incurred expenses in the execution thereof, a licensor is not at liberty to revoke the license. Unless the house is of a temporary and inexpensive character a riaya's house is to be deemed as a work of a permanent character (see Bahadur v. Khair-ud-din Husain[1]). If, on the other hand, the house is an appurtenant to the cultivatory holding of the occupier thereof, it should go with the holding. When it is said that a house is an appurtenant to a holding, what is meant is that the site was let to the tenant for the construction of his residential house on the express or implied understanding that it would go with the holding and that, if he be ejected from the latter or voluntarily relinquished it, his right to occupy the site would cease. It cannot be doubted that landlords in this Province allow people to settle in their villages not only because they become tenants, but also for purposes having no reference to cultivation of land. It happens not infrequently that a member of a tenant's family decides to separate from his father or brother and to build a separate house for himself with the permission of the landlord, though he cultivates no land himself for years to come. Similarly, where the population of a village is sparse and the landlord desires to increase it by pursuading people from outside to settle in his village, not only to give him a larger number of persons willing to cultivate the village lands but to enable him to have a larger supply of labourers, he having a big farm or indigo factory of his own. Even in cases in which tenants cultivating land are also occupiers of houses, such houses are not appurtenants to particular holdings. The holdings of tenants and their sizes frequently change; but the tenants continue to occupy their houses. In such cases, it is difficult to say that the house occupied by a particular tenant, who has had a shifting and varying holding, is appurtenant to any particular holding. If, in such a case, the tenant is liable to ejectment from the site of his house, on being ejected from his holding, which is not the same as the one he occupied when he built his house, it can only be on the supposition that he was allowed to build his house on the village site on the understanding that he would vacate it not when he is ejected from his then holding, but when he altogether ceases to be a cultivator in the village. In all these circumstances it is not always possible to say that the right of occupiers of village sites to retain them depends upon their right to retain their cultivatory holdings. Whether it is so must be found in each individual case, having regard to the character of the village and the circumstances in which the house was built and the cultivatory holding of the occupier came into existence. In cases of old inhabitants of a village who have cultivated land and occupied houses in the village abadi as far back as living memory goes, it is most difficult for the tenant to establish that his tenure of the site of his house and cultivatory holding

[1] I. L. R. 29 All. 133

CIVIL

1931

GOPI SHANKER v. LILAWATI

Niamat-ullah, J.

had different origins and that his right to occupy the site did not, in any manner, depend upon his cultivating land in the villages. On the other hand, it is difficult for the landlord to establish the contrary.

There is no rule of law which raises a presumption that the occupier of a house in village abadi, if he happens to be also a cultivator in the village, is entitled to retain the site so long as he cultivates land in the village. The court may, however, presume the existence of any fact which it thinks likely to have happened, regard being had to the natural course of events, human conduct and public and private business in their relation to the facts of a particular case, (Section 114, Indian Evidence Act). While, therefore, the circumstances of a particular case may give rise to an inference that a tenant is entitled to occupy part of the village site, so long as he is a cultivator in the village, or so long as he cultivates a particular holding, it is not permissible to presume generally that the right to occupy the site of a house in the village abadi ceases when he ceases to cultivate land in the village or is ejected from a particular holding. I do not think the practice of the landlords to allow people to build houses on village sites on the understanding, express or implied, that the latter would vacate them on ceasing to be cultivators or on being ejected from their holdings is so common as to justify a presumption to that effect. The cases in which it has been definitely held that there is a presumption that a tenant is entitled to occupy the site of his house so long as he retains his holding are decisions by single judges, whose views are opposed to those by other learned judges sitting singly in other cases. There is no decision of a Division Bench of this Court on the point; and we are free to accept one or the other of the two views. I am not prepared to accept the proposition that a landlord seeking to eject his tenant from the site of his house after his ejectment from his agricultural holding starts with a presumption in his favour. He must establish by direct evidence, or by proof of circumstances which justify the inference that the defendant's right to the site is dependent on his right to retain the holding. It is not possible to lay down any general rule. Each case must depend upon its own peculiar features.

I agree with the order which my learned brother proposes to pass.

BY THE COURT—We dismiss the appeal with costs throughout.

Appeal dismissed

Civil

1932

Jan. 2

King, J.

MOHAMMAD SALIM-ULLAH KHAN (Plaintiff)
versus
KHALIL-UR-RAHMAN KHAN (Defendant)*

Court-Fees Act, (VII of 1870), Art. 1(d)—Memorandum of objections filed under Or. 41, R. 26 C. P. C.—Not liable to court-fee—Memorandum neither an "application" nor a "petition".

> No court fee is chargeable upon a memorandum of objections filed under Or. 41, R. 26 C. P. C. Damodar Prasad v. Masudan Singh, A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 85 followed.
>
> Such a memorandum cannot properly be held to be either an "application" or a "petition" presented to the High Court.

First Appeal from the decision of the Assistant Collector 1st. Class of Aligarh.

A. M. Khwaja (with him B. E. O'Conor and T. A. K. Sherwani) for the appellant.

The following judgment was delivered by

King, J. King, J.—This is a reference under Section 5 of the Court Fees Act, 1870.

The question is whether a court fee is chargeable upon a memorandum of objections filed under O. 41, R. 26 C. P. C.

There is no express provision in the Act making such a document liable to the payment of a court fee. The practice hitherto has been to levy a court fee of Rs.2 on such documents. It is suggested that this practice is justified under Art. 1(d) of Schedule II which makes an application or petition presented to a High Court chargeable with a court fee of Rs.2. The question is whether a memorandum of objections filed under O. 41, R. 26 C. P. C. should be held to be an application or petition presented to the High Court. In my opinion the answer is in the negative. The memorandum does not request the Court to take any action or to pass any order. Its object is to inform the Court and the opposite party that the objector challenges the finding of the court below on certain points or on certain grounds. I do not think it can properly be held to be either an "application" or a "petition". Fiscal statutes must be strictly construed and if a document is not clearly chargeable under the statute the person sought to be charged in respect of document is entitled to the benefit of doubt.

In Damodar Prasad v. Masudan Singh[1] a single Judge of the Patna High Court has expressly held that no court fee is chargeable upon a memorandum of objections filed under O. 41, R. 26. I agree to his reasoning and conclusion.

No authority to the contrary has been shown to me.

Following the ruling cited I hold that no court fee is chargeable upon a memorandum of objections filed under O. 41, R. 26 C. P. C.

---

*Stamp Report in F. A. 464 of 1929

[1] A. I. R. 1928 Pat. 85

CIVIL

1931

July 16

SEN, J.

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (Plaintiff)

versus

GIRDHARI LAL SHAMBHUNATH (Defendant)*

Succession Act (XXXIV of 1925), Secs. 214 and 381—Property descends to Crown by escheat—Whether Sec. 214 applicable.

Where the property descends to the Crown by escheat, it could not be said that the Crown was claiming the property by right of 'succession' within the meaning of Sec. 214 of the Succession Act. The Succession Act is not applicable to the Crown where it takes the property upon escheat.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of MAULVI S. M. SAIDUDDIN, Subordinate Judge of Agra.

Sankar Saran for the applicant.

N. P. Asthana and Baij Nath Sahai for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an application for civil revision by the Secretary of State for India in Council who figures as plaintiff in the action. The suit was to recover interest on five hundis of various dates which were drawn by the firm Ram Narain Chunni Lal on the firm Girdhari Lal Shimbhu Nath. The hundis were payable 61 days after the date of execution.

The firm of Ram Narain Chunni Lal was owned by Chunni Lal. He died in April 1925 before the hundis had matured. He is said to have died without leaving any issue.

Upon his death, three rival claimants appeared on the scene; one claimed to be the collateral heir of Chunni, the second claimed under a will, and the third in the right of escheat. A triangular contest is going on between these three and I am informed that litigations are pending in appeal before this Court.

On July 14, 1925, Rai Bahadur Seth Soorajbhan, Government Treasurer of Agra, sent a notice on behalf of the Collector of Agra to the defendant calling upon him to pay up the principal and interest due on the hundis. The defendant did not make the desired payment.

On April 21, 1927, the defendant appears to have to a certain extent changed his mind; for on that date the defendant deposited the principal amount due on the hundis in the Imperial Bank of Agra to the credit of the Collector of Agra.

The Collector served a notice upon the defendant asking him to pay the interest due on the hundis from the date of their maturity upto April 21, 1927, when the principal sum was paid. The defendant did not respond to this notice; hence the suit.

The suit was instituted on March 5, 1929.

Various points were raised in defence but the one which was seriously pressed was that, in view of the provisions of Sections 214 and 381 of the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1926) the plaintiff was not entitled to claim interest without obtaining a succession certificate. It may be noticed that this plea had not been taken in the written statement as

---

*Civ. Rev. 486 of 1930

CIVIL
1931
SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
v.
GIRDHARI LAL SHAMBHUNATH
Sen, J.

originally filed. At a later stage, the defendant applied for the amendment of his written statement by the inclusion of this plea. His written statement was allowed to be amended.

On December 20, 1929, the court passed an order directing the plaintiff to obtain a succession certificate. Thereupon the plaintiff applied for and obtained the required certificate on June 2, 1930. This certificate was duly filed in court. The court however dismissed the plaintiff's suit on the following ground:—

> The present plaintiff obtained succession certificate on June 2, 1930 after the filing of the present suit. Evidently upto June 2, 1930, there was none who could give a valid discharge and so the defendant cannot be held liable for interest for the period in question.

Where there is a vacant inheritance, the property lapses to the Crown by the rule of escheat. The escheat to the Crown is not due to any rule of succession. The right of escheat is a prerogative of the Crown and the said prerogative is recognised universally in every system of civilised jurisprudence. I would emphasise the fact that upon the death of a person without leaving any heirs his estate devolves upon the Crown under its general prerogative and not by the reason of any rule of succession. Escheat is the vanishing point in the law of inheritance. Where succession ends, escheat begins. The law on the subject has been discussed in a number of cases and reference may be usefully made to the Collector of Muslipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narrainpah[1], Cavaly Vencata Narrainpah v. The Collector of Muslipatam[2] and Sonet Kooer v. Himmat Bahadur[3].

Section 214 of the Indian Succession Act provides that > no court shall pass a decree against a debtor of a deceased person for payment of his debt to a person claiming on succession to be entitled to the effects of the deceased person or to any part thereof except on the production by the person so claiming of (III) a succession certificate granted under Part X and having the debt specified therein.

Where the property descends to the Crown by escheat it could not be said that the Crown was claiming the property by right of 'succession' within the meaning of Section 214 of the Indian Succession Act. Section 381 of the Indian Succession Act provides that > the succession certificate granted by the District Judge with respect to debts and securities specified therein will be conclusive against the person owing such debts or liable on such securities and shall afford full indemnity to all such persons as regards all payments made, or dealings had, in good faith in respect of such debts or securities to or with the person to whom the certificate was granted.

No authorities have been cited in support of the proposition that the provisions of Sections 214 and 381 of the Indian Succession Act are applicable to the Crown where the property vests in the Crown by reason of a vacant inheritance. This case therefore is one of first impression. Upon general principles, I am of opinion that the Indian Succession Act is not applicable to the Crown, when it takes the property upon escheat. The ground therefore upon which the judgment proceeds cannot be supported.

An important plea was raised by the defendant in paragraph 9 of written statement which runs as follows:—Neither were the hundis presented to the contesting defendant on the due date nor did there appear any person entitled to take the money. The question therefore which still remains for determination is whether the plaintiff could claim interest on the hundis without presenting the hundis after their maturity.

---

[1] 8 Moore's I. A. 500

[2] 11 Moore's I. A. 619

[3] I. L. R. 1 Cal. 391 at 401

I allow the application, set aside the decree of the court below and remand the case to that court for disposal of the case with reference to the issue indicated above. Costs here and heretofore shall abide the event.

Revision allowed

In re THE OFFICIAL RECEIVER*

Civil 1931
July 23
Mukerji, J.
Sen, J.

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), Sec. 57(4)—Government Notification 359|VII-277 dated March 11, 1930—Official Receiver—Remuneration fixed at 5% of "gross assets"—Meaning of "gross assets"—Interest of mortgagee—Not to be taken into account in estimating the assets of insolvent debtor.

Where the houses owned by insolvents were subject to a mortgage of Rs.2,500, and the insolvents, the creditors and the mortgagee agreed that this property should be sold to the mortgagee for Rs.3,500, and the latter was to keep Rs.3,125 for himself and pay Rs.375 to the unsecured creditors; and by a Government Notification No. 359|VII-277, dated March 11, 1930 the remuneration of the official receiver was fixed at '5% of the gross assets coming into his hands, subject to a minimum commission of Rs.5 in each case', held, that the words 'gross assets' in this particular case must mean that portion of the property which was represented by the amount Rs.375. The official receiver therefore should have his remuneration calculated on the sum of Rs.375.

The word 'assets' means 'effects of an insolvent debtor or bankrupt applicable to the payment of his debts'. This definition implies that the interest of the mortgagee is not to be taken into account in considering what are the assets of an insolvent debtor, because a mortgage is the transfer of an interest in the immovable property and what has already been parted with by the insolvent cannot be considered to be his property available for distribution among his unsecured creditors. In re The Official Receiver, 1930 A. L. J. R. 1497 and E. V. David v. The Judge Small Causes, 1931 A. L. J. R. 670 distinguished.

Reference in the matter of the Official Receiver's remuneration.

Shabd Saran for the Official Receiver.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

Mukerji, J.—This is a reference by the Insolvency Judge of Agra, through the District Judge of the same place, as to what is the remuneration, which should be paid to the official receiver under the circumstances of this case.

The circumstances are these:—The insolvents owned property, which consisted of two houses and some movables. The houses were subject to an encumbrance, presumably, simple mortgage, of Rs.2,500. The insolvents and the creditors and the mortgagee came to terms with the result that they agreed that the houses should be sold to the mortgagee for Rs.3,500, that the mortgagee should pay three annas in the rupee to all the unsecured creditors of the insolvent and keep the balance for himself, in full satisfaction of the mortgage. It has been ascertained that this arrangement would enable the mortgagee to keep Rs.3,125 for himself and he would be liable to pay Rs.375 to the unsecured creditors.

---

*Mis. Case 101 of 1931

The remuneration of the official receiver has been fixed by a notification of the Government. This notification is for Agra and will be found published in the U. P. Gazette of March 15, 1930. The Notification bears No. 359|VII-277, dated March 11, 1930. It runs as follows:—

> The remuneration of the abovementioned official receiver is fixed at 5 per cent of the gross assets coming into his hands, subject to a minimum commission of Rs.5 in each case.

We have to construe the words "gross assets" having regard to the circumstances of the present case.

The learned counsel, who appears for the official receiver, has brought to our notice two cases decided in this Court in which it was held that where an official receiver is allowed to sell property, which was encumbered, as free from encumbrance, with the consent of the mortgagee, the total price fetched by the sale of the property was to be taken as the "gross assets" in that case. These cases cited before us are, in re The Official Receiver[1] and E. V. David v. The Judge Small Causes[2]. It has been argued that the present case is on all fours with the cases decided in this Court and that the official receiver should be paid 5 per cent on the sum of Rs.3,500.

We are not prepared to accept this contention. We have consulted Murray's English Dictionary and we find that the word 'assets' is defined as 'effects of an insolvent debtor or bankrupt applicable to the payment of his debts'. This definition implies that the interest of the mortgagee is not to be taken into account in considering what are the assets of an insolvent debtor. This must be so, because a mortgage is the transfer of an interest in the immovable property and what has already been parted with by the insolvent cannot be considered to be his property available for distribution among his unsecured creditors. In the cases quoted on behalf of the official receiver, the entire property of the insolvents, free from encumbrance, came into the hands of the official receiver, and he was enabled by the consent of the mortgagee to sell the property. For this reason, it was held that the property sold by the official receiver was the gross assets of the insolvents.

The word 'gross', again, means the 'whole', 'entire' and 'total'. This word qualifying 'assets' does not give the latter word any extended meaning beyond this that the entirety of the assets have to be taken into consideration.

In the case before us the rights of the mortgagee have not been waived and the official receiver never had in his hands the property of the insolvents as it was before the mortgage.

That being the case we are forced to the conclusion that the words 'gross assets' in this particular case must mean that portion of the property which is represented by the amount of Rs.375. The official receiver therefore should have his remuneration calculated on the sum of Rs.375.

---

[1] 1930 A. L. J. R. 1497

[2] 1931 A. L. J. R. 670

Nothing has been said in the reference as to what became of the movable properties attached. If those properties came into the hands of the official receiver he would be entitled to his 5 per cent commission on the value of those properties as well. This is only for the information of the insolvency court lest it should be the case that it has overlooked this point.

We may point out that an objection was taken by the insolvents before the insolvency Court, that the official receiver has done nothing for the benefit and in the interest of the insolvents or the creditors and therefore he should get nothing. As the insolvency court has pointed out, the official receiver will do all that is necessary to complete the scheme at which the parties have arrived and he was always prepared to do all that was necessary to be done in the case. We think, therefore, that the insolvency court was right in holding that the official receiver was entitled to such remuneration as the rules awarded him. We direct that a copy of this order be sent to the insolvency court through the District Judge of Agra as our answer to the reference.

CRIMINAL
1931
Sep. 3
SULAIMAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

HURMAT (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Municipalities Act (Local Act II of 1916), Sec. 307—Recurring fine—Cannot be imposed on first conviction.

Under Sec. 307 of the Municipalities Act (II of 1916) a recurring fine cannot be imposed at the time of the first conviction but on the second conviction when it is proved that the offender has persisted in the offence for which he was first convicted. Amir Hasan Khan v. Emperor, 16 A. L. J. R. 527 relied on.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by RADHA KISHEN ESQ., Additional Sessions Judge of Agra.

K. D. Malaviya for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a criminal reference by the Additional Sessions Judge of Agra recommending that the recurring fine of Re.1 per day imposed on the accused should be set aside.

A notice was issued by the Municipal Board to the accused for removal of certain constructions. The accused failed to comply with the notice and was prosecuted. The learned Judge has agreed that his conviction was proper.

The magistrate, however, in addition to imposing a fine of Rs.20 for the offence has ordered that if the construction be not removed within ten days, the accused shall further pay a fine of Re.1 per day.

The learned Sessions Judge has rightly referred to the case of Amir Hasan Khan v. Emperor[1] in which a learned Judge of this Court held that such a recurring fine should not be imposed at the time of the first conviction itself.

*Cr. Ref. 194 of 1931

[1] 16 A. L. J. R. 527

Section 307 of the Municipalities Act (Act II of 1916) provides that the person shall be liable > on a conviction before the magistrate to a fine which might extend to Rs.500 and in case of a continuing breach he shall be liable to a further fine which might extend to Rs.5 for every day after the date of the first conviction during which it might be proved against him that he had persisted in the offence.

The expression "first conviction" suggests that the recurring fine is to be imposed on the second conviction. This conclusion is quite clear when it is borne in mind that before the recurring fine is imposed the offender must be "proved" to have persisted in the offence. It is obvious that in this trial there is no evidence, much less any proof that the offender has persisted in the offence or that he would persist in the offence. The magistrate was therefore not justified in presuming that he might persist and imposing on him the fine in advance. If the accused does persist in the offence, he is of course liable to be prosecuted a second time, on which occasion the recurring fine can be imposed. We accordingly accept this reference and set aside that portion of the order of the magistrate which imposed the daily fine.

Reference accepted

CRIMINAL
1931
Sep. 3
SULAIMAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

ABDUL RAHMAN (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 195 (1) (a) (as amended in 1923)—District Magistrate granted 'sanction'—Believing that Superintendent of Police would thereby be enabled to prosecute accused—Whether a proper complaint.

An information lodged by accused having been found to be false, the investigating officer moved the Superintendent of Police for the prosecution of accused under Sec. 182 Penal Code, whereupon the Superintendent enquired of the District Magistrate whether he had any objection to the prosecution of accused who was the reader of the Tahsildar of Konch, and the District Magistrate merely granted "sanction" for accused's prosecution believing that the Superintendent would thereby be enabled to prosecute accused, held, that there was no complaint either by the Superintendent or by the District Magistrate for the prosecution of accused, and therefore the conviction under Sec. 182 Penal Code was unsustainable for want of a proper complaint as required by Sec. 195 (1) (a) Cr. P. Code (as amended in 1923).

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by L. V. ARDAGH ESQ., Sessions Judge of Jhansi.

Krishna Murari Lal for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Jalaun recommending that the conviction of one Abdul Rahman of an offence under S. 182 I. P. C. be set aside. The learned Judge is of opinion that there was no complaint such as is required by S. 195 (1) (a) of the Criminal Procedure Code for the prosecution of the accused.

---

*Cr. Ref. 210 of 1931

The accused lodged an information at the police station to the effect that the motor lorry belonging to a certain person had been over-loaded. On investigation the police found that the information was false. Accordingly the investigating officer moved the Superintendent of Police that the accused be prosecuted for an offence under S. 182 I. P. C. The Superintendent of Police endorsed the following note addressed to the District Magistrate:

> District Magistrate. The accused is the reader of the Tahsildar of Konch. Have you any objection to his prosecution?

The District Magistrate, instead of signifying his wishes in the matter to the Superintendent of Police recorded an order to the following effect:

> I sanction the prosecution of Abdul Rahman Judicial Moharrir Konch. Case to S. D. M. for disposal. The Moharrir will be suspended till the disposal of the case.

The learned Sessions Judge making the reference is of opinion that there was no complaint either by the Superintendent of Police or by the District Magistrate for the prosecution of the applicant and that for want of a proper complaint the conviction is unsustainable.

We think the learned Sessions Judge has taken a right view of the case. The Superintendent of Police did not in fact make a complaint to the District Magistrate for the prosecution of the applicant. He merely tried to ascertain the wishes of the District Magistrate as the person to be proceeded against was a revenue official, being the reader of the Tahsildar. If the Deputy Commissioner had intimated to that officer that he had no objection to the revenue official being prosecuted, the Superintendent of Police would probably have filed a regular complaint under S. 195 (1) (a) Cr. P. C. The District Magistrate, however, thought that he had been asked to grant sanction under S. 195 Cr. P. C. Apparently he overlooked the change introduced by the Act of 1923 which has done away with sanctions, and prosecutions for offences mentioned in S. 195 can be started by complaints only. We do not think that the District Magistrate intended to act as the head of the police, nor did he intend to make his order a complaint as defined in the Criminal Procedure Code. We do not intend to lay down that if what substantially amounts to a complaint is defective in form it cannot be the basis of prosecution. If there is an allegation that an offence has been committed by a person known or unknown, made orally or in writing and addressed to a magistrate with a view to his taking action under the Code of Criminal Procedure, it will amount to a complaint. In the case before us, it does not appear that the District Magistrate intended it to be the complaint or that he himself intended to allege that the applicant had committed an offence. He merely granted "sanction" believing that the Superintendent of Police would thereby be enabled to prosecute the applicant. The case of Baldeo Singh v. King-Emperor[1] seems to be in point.

For the reasons mentioned above, we accept the reference, set aside the conviction of the applicant and direct that the fine if paid be refunded.

---

[1] A. I. R. 1926 All. 566

CRIMINAL

1931

Sep. 3

SULAIMAN, J.

KING-EMPEROR (Applicant)
versus
HARIHAR KALWAR (Opposite party)*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 117(3) and 118—Order under—Text of—Bond with sureties—To be in form given in Sch. V—Magistrate to satisfy himself that sureties would be able to make good the amount—Hypothecation bond may be taken in addition by way of precaution.

Where the magistrate issued an order under Sec. 117(3) Cr. P. C. against a person to execute a personal bond, with "two reliable sureties in movable properties", held, that in the order the magistrate should follow the words of Sec. 117 and not introduce the restrictive words "in movable property".

When sureties are produced, the magistrate should consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, they are fit persons to be accepted or not. The primary consideration is whether the surety is likely to fulfil the undertaking given by him. When they have been accepted, the bond executed by them should be in the form given in Sch. V. A registered security bond is not necessary under the Code, nor is a magistrate bound to accept such security if offered, but if the magistrate has any apprehension that the sureties may part with their properties and be unable to fulfil the undertaking, he may by way of precaution accept a hypothecation bond from them as a condition precedent to their being accepted as reliable sureties.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by HARISH CHANDRA ESQ., Sessions Judge of Benares.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The opposite party was not represented.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—On February 15, 1931, the Magistrate issued an order under Section 117(3) Cr. P. C. against Hari Har accused to execute a personal bond in Rs.1,000, with two sureties in like amounts, each in cash, for keeping the peace until the conclusion of the enquiry.

The Sessions Judge modified the order on February 24, 1931, and ordered his release on his executing a bond for Rs.1,000, with two sureties in like amounts to the satisfaction of the court concerned. The accused, however, was not released, because he was involved in another offence. When the District Magistrate was moved, he pointed out that the Sessions Judge had no power to interfere with the order under Section 107 read with Section 117(3) Cr. P. C. but might have reported to the High Court. When the matter came up again before the Sessions Judge, he admitted that he had mistaken the order to be an order of bail and had wrongly amended it. He passed a fresh order on March 12, that unless the original order was amended by the Magistrate in the light of the observations contained in his order dated February 24, 1931 the record be submitted to the High Court with the recommendation that the words "in cash" be deleted. On receipt of this direction, the Magistrate on March 19, amended his previous order and substituted "two reliable sureties in movable properties" instead of "two cash sureties". The Magistrate this time used the word

---

*Cr. Ref. 226 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR v. HARIHAR KALWAR

Sulaiman, J.

"securities" without carefully reading his previous order which had said "sureties". Then on March 24 the Sessions Judge again expressed an opinion that "a surety in cash" had no meaning at all. He directed the record to be submitted to the High Court, and asked for the explanation of the Magistrate. The Sessions Judge gave his reasons for holding that it is not open to a Magistrate to direct that the property which is offered as security by the sureties be of a particular nature. The Magistrate submitted his explanation and the District Magistrate added a supplementary explanation, stressing that the Magistrate was not bound to accept security of immovable property, which would cause considerable difficulty in realization in case of forfeiture. After this, the Sessions Judge passed a fresh order on March 25, 1931, submitting the record to the High Court along with a copy of the previous order passed by him in the case of another accused person, dated July 7, 1930, which gave fuller reasons in support of his view.

The case went backwards and forwards on so many occasions because there was a difference of opinion between the Sessions Judge and the Magistrate as to the nature of the security that can be demanded.

No reported case has been brought to my notice which would throw light on this divergence of views.

It is to be noted that both Section 117 and Section 118 refer to the execution of a bond by the accused "with or without sureties". The expression "security" is not used. The sections do not contemplate the furnishing of a registered hypothecation bond as good security. It obviously requires guarantees given by the sureties.

Section 118 applies equally to an order to give security for keeping the peace under Section 107 and for maintaining good behaviour under Sections 108, 109 and 110 Cr. P. C.

In Schedule V a form is given for the execution of a bond by sureties for the accused's good behaviour. The form merely requires a written undertaking given by the sureties that in case of the accused making default, they bind themselves jointly and severally to forfeit to His Majesty a particular sum of money. It does not go on to add that they are hypothecating any property for that sum. It seems to me that the same form is intended for sureties for the accused's keeping the peace. It is, therefore, obvious that what the Code requires is that there should be sureties able to make good the amount. These persons should be reliable and be possessed of such status, means or property that the amount would be recovered by seizure of their properties or, if arrested, they would make good the amount.

No doubt under Section 514 Cr. P. C. when there is a forfeiture of the bond, the Magistrate cannot proceed by attaching and selling any immovable property of the surety but can only seize his movable property. But if the penalty cannot be recovered by attachment and sale of the movable properties the person can be arrested and imprisoned. This in many cases would be just as effective to compel him to pay up, provided, of course, he has the means. It, therefore, does not follow that a person cannot be a good surety unless he is actually possessed of movable properties sufficient to yield the amount of his bond. Indeed, movable properties which can be easily removed or transferred may in most cases be the flimsiest security. It may equally well happen that a person is of respectability and good social status and possessed of considerable immovable property and one who can be relied upon to procure the amount in case of the accused's default, and yet he may not for the time being be in possession of movable properties of the value of the bond. There would be no reason to reject such a person merely because some inconvenience might be felt afterwards in recovering the amount from him. It would be unfair to accused persons if any general rule or practice were laid down that no person who is not possessed of sufficient movable properties should be accepted as a surety.

It would not be improper for a Magistrate in case of doubt to permit a surety who has signed the bond in the form mentioned above also to execute separately a registered bond hypothecating immovable property in order to satisfy the Magistrate that he is possessed of sufficient means. But neither such a registered security bond is necessary under the provisions of the Code, nor is a Magistrate bound to accept such security if offered.

The Magistrate has to satisfy himself as to the means and station in life of the surety as well as his character. He has to exercise his discretion in accepting him; but that discretion must not be exercised in an arbitrary manner. The primary consideration is whether the surety is likely to fulfil the undertaking given by him.

The amended order of the Magistrate says "two reliable sureties in movable property". Although I do not agree with all that the Sessions Judge has said, I agree with him that in the order itself there should be no restriction as regards movable property. So far as the order goes, the Magistrate should follow the words of Section 117 and not introduce the restrictive words "in movable property". When sureties are produced, the Magistrate should consider whether, having regard to all the circumstances, they are fit persons to be accepted or not. When they have been accepted, the bond executed by them should be in the form given in the Schedule. If the Magistrate has any apprehension that the sureties may part with their properties and be unable to fulfil the undertaking, he may by way of precaution accept a hypothecation bond from them as a condition precedent to their being accepted as reliable sureties.

I accordingly order that the words "in movable property" after the word "sureties" in the order of the Magistrate dated March 19, 1931, be deleted.

CRIMINAL

1931

Sep. 21

NIAMATULLAH, J.

SUNDER LAL
versus
EMPEROR THROUGH RADHEY SHIAM*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 181(2) and 222(2)—Misappropriation of gross sum made up of five items—Some items received in places where magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction—Whether magistrate had jurisdiction in respect of all items.

Where on the complaint of a zemindar his agent was charged under Sec. 222(2) Cr. P. C. with misappropriation of a gross sum made up of five items, some of which were received by him in villages situate in Tahsils over which the trying magistrate had no territorial jurisdiction, held, that under Sec. 181(2) the magistrate had jurisdiction in respect of all the sums alleged to have been misappropriated by the accused.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of P. C. PLOWDEN ESQ., Sessions Judge of Bareilly.

G. S. Pathak for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

Durga Charan Singh for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This application for revision raises a question of jurisdiction in a case of criminal breach of trust against the applicant pending in the court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Baheri, District Bareilly.

The applicant Sunder Lal was the agent of Udainath Shah, who is the owner of a number of villages in the Bareilly district lying in various tahsils and including some in tahsil Baheri. A complaint was filed on his behalf against the applicant in the court of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Baheri charging the applicant with embezzlement of large sums of money which he is said to have collected in all the villages in the Bareilly district. The question is whether the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, whose territorial jurisdiction is limited to Tahsil Baheri, had jurisdiction to try him for embezzlement of what might have been collected in villages situate in other Tahsils, the proceedings having so far advanced that a charge has been framed against the applicant. It was some time after the charge was framed that the applicant took objection to the court having jurisdiction in respect of all the sums alleged to have been misappropriated by him. That objection was overruled by the Magistrate, and an application in revision made to the Sessions Judge questioning the correctness of the Magistrate's view was unsuccessful. The present application for revision was then filed, and the correctness of the view taken by the learned Sessions Judge in agreement with the Magistrate has been impugned in this Court. A learned Judge of this Court had the occasion to hear this case twice, and in view of obscurity regarding certain material facts he asked for an explanation from the Magistrate who framed the charge. That explanation is now before me.

It appears that the applicant has been charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of a gross sum consisting of five items, three of which were received by him in villages in Tahsils other than Baheri. The fourth item is part of a larger sum received by him as rent paid by tenants in a number of villages situate in different Tahsils including some in Baheri. He credited the major part of the sums thus received, but is alleged to have misappropriated Rs.44 odd. Thus it cannot be said with certainty whether this sum is part of what he had collected from tenants of villages situate in Tahsil Baheri. It is equally doubtful whether it represents part of collections made in villages situate in Tahsils other than Baheri. The fifth item is one of Rs.1,036 which was not actually received by the applicant from the tenants, but represents consideration of certain bonds which were executed by the tenants in lieu of arrears payable by them. The applicant is alleged to have obtained the bonds in his own name and not in that of his master. The process of reasoning by which this sum of Rs.1,036 is probably considered to have been misappropriated by the applicant is that having become the creditor of the tenants to the extent of Rs.1,036 it was his duty to have paid an equal sum to or to the credit of his master, and having failed to do so and having obtained the bonds for himself he should be deemed to have misappropriated that amount. It is premature to consider the precise criminal liability, if any, of the applicant as regards this sum of Rs.1,036. At the present stage I merely assume that the complainant's allegation that Rs.1,036 was misappropriated is well founded. It is not disputed that the tenants who executed bonds in favour of the applicant were all from villages situate in Tahsil Baheri.

---

*Cr. Rev. 179 of 1931

The charge which has been framed by the Magistrate is one under Section 222 (2) Cr. P. C., and specifies merely the gross sum made up of the five items above referred to without mentioning the dates on which criminal misappropriation of the particular items occurred. It follows, in terms of Section 222 (2) that the applicant is charged with one offence in respect of the gross sum and not with five offences each having reference to a specific item.

Section 181 (2) Cr. P. C. provides that > the offence of criminal misappropriation or of criminal breach of trust may be enquired into or tried by a court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received or retained by the accused person, or the offence was committed.

It should be observed that according to the provision quoted above the place where the sum has been received may determine the forum even though the actual embezzlement might have taken place outside the jurisdiction of the court before whom the accused is being tried.

It is nowhere alleged on behalf of the prosecution that each of the five items to which reference has been made was separately misappropriated. As is usual in such cases, it is alleged that the applicant received a number of items on various dates and subsequently embezzled the entire sum or part thereof in his hands. In any case it is open to the complainant and the Magistrate to consolidate all the items which the applicant is alleged to have received, and to frame a charge under Section 222 (2) in respect of only one offence, instead of many offences, as would be the case if each item received by him is to be the subject of a separate charge.

CRIMINAL

1931

SUNDER LAL
v.
EMPEROR

Niamat-ullah, J.

The combined effect of Section 222 (2) and 181 (2) is that the applicant can be tried by a court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction any part of the property which is the subject of the offence was received by him. As shown already, he is alleged to have received a part of the gross sum which he is alleged to have criminally misappropriated in villages situate in Tahsil Baheri within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate before whom the case against him is pending.

The learned advocate for the applicant has referred to Emperor v. Mohan Singh[1], in support of an ingenious contention. He argues that, as held in that case, no charge under Section 222 (2) can be framed if the accused was an agent not only entitled to receive the money on behalf of his principal but empowered also to make disbursement, and if the charge relates to the balance left in his hand after proper disbursement. I express no opinion as regards the soundness of the legal proposition involved in this contention. If it is a correct view of law and if it appears in course of the trial that the applicant was an agent who was empowered not only to receive but also to make disbursements on behalf of the complainant, the prosecution will have to take the consequences of a charge under Section 222 (2), if it is not applicable. So far as the question of jurisdiction is concerned, it has to be determined on the assumption that the charge framed by the learned Magistrate at the instance of the complainant is not open to any fatal objection. On that assumption, as I have already stated, the Magistrate has jurisdiction, and this application is dismissed.

Application dismissed

---

[1] I. L. R. 42 All. 522

CRIMINAL

1931

Nov. 2

MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

KING-EMPEROR
versus
SHAMBHU*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 164—Confession—Magistrate to record questions and answers by means of which he has satisfied himself that confession is voluntary—Accused implicating co-accused in his statement—When statement admissible—Retracted confession—Value of.

Where there is nothing in the statement to show that besides the usual and stereotyped questions any serious attempt has been made by the magistrate recording the confession to find whether the statement was voluntary or otherwise, the court should hesitate to accept his certificate at its face value. It is the imperative duty of the magistrate to record those questions and answers by means of which he has satisfied himself that the confession is, in fact, voluntary. It is only by recording those questions and answers prior to taking down the story of the accused that the magistrate recording the confession furnishes data which enable the court of Sessions and the High Court to form an independent estimate as to the voluntary nature of the confession.

When an accused person in his statement or confession imputes the commission of the offence to his co-accused, but does not implicate himself as fully and substantially as he does his co-accused, the said statement cannot be used as evidence against the co-accused. The Queen v. Belat Ali

---

*Cr. A. 674 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR

v.

SHAMBHU

Moonshee, 19 W. R. (Cr.) 67 and Empress of India v. Mulu, I. L. R. 2 All. 646 referred to.

The evidentiary value of a retracted confession is very little and it is not safe to act on such a confession unless it is corroborated in material particulars.

CRIMINAL APPEAL from an order of ZIAUL HASAN ESQ., Second Additional Sessions Judge of Cawnpore.

S. B. Johari for the appellant.

U. S. Bajpai (Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The accused who were convicted under Sec. 302 I. P. C. appealed to the High Court. The case for the prosecution turned mainly on the confession of one of the accused. In the course of the judgment their Lordships made important observations on the admissibility of incriminating statement of a co-accused, and the method in which confessions ought to be recorded by magistrates. Portions of the judgment dealing with these points are reproduced below.

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—The incriminating statement of a co-accused is no more than the tainted testimony of an accomplice. The statement is without the safeguards of either oath or cross-examination. When an accused person in his statement or confession imputes the commission of the offence to his co-accused, but does not implicate himself as fully and substantially as he does his co-accused, the said statement cannot be used as evidence against the co-accused. (Vide The Queen v. Belat Ali Moonshee[1], Empress of India v. Ganraj[2], Empress of India v. Mulu[3] and Re petition of Kapur Singh[4]. A similar view appears to have been taken by a Division Bench of this Court in re Chheddu Khan[5]. One of the questions in issue was as to whether the statement of Kheoraj approver could be accepted and acted upon. The following observations occur in the judgment:—

> A still more important fact in connection with his evidence is this, that in every dacoity of which he gives an account he takes care to keep himself free from any direct act of violence. He assigns to himself positions either outside the house dacoited or away from those who were committing these acts of violence. To use an expression which Mr. Justice Straight on a similar occasion used very happily 'while tarring others, he takes care not to tar himself with the same brush'.

Safeguards have been provided for against errors and abuses in the matter of recording confessions under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Where there is nothing in the statement to show that besides the usual and stereotyped questions any serious attempt has been made by the Magistrate to find whether the statement was voluntary or otherwise, we should hesitate to accept his certificate at its face value. We should refer to the following observations of the Chief Court of Oudh, in re Prag v. King-Emperor[6]:

> It is with regret that we note that Babu Bhagwati Prasad Sinha, the Deputy Magistrate, who recorded these confessions, has completely disregarded the standing order of Government as to the method in which confessions ought to be recorded. Paras 852, 853 and 853-A of the Manual of Government

---

[1] 19 W. R. (Cr.) 67

[2] I. L. R. 2 All. 444

[3] I. L. R. 2 All. 646

[4] W. N. 1881 20

[5] Cr. A. 754 of 1910 decided on April 22, 1911

[6] A. I. R. 1930 Oudh 449 at 451

> Orders, Vol. 1, lay down definite rules in this matter for the guidance of all magistrates throughout British India. These standing orders of the Government are based upon instructions issued by the Government of India and embodied in G. G. O., Home Department (Police) No. 36-C. dated January 5, 1916. In the record of the confessions of Prag and Mst. Bishna (not to speak of the confessions of Mst. Naraini and Ram Bali) in the present case there is nothing to show that Babu Bhagwati Prasad Sinha informed any of these confessing prisoners that he was a Magistrate of the first class empowered under the law to record a confession which could subsequently be utilised in the Court of Session and be sufficient to base a conviction of the confessing prisoner on the capital charge of murder. Had he done so, one of the confessing accused could not subsequently with any show of reason or decency, have urged (as did Mst. Naraini afterwards) that the person recording the confession was understood by the prisoner to be a police officer and "not a Magistrate".
>
> As pointed out by Government in Para 853-A of the Manual of Government Orders quoted above, it is the Magistrate's duty to satisfy himself in "every reasonable way that the confession is made voluntarily; and it is further the imperative duty of the Magistrate to record those questions and answers by means of which he has satisfied himself that the confession is, in fact, voluntary. It is only by recording those questions and answers prior to taking down the story of the accused that the Magistrate recording the confession furnishes data which enable the Court of Session and the High Court or the Chief Court to arrive at the same conclusion as that to which the recording Magistrate has come, as regards the voluntary nature of the confession. Without supplying these data or materials it is impossible for the trial court (i.e., the court of session) or for this Court to form any estimate as to the voluntary nature of these confessions. The Court of Sessions or this Court cannot merely accept the ipsi dixit of the Deputy Magistrate recording the confession as to its being voluntary. The genuineness of the confession and the fact of its being voluntarily made are matters which are within the exclusive province of the court of session and of this Court and neither the court of session nor this Court can blindly accept the ready-made opinion of the recording Magistrate on these points without having before it materials from which it could arrive at an independent opinion on these crucial questions on which the fate of the accused hangs.

The remarks made here have our concurrence and approval.

The evidentiary value of a retracted confession is very little and it is a rule of practice, as also a rule of prudence, that it is not safe to act on a retracted confession of an accused person unless it is corroborated in material particulars.

Appeal allowed

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 2

NIAMATULLAH, J.

MOHAMMAD ISMAIL (Applicant)

versus

LIYAQAT HUSAIN (Opposite party)*

Court-Fees—Court parts with seisin of case—Whether has power to direct recovery of court-fees by attachment of property—Court-Fees—To be determined with reference to plaint as it is, and not as it ought to have been.

There is no provision in the Court-Fees Act which justifies a process of attachment for recovery of court-fee after the court finally parts with the seisin of a case, even if the court-fee is payable in law. L. Daulat Ram v. Mst. Chawali, Civ. Rev. 330 of 1928 relied on.

The question of court-fees must be determined with reference to the plaint as it is and not as it ought to have been. If, having regard to the nature of his claim, plaintiff ought to have claimed consequential relief and has not done so, his suit might fail under the proviso to Sec. 42, Specific Relief Act; but the court cannot say that the plaintiff should have claimed consequential relief and not having done so, he should be deemed to have claimed the consequential relief and was therefore liable to pay an ad valorem court-fee on the consequential relief.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of MAULVI SYED MUHAMMAD JUNAID, Subordinate Judge of Agra.

B. Malik for the applicant.

Sankar Saran for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Agra declaring that a sum of Rs.160 was payable by the applicant as deficiency of court-fee and directing that the same be recovered by attachment of his property.

It appears that the applicant was the plaintiff in a suit in which he claimed a declaration that a certain decree, obtained by the defendant, was void and ineffectual against him, the same having been obtained by the exercise of fraud. No consequential relief was claimed. The suit was dismissed by the first court. An appeal was also dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge. Sometime during the pendency of the litigation the Chief Inspector of Stamps reported that the plaintiff was liable to pay Rs.160 the ad valorem court-fee on the consequential relief which he ought to have claimed. No action appears to have been taken on this report before the appeal was decided by the learned Sub-judge. Somehow the matter was brought to his notice on February 2, 1931, after the appeal had been decided when he passed the order sought to be revised. The court has no right to say that the plaintiff should have claimed consequential relief and that not having done so he should be deemed to have claimed the consequential relief and is, therefore, liable to pay the court-fees. If, having regard to the nature of his claim, the plaintiff ought to have claimed consequential relief and has not done so, his suit might fail under the proviso to S. 42, Specific Relief Act. The question of court-fees must be determined with reference to the plaint as it is and not as it ought to have been.

---

*Civ. Rev. 274 of 1931

The learned Sub-judge had no power to direct the recovery of the court-fees by attachment of the applicant's property, even if the court-fees in question was payable in law. There is no provision in the Court-Fees Act which justifies a process of attachment for recovery of court-fees after the court finally parts with the seisin of a case. This view is in accord with what was held by this Court in L. Daulat Ram v. Mst. Chawali (Civil Revision No. 330 of 1928) decided by the Hon'ble the Chief Justice on February 15, 1929.

In these circumstances, this revision must succeed. The order of the lower court is set aside. No order is passed as to costs.

Criminal
1931
Dec. 7
Bennet, J.

RAM KHELAWAN

versus

SHEO NANDAN AND OTHERS*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 350A—Bench of Magistrates—One member not present during examination-in-chief of witnesses for complainant—Whether order invalid.

Where one of the magistrates constituting the bench, which ultimately decided the case, was not present during the examination-in-chief of the witnesses for the complainant, held, that the order was invalid under Sec. 350A C. P. Code and inasmuch as the complainant had not had a fair hearing, the order of acquittal should be set aside and the case retried.

Criminal Reference made by Babu Piare Lal Rastogi, Sessions Judge of Ghazipur.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

A. P. Pandey for the opposite parties.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bennet, J.

Bennet, J.—This is a recommendation by the learned Sessions Judge of Ghazipur that a certain order of acquittal passed by a bench should be set aside and a retrial ordered. The facts are very simple. The complainant produced his witnesses before the bench and while his witnesses were making their examination-in-chief a member of the bench, B. Sheo Shankar Singh, was absent. This Magistrate was present during the rest of the trial and he took part in the decision along with two other magistrates who had been present during the whole trial. Of the two magistrates present during the whole trial one was for acquittal and one was for conviction. B. Sheo Shankar Singh was for acquittal, and therefore the accused was acquitted on the decision of B. Sheo Shankar Singh and B. Tirloki Nath Singh. Learned counsel first of all relied on the ruling reported in Emperor v. Mathura[1] in which it was held that the provisions of Section 350 Cr. P. C., would apply to a somewhat similar case before a bench. But subsequent to that ruling by Act XVIII of 1923 an additional Section 350A was added to the Cr. P. C. specially dealing with this question of changes in the constitution of a bench of magistrates during the hearing of a case. That section therefore alters the law which was laid down in the ruling quoted, and the ruling is no longer any authority for the present law. Sec. 350A clearly

---

*Cr. Ref. 644 of 1931

[1] I. L. R. 41 All. 116=16 A. L. J. R: 884

CRIMINAL

1931

RAM KHELAWAN v. SHEO NANDAN

Bennet, J.

states that the order of a bench of magistrates would not be invalid on account of changes where the bench was duly constituted, "and the magistrates constituting the same have been present on the bench throughout the proceedings". In the present case one of the magistrates constituting the bench which passed the order was not present throughout the proceedings. The order is therefore invalid according to the provisions laid down in Section 350A. Learned counsel next argued that this court should not interfere in revision in a case of this nature, because the order was one of acquittal and because the Local Government might have appealed under Section 417 Cr. P. C. and did not appeal. It is obvious in the first place that this Court has power to interfere with an order of acquittal in revision otherwise the Code would not contain the provision in Section 439(4) that in revision a High Court should not convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction. The question is one of discretion as to whether in any particular case the High Court should or should not order a retrial. In Pehalwan Singh v. Sahib Singh[2] at page 383 Stuart, J. laid down:

> The acquittal is a good order of acquittal in so far that it contains no inherent defects, and therefore in that particular case he would not interfere. The present case, however, is very different because there are inherent defects in the order of acquittal, and under Section 350A it is an invalid order. In that particular case on page 384 it was stated:

> Whether the decision was right or wrong, it is idle to suggest that there has been a miscarriage of justice.

The present case however seems to be rather different, as the complainant has not had a fair hearing and one member of the court which decided the case did not hear the statements of the witnesses for the complainant in examination-in-chief. Learned counsel went into details of the case and pointed out that it was a case where the complainant stated that he had sowed a certain crop as a tenant and the accused as zamindars had uprooted that crop by force and taken it away. The two magistrates who acquitted the accused considered that it was not satisfactorily proved that the complainant sowed the crop or that the accused uprooted it. If the complainant succeeded in proving his case the complainant would probably receive compensation from the accused and therefore the matter would be one of importance to him. Under these circumstances I consider that this order of acquittal should be set aside, and I accordingly set it aside and direct that the case be retried according to law.

Acquittal set aside
Retrial ordered

---

[2] 19 A. L. J. R. 382

CRIMINAL

1931

Dec. 8

BENNET, J.

ALI HUSAIN AND ANOTHER
versus
LACHHMI NARAIN MAHAJAN AND OTHERS*

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), Secs. 28(2) and 31—Judgment-debtor adjudicated insolvent—No protection from arrest in execution of decree—Until protection order made under Sec. 31.

Sec. 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) does not operate as any protection from arrest of a judgment-debtor who has been adjudicated an insolvent. Maharaj Hari Ram v. Sri Krishan Ram, I. L. R. 49 All. 201=25 A. L. J. R. 152 followed.

Under Sec. 31 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920 a discretion is granted to the court either to make an order for protection of the insolvent from arrest for all debts or make a limited order or not to make a protection order at all; and it is no longer a matter of right for a judgment-debtor to apply in insolvency and be ipso facto absolved from liability to arrest.

The words "or person" were deliberately taken out of the present Sec. 28 by the legislature because provision was made in Sec. 31 for dealing with the question as to how far insolvency proceedings bar the arrest of a judgment-debtor.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by MAULVI S. IFTIKHAR HUSAIN, Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad.

S. N. Verma for the applicants.

G. S. Pathak for the opposite parties.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Farrukhabad of an acquittal by a magistrate of five persons who were charged under Section 186 I. P. C. The complaint was made by the Subordinate Judge. The magistrate recorded no evidence but he made an order on August 8, 1931 setting forth the facts of the case and stating that the contention on behalf of the defence was an argument of law. The facts set forth were as follows:—

> The said Lachhmi Narain has been declared an insolvent on 14-9-27. In execution proceeding the request was to arrest Lachhmi Narain. Lachhmi Narain was arrested on June 4, 1931. On June 5, 1931 Lachhmi Narain was put up before the court which had ordered the arrest. The court ordered a peon to take Lachhmi Narain to the latter's house and realise the decretal amount. The peon took Lachhmi Narain to his (Lachhmi Narain's) house. Lachhmi Narain while going to his house got into the shop of Lalman and refused to accompany the process server. The accused obstructed the process server doing his duty of taking Lachhmi Narain to court.

Now the offence of Section 186 I. P. C. was a summons case and the procedure of the magistrate should have been governed by Chapter XX Cr. P. C. The accused had appeared on this date and under Section 242 the magistrate should have stated the substance of the accusation to the accused and asked if they had any cause to show why they should not be convicted. Under Section 243 if the accused admitted the offence they might have

---

*Cr. Ref. 657 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

ALI HUSAIN
v.
LACHHMI NARAIN

Bennet, J.

been convicted, but that is not the case here. The accused pleaded that the acts alleged formed no offence. The duty of the magistrate therefore lay under Section 244 to hear all the evidence in support of the prosecution. The language is compulsory and says:

> The magistrate shall take all such evidence as may be produced in support of the prosecution.

There were eleven witnesses named in the complaint and it was the duty of the magistrate to take the evidence of these eleven witnesses. The magistrate did not take the evidence of any of these witnesses apparently as the order sheet is silent on this point, but the magistrate proceeded to write an order ending with the words:

> I therefore discharge the accused, this being a summons case.

Later the magistrate altered the word 'discharge' to 'acquit'. Learned counsel for the accused cannot point to any section of the Code under which the procedure of the magistrate could be justified. There was therefore no trial at all before the magistrate. The learned Sessions Judge has not made the reference on account of this defect in procedure but because he considers that the legal reasons given by the magistrate are incorrect. The magistrate relied on the following rulings of other High Courts Solayappa Naicker v. Shunmugasundaram Pillai[1], Firm Partab Singh Pradhan Singh v. Firm Bhai Mewa Singh Jodha[2] and Tan Seik Ke v. C.A.M.C.T. Firm[3]. These rulings lay down that under Section 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act (Act V of 1920) a creditor is barred from applying in execution for the arrest of a judgment-debtor against whom an order of adjudication is passed. A contrary view has been taken in Maharaj Hari Ram v. Sri Krishan Ram[4] by a bench of this Court which has held that Section 28 does not operate as any protection from arrest of a judgment-debtor who has been adjudicated an insolvent. There is also a similar ruling in Mahomed Roshan Sheikh Alli Kaskar v. Gulam Mohiddin[5]. The ruling of a bench of this Court is binding on a single Judge, and therefore I am bound to follow it. Learned counsel has however addressed me on the strength of various rulings with the request that for the reasons given in those rulings I should ask that this question should be referred to a Full Bench. I find myself unable to see any merit in the rulings to which counsel refers, and they seem to me to be singularly devoid of reasons for what they state. In Hit Narayan Singh v. Brij Nandan Singh[6] there is a mere statement that the latter part of Section 28 (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act would refer to the person. This is what it is required to prove, and merely stating a proposition is not the same as adducing reasons for that proposition. Alamelu Ammal v. Venkatarama Iyer[7] a single Judge ruling, made no reference at all to Section 31 of the Provincial Insolvency Act, which deals with the question of the freedom from arrest, and again there is a mere assumption that Section 28 will be a bar. C. A. Easwara Iyer v. K. Govindarajulu Naidu[8] deals with the Presidency Towns Act and not with the Provincial Insolvency Act and again there is an absence of reasons for the conclusion, even if we assume that the language

---

[1] A. I. R. 1926 Mad. 510

[2] A. I. R. 1928 Lah. 258

[3] A. I. R. 1928 Rang. 109

[4] I. L. R. 49 All 201

[5] A. I. R. 1929 Bom. 135

[6] 1931 Pat. A. I. R. 357

[7] A. I. R. 1927 Mad. 919

[8] I. L. R. 39 Mad. at 689

CRIMINAL
1931
ALI HUSAIN
v.
LACHHMI NARAIN
Bennet, J.

of the various sections in the Presidency Towns Act is similar. Part of the reasoning is based on "Section 41 of the old Act" and that does not appear to refer to any of the Provincial Insolvency Acts.

I may briefly set forth the reasons which lead me to conclude that the ruling of this Court reported in Maharaj Hari Ram v. Sri Krishan Ram[*] is correct, and a ruling from which I see no reason to differ. In the former Act, the Provincial Insolvency Act (Act III of 1907), there was a paragraph in Section 16(2) which ran as follows:—

> On the making of an order of adjudication no creditor to whom the insolvent is indebted in respect of any debt payable under this act shall during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings have any remedy against the property or person of the insolvent in respect of the debt or commence any suit or other legal proceedings except with the leave of the court and on such terms as the court may impose.

Now Section 28(2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act (Act V of 1929) reproduces these provisions with an important difference. In place of the words "no creditor shall have any remedy against the property or person of the insolvent" we now have the phrase "no creditor shall have any remedy against the property of the insolvent". The difference is that the two words "or person" have now been omitted. Learned counsel for the accused admits that under Act III of 1907 it was these words "or person" which prevented a creditor from applying to an execution court for process of arrest against a judgment-debtor when his judgment-debtor had been adjudicated an insolvent. It would follow therefore that if this is provided by that part of Section 16 of Act III of 1907 the remaining words which are separated by the conjunction 'or', that is, "or commence any suit or other legal proceeding" are not the words under which a creditor was prevented from applying for arrest of his judgment-debtor. Now in the present Act (Act V of 1920) the words "or person" no longer exist, but the rulings on which learned counsel for the accused relies assume that the words "or other legal proceedings" are words which now bar a creditor from applying for execution by arrest of his judgment-debtor. It is to me a very strange method of construction to hold that the question of freedom from arrest could come under one part of the paragraph in Act III of 1907 and when that part is omitted in Act V of 1920 that the same provision should be held to exist under another and separate part of that paragraph. It appears to me that the courts have gone out of their way to hunt about in various parts of this paragraph and have seized on any phrase which they think can give shelter to the provision in question. I consider that this method of construction of changing the meaning of words from one Act to another Act, and of holding that in one Act they bear one meaning and in another Act the same words bear another meaning is a method which is radically unsound.

There is another reason as to why the ruling of this Court is sound. In the present Provincial Insolvency Act there is a new section introduced, Section 31, which provides for an insolvent applying for a protection order to the insolvency court. The language used is that the court "may make such an order on application" and that the order may "apply to any or all of the debts as the court thinks fit". There is therefore a discretion granted to the court either to make such an order or make a limited order or not to make a protection order at all. It is no longer a matter of right for a judgment-debtor to apply in insolvency and be ipso facto absolved from liability to arrest. It appears clear to me that the words "or person" were deliberately taken out of the present Section 28 by the legislature, because provision was made in Section 31 for dealing with this particular matter of how far insolvency proceedings bar the arrest of a judgment-debtor. When we find that in the new Act certain changes have been made in the old Act by the omission of a provision dealing with a certain matter and the introduction of new provisions dealing with that matter, the natural conclusion should be that the new provisions are intended to deal solely with that matter and that the courts should look for guidance to these new provisions and not attempt to read provisions into general words in other parts of the Act. I note that the rulings on which learned counsel for accused relies do not in general deal with this point of view. For these reasons I consider that in the present case the judgment-debtor was not barred from being arrested in execution and the action of the learned Subordinate Judge in issuing a warrant of arrest was perfectly legal and the warrant was a perfectly legal warrant. The persons who were carrying out that warrant would be protected by Section 186 I. P. C. The magistrate therefore was not only wrong in his procedure but he was wrong in his substantive law. Having been wrong on both points, it appears to me that his proceeding was an absolute miscarriage of justice.

---

[*] I. L. R. 49 All. 201=25 A. L. J. R. 152

Further argument has been made as to whether the case is not one in which this Court should exercise its discretion and interfere in revision. Learned counsel for the complainant has pointed out that this Court has ordered a retrial where there was an acquittal in 19 A. L. J. R. 589 and 6 A. L. J. R. 758. In the present case it appears to me that the trial is of some public importance because it is a case of the execution of a warrant by the Civil Court process servers, and it is necessary that such process servers should be supported in the exercise of their duties. For these reasons I accept this reference and I set aside the order of acquittal of the magistrate and I direct that the accused shall be retried by a magistrate having jurisdiction. The record will be sent to the District Magistrate for directions for retrial.

Reference accepted

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 18
PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

ABDUL WAHAB (Defendant)
versus
SUGHRA BEGUM (Plaintiff)*

Mohammedan Law—Waqf—Provision for salary and pension of servants—A valid object—Whether mutwalli can reduce amount—Waqif can reserve to himself the power of naming beneficiaries subsequent to the execution of deed.

A provision for the salary and pension of servants is a valid object of waqf.

On general grounds there is nothing to prevent a waqif from reserving to himself the power of naming beneficiaries subsequent to the execution

---

*S. A. 473 of 1929 (connected with S. A. 474 of 1929)

CIVIL

1931

ABDUL WAHAB v. SUGHRA BEGUM

of the deed of waqf, provided charitable intention is clearly indicated in the deed.

If the pay or pension of servants is made a valid object of the waqf, it is not open to any mutwalli to interfere with it.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. ALLSOP ESQ., District Judge of Aligarh, confirming a decree of MAULVI SIRAJUDDIN, Munsif of Koil.

T. A. K. Sherwani for the appellant.

A. M. Khwaja for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—These are defendant's appeals arising out of two suits, one brought by Mst. Sughra Begum, the respondent in Second Appeal No. 473 of 1929 and the other by Rahim Bakhsh, the respondent in Second Appeal No. 474 of 1929, for recovery of arrears of maintenance fixed by Khurshed Ali Khan who executed a deed of waqf on April 1, 1919, by which he dedicated property yielding a net income of Rs.7,000 a year for certain charitable purposes. Khurshed Ali Khan died on December 28, 1926 up to which date he acted as mutwalli. The defendant-appellant succeeded his father in the office of the mutwalli. Among other provisions contained in the deed of waqf one is in favour of the respondents who were old servants of Khurshed Ali Khan. A certain amount was mentioned in the deed of waqf to be paid as salaries and pensions of the waqif's servants whose names were not specified, nor were the amounts mentioned. It was, however, clearly stated that particulars as regards names and the amounts should be taken from the pay bills bearing his signature. Apparently the waqif had not decided as to what amount should be paid to each servant, and he reserved the power of nominating beneficiaries out of the servants and the allowances to each for a subsequent occasion. During the seven years which intervened between the date of the waqf and his death he paid Rs.60 a month to Mst. Sughra and Rs.30 a month to Rahim Bakhsh. It should be mentioned that the two are wife and husband. The pay bills in which these salaries are entered bear the signature of Khurshed Ali Khan. It has also been found by the lower courts that the defendant-appellant himself paid allowances to the respondents at the above rates after the death of Khurshed Ali Khan before the period in suit. Relations between the parties became strained, and it became necessary for the respondents to institute the suits which have given rise to these appeals. The defence, so far as it is necessary to state for the purposes of the present appeals, was that, according to Mohammedan Law, it is not one of the valid objects of the waqf to make provisions for salaries and pensions of servants; that no allowances having been fixed in the deed of waqf, subsequent action of Khurshed Ali Khan should be considered the act of mutwalli who is not entitled to amend the provisions of the deed of waqf and that in any case, it is open to a succeeding mutwalli to reduce the salaries and pensions to reasonable amounts. Both the lower courts have overruled these defences and decreed the plaintiff's claim.

The learned District Judge, who has written an excellent judgment, dealing with the various questions raised before him, has held, and we think rightly, that a provision for the salary and pension of servants is a valid object of waqf. In Ameer Ali's Mohammedan Law, Volume I, page 276, Fourth Edition a number of valid objects of waqf are stated. One of them is the waqif's own descendants, another is kindred and neighbours. Even strangers are mentioned as objects of bounty. Defendants and servants are specifically mentioned as persons for whose maintenance provision can be made in a waqf. Tyabji in his notes under Section 457 of his book on Mohammedan Law, Second Edition, has also mentioned that provisions for individuals may be a charitable object according to Mohammedan notions. We entertain no doubt that the view taken by the learned District Judge is correct and is borne out by the authorities to which reference has been made. The learned counsel for the appellant contended that only the poor can be beneficiaries under the waqf, if they do not belong to the family of the waqif. He argues that in so far as Mst. Sughra and Rahim Bakhsh are possessed of other sources of small incomes, they cannot be classed among the indigents. He has quoted no authority in support of his contention which is opposed to the rules given by Ameer Ali and Tyabji already referred to. The words "rich and poor" are relative terms, and it cannot be stated that a person having a certain minimum income cannot be considered to be indigent in any circumstances. It is obviously a very laudable act for a Mohammedan to make a provision for his faithful servants. We may note that the pensions granted to the repondents are for their life only and that after their death, that part of the income will lapse into the general purposes of the waqf.

It is next contended that the waqf deed being silent as regards the amount payable to each servant, and the allowance having been fixed by Khurshed Ali Khan at the time when he was not the owner of the property but a mutwalli, the respondents are not entitled to the allowances claimed by them. On general grounds there is nothing to prevent a waqif from reserving to himself the power of naming beneficiaries subsequent to the execution of the deed of waqf, provided charitable intention is clearly indicated in the deed. In Ameer Ali's Book on Mohammedan Law, Volume I, page 426, Fourth Edition it is stated to be the rule that > the waqif can reserve to himself, at the time of the dedication, the power to alter the beneficiaries of the trust by either adding to their number or excluding some, or to increase or reduce their interest in it. He cannot do so afterwards.

It is obvious that, if a provision is expressly made in the deed of waqf, it is not open to the waqif to revoke it, or to derogate from it. But if he has deliberately deferred making provision on a particular subject to a future date and does make such provision, such provision should be considered to be part and parcel of the deed itself. As regards the contention that it is open to a subsequent mutwalli to reduce the amount fixed by the waqif, we are clearly of opinion that, if the pay or pension was made a valid object of the waqf, as we think it is in the present case, it is not open to any mutwalli to interfere with it. This contention has in our opinion no force.

In the view of the case we have taken, these appeals have no force and are dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1931

July 3

MUKERJI, J.
ALLEN, J

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
versus
BASANT RAI AND ANOTHER*

Income-tax Act, Sec. 66(5)—High Court judgment—Reassessment—Question to be considered by Income Tax department in the light of High Court's judgment and in the presence of the assessee.

> It is the duty of the Income Tax department to take up the question of reassessment, after a reference by the Commissioner of Income Tax has been answered by the High Court, and to see, in the presence of the assessee, whether in the light of the judgment of the High Court, any of the figures arrived at are liable to alteration or not. It is not enough to say that material alteration in the figure of assessment is not expected, and therefore reassessment is not necessary.

ORDER on application of Secretary of State for India.

Gopi Nath Kunzru for the assessee.

Sankar Saran for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—Today the learned Government advocate has appeared on behalf of the Crown, and states that > the Income Tax Commissioner in whose time the order of this Court was passed evidently considered that the High Court's judgment did not have the effect of rendering assessment liable to alteration. It was, therefore, not reconsidered. In a technical sense this view was not entirely correct, but the result of such recalculation would probably have left the tax unaffected, and the practical effect of the assessment would have been nil. As to the future the matter lies with the High Court. If the High Court holds that its judgment rendered assessment liable to alteration, and will clearly indicate in what respect alteration is needed, the directions will, of course, be followed and assessable income recalculated.

The statement of the learned Government advocate shows that the Commissioner in whose time the judgment was made is no longer holding the position, and it is not clearly found under what circumstances the question of re-assessment was not taken up.

It is the duty of the Income Tax Department to take up the question of re-assessment, after a reference by the Commissioner of Income Tax has been answered by the High Court, and to see, in the presence of the assessee whether, in the light of the judgment of the High Court, any of the figures arrived at are liable to alteration or not. It is not enough to say that material alteration in the figure of assessment is not expected, and therefore re-assessment is not necessary.

The learned Commissioner has left the matter in the hands of the High Court, and has asked for directions. All the directions that the High Court need give are these, that the reassessment has to be taken up, after notice to the assessee, and the figures should be reconsidered in the light of the decision of the High Court. It may be that as the result of the judgment of the High Court the actual assessment will not be affected, or will be affected adversely to the assessee himself. Whatever be the

---

*Mis. Case 655 of 1930

Civil
1931
Secretary of State for India
v.
Basant Rai
Mukerji, J

result, the matter has to be reconsidered, and we expect that in this case also it will be reconsidered.

As the assessee has got all he wanted, his application does not call for any further orders, except as to costs. As the assessee had to come up to the High Court, and his complaint was justified, we allow him costs of the hearing of this application, assessing the amount of counsel's fee at Rs.100 to be taxed in accordance with the rules of the High Court. The Government advocate has appeared twice, and we assess his fees at Rs.100 for each occasion, namely, Rs.200 in all, subject to his certifying payment of the fees within the time allowed by the rules.

Civil 1931
July 6
Sulaiman, A. C. J.
Sen, J.

JANGI SINGH (Plaintiff)
versus
GUDRI SINGH AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Evidence Act, Sec. 108—Person not heard of for several years—Presumption as to death—But no presumption that he was dead at a particular time.

Under Sec. 108 of the Evidence Act, where a person has not been heard of for more than 7 years by those who are likely to hear of him, a presumption arises as to the death of the said person, but there can be no presumption that he was dead at a particular time.

Where in order to succeed in a suit it is necessary for a person to establish that a particular person who had not been heard of for a number of years, was dead at a particular time, he has to prove the factum of his death at the said time by affirmative evidence either direct or circumstantial.

APPEAL against the judgment of the HON'BLE JUSTICE SIR B. J. DALAL under Section 10 of the Letters Patent.

B. Malik for the appellant.

Haribans Sahai for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff and it arises out of a suit for possession of a one-third share in certain zemindari, which, at one time, belonged to one Sukhdeo Singh. Sukhdeo Singh died in 1924. Plaintiff alleged that Sukhdeo Singh left three heirs, namely, Ram Kumar Singh, Umrao Singh and Subaran Singh. Plaintiff purchased the one-third share of Ram Kumar Singh in the estate left by Sukhdeo Singh under the sale deed, dated February 11, 1927. Defendants contested the suit inter alia on the ground that no part of Sukhdeo Singh's estate devolved upon Ram Kumar Singh, the plaintiff's vendor, inasmuch as, one Mahadeo, brother of Sukhdeo Singh was alive at the date of the execution of the sale deed in controversy. It is not contested that Sukhdeo Singh had a brother Mahadeo. He has not been heard of for a number of years. The question is as to whether Mahadeo was dead on February 11, 1927 when Ram Kumar executed the sale deed of the one-third of his property in favour of the plaintiff. Reliance has been placed upon Section 108 of the Indian Evidence Act. That section is an authority for the proposition that where the question in issue between the parties is as to whether a particular

---

*L. P. A. 58 of 1930

CIVIL 1931
JANGI SINGH
v.
GUDRI SINGH
Sen, J.

person is alive or dead and it is proved that the said person has not been heard of for a period of more than 7 years by persons who are likely to hear of him, the onus of establishing that that person is alive lies upon the person who affirms it. It follows that a presumption arises as to the death of the said person; but there can be no presumption that the said person was dead at a particular time. Where in order to succeed in a suit it is necessary for a person to establish that a particular person was dead at a particular time, he has to prove the factum of his death at the said time by affirmative evidence either direct or circumstantial. In the present case, the plaintiff has failed to prove that Mahadeo was dead on February 11, 1927. It follows therefore that no title accrued to his vendor and consequently he is not competent to maintain the present suit. We are clearly of opinion that the view taken by the court below is correct and we accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1931
July 17
SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
BAJPAI, J

RAM PHAL (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Legal Practitioners Act (Act XVIII of 1879), Sec. 36(1), Explanation to—Resolution of Bar Association—Person declared tout on basis of general repute—Legally admissible in evidence.

A resolution of a Bar Association passed by a majority of the members present at a meeting specially convened, declaring a certain person to be a tout by general repute is legally admissible in evidence under the Explanation to Sec. 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act and can be taken into consideration by the court. There is nothing in the language of the Explanation which would make a resolution based on general repute or hearsay evidence ineffective.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of R. H. J. JOHNSTONE ESQ., Collector and District Magistrate of Basti.

P. L. Banerji and R. K. Malaviya for the applicant.

Sankar Saran for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an application in revision from an order of the District Magistrate of Basti declaring Ram Phal applicant to be a tout.

There are precedents for the exercise of the power of superintendence by this Court when an order passed by a subordinate officer is against natural justice.

The learned advocate for the applicant urges before us that there is no legal evidence whatsoever on which the District Magistrate could have legally acted. It appears that apart from certain oral evidence which has not been relied upon by the District Magistrate there were two resolutions of the Bar Associations of Mukhtars and Vakils in the following terms:—

---

*Civ. Rev. 393 of 1930

Civil

1931

Ram Phal v. King-Emperor

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

(1) 'That the meeting is of opinion that Ram Phal stamp vendor of the place is by general repute a tout'.

(2) 'It is resolved that Ram Phal stamp vendor of Bansi is a tout on the strength of general repute.'

The District Magistrate had power to act upon the evidence of general repute under Section 36 of the Legal Practitioners Act, as amended. The Explanation added to the section makes the passing of a resolution declaring a person to be a tout by a majority of the members present at a meeting specially convened for the purpose of an association of persons entitled to practise as legal practitioners as evidence of the general repute of such person for the purpose of that section. It cannot therefore be denied that if the resolution substantially is one declaring Ram Phal to be a tout then it was legally admissible as evidence of general repute, even though the basis of that resolution may be hearsay evidence. On the other hand, if there is no resolution declaring him to be a tout but there is a simple statement of fact that there was such evidence before the Association, then possibly it would not come under the Explanation.

There seems to be nothing in the language of the Explanation to Sec. 36 which would make a resolution based on general repute or hearsay evidence ineffective.

The language of the first resolution was somewhat ambiguous, but the second resolution undoubtedly shows that the members recorded their conclusion and declared that Ram Phal was a tout although they also indicated that their conclusion was based on the strength of general repute. We think that the words 'on the strength of general repute' merely indicate the basis of the resolution declaring him to be a tout and does not destroy its effectiveness.

If a resolution is based on general repute the court may attach less weight to it, but it cannot be said that such a resolution is legally inadmissible in evidence and cannot be taken into consideration by the court.

We are accordingly unable to interfere with the order passed in the case. The application is dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed

LAKHMI CHAND (Defendant)
versus
ANANDI (Plaintiff)*

Civil

1931

July 21

Sen, J.
Allen, J.

Tenancy Act (Local, III of 1926), Sec. 227—Family settlement—Person having the right to have and enjoy the profits of the property but cannot possess, partition or transfer—Not to be regarded as a 'co-sharer'—Suit for recovery of arrears of profits—Not cognizable by revenue court—Art. 120 of the Limitation Act applied to such a suit.

Where a person under an instrument in the nature of a family settlement has the right to have and enjoy the profits of the property without having the rights of possession, partition or transfer which are the incidents of ownership, such a person is not and cannot be deemed to be a "co-sharer" within the orbit of the Agra Tenancy Act, and a suit for profits accruing to the plaintiff under the terms of the instrument is maintainable in the civil court, and is not cognizable by the revenue court, and Art. 120 of the Limitation Act applied to such a suit.

*F. A. 324 of 1929

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU RAJ RAJESHWAR SAHAI, Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarnagar.

K. N. Katju and Ram Nama Prasad for the appellant.

Iqbal Ahmad and Vishwa Mittra for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant, and is directed against the preliminary decree, dated June 25, 1929, passed by the Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarnagar, in a suit for profits, instituted on August 4, 1926, for recovery of arrears for the period from June 15, 1920 to July 30, 1926.

Plaintiff's claim was founded upon an instrument, dated June 5, 1915, under which the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the profits relating to the moiety share of her husband in the joint estate owned by the latter and Baldeo Sahai.

Various pleas were raised in defence but we are concerned only with two of them:—

(1) Jurisdiction (2) Limitation. These pleas did not find favour with the court below, which decreed the plaintiff's suit. The pleas have been reiterated in the grounds of appeal in this Court and have been argued by the learned advocate for the defendant.

It has been contended that the suit was, in substance, a suit for profits by a co-sharer against another co-sharer in a revenue paying mahal within the purview of Section 227 of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926, Local) and that the suit was within the exclusive cognizance of the revenue court. We are clearly of opinion that Section 227 of the Agra Tenancy Act does not apply to the facts of the case. The term 'co-sharer' has not been defined in the Act. The estate of Mst. Anandi under the agreement was very peculiar and in certain respects anomalous. Although her name was mutated in the revenue records, she was not, under the terms of the agreement, entitled to either possession or partition, and had no right to transfer any portion of the property from which the profits accrued. Her rights were confined to the reception of profits from the defendant, who, as a surviving member of a joint family, remained in exclusive possession of the entire profits. Where a person under an instrument in the nature of a family settlement has the right to have and enjoy the profits of the property without having the rights of possession, partition or transfer which are the incidents of ownership, such a person is not and cannot be deemed to be a "co-sharer" within the orbit of the Agra Tenancy Act. The suit therefore was properly instituted in the civil court and was not cognizable by the court of revenue.

The claim relates to profits for five years from June 1920 to July 1926. The suit was filed on July 31, 1926. We have not been referred to any specific Article of the Indian Limitation Act as governing the claim for profits accruing to the plaintiff under the peculiar terms of the instrument dated June 5, 1915. It was held by the Privy Council in Mohammad Riyasat Ali v. Husain Banu[1] that "Article 120 should be applied unless it is clear that the suit is within some other Article". Article 120 is the general residuary Article and is applicable to all suits, not covered by a specific Article. The period of limitation prescribed under this Article is six years from the date when the right to sue accrues. The suit having been instituted within six years of the accrual of the cause of action for each of the five years when the arrears fell due, the claim is undoubtedly within time.

---

[1] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 157 at 163

The appeal is without force and we dismiss it with costs.

Appeal dismissed.

CRIMINAL
1931
August 13
SULAIMAN, J

JAGANNATH (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 21, R. 24(2)—Warrant of arrest sent to Nazir for execution—Nazir's power of delegation—Penal Code, Sec. 225B—'Lawful apprehension'—Meaning of—Warrant of arrest defective—No 'lawful apprehension'—Penal Code, Sec. 353—Warrant of arrest illegal—Whether officer executing warrant acting in discharge of duty as public servant.

There is nothing in the Civil Procedure Code which would prevent the officer to whom the warrant is issued from delegating his authority to some other subordinate officer for executing the warrant. Dharam Chand v. Queen-Empress, I. L. R. 22 Cal. 596 followed.

A warrant was issued by the court for arrest of a judgment-debtor in the name of the central nazir of Banda, and his office sent it to the registration clerk at Karwi (a sub-division in Banda Judgeship) without having the nazir's endorsement on it, and the clerk directed his peons to make the arrest, and after he had been arrested the judgment-debtor assaulted the peons and entered his house. He was prosecuted and convicted under Sec. 225B I. P. C.; held, that there was no proper delegation of authority which empowered the clerk to get the warrant executed by the peons under him, and consequently there was no 'lawful apprehension' within the meaning of Sec. 225B, and the conviction could not be upheld.

Where the warrant issued was illegal, the officer executing that warrant could not be considered to be acting in the discharge of his duty as public servant, and the conviction of the accused under Sec. 353 I. P. C. could not be upheld. Queen-Empress v. Dalip, I. L. R. 18 All. 246 followed.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of PANDIT KANHAIYA LAL NAGAR, Sessions Judge of Banda.

Saila Nath Mukerji for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is an application in revision from a conviction under S. 225B I. P. C. The applicant was a judgment-debtor, and a warrant for his arrest was issued against him to the central nazir of the Banda Court. In the Banda judgeship there is a Karwi sub-division where there is a registration clerk, to whom all processes for service are usually sent for execution. As the accused was a resident of Karwi, the nazir sent the warrant of arrest to the registration clerk at Karwi, who issued the warrant in the name of four civil court peons. Out of these four named peons, two peons, Gokul Prasad and Mohd. Husain, went to get the service effected. They arrested the accused, but he took them to his shop on the excuse that he had paid Rs.200 out of the decretal amount and that the remaining amount was to be paid by instalments. The accused assured them that he had got a receipt about the payment of the money and would show it to them at his shop, which was only at a short distance from the place. When the accused arrived at his shop "he gave a sudden jerk to the chaprasis whereby the peons received hurt and the accused, after freeing himself, entered his house". The chaprasis then made a report to the police-station, on which the accused was prosecuted and has been convicted under S. 225-B and 353 I. P. C., but has been given only one sentence of six months and a fine of Rs.30.

---

*Cr. Rev. 411 of 1931

So far as the facts go, there can be no controversy now in revision. I must accept the facts as found by the Sessions Judge.

The learned advocate for the applicant has, however, urged that the warrant of arrest had been illegally issued, and therefore the conviction is illegal.

As stated above, the warrant was issued by the court in the name of the central nazir of Banda. There is nothing in the Code of Civil Procedure which would prevent the officer to whom the warrant is issued from delegating his authority to some other subordinate officer for executing the warrant Dharam Chand v. Queen-Empress[1]. If the central nazir had made an endorsement on the back of the warrant authorising the registration clerk at Karwi to get the warrant executed, I would have no hesitation in holding that the registration clerk at Karwi would have authority to appoint peons under him to go and effect the arrest. Unfortunately the warrant does not bear any endorsement by the central nazir at all. It merely appears to have been sent by his office to the registration clerk at Karwi, apparently for execution, and it was the clerk who directed the peons to go and make the arrest. The clerk had stated that this was done in pursuance of the practice which has prevailed at Banda. Karwi is a sub-division in the Banda judgeship, and it is obvious that the central nazir at Banda cannot personally execute warrants for Karwi. The materials on the record, however, are too meagre to justify an assumption that there was a proper delegation of authority which empowered the clerk to get the warrant executed by the peons under him. The order of the District Judge has not been brought on the record, and there is a certain amount of uncertainty and doubt left on this point. I, therefore, think that it would not be just to uphold the conviction of the accused under S. 225-B. Obviously, if the warrant was defective and did not authorise the person who directed the peons to make the arrest, there would be no lawful apprehension within the meaning of S. 225-B, and accordingly no resistance or illegal obstruction to any such lawful apprehension, or escape from custody in which he was lawfully detained. I must accordingly set aside the conviction under S. 225-B.

I was inclined to hold that even if the registration clerk at Karwi was not empowered to issue the warrant to the peons, the peons were public servants acting in execution of their duty as such public servants when in pursuance of the order of the registration clerk they arrested the accused, and that when the accused pushed them, and in that way assaulted them, he would be guilty of the offence under S. 353 I. P. C., of which he has been convicted. S. 99 I. P. C. lays down that there is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law. If that section applied, there would be no right of private defence to the accused when he assaulted and caused hurt to the peons. I would have, therefore, thought that the accused could be properly convicted under S. 353 I. P. C.

---

[1] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 596

But the learned advocate for the accused has brought to my notice the case of Queen-Empress v. Dalip[2], which is a division bench ruling. In that case it was held that where the warrant issued was illegal, the officers executing that warrant could not be considered to be acting in the discharge of their duty as such public servants, which expression also occurs in S. 332 I. P. C. As a single judge I am bound by the opinion expressed in that case. The language of S. 332 is similar to that of S. 353. I am, therefore, constrained to hold that the conviction of the accused under S. 353 cannot be upheld.

But as the lower appellate court has found that there was assault and hurt was caused to the two peons, and there can be no right of private defence, I alter the conviction under S. 353 I. P. C. to one under S. 352 I. P. C. There was only one sentence inflicted on the accused for conviction under both the sections. As the main charge falls to the ground, I must reduce the sentence, and in substitution of the sentence imposed by the Magistrate, I order that the applicant should have rigorous imprisonment for the period already undergone, and in addition pay a fine of Rupees One hundred (100). In default of the payment of the fine he should undergo simple imprisonment for three weeks.

Sentence reduced

[2] I. L. R. 18 All. 246

PRIVY COUNCIL

PREM NARAIN (Defendant)

versus

RAM CHARAN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Civil

1931

Nov. 30

Lord Thankerton
Lord Salvesen
Sir Lancelot Sanderson
Sir George Lowndes

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 93—Construction of—Projected suit under Sec. 92—Previous sanction of Local Government necessary—To enable Legal Remembrancer to exercise his powers.

On a true construction of Section 93 of the Code of Civil Procedure the previous sanction of the Local Government in relation to every projected suit under Section 92 of the Code is necessary to enable the Legal Remembrancer to exercise his powers. Where a suit was instituted merely with the sanction of the Legal Remembrancer and it was not shown that any sanction of the Local Government had been obtained for the institution of such suit, held, that the suit was incompetent and must fail. Gulzari Lal v. The Collector of Etah, 1931 A. L. J. R. 369 relied on.

Appeal from a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

E. B. Raikes, K.C. and W. Wallach for the appellant.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and S. Hyam for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

Sir Lancelot Sanderson—This is an appeal, by special leave, by Prem Narain, a minor, through his mother, Musammat Chameli, against a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad, dated April 12, 1927, which varied a decree of the District Judge of Aligarh dated March 15, 1924, and decreed the major part of the plaintiffs' claim.

The suit was brought in pursuance of the provisions of Section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure, by five persons, who were alleged to have an interest in certain property which was specified in the plaint, and which was stated to be endowed property and the subject-matter of a trust created for public purposes of a charitable or religious nature.

Prem Narain, the appellant, was the first of five defendants.

The reliefs asked for in the plaint were as follows: a declaration that the property was an endowed property; that the defendants should be dismissed from the managership and trusteeship thereof; that a scheme for the management of the property should be drawn up by the Court; and that an order for the rendering of accounts by the defendants should be made.

The learned District Judge who tried the suit, dismissed it on the ground that there was no public trust.

The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court which allowed the appeal. The learned Judges held that the property, with the exception of a specified portion, was the subject of a public trust within the meaning of Section 92, and they made a decree that the defendants 1, 3 and 4 should be removed from the possession of such property. A direction was made that the case should be sent back to the District Judge for the framing of a scheme of management of the property.

---

*P. C. A. 22 of 1930

The claim for accounts was disallowed. The appellant, Prem Narain, was directed to pay the plaintiffs' costs in the Appeal Court and in the lower court.

From this decree the appellant, Prem Narain, has appealed.

The learned counsel who appeared for the appellant, in the first instance relied upon the grounds, referred to in the first and second reasons of the appellant's case, which relate to the competence of the suits, and which are as follows:—

> (1) Because the plaintiffs were not entitled to bring a suit under S. 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure.
>
> (2) Because the previous sanction of the Local Government had not been obtained authorizing the Legal Remembrancer to exercise the power of the Advocate-General in respect to this suit as provided by S. 93 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

This part of the case, therefore, was argued by learned counsel on both sides, since it was obvious that if the appellant were to succeed on the above-mentioned point, it would not be necessary to consider the other questions which arose in the appeal.

It may be stated at once, that the above-mentioned point was not taken by the appellant defendant until the presentation of his case in this appeal.

It is true that the appellant defendant had pleaded that the plaintiff had no right to maintain the suit under Section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure for certain reasons specified in the written statement.

But there is no doubt that, as already stated, the point on which reliance is now placed, was not taken in the written statement or in either of the courts in India. It was alleged by the learned counsel for the appellant defendant that it was in consequence of the decision of this Board in Gulzari Lal v. The Collector of Etah[1], which was given on March 9, 1931, that the appellant defendant has raised the above-mentioned contention.

The matter is vital to the question whether the plaintiffs had the right to bring the suit, and therefore the Board must consider and decide the point, even though it was raised in the courts in India.

The facts which are relevant to this part of the appeal are as follows:

The property, which is the subject-matter of the suit, is situated in the district of Etah, in the United Provinces.

In these provinces there is no Advocate-General who could act under Section 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

It appears, however, that on December 6, 1912, the Government of the United Provinces appointed the Legal Remembrancer to exercise the powers conferred on the Advocate-General by Sections 91 and 92 of the Code.

The appointment was in the following terms:—

No. 1622 VII|447.

> In exercise of the powers conferred by Section 93 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, and in supersession of Notification No. 1307-V.-11|25-21, VI, dated December 9, 1884, the Lieutenant Governor has been pleased to appoint the Legal Remembrancer to Government, United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, to exercise within the limits of the United Provinces of

---

[1] 1931 A. L. J. R. 369

> Agra and Oudh the powers conferred on the Advocate-General by Sections 91 and 92 of the Code of Civil Procedure.
>
> By order of the Hon'ble the Lieut.-Govr. United Provinces.
>
> S. P. O'Donnell,
> Secretary to Government United Provinces.
>
> December 6, 1912.

On February 2, 1923, the Legal Remembrancer, acting in pursuance of the above-mentioned order of the Government, granted sanction to the plaintiffs to institute the suit, in which this appeal arises.

The terms of the sanction are as follows:—

> With reference to their application, dated November 13, 1922, and acting under the powers conferred on the undersigned by Section 93, Code of Civil Procedure, and Government order No. 1622, VII-447, dated December 6, 1912, he accords sanction to the institution by them of a suit with respect to the alleged trust specified in the margin against such persons and for such relief as the nature of the case may require.
>
> (Sd.) C. M. King,
> Legal Remembrancer,
> United Provinces.

Section 93 is as follows:—

> The powers conferred by Sections 91 and 92 on the Advocate-General may, outside the Presidency towns, be, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, exercised also by the Collector or by such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

The argument of the learned counsel for the appellant defendant was to the effect that the above-mentioned sanction of the Legal Remembrancer was not sufficient by itself to comply with the provisions of Section 93 of the Code of Civil Procedure: that the order of December 6, 1912, was no more than an appointment of the Legal Remembrancer to exercise the powers conferred upon the Advocate-General by Sections 91 and 92 of the Code, and that on the true construction of Section 93 the previous sanction of the Government was necessary in every suit before the Legal Remembrancer could exercise such powers: that no such sanction was obtained in this case, and therefore the suit was not maintainable by the plaintiffs. He relied upon the decision in the above-mentioned case of Gulzari Lal v. The Collector of Etah (supra).

The learned counsel for the respondents contended that the previous sanction of the Government was not necessary in every suit, and that if it was, such sanction was sufficiently shown by the terms of the Government's order of December 6, 1912.

In their Lordships' opinion, the actual decision in Gulzari Lal v. The Collector of Etah does not govern this appeal.

For, in the cited case, the suit was brought by the Collector, and there was express authority given by the Government of the United Provinces to the Collector of Etah to institute the suit under Section 92 of the Code.

This fact is not stated in the judgment in the cited case, although having regard to the terms of the judgment it was obviously assumed. Their Lordships have referred to the record in the cited case, and the fact was as already stated.

That part of the decision in the cited case, which dealt with the question relating to Section 93 of the Code, was to the effect that the fact that the Government had, by the order of December 6, 1912, appointed in general terms the Legal Remembrancer to exercise the powers conferred on the Advocate-General by Sections 92 and 93 of the Code, did not prevent the Government from giving an express sanction to the Collector to institute the suit in that case, that the Legal Remembrancer was not the only official who could maintain the suit, that the sanction, in fact, given to the Collector was a valid sanction, and that the suit was competent.

It is clear, therefore, that the point which now arises was not decided in that case. There are, however, passages in the judgment which support the argument of the learned counsel for the appellant defendant.

Lord Blanesburgh delivered the judgment of the Board, and when dealing with the construction of Section 93 of the Code, he said as follows:—

> The effect of that section as it seems to the Board is that no suit like the present, being one outside the Presidency towns, may be brought without the previous sanction of the Local Government, whether by the Collector or by any officer whom that Government may appoint for the purpose: so that the fact that the Legal Remembrancer is in the United Provinces invested as a rule with the duties elsewhere discharged by the Advocate-General in this behalf is no reason why for the purposes of a particular suit the Local Government may not appoint the Collector or any other officer to prosecute it. The fact that there must be a previous sanction by the Local Government to every suit makes it impossible that two suits by separate officials will ever be concurrently instituted. Accordingly no inconvenience results from this construction of the section.

Their Lordships agree with and adopt the construction put upon Section 93 in the above-mentioned case. In their Lordships' opinion Section 93 provides for two distinct matters, the appointment of an officer to exercise the powers conferred by Sections 91 and 92 on the Advocate-General, and the "previous sanction" of the local Government to the exercise of such powers: in each case both the appointment and the previous sanction of the local Government to the exercise of the powers are necessary before the provisions of Section 93 can be utilised. The Legislature, no doubt, considered that there were good reasons for imposing more stringent provisions when the powers conferred upon the Advocate-General by Sections 91 and 92 of the Code were to be exercised outside the Presidency towns not by an Advocate-General, but by a Collector or by some other officer to be appointed by the Local Government.

Section 92 provides for a suit being instituted by the Advocate-General or by two or more persons having an interest in the trust and having obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate-General.

In the above-mentioned cited case the suit was instituted by the Collector with the sanction of the local Government. In the present case the suit was instituted by the plaintiffs having an interest in the trust and having obtained the consent in writing of the Legal Remembrancer.

It is clear, however, that, having regard to the terms of Section 93, the previous sanction of the local Government is necessary, whether the suit is instituted by a Collector or by an officer appointed by the local Government, or whether the suit is instituted by two or more persons with the consent in writing of such Collector or officer.

CIVIL

1931

PREM NARAIN v. RAM CHARAN

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

For these reasons their Lordships are of opinion that the point relied upon by the appellant defendant is a good one, and that, inasmuch as the previous sanction of the local Government to the suit had not been obtained, the objection to the competence of the suit must be upheld.

The result is that the appeal must be allowed on the above-mentioned grounds, and it is not necessary to consider the other reasons in the appellant's case which have not been argued.

The point on which the appeal has been decided could have been and ought to have been raised in the courts in India, and the failure to raise it may have given rise to unnecessary proceedings and costs.

The proper order, therefore, in their Lordships' opinion, is that the appeal be allowed, that the decree of the High Court dated April 12, 1927, be set aside and the decree of the District Judge dated March 15, 1924, be restored in so far as it dismissed the suit.

The direction of the District Judge as to costs must be set aside, and the plaintiffs and the defendants must pay their own costs in both the courts in India.

The plaintiffs must pay the appellant defendant his costs of this appeal. Any costs which may have been paid in accordance with the orders of the courts in India must be returned.

For the above reasons, their Lordships have humbly advised His Majesty accordingly.

T. L. Wilson and Co.—Solicitors for the appellant.

Barrow, Rogers and Nevill—Solicitors for the respondents.

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 4

VISCOUNT DUNEDIN
LORD BLANESBURGH
SIR JOHN WALLIS
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES
SIR DINSHAH MULLA

BAGESHWARI CHARAN SINGH (Plaintiff)
versus
JAGARNATH KUARI AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Registration Act (XVI of 1908), Sec. 17(1)(b)—'Declare'—Meaning of—Document containing acknowledgment of title relating to immovable property within meaning of Sec. 19 Limitation Act—Whether compulsorily registerable.

A document containing an acknowledgment of title relating to immovable property within the meaning of Section 19 of the Limitation Act is not compulsorily registerable under Section 17 of the Indian Registration Act. To attract the operation of Section 17, it is essential that the document should by itself declare or create a title. There is clear distinction between a mere recital of a fact and something which in itself creates a title. Faki v. Khotu, 4 Bom. 590 overruled; Sakha Ram Krishnaji v. Madan Krishnaji, 5 Bom. 232, Jiwan Ali Beg v. Basa Mal, 9 All. 108 and Baldeo Singh v. Udal Singh, 43 All. 4 approved.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Patna.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and W. Wallach for the appellant.

L. De'Gruyther, K.C. and M. A. Jinnah for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Viscount Dunedin

VISCOUNT DUNEDIN—This is an appeal from a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Patna, dated January 9, 1929, which affirmed a decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Hazaribagh, dated April 26, 1926, dismissing the plaintiff-appellant's suit.

---

*P. C. A. 98 of 1930

Thakur Jadu Charan Singh, the plaintiff's grandfather, was the owner of an impartible estate known as the Dhargulli Estate, in the District of Hazaribagh. He was heavily in debt, and by an order passed under Section 2 of the Chota Nagpur Encumbered Estates Act (VI of 1876) in 1894, the management of the whole of his estate was vested in a Manager appointed under that Act. The management of the estate continued under the Act until May 15, 1909, when the estate was released and made over to him according to the provisions of the Act.

Section 12A, paras 1, 2 and 3 of the Act provide:—

> 12A—(1) When the possession and enjoyment of property is restored, under the circumstances mentioned in the first or the third clause of Section 12, to the person who was the holder of such property when the application under Section 2 was made, such person shall not be competent, without the previous sanction of the Commissioner—
>
> (a) to alienate such property, or any part thereof, in any way, or
>
> (b) to create any charge thereon extending beyond his lifetime.
>
> (2) If the Commissioner refuses to sanction any such alienation or charge an appeal shall lie to the Board of Revenue, whose decision shall be final.
>
> (3) Every alienation and charge made or attempted in contravention of Sub-section (1) shall be void.

In 1909 Jadu Charan Singh, without having obtained any sanction from the Commissioner, executed a deed of gift of certain lands in favour of his second wife, who is now his widow and the respondent in this appeal. She entered into possession of these lands and was in possession up to 1920, when she transferred the lands to her son, also a respondent in this appeal. Jadu Charan Singh died on February 21, 1924. His eldest son being dead, he was succeeded in the estate by his grandson, the plaintiff-appellant. The present suit was instituted by him on February 24, 1925, and sought to recover the lands which had been transferred without sanction in 1909. The only effective defence was under the Limitation Act, and this defence was found to be good by the Subordinate Judge and by the Court of Appeal, and the suit was dismissed. Both these courts held that it was a case of adverse possession and therefore fell within Article 144 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act of 1908. In their Lordships' view, inasmuch as it has been found as a fact that after the deed of 1909 the late Thakur discontinued his possession and never resumed it, it is rather a case which falls within Section 142. The result, however, is the same if the 12 years run from 1909. But the appellant pleads that the 12 years do not run from 1909, owing to the following facts. In March 1916, the Thakur filed a petition with the Commissioner in which he related the deed of gift to his wife, expressed a doubt as to whether the deed of gift was valid, and asked the Commissioner either to declare that the deed was valid or to give his sanction to the execution of a fresh deed of gift. At the same time the wife, present respondent, filed a petition in these terms:—

> The humble petition of Thakurain Jagarnath Kuari, wife of Thakur Jado Charan Singh, proprietor of Gadi Dhurgulli, Pargana Rampore, district Hazaribagh. Most respectfully sheweth—

CIVIL

1931

BAGESHWARI CHARAN SINGH v. JAGARNATH KUARI

Viscount Dunedin

> That in view of the petition filed by Thakur Jado Charan Singh, your petitioner begs to file the original deed of gift and prays that your Honour may be pleased to sanction the same or order a fresh grant on the same terms to be executed.

This petition was signed by herself.

Section 19 of the Limitation Act is as follows:—

> 19—(1) Where, before the expiration of the period prescribed for a suit or application in respect of any property or right, an acknowledgment of liability in respect of such property or right has been made in writing signed by the party against whom such property or right is claimed, or by some person through whom he derives title or liability, a fresh period of limitation shall be computed from the time when the acknowledgment was so signed.
>
> Explanation 1—For the purposes of this section an acknowledgment may be sufficient though it omits to specify the exact nature of the property or right, or avers that the time for payment, delivery, performance or enjoyment has not yet come, or is accompanied by a refusal to pay, deliver, perform or permit to enjoy, or is coupled with a claim to a set-off, or is addressed to a person other than the person entitled to the property or right.

The appellant urges that this is an acknowledgment of liability in terms of the section and that therefore the period of limitation only began in 1916, and 12 years had not elapsed when the suit was raised in 1925. Both the Subordinate Judge and the Judges of the High Court disposed of this in a single sentence by simply saying they found no such acknowledgment. Their Lordships are unable to agree with this view. The petition produces the deed of gift and asks that it may be sanctioned or that a fresh grant may be ordered. This is a clear acknowledgment that unless one of the two things is done, she has no title at all, or, in other words, that she recognizes that the title is in the Thakur, her husband, and not in herself.

The Subordinate Judge, however, raised another point. He says that the acknowledgment contained in the petition, not being registered, cannot be received in evidence, and he quotes in support of the case of Faki v. Khotu[1]. The section of the Registration Act on which the question depends is Section 17(1), which is as follows:—

> The following documents shall be registered, if the property to which they relate is situate in a district in which, and if they have been executed on or after the date on which Act No. XVI of 1864, or the Indian Registration Act, 1866, or the Indian Registration Act, 1871, or the Indian Registration Act, 1877, or this Act came or comes into force, namely:—
>
> (b) other non-testamentary instruments which purport or operate to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish, whether in present or in future, any right, title or interest, whether vested or contingent, of the value of one hundred rupees and upwards, to or in immovable property.

Now the case of Faki v. Khotu undoubtedly goes the whole length that the respondents desire. It was a case where limitation was pled. The judgment on page 593, after reciting the document in question, goes on thus:—

> The plaintiff wishes to use it [i.e., the document] as an admission or acknowledgment of his title to the lands, and as proof that, at the date of

---

[1] I. L. R. 4 Bom. 590

> the document, the defendant's possession was not adverse to him. The document undoubtedly contains such an acknowledgment; and if it be genuine and relevant, a Court, which had to determine the question of fact, would probably consider that acknowledgment sufficient proof that the defendant's possession was really the plaintiff's possession
>
> The Assistant Judge has held that the document is inadmissible in evidence, because it is not registered; and we are of opinion that this decision is right. The plaintiff wishes to use the document as an acknowledgment of a right, title and interest in immovable property, which is admittedly of a higher value than one hundred rupees. If admitted, it will 'operate to declare' such a right, title and interest, and it thus appears to come within the terms of Section 17 of Act XX of 1866.

But the question remains whether that case was rightly decided. Their Lordships are of opinion that it was not and that it was inconsistent with a long track of decisions which are incompatible with it. The first of these will be found in the case of Sakha Ram Krishnaji v. Madan Krishnaji[2]. The question there was as to a document in the following words:—

> Our eldest brother M has built houses and is building new houses on property appertaining to his share To the same we three persons and our heirs and representatives have no interest of any kind whatever. If we or they should prefer any claim, then the same is to be null. This release paper we have duly passed in writing jointly and severally and in sound mind.

The document had not been registered, and it was objected that it could not be put in evidence in order to contradict a witness. Dealing with it West, J. said:—

> Here the document is not itself one which declares a right in immovable property, in the sense probably intended by Section 17. There 'declare' is placed along with 'create,' 'assign,' 'limit' or 'extinguish' a 'right, title or interest,' and these words imply a definite change of legal relation to the property by an expression of will embodied in the document referred to. I think this is equally the case with the word 'declare'. It implies a declaration of will, not a mere statement of fact, and thus a deed of partition, which causes a change of legal relation to the property divided amongst all the parties to it, is a declaration in the intended sense; but a letter containing an admission, direct or inferential, that a partition once took place, does not 'declare' a right within the meaning of the section.

Now it is quite clear in comparing these two cases that they took diametrically opposite views as to the proper meaning of the word "declare" in the 17th section, and it is upon that point that the whole question turns. Subsequent decisions have given full effect to the view of West, J. in the Krishnaji case.

In the case of Jiwan Ali Beg v. Basa Mal[3] the head note accurately sets forth one of the points in the case:—

> An instrument to come within Section 17(b) of the Registration Act (III of 1877) must in itself purport or operate to create, declare, assign, limit or extinguish some right, title or interest of the value of Rs.100 or upwards in immovable property.

Then in the case of Rünganayaki Ammal v. Virupakshee Rao Naidu[4] at page 102, the learned Judge in the High Court expressly cites the words

---

[2] I. L. R. 5 Bom. 232

[3] I. L. R. 9 All. 108

[4] 45 Mad. L. J. 100

CIVIL 1931
BAGESHWARI CHARAN SINGH
v.
JAGARNATH KUARI
Viscount Dunedin

of West, J. in the Krishnaji's case, and in the case of Baldeo Singh v. Udal Singh[5], precisely the same thing is done.

Their Lordships have no doubt that this track of decision is right. Though the word "declare" might be given a wider meaning, they are satisfied that the view originally taken by West, J. is right. The distinction is between a mere recital of a fact and something which in itself creates a title. The distinction has been acted on in cases connected with mortgages by deposit of documents of title. A comparison of the case of Pranjiwandas Mehta v. Chan Ma Phee[6] with that of Subramonian v. Lutchman[7] will show that, according to this distinction, a document requires registration or not. In the present case the statement in the petition of the respondent did not create any right in the Thakur. It merely acknowledged as a fact that such right was his. There was therefore no necessity for registration. It is not out of place to remark that this exactly fits in with Explanation 1. If you take the case of an acknowledgment contained in a communication addressed to a third party registration is not practicable; it is scarcely conceivable that it could be required.

Their Lordships will therefore humbly advise His Majesty to allow the appeal and to set aside the decrees of both the courts below with costs, and in lieu thereof that judgment ought to be entered for the appellant. The respondents will pay the costs of the appeal.

Appeal allowed

The Solicitor, India Office—Solicitor for the appellant.
Watkins and Hunter—Solicitors for the respondents.

---

[5] I. L. R. 43 All. at 4

[6] 43 I. A. 122

[7] 50 I. A. 77

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 14
VISCOUNT DUNEDIN
SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

HANS NATH AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)
versus
RAGHO PRASAD SINGH (Defendant)*

Pre-emption—Customary right of—Suit for pre-emption—Crucial date—Date of decree—Vendee's acqusition by gift of a share in village pending suit—Whether claim defeated—Re-sale by stranger purchaser after suit—Effect of—Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 52.

In a suit for enforcement of a customary right of pre-emption, not governed by Mohammedan Law or by the Agra Pre-emption Act, the right of a co-sharer seeking pre-emption must be judged on the facts existing on the date when the decree is passed. Therefore, the vendee's acquisition by gift of a share in the village pending suit defeated the claim of the plaintiff-co-sharer to pre-emption. The doctrine of lis pendens as embodied in Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act applies only to dealings with property actually in litigation. A re-sale by the stranger purchaser after suit will not defeat the pre-emptor.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

B. Dube, K.C. for the appellants.

E. B. Raikes, K.C. and A. Majid for the respondent.

The following judgment was delivered by

---

*P. C. A. 133 of 1929

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—The dispute in this appeal is as to the appellants' right to pre-emption in respect of a 2½|16 share in each of two villages known as Mowza Khurma and Jungle Khurma. On July 27, 1921, the shares in question were sold by one Thakur Prasad to the respondent. It is admitted that at the date of the sale the vendor and all the appellants were co-sharers in the villages, and that the respondent was not.

Two suits were instituted in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur on July 15 and 26, 1922, respectively by the different appellants against the vendor and the respondent, in which the right of pre-emption by village custom was asserted.

On November 2, 1922, during the pendency of these suits the respondent acquired, ex facie by gift, from another co-sharer a small independent fractional share in the villages. If this transfer had been made before suit raised, and had admittedly been by gift, it could not have been suggested that the custom alleged by the appellants applied.

On the execution of the transfer last referred to a third suit, No. 859 of 1922, was instituted by two of the appellants, alleging that the gift was merely colourable and that the transaction was in reality a sale to the respondent, and claiming the right of pre-emption in the fraction concerned, the value of which appears to have been in the neighbourhood of Rs.20. This suit was accordingly instituted in the Munsif's Court, but was transferred to the court of the Subordinate Judge, and all the three suits were tried together.

Issues were raised as to the custom, the gift, the preferential right of the plaintiffs, and the sale price. The Subordinate Judge held the custom to be proved on the strength of entries in the wajib-ul-arz of each of the two villages. He was of opinion that the alleged gift was in reality a sale for Rs.21-4-0: that the plaintiffs (the present appellants) had under the custom a preferential right over the respondent: and that the sale price in the case of the original transaction was that stated in the deed, viz., Rs.12,000. He accordingly, on April 18, 1923, made decrees for pre-emption in all the three suits upon the usual terms.

The respondents appealed in each suit. His appeal in the two suits first instituted went in the ordinary course direct to the High Court, but that in the third suit (No.859 of 1922), owing to the small value of the property, went to the District Judge, and was decided by him with commendable promptitude on October 22 of the same year. He, for the reasons stated in his judgment, disbelieved the evidence of the plaintiffs' witnesses as to the payment for the fraction, and held that the transaction was a gift, and he accordingly dismissed the suit.

The appeals in the other two suits took more than three and a half years to reach a hearing in the High Court, which their Lordships cannot but regard as unfortunate. By that time a second appeal in the other suit, which had been filed from the decree of the District Judge, was also ripe for hearing. All the three appeals came before the High Court on the same day, but that from the District Judge's decree (Suit 859 of 1922) was decided first. It met with but short shrift. The learned Judges held, no doubt quite correctly, that the finding of the lower appellate court as to the gift was a finding of fact which was binding upon them in second appeal, and that therefore the suit was rightly dismissed.

They then proceeded to consider the other two appeals, which they dealt with by one judgment. There was apparently no argument as to proof of the custom, the judgment being based upon the assumption that it was duly established. They were of opinion that the plaintiffs (the present appellants) had "entirely failed to prove that the deed of gift was in reality a deed of sale," and held, following a previous decision of their own High Court Baldeo Misir v. Ram Lagan Shukul[1], that the respondent had acquired by the gift "an indefeasible right as a co-sharer in the village before the first court's decree," and that this defeated the appellants' claim. They accordingly set aside the decrees passed by the trial Judge, and dismissed these suits also. A consolidated appeal in all the three suits now comes before the Board by special leave.

The limits within which effect should be given to a customary right of pre-emption, such as the appellants assert in the present case, have been the subject of constant discussion in the courts of the Province of Agra. Such claims appear to be of great frequency, and a Special Bench of the High Court at Allahabad seems to have been constituted to deal with them in order to ensure uniformity of decision. In 1922 it was thought desirable to legislate, and the Agra Pre-emption Act XI of 1922 was passed, Sections 19 and 20 of which dealt with questions similar to those which have been debated in the present appeal, but it was held in several cases that no change had been made in the law as previously interpreted by the High Court, and in accordance with which the decision under appeal was given. The Act of 1922 was eventually amended by Act IX of 1929, Section 5 of which enacts that a right of pre-emption cannot be defeated by a gift subsequent to suit. The question in issue between the parties in these appeals therefore can hardly arise in the case of future transactions. It is common ground that the present case falls to be decided upon the law as it stood before the passing of Act XI of 1922, and their Lordships think that if there was a current of decision in the Allahabad High Court against the contention of the appellants, as the judgment of the appellate court would seem to indicate, it should not now be disturbed, if not manifestly wrong.

When a sale has taken place to a stranger there are three possible views as to the rights of a co-sharer, viz., (1) that an indefeasible right of pre-emption arises by the sale itself, and that no change in the status or relations of the parties after the sale can affect the question between them; or (2) that the criterion must be the position of the parties when the right is formally asserted by the institution of a suit; or (3) that the validity of the claim must be judged on the facts existing on the date when a decree has to be passed.

The first view, for which theoretically a good deal could be said, has been definitely discarded in the Allahabad court. So it has been held in several cases that where between the dates of what may be called for convenience the pre-emption sale and the institution of the suit, the pre-emptor has lost his status as a co-sharer by the partition of the village,

[1] I. L. R. 45 All. 709

CIVIL 1931
HANS NATH
v.
RAGHO
PRASAD
SINGH
Sir George Lowndes

Janki Prasad v. Ishav Dar[2] or the stranger-purchaser has re-sold to another co-sharer, Sehr Mal v. Hukam Singh[3], or has become himself a co-sharer by an undisputed purchase or by a gift, Ram Hit Singh v. Narain Rai[4] the right of pre-emption is lost.

Counsel for the appellants does not dispute the correctness of any of these decisions; his contention is that the second view is the right one: in the judgment under appeal it was the third view that prevailed.

There are no doubt expressions here and there in the decided cases which suggest that the date of the institution of the suit is the crucial date, Saliq-un-Nissa v. Mati Ahmad[5], Rohan Singh v. Bhau Lal[6], and there is a definite body of authority that a re-sale by the stranger-purchaser after suit will not defeat the pre-emptor, Ghasitey v. Gobind Das[7], Kehar Singh v. Jahangir Singh[8], but these decisions may all, their Lordships think, be ascribed to the operation of the doctrine of lis pendens as embodied in Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, and not to any special aspect of the law of pre-emption.

Apart from these cases the cursus curiœ is, their Lordships think, clearly against the contention of the appellants. It was held as long ago as 1899 by Strachey, C. J. and Banerji, J. that a partitoin of the village effected after suit filed, but before decree, deprived the pre-emptor of his right: Ram Gopal v. Piari Lal[9]. Following this decision and quoting from the judgment of the learned Chief Justice at p. 444, a case almost precisely similar to the one now before their Lordships was decided in January, 1920, by Tudball and Rafiq, JJ., who held that the vendee's acquisition by gift of a share in the village pending suit defeated the claim of the plaintiff co-sharer to pre-emption: Bihari Lal v. Mohan Singh[10]. It is not suggested that either of these decisions has been dissented from in principle in the Allahabad court; on the contrary, the doctrine that the plaintiff's preferential right must be in existence at the date of the decree has been treated as the settled law of the province: Baldeo Misir v. Ram Lagan Shukul (supra): Qudrat-un-nissa v. Abdul Rashid[11], Ram Saran Das v. Bhagwat Prasad[12].

This being the state of the authorities in the light of which the present appeals came before the Board, it only remains to consider whether the view taken by the Allahabad High Court, that the decisive date is that of the decree, is one that can reasonably be supported.

The argument for the appellants which would make the filing of the suit the fact which crystallizes the rights of the parties is mainly based upon the maxim "pendente lite nihil innovetur." So far as the principle of this maxim finds expression in Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, it undoubtedly applies, and due effect has been given to it in cases where the defence relied upon the re-sale to a co-sharer pending suit: see the instances cited above. But no authority has been brought to their Lordships' notice which would give a wider application to the maxim than this, or would suggest a general doctrine of the law that nothing occurring between the date of the institution of the suit and the decree could alter the relations existing between the parties. The maxim has been cited and the doctrine considered in many cases, Ravji Narayan v. Krishnaji Lakshman[13] and cases there cited; Manual Fruval v. Sanagapalli[14], Krishnappa v. Bahiru[15], Brahannayaki v. Krishna[16], Byramji v. Chunilal[17], before the passing of the Transfer of Property Act, but it has never, so far as their Lordships can discover, been applied except in cases which would now come under Section 52 of that Act. Its application in England is discussed in Storey's Equity Jurisprudence, § 405-6, where the cases are collected, but the learned author seems to regard the maxim as applicable only to "a purchase made of property actually in litigation": see also Bellamy v. Sabine[18].

---

[2] I. L. R. 21 All. 374

[3] I. L. R. 20 All. 100

[4] I. L. R. 26 All. 389

[5] 25 All., 418

[6] 31 All. 530

[7] I. L. R. 30 All. 467

[8] I. L. R. 47 All. 625

[9] I. L. R. 20 All. 441

[10] 42 All. 268

[11] 48 All. 616

[12] 51 All. 411

It has also been brought to their Lordships' notice that the courts of neighbouring provinces have dissented from the Allahabad decisions on various points and various grounds, but in the view their Lordships have taken of this appeal, they think that no useful purpose would be served by an examination of these cases. They are satisfied that the decision of the High Court now under appeal is in accordance with a consensus of judicial opinion in the Agra Province, which they think should not now be disturbed. It is stated by Sir John Edge, in delivering the judgment of the Board in Digambar Singh v. Ahmad Said Khan[19] that "in all cases the object (of a custom of pre-emption) is as far as is possible to prevent strangers to a village from becoming sharers in the village." If this object would not be attained by a decree in favour of the plaintiff-pre-emptor, it may not unreasonably be held that such a decree should not be passed. In the present case it is not now contested that the respondent was at the time when the appellants' suits stood for adjudication a co-sharer in the villages, and no decree which might have been passed in their favour could deprive him of his status as such. If the acquisition by him of a share after the pre-emption also but before the suit was instituted would be effective to defeat the appellants' claim, as it is admitted that it would, their Lordships think it difficult to see why the same reasoning should not be applicable in the case of a share acquired at any time before the adjudication of the suit.

For these reasons their Lordships are of opinion that these consolidated appeals fail and that the decrees passed by the High Court must be affirmed, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly. The appellants must pay the costs of the respondent.

Appeal dismissed

Hy. S. L. Polak—Solicitor for the appellants.
Hardcastle Sanders and Co.—Solicitors for the respondent.

---

[13] 11 Bom. H. C. R: 139
[14] 7 Mad. H. C. R. 104
[15] 8 Bom. H. C. R. 55
[16] I. L. R. 9 Mad. 92
[17] I. L. R. 27 Bom. 266
[18] 1 De Gex & J. 566
[19] 42 I. A. at 18

Civil

1931

Dec. 15

Viscount Dunedin

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

Sir George Lowndes

FAQIR CHAND AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
AZIZ AHMAD KHAN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 82—Mortgage of properties A, B and C—Property A subject to prior incumbrance jointly with properties X, Y and Z—Value of property A for contribution purposes—How to be determined.

To arrive at the value for contribution purposes, within the meaning of Section 82 of the Transfer of Property Act, of each of several properties on which a particular mortgage is secured, it is clear that the amount of all prior incumbrances upon such properties must be ascertained and deducted. Where properties A, B and C are all made security for one mortgage, if property A is subject to a prior incumbrance jointly with properties X, Y and Z, the rateable share to be attributed to A under the prior incumbrance must necessarily be assessed in order to ascertain its value for the purposes of the mortgage. To take into consideration only the total amount of the prior incumbrance to which A was liable, irrespective of the question whether that liability was to be shared by X, Y and Z or not, would be quite erroneous.

APPEAL from a decree of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and J. M. Parikh for the appellants.

The other side was not represented.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir George Lowndes

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—This appeal is concerned with a tangle of mortgages made over a number of years by one Jamil ul Rahman. He owned or had interests in a variety of immovable properties which were scattered over the different transactions. Some have been brought to sale by one mortgagee or another; some have been redeemed by puisne mortgagees for the protection of their own interests, and subsequently transferred to other parties subject to the rights of prior incumbrances; in some cases arrangements have been made as to the contribution due by the purchaser of this or that property; but no final settlement as between all the parties concerned has ever been come to either in or out of court.

The mortgage with which the present proceedings are directly concerned was dated September 23, 1899. It was the sixth in the series in order of date and comprised ten different properties, eight of which were also included in one or other of prior or subsequent mortgages.

In 1911 the mortgagee under this deed sued upon his mortgage. A preliminary decree in the usual form was made on September 20, 1912, and a final decree for sale on May 16, 1914.

Thereupon one Chotey Lal, the first defendant in the suit, a puisne mortgagee in respect of one of the properties which had been ordered to be sold, known as Nagla, satisfied the decree by a payment of Rs.20,000 odd, and by a deed of July 15, 1920, transferred the rights which he had thereby acquired to the first respondent and the predecessor in title of the other respondents.

Chotey Lal's object was apparently to free Nagla from further liability, and having regard to similar arrangements which he had made with other parties who were also incumbrancers of Nagla, to provide for the realisation of the moneys due under the decree from two other properties known as Shadipur and Inayetpur.

---

*P. C. A. 21 of 1930

In pursuance of the terms of this deed the respondents 1 to 8 on April 25, 1922, instituted the suit out of which this appeal has arisen. They impleaded thirty-six defendants as persons having an interest in the mortgaged properties, and prayed that in default of payment of the sum of Rs.26,972-8-0 with further interest, the amount claimed as due under the decree transferred to them by Chotey Lal, the Shadipur and Inayetpur properties should be sold. In the alternative they prayed for an account and contribution.

Nine different statements of defence were filed by different sets of defendants, but this appeal is concerned only with two of them, viz., that of the appellants Nos. 1-4, who are interested in Shadipur, and that of appellant No. 5, who is interested in Inayetpur.

The trial Judge held that the plaintiff-respondents' claim to realise their dues from Shadipur and Inayetpur only was not maintainable. This claim was abandoned in the Court of Appeal and may therefore be disregarded.

On the alternative claim for contribution, which he thought must necessarily involve a detailed examination of all liabilities affecting each of the properties, he held that the plaintiffs had failed to bring all the parties concerned on the record, and had also failed to put before him materials sufficient to enable him to work out the account. He accordingly dismissed the suit, his decree being dated November 13, 1923.

The plaintiffs appealed to the High Court at Allahabad, the learned Judges of which disagreed with the trial Judge as to the basis upon which the contribution fell to be assessed. They were of opinion that "the learned Judge of the court below was wrong in believing that it was incumbent on him to find out, in the case of each prior mortgage, what were the properties mortgaged along with any of the items mortgaged under the sixth transaction, what were the values of those properties, who were the owners of those properties, and so on." They therefore set aside the decree of the trial Judge, and remanded the suit to be disposed of by him in accordance with the remarks contained in their judgment. He was also directed to bring on the record any parties whose presence before him he should still find to be necessary.

Of the parties who defended the appeal in the High Court, only the present appellants have come up to His Majesty in Council to support the decree of the trial Judge. The respondents have not appeared.

The right to contribution in this case is governed by Section 82 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. A new section has now been substituted by an amending Act (XX of 1929), but it is not necessary for their Lordships to refer to the changes which have been affected by it.

The first paragraph of the section in question is the material one. It is in the following terms:—

> Where several properties, whether of one or several owners, are mortgaged to secure one debt, such properties are, in the absence of a contract to the contrary, liable to contribute rateably to the debt secured by the

CIVIL 1931
FAQIR CHAND
v.
AZIZ AHMAD KHAN
Sir George Lowndes

mortgage, after deducting from the value of each property the amount of any other incumbrance to which it is subject at the date of the mortgage.

To arrive at the value for contribution purposes of each of several properties on which a particular mortgage is secured, it is clear that the amount of all prior "incumbrances" upon such properties must be ascertained and deducted. Their Lordships are in agreement with the High Court that "incumbrance" is a term of wider connotation than "mortgage," but they are unable to follow the learned Judges in the argument they base upon this proposition. Where properties A, B and C are all made security for one mortgage, if property A is subject to a prior incumbrance jointly with properties X, Y and Z, their Lordships think that the rateable share to be attributed to A under the prior incumbrance must necessarily be assessed in order to ascertain its value for the purposes of the mortgage. In the view taken by the High Court all that would be necessary in such a case would be to see what was the total amount of the prior incumbrance to which A was liable, irrespective of the question whether that liability was to be shared by X, Y and Z. Their Lordships are unable to adopt this view of the meaning of Section 82. It would no doubt greatly simplify the enquiry in such a case as the present, but simplification would only be attained by a sacrifice of what they regard as the principle involved.

The view taken by the trial Judge upon this part of the case was, in their Lordships' opinion, the right one, and as it does not appear to have been contended in the High Court that, upon this basis, there were sufficient materials before the Court to work out the necessary account, their Lordships think that the suit was rightly dismissed. If it had been merely a question of non-joinder of parties their Lordships would, having regard to the provisions of Order 1, Rule 9, of the Civil Procedure Code, have agreed with the learned Judges of the High Court that the defect could be remedied in the way pointed out by them.

Their Lordships have not found it necessary to deal with a question of limitation which was discussed at considerable length in the High Court, and the finding upon which has been contested by the appellants' counsel before the Board. The question is one of considerable complexity, and they think it undesirable to make any pronouncement upon it in an ex parte appeal.

For the reasons given their Lordships think that the appeal should be allowed; that the decree of the High Court should be set aside, and that of the trial Judge, dated November 13, 1923, restored. They will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly. The respondents 1 to 8 must pay the costs of the appellants both in the High Court and before this Board.

Appeal allowed

Douglas, Grant and Dold—Solicitors for the appellants.

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 15

VISCOUNT DUNEDIN, LORD BLANESBURGH, SIR JOHN WALLIS

RAJKUMAR SEN CHOWDHURY AND OTHERS (Defendants)

versus

RAM SUNDAR SHAHA AND OTHERS* (Plaintiffs)

Executant—Of document—To understand nature of transaction—Details may be left to his lawyer—Legal Practitioner—Professional misconduct—Unnecessarily protracted examination and cross-examination of witnesses—Gross abuse of process of court.

It is enough for the executant of a legal document to understand the nature of the transaction, leaving the details to his lawyer.

Unnecessarily protracted examination and cross-examination of witnesses on commission is a gross abuse of the process of the court and it would be within the powers of the High Court to direct an enquiry with a view to disciplinary action in flagrant cases of this description.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

L. De'Gruyther, K.C. and B. Dube, K.C. for the appellants.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and J. M. Parikh for the respondents.

This appeal arose out of a suit for specific performance of a contract alleged to have been made by one Kali Narain and the particular question in the case was as to whether Kali Narain was of unsound mind for the purpose of making a contract within the meaning of Section 12 of the Contract Act, as being at the time he made it incapable of understanding it and of forming a rational judgment as to its effect upon his interests.

The judgment discusses the oral evidence adduced by the parties and affirms the decree of the High Court which had held that the contract was perfectly enforcible. The following extracts from the judgment being of general importance are reproduced:—

Sir John Wallis

SIR JOHN WALLIS—"Disputes about the dispositions and contracts of people of advanced age and failing powers are always difficult cases to decide, and the difficulty is greatly increased when, as in the present case, the record has swollen to enormous size owing to the way in which the examination of the witnesses on commission was protracted, assuredly not in the interests of the parties. A scandalous instance of this abuse is to be found, as observed by the learned Judges of the High Court, in the examination of Ananda Roy, the principal witness for the plaintiffs, which takes up two hundred and twenty-six pages of the record, and contains twelve hundred and fifty questions and answers, most of which, as admitted at the trial by the vakils on both sides, were quite irrelevant to the suit.

In another appeal with an enormous record from the same High Court it was recently stated that the cross-examination on commission of a purdanashin lady lasted for a hundred days. In their Lordships' opinion it is imperative that an abuse of this kind, which enormously increases the costs of litigation without any corresponding benefit to the parties, should be checked, and it would appear to be clearly within the powers of the High Courts to direct an enquiry with a view to disciplinary action in flagrant cases which come under their notice at the hearing of the appeals".

---

*P. C. A. 89 of 1929

"Witnesses have been asked if Kali Narain could have understood all the terms of the bainapatra, but that was unnecesasry. It was enough if he knew he was selling his property on terms approved by his protector Ananda by a document prepared by the estate lawyer. In India, as here, it is enough for the executant of a legal document to understand the nature of the transaction, leaving the details to his lawyer."

Watkins and Hunter—Solicitors for the appellants.

Stanley, Johnson and Allen—Solicitors for the respondents.

CIVIL 1931
RAJKUMAR SEN CHOWDHURY
v.
RAM SUNDAR SHAHA
Sir John Wallis

MOHAMMAD EJAZ HUSAIN AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
MOHAMMAD IFTIKHAR HUSAIN AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 15
VISCOUNT DUNEDIN
SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

Mohammedan Law—De facto guardian—Powers of—Mother of minor sons—No authority to enter into an agreement of reference to arbitration so as to make award binding upon minors as to their share in immovable property—No power to enter into an arrangement whereby minors' share in property is affected.

Under the Mohammedan Law, the mother, as a de facto guardian of her minor sons, has no authority to enter into an agreement of reference to arbitration on behalf of her minor sons so as to make the award binding upon them as to their share in the immovable property of their father, nor has she power or authority to enter into an arrangement whereby the minors' share in the immovable property of their father would be affected, and she cannot be clothed with the necessary authority by calling the transaction a family arrangement. Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, 45 I. A. 73 referred to. Mohsnuddin Ahmed v. K. Ahmed, 47 Cal. 713 approved.

APPEAL from a decision of the Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow.

E. B. Raikes, K.C. and A. P. Pennell for the appellants.

S. Hyam and J. M. Pringle for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in the suit against a judgment and two decrees of the Chief Court of Oudh, dated October 18, 1928, which reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge dated January 17, 1928, as amended by his order dated March 18, 1928.

The suit was brought by Mohammad Ejaz Husain and his sister Khaliq-un-nisa against their full and half-brothers and sisters, their mother Faiyaz-un-nisa and Hamid-un-nisa, the wife of Amir Hasan, the defendant No. 4.

The relationship between the parties to the suit appears from the pedigree which was attached to the judgment of the Chief Court, and which is as follows:—

---

*P. C. A. 34 of 1930

CIVIL

1931

EJAZ HUSAIN v. IFTIKHAR HUSAIN

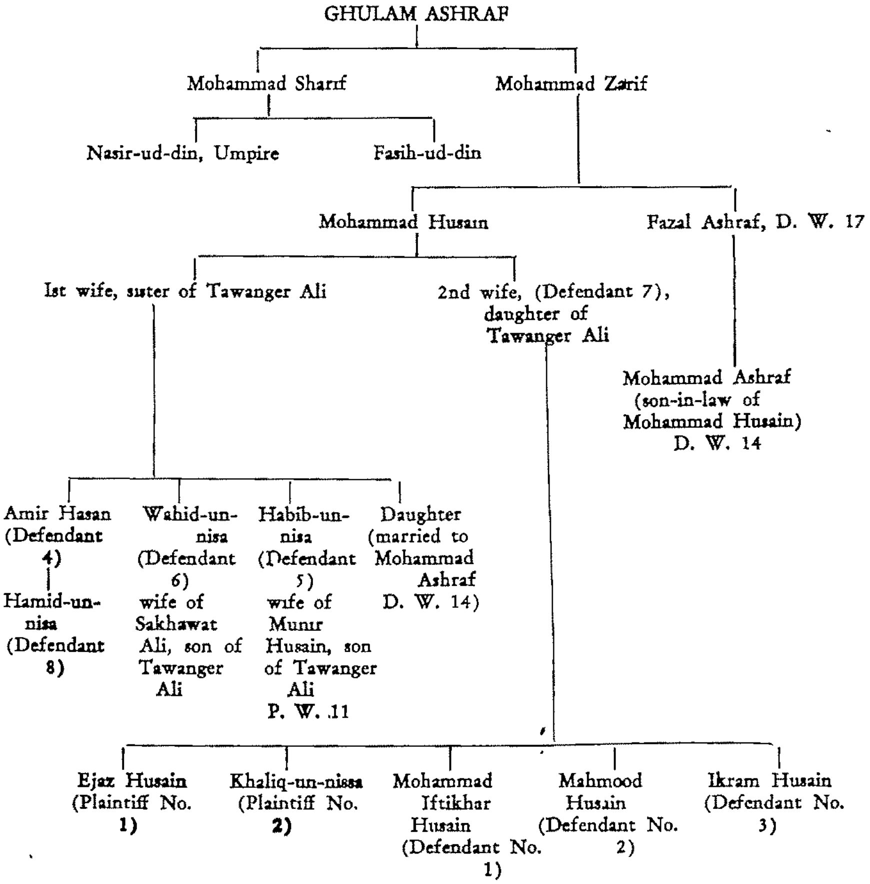
Sir Lancelot Sanderson



GHULAM ASHRAF
Mohammad Sharif
Mohammad Zarif
Nasir-ud-din, Umpire
Fasih-ud-din
Mohammad Husain
Fazal Ashraf, D. W. 17
1st wife, sister of Tawanger Ali
2nd wife, (Defendant 7), daughter of Tawanger Ali
Mohammad Ashraf (son-in-law of Mohammad Husain) D. W. 14
Amir Hasan (Defendant 4)
Hamid-un-nisa (Defendant 8)
Wahid-un-nisa (Defendant 6) wife of Sakhawat Ali, son of Tawanger Ali Habib-un-nisa (Defendant 5) wife of Munir Husain, son of Tawanger Ali P. W. 11
Daughter (married to Mohammad Ashraf D. W. 14)
Ejaz Husain (Plaintiff No. 1)
Khaliq-un-nissa (Plaintiff No. 2)
Mohammad Iftikhar Husain (Defendant No. 1)
Mahmood Husain (Defendant No. 2)
Ikram Husain (Defendant No. 3)

The suit was brought for a declaration that an agreement dated March 25, 1912, and an award dated April 2, 1912, were null and void and inoperative and for a partition of certain properties alleged to have been the properties of the plaintiffs' father, Mohammad Husain.

The learned Subordinate Judge, who tried the suit, made a decree in the plaintiffs' favour: this decree was subsequently amended on an application for review, and it was thereby directed that the plaintiffs should get from the defendant No. 4 (i.e., Amir Hasan) a 21|104th share, first, out of the sum of Rs.25,526, being the capitalised value of a factory, and, secondly, a declaration of their rights to that extent out of the property No. 10 of the plaint list A, in so far as it was left:—

> after meeting claims of the original owner and the acquisition by the Improvement Trust, and also out of the property No. 20 of the list, which is a family graveyard. Possession over the share-out of the property No. 10 can be obtained only after redemption of the mortgage assigned to the defendant 4 (vide Exhibit 11), the trust compensation money being taken to have satisfied pro rata a part of this mortgage debt.
>
> Plaintiffs shall further get interest on the amount under the first head at the rate of Rs.12 per cent per annum from March 4, 1912, to the date of realisation. Costs on parties. A preliminary decree for partition to be prepared in those terms.

From this decree both Amir Hasan, defendant No. 4, and the plaintiffs appealed to the Chief Court of Oudh.

The learned Judges of the Chief Court allowed the appeal of Amir Hasan and dismissed the appeal of the plaintiffs. The result was that the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed, the Chief Court directing that the parties should bear their own costs in both courts.

These are the decrees from which the plaintiffs have appealed to His Majesty in Council.

Amir Hasan has died since the decree of the Chief Court was made, and his representatives are now on the record, and they are the only respondents contesting this appeal.

The material facts are as follows:—

Mohammad Husain, the father of the plaintiffs and of the defendants Nos. 1 to 6, died on March 4, 1912.

On March 25, 1912, an agreement of reference to arbitration was executed by Amir Hasan (the fourth defendant), his two sisters (defendants Nos. 5 and 6), and Faiyaz-un-nisa (defendant No. 7), who was the surviving widow of Mohammad Husain, and the mother of the plaintiffs and the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3.

The plaintiffs and the defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3 were minors at the date of the agreement, and their mother purported to execute the agreement for herself in person and as guardian in the capacity "of the real mother" on behalf of the plaintiffs and her other minor children. By the said agreement all matters in dispute were referred to two arbitrators and an umpire, who were named in the said agreement.

One of the issues raised at the trial was as follows:—

> (1) Did Mohammad Husain constitute the defendant No. 7 as guardian of the person and property of plaintiffs as well as of defendants Nos. 1 to 3. If so, with what effect?

This issue was answered in the negative by the learned Subordinate Judge, and his decision in this respect was approved by the Chief Court.

It has not been argued before the Board that these findings were wrong, and the appeal must therefore be decided upon the assumption that Faiyaz-un-nisa was not appointed by Mohammad Husain guardian of the person and property of the plaintiffs.

Further, it is to be noted that at the date of the said agreement Faiyaz-un-nisa had not been appointed guardian of the person and property of her minor children by the court.

On April 3, 1912, the arbitrators, with the concurrence of the umpire, made their award in writing. They decided:—

> (1) That the properties acquired by the deceased in the name of his wife, Faiyaz-un-nisa, defendant No. 7, belonged to her as her separate properties and that she was entitled to those properties; (2) that the properties acquired by the deceased in the name of Amir Hasan, defendant No. 4, were his separate properties and that he was entitled to them: (3) that the factory known as the Victor Ice and Flour Mills, situate at Bagh Sherjang, City Lucknow, was given to Amir Hasan by the deceased during his lifetime and the same belonged to him, and (4) that the remaining properties should be distributed among the several heirs according to their legal shares under the Mohammedan Law.

The award was carried out and acted upon until filing of this suit.

CIVIL

1931

EJAZ HUSAIN v. IFTIKHAR HUSAIN

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

On July 18, 1912, Faiyaz-un-nisa filed an application in the court of the District Judge of Lucknow under Section 10 of the Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), praying for a certificate of guardianship of the person and property of her minor children, including the plaintiffs.

On September 18, 1912, the certificate was issued.

The plaintiff, Mohammad Ejaz, attained his majority on October 21, 1923.

The plaintiff, Khaliq-un-nisa, attained her majority on October 8, 1925.

The suit was instituted on October 20, 1926, just within three years from the date on which the first plaintiff attained his majority.

In the suit many issues were raised, but it is not necessary to refer to them all. Both the courts in India held that the properties acquired by Mohammad Husain in the names of Faiyaz-un-nisa and Amir Hasan belonged to the two last-mentioned persons respectively, and on these matters they agreed with the decision of the arbitrators. No question arises in this appeal with respect to these properties.

It is material, however, to note that at the time of the arbitration the interest of Faiyaz-un-nisa and that of her minor children were not identical with respect to the properties standing in her name, for if the arbitrators had come to the conclusion that Faiyaz-un-nisa was holding these properties benami for her husband, as alleged, the minor children would have been entitled to their respective shares therein.

Both courts in India decided the issue as to the factory known as the Victor Ice and Flour Mills in the plaintiffs' favour. Disagreeing with the award in this respect, they held that the alleged oral gift of the factory by Mohammad Husain to Amir Hasan had not been established. The concurrent findings in respect of this issue have not been disputed in this appeal. It must therefore be taken for the purposes of this appeal that the said factory was part of the estate of Mohammad Husain at the date of his death and that, subject to the question hereinafter to be considered, the plaintiffs, as two of his heirs, are entitled to their respective shares in the said factory.

There is no dispute as to the shares to which the plaintiffs are entitled in the properties of their father, viz., 14|104ths in respect of the first plaintiff, and 7|104ths in respect of his sister, the second plaintiff.

The main issue raised in the court of the Subordinate Judge was whether Faiyaz-un-nisa, acting on behalf of her minor children, the plaintiffs, was competent to refer to arbitration the matter of the division of the assets of Mohammad Husain and questions connected therewith, and consequently whether the plaintiffs were bound by the award.

The Subordinate Judge decided this issue in favour of the plaintiffs, on the ground that Faiyaz-un-nisa, the mother of the plaintiffs, had no authority to refer, so as to bind the plaintiffs.

We are of opinion that otherwise the award did not appear to be perverse, unfair or influenced by any corruption or misconduct of the arbitrators.

The learned Judges of the Chief Court agreed with the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge on this issue and held that the agreement to refer to arbitration executed by Faiyaz-un-nisa on behalf of her minor children could not be considered binding on them and that the award, if looked at from that point of view, must be held to be an inoperative document.

The learned Judge of the Chief Court, however, were of opinion that the scheme of distribution promulgated in the award, and which the learned Subordinate Judge had found to be in no way perverse or unfair or influenced by any corruption or misconduct of the arbitrators, and which had been followed without any objection whatever for a long period extending over fourteen years, could well be recognised as a family settlement, and they stated that they were extremely reluctant to disturb the arrangement arrived at so far back as April, 1912.

Their Lordships appreciate the reluctance felt by the learned Judges, in view of the time which had elapsed since the arbitration and award. But the plaintiffs, on the death of their father, became entitled to their respective shares in his estate, and in view of the findings of both courts in India it must now be taken that the above-mentioned Ice and Flour Factory was part of the immovable property of Mohammad Husain, in which the plaintiffs were entitled to share, and yet by the award it was allotted to Amir Hasan as being his own property. The award in this respect, when carried out, amounted to an alienation of the plaintiffs' shares in that property, to which being infants they could not consent, and unless Faiyaz-un-nisa, their mother, had authority to act on their behalf and was competent to enter into the alleged arrangement by which the said alienation was affected, the infant plaintiffs' shares in the said property could not be affected.

The learned Judges held that Faiyaz-un-nisa, although she was at the time of the agreement the "de facto" guardian of the plaintiffs, who were then minors, had no power to deal with their property, and consequently that she had no authority to enter on their behalf into the agreement to refer the disputes to arbitration, which, if acted upon, would necessarily affect the immovable property of the infant plaintiffs.

If Faiyaz-un-nisa was not competent to deal with the immovable property of the plaintiffs, by referring the disputes relating to the distribution of their father's estate to arbitration, and if the award made on such arbitration was not binding on the plaintiffs, it is difficult to see how Faiyaz-un-nisa could be competent to effectuate that distribution and to make the provisions of the award binding upon the infant plaintiffs merely by calling that which was contained in the agreement and the award a family arrangement.

Their Lordships are of opinion that if Faiyaz-un-nisa was not competent to enter into the agreement of reference so as to bind the plaintiffs, who were minors at the time, with respect to their share in the immovable property of their father, it must follow that she was equally incompetent to agree to the disposal of the infant plaintiffs' share in any part of the immovable property of their father by adopting the award and by calling the transaction a family arrangement.

It is therefore necessary to consider the question whether Faiyaz-un-nisa had authority to enter into the agreement of reference on behalf of the plaintiffs who were minors at the time.

It has already been stated that Faiyaz-un-nisa was not appointed guardian of the person and property of the minor children by Mohammad

CIVIL

1931

EJAZ HUSAIN v. IFTIKHAR HUSAIN

Sir Lancelot Sanderson

Husain, and that at the date of the agreement of reference she had not been appointed guardian by the court.

At the time, therefore, of the agreement to refer she was not the legal guardian of her infant children, but merely the custodian of them. The provisions and principles of the Mahomedan law which govern this matter were stated in the judgment of Mr. Ameer Ali when delivering the decision of this Board in Imambandi v. Mutsaddi[1]. At page 83 the following passage is to be found:—

> It is perfectly clear that under the Mohammedan law the mother is entitled only to the custody of the person of her minor child up to a certain age according to the sex of the child. But she is not the natural guardian; the father alone, or, if he be dead, his executor (under the Sunni law) is the legal guardian. The mother has no larger powers to deal with her minor child's property than any outsider or non-relative who happens to have charge for the time being of the infant. The term 'de facto guardian' that has been applied to these persons is misleading; it connotes the idea that people in charge of a child are by virtue of that fact invested with certain powers over the infant's property. This idea is quite erroneous, and the judgment of the Board in Mata Din v. Ahmed Ali (L. R. 39 I. A. 49) clearly indicated it.

At pages 84 and 85 there are other material passages, which are as follows:—

> As already observed, in the absence of the father, under the Sunni law, the guardianship vests in his executor. If the father dies without appointing an executor (wasi) and his father is alive, the guardianship of his minor children devolves on their grandfather. Should he also be dead and have left an executor, it vests in him. In default of these de jure guardians, the duty of appointing a guardian for the protection and preservation of the infants' property devolves on the judge as the representative of the Sovereign: Baillie's Digest (ed. 1875), p. 689; Hamilton's Hedaya, vol. 4, bk. 52, c. 7, p. 555. No one else has any right or power to intermeddle with the property of a minor, except for certain specified purposes, the nature of which is clearly defined. But the powers of even the de jure guardians are confined within legal limits. For example, whilst an executor-guardian (wasi) may 'sell or purchase movables on account of the orphan under his charge either for an equivalent or at such a rate as to occasion an inconsiderable loss,' dealings with his immovable property are subjected to strict conditions: Baillie's Digest, p. 687.
>
> When the mother is the father's executrix, or is appointed by the judge as guardian of the minors, she has all the powers of a de jure guardian. Without such derivative authority, if she assumes charge of their property of whatever description and purports to deal with it, she does so at her own risk, and her acts are like those of any other person who arrogates an authority which he does not legally possess. She may incur responsibilities, but can impose no obligations on the infant.

Mr. Ameer Ali then referred to certain exceptions provided for the protection of a minor child who has no "de jure" guardian, which were classified under three heads: it is clear that the present case does not fall within any of the stated exceptions.

The decision in the above-mentioned case was acted upon by Teunon and Beachcroft, JJ. in Mohsiuddin Ahmed v. K. Ahmed[2], the head note of which is as follows:—

---

[1] 45 I. A. 73

[2] I. L. R. 47 Cal. 713

The mother, as the de facto guardian of minors, is not competent, under the Mahomedan law, to enter on their behalf into an agreement to refer to arbitration any dispute, even which will necessarily, if acted upon, involve dealings with the immovable properties of the minors.

Imambandi v. Mutsaddi referred to.

Adopting the principles of Mohammedan law as stated by this Board in Imambandi v. Mutsaddi, their Lordships have no doubt that the courts in India were right in holding that Faiyaz-un-nisa had no authority to enter into the agreement of reference on behalf of the plaintiffs, who were minors at the time, so as to make the award binding upon them as to their share in the immovable property of their father.

They are also of opinion that Faiyaz-un-nisa had no power or authority to enter into an arrangement whereby the plaintiffs' share in the immovable property of their father would be affected, in view of the fact that at the time of the said agreement she was not their legal guardian, and she cannot be clothed with the necessary authority by calling the transaction a family arrangement.

Their Lordships' attention was drawn by learned counsel for the respondents to several reported cases: in their opinion it is not necessary to deal with them in detail. It is sufficient to say that none of them covered the point which is now under consideration.

Reliance was placed by the learned counsel for the respondents upon the fact that on September 18, 1912, Faiyaz-un-nisa was appointed by the court guardian of the person and property of the minors, including the plaintiffs, and that therefore it should be taken that the court, by appointing Faiyaz-un-nisa guardian, must have approved the arrangement evidenced by the agreement of reference and the award. There is, however, no evidence that the District Judge was made aware of the said agreement. Indeed, it was admitted that if an application had been made to him before the agreement to refer was executed, and if he had been informed that the interest of the mother with regard to some of the properties was not identical with that of the minors, as was the fact, the Judge would in the ordinary course have appointed some person, other than the mother, as guardian of the minors. It is obvious that the District Judge did not consider the question which is now before their Lordships, and the mere fact that the court subsequently found the mother a fit person to act for the minors would not validate the arrangement, which in its inception was invalid.

A further point was raised by the learned counsel for the respondents, viz., that the plaintiff Ejaz Husain could not maintain the suit because he had ratified the alleged family arrangement as to part of the estate allotted to him by the award.

It appears that certain mortgage deeds had been executed in favour of Mohammad Husain and these were included in the shares awarded to the plaintiff and his brothers. A suit on the mortgages was instituted on October 13, 1922, by Iftikhar Husain after attaining majority, and his three brothers, of whom Ejaz Husain was one, as minors, under the guardianship of their mother.

A preliminary decree was obtained on October 11, 1923, and an application was made for a decree absolute on September 22, 1924, and the decree was made absolute on November 1, 1924—Ejaz Husain was of age when the application for decree absolute was made, and signed it as a major.

Their Lordships do not consider that this is sufficient to prevent Ejaz Husain from maintaining the present suit. Proceedings in the mortgage suit had been begun when he was a minor, and when the time came for application for a decree absolute the mother had no longer any authority to act for him, as he had attained majority, and Ejaz being a party to the suit his signature to the application was necessary to bring the proceedings to a conclusion in the interest of all concerned.

The learned counsel for the plaintiffs contended that they were entitled to an account of and a share in all the profits made by Amir Hasan in respect of the Ice and Flour Factory.

Their Lordships are unable to accept this contention.

It appears that Amir Hasan managed the business of the factory in his father's lifetime and continued so to do after his death. The old factory has gone, most of the machinery being worn out, and modern factories were erected by him in its place.

These and other facts stated by the learned Subordinate Judge, which need not be mentioned in detail, are sufficient to show that this is not a case for mesne profits. The rights of the plaintiffs in this respect are fully met by the allowance of interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum made by the Subordinate Judge. It is worthy of note that the plaintiff-appellants in their case did not ask for mesne profits, but submitted that the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge should be restored, and that Rs.25,000, the amount fixed by the Chief Court, should be substituted for Rs.25,526, which was the sum decreed by the learned Subordinate Judge as the capitalised value of the factory.

For the above-mentioned reasons their Lordships are of opinion that the appeal must be allowed, the decrees of the Chief Court dated October 18, 1928, must be set aside, and the decree of the Subordinate Judge dated January 17, 1928, as amended by the order of March 8, 1928, be restored, but that the sum of Rs.25,000 be substituted for the sum of Rs.25,526 mentioned in the said decree of the Subordinate Judge.

The respondents, the heirs of the deceased respondent, Sheikh Amir Hasan, must pay the costs of the plaintiffs of this appeal, and of the appeals to the Chief Court. Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Appeal allowed

J. E. Lambert—Solicitor for the appellants.

Barrow, Rogers and Neville—Solicitors for the respondents.

HIGH COURT

Civil 1931
July 1
Mukerji, J.
Allen, J.

RADHA BALLAB AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
DEOKI NANDAN AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Evidence Act, Sec. 68, Proviso to—Interpretation of—Suit for sale on a mortgage—A defendant denies that an alleged executant executed the mortgage—One marginal witness to be produced.

If any of the defendants to a suit denies that any of the alleged executants executed the mortgage deed, the plaintiff must produce one of the marginal witnesses to prove the document.

Where the execution of the bond as a simple bond by the defendants was proved, and the plaintiffs' evidence showed that no consideration beyond Rs.50 had passed, held, that the defendants were not precluded from urging that no consideration passed. Makund v. Bahori Lal, I. L. R. 3 All. 824 and Mohd. Sharif v. Mohd. Moazzum Ali, A. I. R. 1923 All. 214 followed.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU GANGA PRASAD VERMA, Additional Subordinate Judge of Muttra, confirming a decree of MAULVI MANZOOR AHMAD KHAN, Munsif of Mahaban.

N. P. Asthana for the appellants.

K. Verma and Gopi Nath Kunzru for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

MUKERJI, J.—This appeal is the plaintiffs' and arises out of a suit filed by them for recovery of money by sale of certain property said to have been mortgaged on foot of a mortgage bond dated December 29, 1921 alleged to have been executed by the first three defendants to the suit. The fourth defendant was the son of one of the executants and the fifth defendant was an attaching creditor of the other defendants. Mukerji, J.

Two of the defendants, namely, defendant No. 3 and the attaching creditor defendant No. 5, alone contested the suit. They denied the execution of the bond and the payment of the consideration and the defendant No. 3 further said that the defendant No. 1 who was a friend of one of the plaintiffs had got the bond brought about for some motive unknown to the defendant.

The plaintiffs adduced evidence by examining one of themselves and the scribe of the bond, but they did not examine any marginal witness. The courts below came to the conclusion that the bond in suit was not proved as a mortgage bond because the provisions of S. 68 of the Indian Evidence Act had not been complied with, by calling one of the marginal witnesses. In this Court it has been contended that under the proviso added to S. 68 by the Amending Act of 1926 it was not necessary for the plaintiffs to produce an attesting witness, inasmuch as the deed was a registered one and none of the executants of the deed had denied its execution.

We are of opinion that this is not a proper reading of the proviso to S. 68. If any of the defendants to a suit denies that any of the alleged

---

*S. A. 301 of 1929

CIVIL 1931
RADHA BALLAB
v.
DEOKI NANDAN
Mukerji, J.

executants executed the deed, the plaintiff must produce one of the marginal witnesses to prove the document. This was not done and therefore the plaintiffs failed to prove the bond as a mortgage bond.

The courts below found that the execution of the bond as a simple bond by the first three defendants had been proved. But they also found that payment of any consideration money beyond a sum of Rs.50 was not established. The learned counsel for the appellants contended that the execution of the bond having been proved, it was for the defendants to prove that the consideration was not paid. This may be a correct proposition of law, as to which we express no opinion. The fact however remains that the plaintiffs did adduce evidence and their evidence showed that no consideration beyond the sum of Rs.50 had passed. In the circumstances, the defendants are not precluded from urging that no consideration passed. This is in accordance with at least two cases decided in this Court, Makund v. Bahori Lal[1] and Mohammad Sharif v. Mohammad Moazzum Ali[2].

The appeal fails and it is hereby dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

[ED., A. L. J.—The defence of defendant No. 3 appears from the following paragraph of his written statement—"The real fact of the case is that Radha Ballabh, plaintiff No. 1, and Deoki Nandan, defendant No. 1, the brother of the contesting defendant, were on very social terms. Hence Deoki Nandan executed the mortgage-deed in question through some policy and caused the contesting defendant to make his signature thereon. The contesting defendant never took any loan from the plaintiff."]

---

[1] I. L. R. 3 All. 824

[2] A. I. R. 1923 All 214

CIVIL 1931
July 21
SEN, J.
ALLEN, J.

ANANDI (Defendant)
versus
LAKHMI CHAND (Plaintiff)*

Hindu Law—Widow—Right of maintenance—Unchastity of widow—Instrument executed by two brothers (members of a joint family)—On the death of either, widow of deceased to have profits of half the property for her life—Right to profits not liable to forfeiture—On subsequent unchastity.

The right to maintenance of a Hindu widow, belonging to a joint family, is conditional upon continued chastity, and this right is not affected by the fact that the widow has obtained a decree declaring her right to maintenance or that there has been an agreement between the widow and the male co-parceners to pay her a certain amount by way of maintenance. Vishnu Shambog v. Manjama, I. L. R. 9 Bom. 108, Daulat Kauri v. Meghu Tewari, I. L. R. 15 All. 382 and Sathyabhama v. Kesavacharya, 29 I. C. 1915, 397 followed.

The plaintiff respondent and B (the husband of the defendant) were brothers and were members of a joint Hindu family. They had no male issue. Shortly before the death of B, they jointly executed a document, whereby they declared that they were the members of a joint Hindu family, but agreed that on the death of either of them without leaving male issue, the widow of the deceased should have the full share of the profits of half the property upon the same footing as that of a widow of a separated Hindu, held, that the defendant derived under the document a special estate equivalent to the estate of a Hindu widow, and it was not liable to forfeiture upon the ground of subsequent unchastity, because under the document the widow's right to profits was to continue for her whole lifetime, unhampered by any restrictions.

---

*F. A. 341 of 1930

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of P. L. GOVIL ESQ., Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarnagar.

P. L. Banerji, K. N. Malaviya and Kumuda Prasad for the appellant.

Iqbal Ahmad and Vishwa Mittra for the respondent.

This appeal arose out of a suit instituted by the plaintiff-respondent for a declaration that the right to profits conferred upon the defendant under the document dated June 5, 1915 was forfeited because she had become unchaste.

The plaintiff-respondent and Baldeo Sahai (the husband of the defendant) were brothers and were members of a joint Hindu family. They had no male issue. Shortly before the death of Baldeo Sahai, they jointly executed the document dated June 5, 1915, whereby they declared that they were the members of a joint Hindu family, but agreed that on the death of either of them without leaving male issue, the widow of the deceased should have and enjoy for her life the full share of the profits of a moiety of the joint property like the widow of a sonless and separated Hindu. This document dated June 5, 1915 was construed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Lakhmi Chand v. Anandi, 24 A. L. J. R. 609, and their Lordships held that the transaction embodied in the document was a valid one and was binding on the surviving brother, and the widow of the deceased obtained an interest for life in the moiety share of her husband.

The present suit for declaration was decreed by the learned Subordinate Judge of Muzaffarnagar on the finding that the defendant had become unchaste, and therefore forfeited her rights under the document dated June 5, 1915. On appeal the High Court held that the charge of unchastity against the defendant was false. In view of this finding, it was not necessary to go into the question, viz., were the profits of the estate of her husband granted to the defendant by way of maintenance to a widow belonging to a joint Hindu family (which she was liable to lose if she became unchaste) or was a special estate granted to her under the document dated June 5, 1915, which was unfettered by any condition and was not liable to forfeiture, but as the point was argued at great length before their Lordships, they indicated their opinion on the matter. The relevant passages from the judgment are reproduced below:—

SEN, J.—The right to maintenance of a Hindu widow, belonging to a joint family, is conditional upon continued chastity. This right is not affected by the fact that the widow has obtained a decree declaring her right to maintenance or that there has been an agreement between the widow and the male co-parceners to pay her a certain amount by way of maintenance. In Vishnu Shambhog v. Manjama[1] it was held that "a decree obtained by a Hindu widow declaring her right to maintenance was liable to be set aside or suspended on proof of subsequent unchastity given by her husband's relatives either in suit brought by them expressly for the purpose of setting aside the decree or in answer to the widow's suit to enforce her right." This case was followed by Burkitt, J. in Daulat Kauri v. Meghu Tewari[2]. The relevant texts of Hindu Law have

---

[1] I. L. R. 9 Bom. 108.

[2] I. L. R. 15 All. 382

CIVIL 1931
ANANDI
v.
LAKHMI
CHAND
Sen, J.

been set out and discussed by Ayling and Sheshagiri Aiyer, JJ. in Sathyabhama v. Kesavacharya[8]. This case is an authority for the proposition that "the rule that by subsequent unchastity a Hindu widow forfeits her right to maintenance applies even where that right is secured to her by an agreement in writing."

It may be observed here that Mst. Anandi was no party to the agreement dated July 5, 1915. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that this agreement is in the nature of a family settlement under which profits were agreed to be paid to Mst. Anandi in lieu of maintenance and that she was liable to forfeit her right by reason of her subsequent unchastity. We are of opinion that the nature and scope of the agreement have been misconstrued.

We have a translation of the agreement at page 175 of the paper book in First Appeal No. 360 of 1930. The translation is not very accurate, more especially that of Paragraph 9. We would prefer to adopt the translation set out in the judgment of the Privy Council in Lakshmi Chand v. Anandi[1]. The material terms of the agreement are to be found in paragraphs 3, 6, 7, 8 and 9. There are no indications in this document that the estate which was intended to be granted to the widow was in lieu of maintenance. The document does not say so. The entire profits of the moiety share in the joint family property are to go to the widow for her whole lifetime and no clause is to be found in the document, providing for the defeasance of the estate upon the happening of subsequent unchastity. Where a transaction of the nature of a family arrangement has been arrived at by the agreement of two co-parceners, who constituted the joint family, whereby a benefit has been secured to a third person, it is not permissible to only one of the co-parceners, upon the demise of the other, to impose any restriction or condition in derogation of the original grant. Where the instrument, creating the family arrangement, does not provide either directly or by necessary implication that the right to profits should cease upon the subsequent unchastity of the grantee, it would be opposed to all canons of construction to import such a condition into the text. The nature and character of the estate, conferred upon Mst. Anandi, have been considered by their Lordships of the Privy Council in 24 A. L. J. R. 609 at 615, and according to this view, Mst. Anandi is entitled to "have and enjoy for her life an interest in moiety of the joint property equivalent to the interest which the widow of a sonless and separated Hindu would have in her deceased husband's estate; and that the interest which she obtained by the mutual agreement of Baldeo Sahay and Lachmi Chand should continue for her benefit, notwithstanding the birth, if it should happen of 'male issue' to Lachmi Chand". The transaction in question was clearly not a maintenance-grant simpliciter but was something more. Although she was not entitled to actual possession of the property and had no right to transfer the same or to claim a partition thereof, her rights extended to the full share of the profits of half the property upon the same footing as that of a widow of a separated Hindu. It resembles a widow's estate in certain particulars though it was divergent in other respects. The widow's right to the profits was to continue for her whole lifetime, unhampered by any restrictions. The nature of the estate was therefore anomalous.

---

[8] I. L. R. 39 Mad. 658

[1] 24 A. L. J. R. 609 at 611

Civil

1931

Anandi v. Lakhmi Chand

Sen, J.

It may be further observed that in prescribing the course of devolution, the executants of the instrument do not follow the course of inheritance prescribed by the Hindu law but depart from it in many respects, which need not be enumerated.

If it be held that Mst. Anandi derived under this document the estate of a Hindu widow or something equivalent to the estate of a Hindu widow she could not be divested of this estate by reason of subsequent unchastity. We are, however, of opinion that the estate carved out to Mst. Anandi was one of a special nature and it was not liable to divestment upon the ground of subsequent unchastity, because the instrument creating the right did not provide for this contingency.

The result is that we allow the appeal and dismiss the plaintiff's suit with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

HAMID HASAN AND OTHERS (Applicants)
versus
KING-EMPEROR through SYED HUSAIN, MUKHTAR (Opposite party)*

Criminal

1931

Oct. 7

Niamatullah, J.

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 107(2)—Interpretation of—Person informed against not within local limits of Magistrate's jurisdiction—When proceedings initiated—Whether Magistrate has jurisdiction—Issuing a summons under Sec. 114—Part of such proceedings.

An application was presented before the Joint Magistrate of Ghazipur for action being taken against the present applicants under Sec. 107 Cr. P. C., who were in Jaunpur when the application was filed and process issued under Sec. 114. They appeared in obedience to the summons served upon them, when an order under Sec. 112 was read over to them. They took objection to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take proceedings under Sec. 107 Cr. P. C. against them; held, that the objection was well-founded, as the present applicants were not within the local limits of the magistrate's jurisdiction when proceedings under Sec. 107 were initiated, and issuing a summons under Sec. 114 was part of such proceedings.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of E. Moss Esq., District Magistrate of Ghazipur.

S. M. Husain and K. Masud Hasan for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision of an order of the District Magistrate of Ghazipur purporting to be one on appeal from an order of the Joint Magistrate of that district passed in proceedings, under Sec. 107 Criminal Procedure Code, pending before him against the present applicants, who are residents of Jaunpur and took objection to the jurisdiction of the Joint Magistrate taking proceedings under the aforesaid section. The objection was overruled. They moved the District Magistrate who dismissed "the appeal". No appeal lay to the District Magistrate from an interlocutory order of the kind passed by the

*Cr. Rev. 356 of 1931

CIVIL

1931

HAMID HASAN
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Niamat-ullah, J.

Joint Magistrate and the proceedings before the District Magistrate should be regarded as those in revision under Section 435 Criminal Procedure Code and I treat them as such. The revision to this Court is in no way affected by error of procedure, if any, in moving the District Magistrate.

The proceedings under Section 107 Criminal Procedure Code were initiated by an application presented before the Joint Magistrate by one Hakim Syed Husain, a Mukhtar practising in the Criminal Courts at Ghazipur, complaining that the present applicants were likely to commit a breach of the peace. It appears that the parties were interested in a certain waqf as to which a civil suit had been instituted by the present applicants. Certain allegations made by them in the plaint were considered by Hakim Syed Husain to be defamatory. Accordingly the latter instituted criminal proceedings before a Magistrate in the Ghazipur district for prosecution of the present applicants for an offence under Section 500 I. P. C. The applicants, being accused in the aforesaid case, had to come from Jaunpur to Ghazipur on the dates fixed for hearing. The Hakim's application for action being taken against them under Section 107 Criminal Procedure Code, which was made during the pendency of the defamation case, alleged that the present applicants intimidated him when they came to Ghazipur for the defamation case threatening to institute some case against the complainant, presumably false, in some court in the Jaunpur district and when he (the complainant) would go to that place for such case he would be molested. The complaint is not clearly worded and placing a construction most favourable to the complainant it amounts to an allegation that the applicants are likely to commit a breach of the peace in Ghazipur and Jaunpur and that the occasion on which a breach of the peace in Ghazipur was apprehended would be the visit of the applicants to that place for purposes of the defamation case. Assuming this allegation to be true the question is whether the Joint Magistrate of Ghazipur has jurisdiction to take proceedings under Section 107 Criminal Procedure Code against the applicants who are residents of Jaunpur but have to visit Ghazipur for the purposes of the defamation case.

The answer to the question formulated above turns on the right interpretation of Section 107(2) Criminal Procedure Code which provides that no proceedings under that section can be taken unless both the person informed against and the place where the breach of the peace or disturbance is apprehended are within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction. The contention raised by the applicants is that they are residents of Jaunpur and go to Ghazipur only for the purposes of the defamation case and the Joint Magistrate has no jurisdiction to proceed against them. Section 107(2) makes no reference to the residence of the persons proceeded against; all that it provides is that if the such persons "are" not within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, his jurisdiction to take proceedings under Sec. 107 is ousted. A person may be within the limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction and yet may not have residence within such limits. At the same time to hold that a person 'is' within the local limits of a Magistrate's jurisdiction only because he is present in court when the Magistrate draws up his order under Section 112 Cr. P. C., having appeared in obedience to a summons issued by the Magistrate, is to make the section nugatory. Section 114 of the same Code empowers the Magistrate to

CIVIL
1931
HAMID HASAN
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Niamat-ullah, J.

issue a summons to a person against whom he decides to take proceedings under Section 107, Sub-section (2) of which is imperative that "no proceedings shall be taken unless the person informed against is within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction". Issuing a summons under Section 114 is part of such proceedings and it is clear that if the person informed against is not within the local limits of the Magistrate's jurisdiction when the proceedings are initiated, he has no jurisdiction.

The record shows that the applicants were in Jaunpur when the complaint was filed and process issued. They appeared in obedience to the summons served upon them in Jaunpur when the order under Section 112 Cr. P. C. was read out to them. As already stated they took objection to the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to take proceedings under Section 107 Cr. P. C. against them.

In the view I take of the question involved in this revision it must succeed. It is accordingly allowed and the proceedings so far as they were taken by the joint magistrate are quashed.

Application allowed

CRIMINAL
1931
Oct. 28
PULLAN, J.

MANNI LAL (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Penal Code, Sec. 405—Criminal breach of trust—Failure to produce an electric meter on a particular date—Whether amounts to—Evidence of dishonesty necessary.

A person on whose premises a meter is installed by the electric company is responsible for it, and if at any time he is unable to produce the meter, the price of it could be deducted from his deposit with the company; but the mere failure to produce the meter on any particular date does not of itself constitute criminal breach of trust under Sec. 405 Penal Code. The words of Section 405 do not embrace the case of a man who has taken an article on hire ad fails to produce it. There must be some evidence that he acted dishonestly.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of L. V. ARDAGH ESQ., Sessions Judge of Jhansi.

N. C. Vaish for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—This is an application in revision from an order of the Sessions Judge of Jhansi, upholding the conviction of one Manni Lal for an offence under S. 406 I. P. C. This Manni Lal owns a flour mill in Jhansi, and for the purposes of his mill took electric current from the Jhansi Electric Supply Co. The accounts produced by the Company show that he used electric current to the amount of 5·54 units in the month of February, 1931. On March 26, 1931, he addressed a letter to the Company saying that two of the Company's servants had removed his meter on March 24, saying that they would either return it or instal another on the following day, and that they had not done so. The Company made an enquiry and satisfied themselves that their servants had not removed the meter, and they initiated a prosecution for criminal breach of trust. It appears that at that time some consumers in Jhansi had hit upon a means of tampering with the reading of their meter, and several prosecutions had been instituted. It is suggested in this case that the accused had been tampering with his meter, and fearing discovery, had destroyed the meter, and falsely reported that the meter had been removed. This substantially is the story believed by the Magistrate and the Judge, and the applicant has been sentenced to four months' rigorous imprisonment for an offence under S. 406 I. P. C. and to pay a fine of Rs.50. It is clear from the judgments of both courts that in the Company's books there is considerable confusion as to the number of the meter supplied to this mill. But the courts have held as a fact that it was meter No. 77, and that this meter is now missing. They have also held as a fact that the servants of the company, one of whom has subsequently been dismissed, did not remove the meter. Thus sitting as a court of revision I have to accept the findings of fact that the meter No. 77 was installed in the mill of the accused, that it is not there now, and that the servants of the Electric Co. did not remove the meter. But even when these facts are conceded, it does not appear to me that an offence under S. 406 I. P. C. has been established. The accused was no doubt responsible for the meter. He had given a deposit with the Company of Rs.75, and if at any time he was unable to produce the meter, the price of it could be deducted from his deposit. But the mere failure of the accused to produce the meter on any particular date does not of itself constitute an offence of criminal breach of trust. In order that this offence must be fairly established, it must be proved that the accused dishonestly misappropriated or converted to his own use the property entrusted to him, or dishonestly used or disposed of that property "in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust." I do not see how the words of this Section embrace the case of a man who has taken an article on hire and fails to produce it. There must be some evidence that he acted dishonestly, and I cannot consider that the proved facts in this case show dishonesty. There is certainly no proof as to what happened to the meter, and I cannot conclude that the accused made any profit out of it. He may have sold it: he may have destroyed it; and somebody else may have stolen it. He is certainly responsible to the Company for the price of the meter, but his criminal liability appears to me to depend on the strange findings of the Magistrate that the accused deliberately destroyed this meter to do away with the evidence against himself. There is not the slightest evidence either that the accused tampered with his meter or that there was any prospect of a prosecution being instituted against him for so doing. The finding of the Magistrate that the motive for the crime is clearly dishonest is a finding based on a presumption without any evidence, and as such is contrary to law. The Judge mentions the previous prosecutions but he nowhere states that the motive of the accused was to destroy proof of his own guilt. In fact the Judge appears to think that the mere failure to produce the meter is sufficient to lead to a presumption of criminal breach of trust. He has not touched upon the point of law at all. In my opinion the conviction is illegal, and

*Cr. Rev. 501 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
MANNI LAL
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Pullan, J.

no offence under S. 406 is established against the accused. I accordingly allow this revision, set aside the conviction and sentence and direct that the fine, if paid, shall be refunded. It will be open to the Company no doubt to realise the value of the meter from the deposit which they hold in the name of the accused.

CIVIL 1931
Nov. 13
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

PARBHOO DAYAL (Plaintiff)
versus
DWARKA PRASAD AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Tort—Joint tort-feasors—Suit for damages—Decree—Executed against one alone —Decree satisfied—When suit for contribution lies against co-tort-feasors.

> Where a person obtains a decree against joint tort-feasors, and executes the decree against one of them alone, who is compelled to pay the whole damages, he has no right of contribution from the others, if they committed the act of tort knowing that what they were doing was nothing but a clear case of tort. Merryweather v. Nixan, 8 T. R. 186, Takira v. Tasadduq Husain, I. L. R. 19 All. 462 relied on.
>
> No distinction can properly be drawn, in principle, between a case where a joint liability has been liquidated without a suit, and where a joint liability has been established by a suit and the judgment has been liquidated by one of the parties. Ram Prashad v. Arja Nand, 10 All. W. N. 161 not followed.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of J. K. DAR ESQ., Judge of Small Cause Court, Allahabad.

Ambika Prasad for the applicant.

Gopi Nath Kunzru, R. K. Malaviya, Panna Lal Khatri and Lalta Prasad Gupta for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is a revision against a decree of a Small Cause Court at the instance of the plaintiff, who has lost his suit.

The facts that have been found by the court below are these. The plaintiff and the defendants, who are two in number, without the least semblance of right, removed the materials of a building in a certain village. The building belonged, in part to one Basityar Khan. Basityar Khan brought a suit, being No. 29 of 1927, against the present parties to recover his own share of the value of the materials. That suit was decreed. The decree was executed against the plaintiff to the present litigation, namely, Parbhudayal and Parbhudayal satisfied that decree. Thereupon, Parbhudayal brought the suit, out of which this revision has arisen, to recover a certain sum of money said to be due to him from the defendants, by way of contribution.

The learned Judge of the Small Cause Court dismissed the suit. He held:

> The plaintiff had no interest or share in the beams which he had removed and that he was conscious of his wrongful act, and that as such this suit for contribution does not lie.

It has been argued before us that although the parties to the present suit were joint tort-feasors in the true sense of the expression, yet the plaintiff was entitled to succeed simply because there was a decree made in favour of Basityar Khan jointly against the parties to the present litigation. Reliance has been placed on a dictum of Lord Watson in Palmer v. Wick[1]. His Lordship is reported to have said at page 332:

---

*Civ. Rev. 436 of 1930

> But the case is very different where the injured party's claim of damage is liquidated by a joint and several decree against all the delinquents. In that case—which is the present—the sum decreed is simply a civil debt, and the meaning which the law attaches to a decree constituting a debt in these terms is, that each debtor under the decree is liable in solidum to the pursuer, and that inter se each is liable only prorata, or, in other words, for an equal share with the rest.

Lord Halsbury thought that if the case had to be decided under the law of England he could not depart from the principle laid down in Merryweather v. Nixan[2]. It seems to us that the case of Palmer v. Wick was decided on the basis of Scotch law which we are not bound to administer in India.

Speaking for ourselves, we do not see any distinction that can properly be drawn, in principle, between a case where a joint liability has been liquidated without a suit and where a joint liability has been established by a suit, and the judgment has been liquidated by one of the parties. There is undoubtedly a distinction between cases where the tort-feasors are aware of the fact that they were acting purely in tort and without any semblance of right in themselves, and cases where an act of trespass or other action in tort is committed more or less innocently and in good faith with a semblance in one's rights, although those rights may not actually exist.

No case has been cited to us where it may have been held distinctly that, as between persons who are conscious tort-feasors, in the sense that when they committed the act of tort knowing that what they were doing was nothing but a clear case of tort, a right of contribution existed. In our opinion, the authority of Merryweather v. Nixan still holds good so far as this country is concerned.

The learned counsel for the applicant has relied on the case of Ram Prasad v. Arja Nand[3]. It was the decision by a learned single Judge of this Court, Mahmood, J. The decision was based on the ground that a decree had been passed against all the parties to the suit and that was enough ground for the plaintiff, a joint tort-feasor, succeeding in a suit for contribution against his co-tort-feasor. We are not prepared to accept the correctness of this decision.

In Fakira v. Tasadduq Husain[4] a decree for costs had been made against two defendants, who opposed unnecessarily the claim of a rightful plaintiff to a certain property. The decree for costs was a joint one against the defendants. The plaintiff paid off those costs and sued to recover from his co-defendants a share of it. Sir John Edge, C. J. and Blair, J., remarked as follows:

> Apparently the plaintiff and defendants here were wrong-doers. They were holding on to property to which the plaintiff in the former suit was entitled, and to which they (or either or any of them) were not entitled. Each was acting independently and for his own benefit, and setting up a title against the plaintiff to the former suit which was independent of, and separate from, and inconsistent with, the title set up by the other de-

[1] 1894 A. C. 318

[2] 8 T. R. 186=16 R. R. 810

[3] 10 All. W. N. 161

[4] I. L. R. 19 All. 462

CIVIL

1931

PARBHOO DAYAL v. DWARKA PRASAD

Mukerji, J.

> fendants. Their claims were mutually exclusive. There was no contract between them. One was not acting as the servant of the other; and there was no equity between these persons, whose cases were antagonistic to each other.

It will be noticed that the mere fact that a decree had been made jointly for costs against two persons was not held to be a sufficient ground for decreeing the plaintiff's case. Although the facts of the case of Faqira v. Tasadduq Husain are different from the facts of the case before us, the former does lay down the true principle on which the contribution may be claimed. There must be either a contract, express or implied, by which it may be said that the defendant agreed to compensate the plaintiff in certain events, or that there should be an equity between the parties which would induce the courts to grant the plaintiff a relief from the burden he has undergone, by discharging the decree or a debt payable by the parties. The mere fact that three persons agreed to commit an act of tort cannot be regarded as a valid agreement much less as a valid contract on which a suit can be based by a joint tort-feasor against his co-tort-feasor. We may take it that when the plaintiff and the defendants in this case agreed to deprive Basityar Khan of the materials of the house that they agreed to indemnify one another from the consequence of the act. But if there was an implied agreement to that effect, it was an agreement which was immoral and cannot be countenanced in a court of law.

Several other cases were cited before us, but we do not think that there is any case which bears directly on the point before us. Some of the cases have drawn the distinction to which we have already alluded and which undoubtedly exists between the cases of torts of different kinds.

In this particular case there is nothing in favour of the plaintiff which could induce us to grant him any relief. In the result, we dismiss the application with costs.

Application dismissed

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 13

MUKERJI, J

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
NARAIN DAS GANGA SARAN (Plaintiff)*

Railway—Risk Note H—'Misconduct'—Meaning of—Bale weighing 9½ mds. consigned—Lock on platform side opened and bale removed at some intervening station—Whether 'misconduct' to be inferred.

'Misconduct' need not be wilful, and means bad management, or mismanagement, or culpable neglect of an official in regard to his office. Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Das, 25 A. L. J. R. 549 relied on; Secretary of State v. Allah Ditta, A. I. R. 1930 Lah. 120, Bengal Nagpur Railway Co. Ltd. v. Hukum Chand, A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 559 considered.

Where a bale weighing 9½ maunds consigned under Risk Note H was found missing at the destination and the lower court came to the conclusion "that while the train was standing at some intervening station, on the platform side, some man managed to wrench off the ring and open the lock of the wagon and removed the bale" held, that there seemed to be no escape from the conclusion that the bale was removed owing to either

---

*S. A. 1585 of 1928

CIVIL

1931

THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY v. NARAIN DAS GANGA SARAN

deliberate misconduct of the railway servants in the shape of standing by or helping in the theft, or at any rate in so neglecting the wagon that it was possible for several men to arrive at the place to 'wrench off the ring' and to remove a heavy load like the bale in question. The neglect, in the latter case, was culpable and the whole affair was mismanaged.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of MAULVI ALI AUSAT, Additional District Judge of Aligarh, modifying a decree of MAULVI ZAMIRUL ISLAM KHAN, Munsif of Hathras.

U. S. Bajpai for the appellants.

Panna Lal for the respondent.

The following judgment was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The question to be determined in this appeal is whether in the circumstances found by the court below, it may be properly said that misconduct on the part of the railway administration or its servants can be fairly inferred.

The plaintiff-respondents, who are a firm, consigned, for being sent to Hathras, a bale of dhotis weighing 9½ maunds. The bale was handed over to the East Indian Railway administration at Howrah. The bale never reached its destination and it was found missing when the train arrived. As required by the risk-note H, under which the bale was consigned, the railway administration gave evidence as to how the bale had been dealt with, in the course of its transit. The learned Judge found that the wagon in which the goods were placed was secured on one side by a lock described as 'Ellis patent lock' and was secured on the other side by an ordinary lock. The Ellis patent lock is very secure, and it was found that it was used on that side of the wagon which did not appear on the station side. It was found that one of the rings to which the other lock was attached was broken, and the bale was missing. On the evidence the learned Judge came to the conclusion as follows:—

> The truth seems to be that while the train was standing at some intervening station, on the platform side, some man managed to wrench off the ring and open the lock and removed the bale. It is difficult to imagine that one man could remove from the wagon a bale weighing 9½ maunds as the railway receipt shows.

As I have stated, the question is whether from this fact we are prepared to draw the inference that there was misconduct on the part of some servant of the railway administration.

Murray in his dictionary gives two meanings of the word "misconduct". The primary meaning is "bad management", "mis-management" and "malfeasance or culpable neglect of an official in regard to his office." The second meaning is "adultery" with which we are not concerned. Giving this usual meaning to the word "misconduct" there seems to be no escape from the conclusion that the bale was removed owing either to deliberate misconduct of the railway servants, in the shape of standing by or helping in the theft or at any rate in so neglecting the wagon that it was possible for several men to arrive at the place to "wrench off the ring" and to remove a heavy load like the bale in question. The neglect, in the latter case, is surely culpable and the whole affair is mismanaged. I am, therefore, prepared to hold that the lower appellate court was right in decreeing the claim against the appellants.

CIVIL
1931
THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY v NARAIN DAS GANGA SARAN
Mukerji, J.

In Secretary of State v. Allah Ditta, Mohammad Amin[1] an opinion has been expressed that misconduct involves some degree of moral obliquity. In the result, however, the learned Judges found that where a goods wagon had been unnecessarily detained for thirty hours, there was misconduct on the part of the servants of the railway and this is in keeping with the meaning to be found in Murray's English Dictionary.

A few other cases have also been cited. Some of these interpret the words "wilful neglect". These cases are, in my opinion, irrelevant, because we are not concerned with that expression. In Bengal Nagpur Railway Company Ltd. v. Hukum Chand Hardat Rai[2] the word "misconduct" was interpreted as being equal to wilful neglect, or failure of duty towards the consignor. I am prepared to accept the second meaning. Misconduct need not be wilful, if Murray be right in interpreting it as bad management, or mismanagement, or culpable neglect of an official in regard to his office. The word "wilful" is not there and I would not use it in explaining the word "misconduct".

In The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Bhagwan Das[3] the word "misconduct" was considered, and it was held that "a railway servant, who is placed as a kind of guardian over the goods of the public in transit, is guilty of misconduct if he allows a trespasser to obtain access to such goods". This is in general agreement with the meaning of the word "misconduct" to be found in Murray's English Dictionary.

In the result I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—I concur.

BY THE COURT—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] A. I. R. 1930 Lah 120
[2] A. I. R. 1930 Pat. 559
[3] 25 A. L. J. R. 549

CIVIL 1931
Nov. 19
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

SHRI CHAND (minor) THROUGH LARAITI (Defendant)
versus
BANSIDHAR AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 22, R. 4—Plaintiffs were owners of a firm—But suit brought in the names of individual owners—Interest of each not specified in plaint—Suit decreed—Second Appeal—One respondent dies—Legal representatives not brought on record within time—Appeal abates as against all respondents.

Plaintiffs jointly owned a firm but the suit for recovery of money was brought in the names of individual owners, and the interest of each was not specified in the plaint. The lower appellate court passed a decree in favour of all the plaintiffs jointly, and the record was silent as regards their right inter se. The defendant filed a second appeal. One of the plaintiff-respondents died during pendency of appeal and his legal representatives were not brought on record within limitation. Held, that the appeal abated as against all the respondents. Ram Dei Misrain v. Jurawan Misir, 1930 A. L. J. R. 857 relied on.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU HARGOBIND BAJEL, District Judge of Mainpuri, modifying a decree of MAULVI ZAMIRUL ISLAM KHAN, Munsif of Shikohabad.

N. P. Asthana for the appellant.

*S. A. 1406 of 1928

CIVIL

1931

SHRI CHAND v. BANSIDHAR

Niamatullah, J.

G. Agarwala for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by NIAMATULLAH, J.—A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of this appeal on the ground that it has abated. One of the palintiff-respondents, namely, Bansidhar, died during the pendency of the appeal; and his legal representatives were not brought on the record within limitation. It is not disputed that as against Bansidhar the appeal has abated. The question is whether it has also abated, or cannot otherwise proceed, as against the other respondents.

The suit which has given rise to this appeal was brought by Lala Bansidhar deceased and two others claiming to be the owners of a firm styled Bansidhar Umedilal. The claim was for recovery of a certain sum of money due from the defendant's father in respect of money dealings between the parties and purchase of cloth by the defendant's father from the plaintiffs. The court of first instance decreed the suit in part. The lower appellate court on appeal by the plaintiffs modified the decree of the first court to some extent. The defendant has preferred this second appeal.

The plaintiffs owned the firm Bansidhar Umedilal but the suit has been brought not in the name of the firm but in the names of individual owners thereof. The learned counsel for the appellant referred to O. 30, R. 4, Civil Procedure Code, in support of his contention that where a suit is brought in the name of a firm, the death of one of the partners and the legal representatives of the deceased not being brought on the record does not result in the abatement of the suit either against the firm as a whole or against the deceased defendant. This argument presupposes that the suit which has given rise to this appeal was brought in the name of the firm. It was, however, as the heading of the plaint shows, brought by the plaintiffs for themselves and on their own behalf, without any reference to the firm. It is true the body of the plaint discloses the existence of a firm styled Bansidhar Umedilal. This fact, however, would not convert the suit into one brought in the name of the firm. The contention based on the provisions of O. 30, R. 4 C. P. C. must, therefore, fail.

The three plaintiffs jointly owned the firm Bansidhar Umedilal. The interest of each is not specified in the plaint. No question having arisen in that connection, the record of the present case is absolutely silent as regards the right of the plaintiffs inter se. The decree of the lower appellate court being in favour of all the three plaintiffs jointly, any interference with that decree on appeal cannot fail to affect the interests not only of the surviving respondents but also of the legal representatives of Bansidhar. The appeal cannot proceed without the legal representatives of Bansidhar being impleaded as respondents. This, as already stated, has become impossible, in view of Bansidhar having died more than three months ago and his legal representatives not having been brought on the record. We are clearly of opinion that the rule laid down in Ram Dei Misrain v. Jurawan Misir[1] is applicable; and the result of the absence of the legal representatives of Bansidhar from the array of parties is fatal to the appeal. The preliminary objection prevails, and the appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

[1] 1930 A. L. J. R. 857

Civil

1931

Dec. 4

Sulaiman, J

Niamat-ullah, J.

PADARATH TEWARI (Defendant)
versus
DULHIN TAPESHA KUERI (Plaintiff)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 104(b)—Civil suit—Defendant ordered to produce a lady in court for internal medical examination—Lady not produced—Defendant ordered to be arrested and detained in civil prison—Order ultra vires.

In a civil suit one of the points for decision was whether a lady had ever given birth to a child. On the plaintiff's application the learned judge ordered the defendant to produce her in court 'so that she may be required to undergo medical examination'. As she was not produced on the date fixed, the learned judge concluded that the defendant was responsible for her non-appearance and ordered that the defendant who was present in court 'be arrested atonce and detained in the civil prison'. A commissioner, who was appointed for the purpose, produced the lady in court. The learned judge examined the lady and noted that she was willing to submit herself to medical examination by a lady doctor. The medical examination of the lady took place at the Zenana Hospital; held, (1) that the learned judge did not profess to act on the assumption that the defendant was in contempt, and his order for the arrest and detention of the defendant in the civil prison was ultra vires, (2) that the circumstances in which she was brought to court and detained showed that her consent was wrung out of her because of the fear under which she was placed; and an internal examination of a lady, if not voluntarily submitted to by her, would amount to assault.

First Appeal from an order of Babu Shiva Harakh Lal, Additional Subordinate Judge of Ballia.

A. P. Pandey for the appellant.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

Sulaiman, J.—This is an appeal from a most startling order for the arrest and detention in the civil prison of the defendants. A preliminary objection is taken that no appeal lies from the order. In our opinion this objection has no force whatsoever. Under Section 104(b) C. P. C. an appeal is expressly provided from an order directing the arrest or detention in the civil prison of any person otherwise than in execution of a decree. Even if there had been no provision for an appeal, we would have felt compelled to interfere in revision because there has been a gross travesty of justice in this case. Even a cursory reference to the order-sheet would show that for some reason not easily intelligible the Subordinate Judge proceeded in a very high-handed manner which would in no way do credit to any judicial officer of experience.

The most astonishing thing is that the Subordinate Judge himself was fully conscious that there were no express provisions in the Civil Procedure Code which justified the course of action which he took upon himself to pursue. In order to usurp most sweeping powers of arresting the defendants and sending them to jail he took shelter behind the remark:

---

*F. A. F. O. 25 of 1931

> The Civil Procedure Code is not exhaustive and it cannot be said to lay down a procedure for every emergency on account of which the power of the court has been left unfettered to chalk out a procedure not provided for in order to do justice.

If the learned Subordinate Judge imagines that the supposed inherent power makes him the absolute master of the situation so as to enable him to pass any arbitrary orders which he thinks fit against any party to the suit, the sooner he is disillusioned of this false notion the better for him. The provisions for the issue of the warrants of arrests are to be found in the four corners of the Civil Procedure Code. There is also power to get parties arrested or punished when proper proceedings for contempt of court have been taken in an authorised manner. But it is preposterous to suggest that a court has power to arrest any person or to send him to jail forthwith without any proper trial in a legal proceeding.

In a civil suit for declaration pending before the court below it was in issue whether the plantiff No. 1 was the daughter of defendant No. 1 born of defendant No. 4, but there was no specific issue that the defendant No. 4 had never given birth to any child at all. On an application of the plaintiffs filed on January 5, 1931, unsupported by any affidavit, the court ordered that the vakil for the defendant No. 4 should produce her on January 16, 1931, 'so that she may be sent to doctor for medical examination as to whether any issue was born to her". The other defendants were asked to be present so that they 'might watch the examination by the doctor'. The learned Subordinate Judge up to that date had no materials before him to show that the defendant No. 4 was agreeable to submit herself to medical examination. He did not even take the trouble to ascertain this before passing the order. This order was repeated on January 15 and the defendants Nos. 1 and 3 were ordered to produce her in court on January 21, 'so that she may be required to undergo medical examination'. The learned Subordinate Judge even now did not pause to enquire whether she was herself willing to submit herself to medical examination. On January 21, the parties filed conflicting affidavits but there was yet no suggestion that the defendant No. 4 was herself willing to be internally examined. The learned Subordinate Judge concluded that the defendants Nos. 1 to 3 were responsible for her non-appearance and ordered that they 'be arrested and detained in the civil prison'. Defendant No. 3 was present in court and he was ordered to be arrested at once. No proceedings for any contempt of court were drawn up against these defendants. Warrants for the arrest of the defendants Nos. 1 and 2 were issued on the same day and the process servers were ordered to bring defendant No. 4 to Court. The process servers returned the warrants unexecuted as they found the house of defendants Nos. 1 and 4 locked up.

Finding that his arbitrary orders proved futile, the learned Subordinate Judge ordered a vakil to 'go as a commissioner, break open the door or lock, if necessary, and let the pairokar of the plaintiffs and defendant No. 4 bring Mst. Bhagjogna in his company to court'. The order proceeded > if the pairokar points her out to be in the house of any other person the commissioner shall request the other person to let her into his custody and

CIVIL 1931
PADARATH TEWARI
v.
DULHIN TAPESHA KUERI
Sulaiman, J.

> if that man refuses, the commissioner shall after due notice of keeping purdah enter his house and break open the door or lock if necessary in order to take her into his custody.

This is an instance of authority running riot. The learned Subordinate Judge should have realised that he would be making himself liable to damages for illegal arrest, if a lady defendant was taken into custody and brought to court against her will or by force.

The defendant lady was brought to court by the commissioner 'after some trouble and opposition'. She was ordered 'to remain in court pending order for medical examination'. The defendant No. 3 was ordered to be released in order to present himself before the court 'so that the proceedings of the medical examination of the lady may take place in his seeing'. The other parties were also ordered to be present at the time of the medical examination of the lady. Up to the time of the passing of this order it did not strike the learned Subordinate Judge that the lady's wishes should be consulted. The poor lady appears to keep purdah and was brought to court in a palki. The learned Subordinate Judge examined her later and noted that 'she is willing to submit herself to medical examination by a lady doctor'. As Indian pardahnashin women are generally reluctant to undergo an internal examination, the peculiar circumstances in which she had been brought to court and was detained there might justify the comment of the counsel for the defendants that she must have been too frightened and nervous, and her consent was wrung out of her because of the fear under which she was placed. The Subordinate Judge should appreciate that an internal medical examination of a lady, if not voluntarily submitted to by her, would amount to assault and battery. The medical examination of the defendant lady took place at the Zenana Hospital. Subsequent proceedings were stayed by an order of the High Court passed on an application for transfer. When the application for transfer came up for final disposal the junior counsel engaged stated that he had no instructions and the senior counsel sent an illness slip praying that the case be postponed. Unfortunately for him the case was heard ex-parte and the application was dismissed on the onesided report of the Subordinate Judge. If all the facts had been brought to the notice of the learned Judge, he might have come to the conclusion that the learned Subordinate Judge was not in a fit judicial mood to try the civil suit.

It seems to us that the whole procedure adopted by the Subordinate Judge was illegal from beginning to end, and it is regrettable that any experienced judicial officer should stoop to adopt such a course of action. Courts of justice have not only to do justice but should also inspire confidence in the public mind as to their fairness. Such a high-handed conduct on the part of a judicial officer is bound to bring courts into discredit and shake the confidence of the people in the purity of the administration of justice.

The learned Subordinate Judge did not profess to act on the assumption that they were in contempt nor did he take any proper legal proceedings against them for contempt. In the circumstances he had absolutely no jurisdiction to get the defendants arrested or sent to the

CIVIL

1931

PADARATH TEWARI
v
DULHIN TAPESHA KUERI

Sulaiman, J.

civil prison. His order was utterly ultra-vires and without authority. We accordingly allow this appeal and set aside the order of January 21, 1931 and direct the plaintiffs, at whose instance the order was passed, should pay the costs of the defendants in both the courts.

Appeal allowed

CRIMINAL

1931

Dec. 8

BENNET, J.

MAHADEO PANDEY AND OTHERS
versus
KING-EMPEROR THROUGH JOGANAND PANDE*

Penal Code, Sec. 336—Conviction under—Throwing bricks into another's house from enmity—"Any act"—Meaning of.

Where it was found that the accused had thrown bricks into the house of the complainant from enmity, held, that the act was one which would endanger the personal safety of the complainant when he was inside the house and of any other person who might be inside, and the accused committed an offence under Sec. 336 I. P. C. The accused could also be convicted of the offence of assault under Sec. 351 Penal Code, as the throwing of brickbats by the accused would be a gesture which would cause the complainant to apprehend that criminal force was about to be used against him. Gaya Prasad v. King-Emperor, 1929 A. L. J. R. 175 and Babu Ram v. Emperor, 23 A. L. J. R. 356 referred to. The general words "any act" used in Sec. 336 Penal Code are not limited to the meaning of "any legal act".

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by P. L. RASTOGI ESQ., Sessions Judge of Ghazipur.

A. P. Pandey for the applicants.

Kumuda Prasad for the opposite party.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Ghazipur recommending that the conviction of the three applicants under Section 336 I. P. C. and sentence of fines of Rs.30 each should be set aside. The learned Sessions Judge is under the impression that the acts found would not amount to the offence mentioned in Section 336 I. P. C. He does not consider whether they would amount to an offence under any other section. He does not definitely state an opinion as to whether he considered that the finding of fact of the Magistrate was correct or not. The circumstances of the case are that Joganand Pandey, complainant, made a report on March 8, at 8-30 a. m. that the four accused persons about 9-30 p. m. including the three applicants had thrown bricks into his house from enmity, the several bricks had been thrown in, and that he had gone out of his house and had seen the accused standing with bricks in their hands outside his house, and that the accused had raised their hands to throw bricks. The complainant shouted, and three witnesses came up and saw the accused and the accused ran away. The names of the witnesses were given in the first information report, and these three witnesses gave evidence before the magistrate, and it is not shown or alleged that these witnesses had any personal enmity against the accused. There was no undue delay in the first information report, as distance from the thana was six miles, and it was not likely that the complainant would go at night to make this report. The police prosecuted the case. The defence was that there was enmity between the complainant and the accused. This of course is admitted, and such enmity may either be a cause of a false case or a motive for the act alleged. About the prosecution witnesses the plea merely is that they were disciples and friends of the complainant, and therefore gave evidence. Five defence witnesses were produced, but they proved nothing of weight for the defence. The magistrate wrote a long and careful judgment and convicted the accused, giving to one the benefit of the doubt as he was a young boy. The only grounds which the learned Sessions Judge mentions in favour of the defence are that the three accused are old men, two of them being 60 and one 52. The learned counsel for the defence produced in this Court one of these men who stated that he was an ordinary cultivator, and he certainly did not appear to be physically unfit to throw a brick. The Sessions Judge further stated that the three prosecution witnesses were casual witnesses, but he did not explain what he meant by this statement, and they are not casual in the sense that they come from a distance as they reside near the house of the complainant. No other reason is given for doubting the correctness of the prosecution story, and I see no reason to upset the finding of the magistrate on the facts. I therefore consider that the facts found by the magistrate are correct.

---

*Cr. Ref. 641 of 1931

The next question is what is the correct law on the subject. The learned Sessions Judge referred to two rulings. In Gaya Prasad v. K. E.[1] there was a case where a Pujari left his temple at midnight and threw bricks into it in the hope that the Hindus believing that the bricks came from the Mohammedan quarter would get enraged, and there would be a Hindu Moslem riot, and it was found that no body was hit. Under these circumstances a learned single Judge of this Court held that the applicant could not be convicted under Section 336 I. P. C., because his act was neither rash nor negligent but deliberate, and Section 153 I. P. C. did not apply, because it could not be said that his act was illegal. The learned Sessions Judge fails to notice that the facts of that case are entirely different, because in that case the accused had thrown bricks into his own temple, whereas in the present case the accused threw bricks into the house of another person who did not consent to that operation. Further there was no suggestion that the act was done in order to create a riot, so Section 153 I. P. C. need not be considered. The second ruling referred to by the learned Sessions Judge is that reported in Babu Ram v. Emperor[2]. In that case when communal riots were taking place in different parts of the town the applicant, a brother of a licence-holder, took a gun and fired shots in the air so that people mischievously inclined might know that it was not safe for them to do any mischief to the people living in the house. It was held that this would not amount to an offence under Section 19 (f) of the Arms Act. There was a reference also to a conviction of the applicant under Section 336 of the Indian Penal Code on a finding that he threw brick-bats and fired shots at passers-by. This Court held that that conviction was on an insufficient and improper charge and that if the finding was correct the acts would amount to attempted murder or an attempt

[1] 1929 A. L. J. R. 175

[2] 23 A. L. J. R. 356

CRIMINAL

1931

MAHADEO PANDEY
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Bennet, J.

to cause grievous hurt with a deadly weapon. I do not think that this ruling applied in any way whatever to the facts found in the present case. Section 336 states "that whoever does any act either rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others" shall be guilty of an offence under that section. Learned counsel argued that "any act" must be limited to the meaning of "any legal act" and that the section would not apply to an illegal act. I do not see any authority in the rulings quoted for this limitation of the perfectly general words "any act". In the present case the throwing of bricks into the house of the complainant was an act which would endanger the personal safety of the complainant when he was inside and of any other person who might be inside. I do not see anything in the section which indicates that the facts found would not constitute an offence under this section. The learned Sessions Judge was certainly wrong when he states that if any body had been hit in the house it would furnish grounds only for a civil action. I may point out that the facts found would also amount to the offence of assault under Section 351 I. P. C., as the throwing of the brick-bats by the accused would be a gesture which would cause the complainant to apprehend that criminal force was about to be used against him, that is, if the bricks hit him, criminal force would be used against him. I consider that there is no reason whatever to set this conviction aside on legal grounds and I have already found that the facts were sufficiently proved. The sentence is not excessive. For these reasons I refuse this reference. Let the papers be returned to the Sessions Judge.

Reference refused

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 17

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

LACHMAN DAS (Applicant)
versus
LAKSHMI NARAIN AND OTHERS (Opposite party)*

Insolvency—Receiver—Decree directing receiver to pay costs—Executable personally against him—Receiver's right to be re-imbursed from insolvent's estate.

Where the decree dismissing the receiver's appeal directed him to pay the costs of the respondent, without stating that the costs should be paid out of the insolvent's estate, the costs were executable personally against the receiver, though he had ceased to hold the office at the time of execution. If he wanted to safeguard his personal interest he should have obtained an indemnity from the creditor or other person in whose interest he was litigating. It was however open to the receiver or his heirs to apply to the insolvency court for an order that he may be re-imbursed out of the insolvent's estate. Re. Suresh Chander Gooyee, 23 C. W. N. 431 and Balakrishna Menon v. Uma, I. L. R. 52 Mad. 263 relied on.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU MAKHAN LAL, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

B. Malik for the appellant.

N. C. Vaish and P. M. L. Verma for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This case has been referred to a Division Bench because of an important point of law involved in it. Ganeshi Lal was the receiver of the estate of an insolvent Jagpal Saran. He brought a suit against one Mst. Bhagwati for a declaration that a will in her favour was not genuine and the property devised by the testator passed to the insolvent and not to her. The suit was dismissed with costs, the order being that 'the plaintiff do pay Rs.323-12-0 to the defendant as costs.' An application for executing the decree for costs against Ganeshi Lal personally was dismissed by the execution court on January 12, 1924. The receiver had in the meantime appealed to the High Court and on February 14, 1927 the High Court dismissed the appeal. The order for costs as entered in the decree was in the following words:

---

*E. F. A. 270 of 1930

> And it is further ordered that the appellant aforesaid do pay to the respondent No. 1 aforesaid a sum of Rs.481-11-0 only the amount of the costs incurred by the latter in this court, and it is further ordered that the costs incurred in the lower court be paid as awarded by the said court.

The defendant decree-holder executed the decree of the High Court for costs against Ganeshi Lal personally. The application was resisted on the ground of res judicata on account of the previous dismissal of a similar application, and the non-liability of the receiver in his personal capacity. The court below has dismissed the application holding that the decree could not be executed personally against Ganeshi Lal.

There is no force in the plea of res judicata. The previous application was for the execution of the decree of the first court against Ganeshi Lal. That application was dismissed. The present application is for the execution of the decree of the High Court which was passed subsequent to that order and which directed the payment of the costs afresh. The previous order of the Subordinate Judge cannot therefore operate as res judicata when the question is as regards the interpretation of the High Court's decree. We accordingly overrule this plea.

The court below is of opinion that inasmuch as Ganeshi Lal was litigating not in his personal capacity but in that of the receiver of the estate, he could not be made liable for the costs personally. It seems to think that the decree in favour of the defendant for costs can be executed only as against the assets of the insolvent if any.

The order passed against Ganeshi Lal was not an order passed by the insolvency court, whose orders for costs against the receiver ordinarily imply that they are to be paid out of the assets in his hands. The order for costs was passed by the civil court in a suit brought by the receiver against the defendant-respondent. It was like an ordinary action between two litigants, and there is no reason why the successful defendant should suffer if the insolvent has no assets at all. The order directed that Ganeshi Lal should pay the costs to the defendant respondent and in the absence of anything to show that the costs would be recovered only from the assets of the insolvent, Ganeshi Lal was liable to the defendant to pay her costs. Of course, it would be open to Ganeshi Lal or his heirs to apply to the insolvency court for an order that he may be reimbursed out of the estate of the insolvent. If Ganeshi Lal were still continuing as the receiver it might possibly have been open to him to recoup himself out of the estate without even obtaining a previous order from the insolvency court.

Civil

1931

Lachman Das
v.
Lakshmi Narain

Sulaiman, J.

It was pointed out by the Calcutta High Court in the case of Re. Suresh Chander Gooyee[1] that > if the Official Assignee brings an unsuccessful motion, however careful he may have been, the order that the court would make generally would be that he has to pay the respondent's costs and he will have the right of indemnity given him by the previous order of the court. Or he may obtain an indemnity from the creditor or other person in whose interest the motion is brought before he starts proceeding. The order for the costs should not be directed to be limited to the assets in the hands of the official assignee when the respondent is not in any way in default for which he may be partially mulcted in costs.

This case was followed by the Madras High Court in Balakrishna Menon v. Uma[2] in which it was held that 'where a decree dismissing the Official Receiver's appeal directed him to pay the costs of the respondents, without stating that the costs should be paid out of the insolvent's estate, the costs are executable personally against the receiver, though he had ceased to hold office at the time of execution'. The learned Judges pointed out that in the absence of an express order to the contrary the receiver was personally liable to the opposite party who succeeds in the action, though the receiver may have a right to be reimbursed out of the insolvent's estate.

We think that the principle expounded in this case is sound. There seems to be no justification why the successful defendant should lose her costs if the insolvent has no assets. It was the duty of the receiver to ask the court to confine the execution of the decree to the assets of the insolvent, if that had been the real intention. If he wanted to safeguard his personal interest he should have obtained an indemnity from the creditor or other person in whose interest he was starting the litigation. In the absence of any express direction in the decree, it must be held that the receiver was in the first instance personally liable for the costs.

We accordingly allow this appeal with costs and setting aside the order of the court below, allow the decree-holder's application for the execution of the decree for costs against Lala Ganeshi Lal personally. As Lala Ganeshi Lal is dead, the decree will be executable against the assets of the deceased in the hands of the heirs if any.

Appeal allowed

---

[1] 23 C. W. N. 431

[2] I. L. R. 52 Mad. 263

Civil

1931

Dec. 3

Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

CHOKHEY LAL and another (Plaintiffs)
versus
SRI KISHEN and another (Defendants)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 38, R. 5—Notice issued under—Defendant shows cause why he should not furnish security—Court's order accepting defendant's contention falls within Or. 38, R. 6(2)—And appeal lies under Or. 43(1)(q).

On the application of the plaintiff under Or. 38, R. 5 the court passed the order—"the defendant will be ordered to appear and furnish security for Rs.23,000 or show cause why it should not be furnished. The property in the list (filed with the plaintiff's application) will be conditionally attached pending such showing of cause". The defendant appeared in court and showed cause why he should not furnish security, and the court

---

*F. A. F. O. 87 of 1931

Civil

1931

Chokhey Lal v. Sri Kishen

cancelled the conditional order of attachment; held, that the order of the court accepting the contention of the defendant is an order which falls within Or. 38, R. 6(2), and is appealable under Or. 43(1)(q) C. P. C.

First Appeal from an order of F. C. M. Cruickshank Esq., Subordinate Judge of Naini Tal.

Iqbal Ahmad and G. S. Pathak for the appellants.

M. N. Kaul (with him K. N. Katju) for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

Sen, J.—On April 16, 1931 Lala Chokhey Lal and Lala Murli Dhar instituted a suit for recovery of Rs.23,254-2-0 on foot of two promissory notes, dated January 10, 1929 and March 10, 1930 executed by Sri Kishan and Bhan Deo in their favour. On the same day they made an application which purported to be under Order 38, Rule 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The learned Subordinate Judge passed the following order on the application:—

> The defendant will be ordered to appear and furnish security for Rs.23,000 or show cause why it should not be furnished. The property in the list will be conditionally attached pending such showing of cause.

It appears that the application of the plaintiffs was accompanied by a list of property possessed by the defendants. In answer to the notice issued to the defendants the latter appeared in court and showed cause. The court held that it was not established that the defendants had done anything which came within the purview of Order 38, Rule 5 C. P. C. and the result was that the court cancelled the conditional order of attachment and dismissed the plaintiffs' application with costs. Plaintiffs appeal to this Court from this order. A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of the appeal on the ground that no appeal lies under O. 43, C. P. C. Where in response to a notice issued to the defendant under O. 38, R. 5 C. P. C. the defendant appears in court and shows cause why no order for furnishing security should be passed against him and why no order should be passed directing the attachment of his property, the order of the court accepting the contention of the defendant is an order which falls within O. 38, R. 6(2) C. P. C. From such an order an appeal lies under O. 43(1)(Q) C. P. C. We therefore hold that an appeal lies to this Court and we reject the preliminary objection.

On the merits, we are clearly of opinion that the appeal is without any substance. The plaintiffs, in order to succeed, had to establish that the defendants, with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree that might be passed against them, were about to dispose of the whole or any part of the property or about to remove the whole or any part of the property from the local limits of the jurisdiction of the court. We have examined the affidavit of Lala Murli Dhar dated April 16, 1931. There is nothing in this affidavit to show that the defendants with intent to obstruct or delay the execution of any decree which might ultimately be passed against them were about to do one of the two things mentioned in Sub-rule 1 of Rule 5 of O. 38 C. P. C. We are therefore of opinion that the application is incompetent. We accordingly affirm the order of the court below and dismiss this appeal with costs. The record should be sent to the lower court with the intimation that this Court hopes that the case will be proceeded with and disposed of at the earliest possible moment.

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 17

SULAIMAN, A. C. J. YOUNG, J.

ASIA BIBI (Decree-holder)
versus
MALIK AZIR AHMED AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 21, R. 16, Proviso to—Applicability of—Decree under Or. 34, R. 6 against heirs of mortgagor—A judgment-debtor dies—Decree-holder inherits an interest in his estate—Whether right to execute decree extinguished.

The proviso to Or. 21, R. 16 applies to the case where a decree for the payment of money which is passed against two or more persons who are jointly and severally liable to pay the amount is transferred to one of them. In such a case it is obvious that the person who acquires a decree becomes entitled to execute the whole decree and is also liable to pay the whole decree jointly with his co-judgment-debtors, and there is complete merger. In such an event, the execution cannot proceed against the latter.

Where the decree-holder, who had obtained a decree under Or. 34, R. 6 against the heirs of the mortgagors, was entitled to recover the whole amount against the estate of the mortgagor in the hands of his heirs, including the decree-holder's husband, and the subsequent death of her husband only made her inherit a part of the share which the deceased had got in the assets of the original mortgagor, held, that inasmuch as this inheritance did not make her jointly and personally liable for the payment of the whole decree which she held, her right to execute the decree was not extinguished simply because she became an heir to one of the heirs of the original judgment-debtor. But inasmuch as part of the assets of the original judgment-debtor became vested in her by operation of law, she was bound to give credit for a proportionate amount of the decree, and accordingly the amount had to be reduced pro tanto. Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuer, I. L. R. 5 All. 27 referred to.

The substitution of the expression "for the payment of money", for the words "for money" in the proviso in the new Code was intended to emphasize that the proviso was confined to cases of personal decrees. The proviso cannot apply to a case where the decree-holder by inheritance acquires an interest in the estate of one of the judgment-debtors. In such a case at no time the decree can be said to have been transferred to a person who is one of two or more persons against whom a decree for the payment of money exists. Panachand Pomaji Marwari v. Sundrabai, I. L. R. 31 Bom. 308, Sadagopal Aiyengar v. Sellamal, 72 I. C. 861 and V. E. S. Subramanin Chetty v. Kasi Chetty, 1927 A. I. R. Mad. 937 referred to.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU MAHESHWAR PRASAD, Subordinate Judge of Allahabad.

P. L. Banerji and Mushtaq Ahmad for the appellant.

Haribans Sahai and Sri Narain Sahai for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a decree-holder's appeal arising out of an execution proceeding. In 1901 Bhawani Prasad and others obtained a decree for sale on the basis of a mortgage deed against one Fakir Bux. The mortgaged properties were put up for sale from time to time, but they proved insufficient to pay the whole decretal amount. Faqir Bux died during the pendency of these proceedings. In 1918 the decree-holders obtained a decree for money for the balance of the amount under Order 34, Rule 6 against the heirs of Faqir Bux. The form of this decree was slightly defective, and we shall discuss it later. This decree was transferred in 1925 to Mst. Asia Bibi, the wife of Abdul Rauf, one of the heirs of Faqir Bux. It is not now disputed that Asia Bibi was not a benamidar for her husband, but had purchased this decree in her own right. She put the decree in execution against the heirs of Faqir Bux, including her husband Abdul Rauf. During the pendency of the execution proceedings Abdul Rauf died in 1929, and she became one of his six heirs. The respondent-judgment debtors then objected that owing to a merger, her right to execute the decree had become extinguished. It may also be mentioned that Mst. Asia Bibi applied for an amendment of her previous application for execution by the addition of some more properties after the death of Abdul Rauf. She had, however, made all the heirs of Faqir Bux parties to her application, except one Hasina Bibi, who was alleged by her to have been the mistress of Faqir Bux, and not his legally wedded wife. She, however, did not implead the other heirs of Abdul Rauf, but offered to reduce the amount of her decree to the extent of the share of Abdul Rauf in the assets of Faqir Bux.

---

*E. F. A. 318 of 1930

The learned Subordinate Judge has dismissed her application for amendment on the ground that the matter was discretionary with the court and it was not proper that the amendment should be allowed at such a late stage. He further held that under Order 21, Rule 16 the right of the decree-holder to execute the decree against the other judgment-debtors had become extinguished and her remedy was only by way of a separate suit for contribution. He also thought that such a suit would be the proper proceeding for the determination of the question whether Mst. Hasina Bibi was or was not one of the heirs of Faqir Bux.

No doubt the applicant could not as of right claim an amendment of the application for execution by the addition of fresh properties, but it cannot be doubted that her right to apply for execution was alive in 1929 when she filed the application. She might have got this application dismissed and filed a fresh application including the additional properties as well. In these circumstances, we think that the discretion would have been exercised more properly by allowing the amendment, subject to any orders as to costs which the court thought fit to make. There was no necessity to compel her to file a fresh application. In this connection it may be pointed out that the learned Subordinate Judge was under a misapprehension in thinking that two of the heirs of Faqir Bux, namely, Mst. Saidunnissa and Wajidunnissa, had not been impleaded previously and were sought to be brought on the record by means of this application for amendment. As a matter of fact, their names had been on the record all along, and they were only mentioned because the additional properties were in their possession. There was, therefore, no question of adding new parties to the execution proceedings against whom the execution might have become time-barred.

We also see no defect in the other heirs of Abdul Rauf not being brought on the record, when the decree-holder was prepared to give credit for the entire liability of Abdul Rauf.

The principal question for consideration is whether the right to execute the decree has become extinguished by virtue of the provisions of Order 21, Rule 16. The question whether the remedy of a decree-holder who acquires a part of the property of a judgment-debtor is by execution under Section 47 C. P. C. or by a separate suit for contribution is really a matter of procedure, and not of any substantive law. Nor do we think that any question of equity, apart from mere convenience, is involved. Where the rights of a decree-holder and the liability of a judgment-debtor become united in one and the same person, there would obviously be merger. But the doctrine of complete merger involves the essential condition of the co-extensiveness of such rights and liabilities.

The proviso to Order 21, Rule 16 is in the following words:—

> Provided also that where a decree for the payment of money against two or more persons has been transferred to one of them, it shall not be executed against the others.

That proviso applies to the case where a decree for the payment of money which is passed against two or more persons who are jointly and severally liable to pay the amount is transferred to one of them. In such a case it is obvious that the person who acquires a decree becomes entitled to execute the whole decree and is also liable to pay the whole decree jointly with his co-judgment-debtors. In such an event, the execution cannot proceed against the latter. The provision does not apply to the converse case where the joint and personal liability of one or two or more judgment-debtors is not fastened on the decree-holder, but the latter acquires either by private treaty or operation of law a share in the estate of one of the judgment-debtors. In such an event there is no co-extensiveness of rights and liabilities, and there can be no merger.

The court below has relied in support of its judgment on certain observations contained in the judgment in the case of Banarsi Das v. Maharani Kuer[1]. The passages quoted, if taken in their widest scope, might be considered to support this contention. But this question did not at all arise in that case, and the observations could at the most be treated as obiter dicta. In that case one of several joint judgment-debtors had acquired only a partial interest in the decree, and it was accordingly held that there had been no extinguishment of the right to execute it. Thus, it was a case where the decree had been transferred to one of the judgment-debtors, and also where the whole decree had not been transferred. The present case is just the converse.

Mst. Asia Bibi was the decree-holder entitled to recover the whole amount against the estate of Faqir Bux in the hands of his heirs, including her husband Abdul Rauf. When the decree was transferred to her she had no concern in the eye of the law with any of the judgment-debtors. The subsequent death of Abdul Rauf only made her inherit a part of the share which Abdul Rauf had got in the assets of Faqir Bux. This inheritance did not make her jointly and personally liable for the payment of the whole decree which she held. We are accordingly of opinion that her right to execute the decree was not extinguished simply because she became an heir to one of the heirs of the original judgment-debtor. But inasmuch as part of the assets of the original judgment-debtor became vested in her by operation of law, she was bound to give credit for a proportionate amount of the decree, and accordingly the amount had to be reduced pro tanto.

---

[1] I. L. R. 5 All. 27

There is another aspect of the case which also might strengthen the position of the appellant. The decree under Order 34, Rule 6 was passed, not against Faqir Bux, the original mortgagor but against his heirs. In the application for the preparation of the decree the prayer was for a decree against the assets of the deceased Faqir Bux in the hands of his heirs, which were specified. The court ordered that the application be allowed with costs and a personal decree be passed as prayed. The decree was, however, drawn up on a printed form which is generally applicable to original mortgagors who are alive, and did not in the operative portion of it expressly state that the amount was to be realised out of the assets in their hands. It may further be mentioned that later on, on September 6, 1929, the execution court directed that the decree should be executed by the sale of the entire assets of Faqir Bux, and not of shares in the hands of his individual heirs.

If the decree were to be treated as a decree against the assets of Faqir Bux in the hands of his heirs, then it would be obvious that these heirs were not jointly and personally liable to pay the amount. Their liability would be limited to the extent of the assets, if any, which they received. The case would then be analogous to a mortgage decree for sale of mortgaged property in which no personal liability was involved. The substitution of the expression "for the payment of money," for the words "for money" in the proviso in the new Code was intended to emphasise that the proviso was confined to cases of personal decrees. This proviso would, therefore, not apply to cases of personal decrees. We, however, do not consider it necessary to decide whether the form in which the decree was actually prepared, even though wrong, was one of a personal decree against the heirs of Faqir Bux.

There was a second death, namely, that of Abdul Rauf, and even if there had been a personal decree against Abdul Rauf, that personal liability has not devolved on his wife, Mst. Asia Bibi. Therefore Mst. Asia Bibi can execute her decree in spite of the fact that she has become an heir to the estate of Abdul Rauf, and will take her legal share in it, subject to any liability which had previously existed.

On the question whether the proviso can at all apply to a decree against an estate as distinct from a decree against the persons of the judgment-debtors there has been a conflict of opinion between the Bombay and the Madras High Courts. In the case of Panachand Pomaji Marwari v. Sundrabai[2] the Bombay High Court, in a case which arose under the corresponding Section 232 of the old Code, held that the proviso applied only where in the decree there was a distinct order upon the defendants personally to pay the money. In the case of Sadagopal Aiyengar v. Sellammal[3] the Madras High Court appears to have doubted the Bombay ruling. But according to the facts as stated in the reported judgment, the decree in that case was one for the payment of money against the first defendant and three others, and the first defendant was directed by the decree to pay the amount out of his family property. It was thought that this direction did not make the decree any the less a decree for the payment of the money against him. If the decree was primarily one for payment of money against the 4 defendants, the judgment was perfectly correct. The case of (98 I. C. 260) is a single judge's decision, which certainly supports the respondents. In that case the decree had been assigned in 1919, and later on the assignee of the decree became one of the heirs of the defendant No. 1. The objection of the other defendants that the decree had ceased to be executable was allowed, and the observations made in Banarsi Das's case were relied upon. But this case appears to have been distinguished by a Division Bench of the same High Court in the case of V. E. S. Subramanin Chetty v. Kasi Chetty[4]. The judgment does not make it quite clear on what basis the single Judge's decision was really distinguished. We have already pointed out that there too the assignee of the decree-holder had become an heir to the estate of one of the defendants long after the assignment in his favour. The fact, however, remains that a Division Bench of the same High Court came to the conclusion that where the plaintiff had obtained a money decree against his father, who had also a grandson, and the father died during the attachment of his property, the plaintiff becoming one of his heirs, he was nevertheless entitled to execute the decree against the half share of the house in the occupation of the grandson. The fact that the decree-holder had become entitled to a half share in the property of the judgment-debtor which had been attached did not, in the opinion of the learned Judges, make the proviso applicable to that case.

[2] I. L. R. 31 Bom. 308

[3] 72 I. C. 861

We are clearly of opinion that the proviso cannot apply to a case where the decree-holder by inheritance acquires an interest in the estate of one of the judgment-debtors. In such a case at no time the decree can be said to have been transferred to a person who is one of two or more persons against whom a decree for the payment of money exists.

The omission of Hasina Bibi, in this case, assuming that she was one of the heirs of Faqir Bux would not be fatal to the application. The utmost that could happen would be that her interest in the estate would have to be excluded and the decree-holder would have to submit to a further reduction in the amount of the decree on the basis of Hasina Bibi also being one of the heirs. The question whether she was one of the heirs can be raised by one of the objectors, if they want to get the amount of the decree reduced. The original judgment-debtor was a Mohammedan, and the devolution of shares would admittedly be according to the Mohammedan Law.

We accordingly allow this appeal, direct that the application for execution be amended as asked for and the objections of the judgment-debtors disallowed to that extent, and send the case back to the court below for disposal in the light of the observations made by us. The order dated September 6, 1929 is not hereby cancelled. If the objectors wish to raise any objections as regards the saleability of the new items of property, they will be at liberty to do so.

As the court below considered that the amendment of the application for execution by the addition of some new property was sought at a late stage, we think that the parties should bear their own costs of the proceedings in the court below subsequent to November 18, 1929. The appellant will have the costs of this appeal from the respondents.

---

[4] 1927 A. I. R. Mad. 937

Appeal allowed

Civil 1931
Nov. 30
Banerji, J.
King, J.

AMBIKA PRASAD (Applicant)
versus
DEVI DAYAL AND OTHERS (Opposite parties)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 109 (a)—Order granting an application for review of judgment—Not a 'final' order appealable to Privy Council.

An order made on an application for review of judgment that the appeal be re-heard in the light of new and additional evidence in the shape of a deed of gift, does not finally dispose of the dispute between the parties but reopens the decree that was passed originally by the court, and therefore the order for review is not a final order within the meaning of Sec. 109 (a) C. P. C. which is appealable. Ram Chand v. Goverdhan Das, 18 A. L. J. R. 591 relied on.

Application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

B. E. O'Conor and Ram Nama Prasad for the applicant.

S. N. Verma for the opposite parties.

This was an application for leave to appeal to Privy Council from an order of the High Court granting an application for review of judgment in F. A. 395 of 1918.

The suit out of which F. A. 395 of 1918 arose was brought by the plaintiffs claiming the immovable properties left by one Nand Lal, whose next reversioners or their transferees the plaintiffs professed to be after the death of Nand Lal's widow Mst. Rukmani Kuar and daughter Mst. Sitala Kuar, the latter of whom admittedly died on December 16, 1906. The trial court dismissed the suit and held that plaintiffs were excluded by the next reversioner Bhawani Charan who was alive on December 16, 1906, the date of Mst. Sitala Kuar's death, and on appeal to the High Court, the trial court's decision was confirmed on June 15, 1921.

On October 18, 1926 the plaintiffs filed in the High Court an application for review of judgment on the ground that they had discovered a new piece of evidence, viz., a deed of gift dated April 22, 1893 executed by Gur Sahai, the father of Bhawani Charan, which conclusively established the death of Bhawani Charan prior to the date of the execution of the deed and therefore also prior to December 16, 1906, the date of Mst. Sitala's death. This application was allowed by the High Court on February 27, 1929 and the appeal ordered to be reheard in the light of this additional evidence.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Banerji, J.

Banerji, J.—This is an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against an order of this Court granting an application for review. In paragraph 11 of the petition it is averred that so far as the review application was concerned the case had been finally decided and that

---

*P. C. A. 25 of 1929

Civil

1931

Ambika Prasad v. Devi Dayal

Banerji, J.

paragraph goes on to say that the matter raises important and substantial points of law of general importance and that the case was a fit case for us to certify to His Majesty in Council.

The learned counsel for the petitioner has submitted that the application was for a certificate under Section 109(a) or in the alternative under Section 109(c) of the Civil Procedure Code. The valuation of the property involved in the case is over Rs.10,000. The learned counsel submits that Section 109(a) provides that an appeal shall lie to His Majesty from any decree or final order passed in appeal by a High Court, and that so far as the parties in this case are concerned, the order granting a review has set aside a final decree and that this court, having granted an application for review has passed an order that is final between the parties. We have come to the conclusion that this contention of the learned counsel cannot be accepted. An order can only be called a "final" order if it finally disposes of the rights of the parties. But granting of an application for review does not finally dispose of the dispute between the parties. Reference may be made to the case of Ram Chand v. Goverdhan Das[1] where their Lordships of the Privy Council in a case where stay had been refused by the appellate court, held that the order refusing stay was not such an order as would be appealable to their Lordships. It is unnecessary to refer to various other cases on the point.

The order passed by us granting a review really does not finally dispose of any case but reopens the decree that was passed originally by the court and we therefore are of opinion that an order for review is not a final order which is appealable. We may also mention, S. 109(a) lays down that the final order which is appealable is a final order "passed on appeal" and does not say that any order finally or otherwise passed in exercise of the appellate jurisdiction of the court is appealable.

The next point which has been contended for by the appellants is that we should certify under the provisions of Clause (c) of S. 109 of the Civil Procedure Code that this case is a fit case for appeal to His Majesty.

It is contended that the principle upon which a court should act in certifying in review matters, is that where an appeal is permitted under Order 47, R. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, there should be an appeal to His Majesty in Council, as no appeal is provided for by the Code against an order of the High Court.

It was argued that in this case, if an appeal was permissible under Order 47, R. 7, the applicant could have objected that the application for review was barred by limitation and that this Court exercised its discretion wrongly in extending time to the applicants. Reliance is placed on the case of Jagmohan Singh v. Sheomangal Singh[2]. We have examined this case and the reason that was given for rejecting that application was that even if it was a case in which an appeal was allowed, the provisions of Order 47, R. 7 did not give a right of appeal in that particular case. It is not possible to hold that this case is an authority for the proposition that when a right of appeal is given by Order 47, R. 7, a case can be said to be a fit case for certification for appeal to His Majesty in Council. The learned counsel strenuously contended that the exercise of discretion in this particular instance was wrong and if the matter went up to their Lordships

---

[1] 18 A. L. J. R. 591

[2] 19 I. C. 332

Civil 1931
Ambika Prasad v. Devi Dayal
Banerji, J.

of the Privy Council, there would be an end to the litigation. The learned advocate for the respondent urges that even if leave is granted, in the event of their Lordships of the Privy Council agreeing with the view taken by us on the question of the exercise of discretion, the litigation will still continue. It can hardly be said that any substantial question of law has to be decided in the case. Moreover, the admission of additional evidence is subject to the decision of the court whether the document presented now was or was not admissible. Further there were a number of issues in the case which would have to be decided even if the court held upon a consideration of the additional evidence now to be tendered that the plaintiff had a locus standi to sue. In these circumstances, we are of opinion that this case is not a fit case in which we should certify it to be appealable to His Majesty in Council. The application is dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed

Civil 1931
Dec. 8
Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

NIAZ AHMED (Applicant)
versus
PHUL KUNWAR (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 34, R. 6—Decree under—Against mortgagor who has obtained an order of discharge by insolvency court—Whether can be passed.

The mortgagor was adjudicated an insolvent with reference to debts provable in insolvency. In the suit for sale by the mortgagee, the mortgaged property was sold in execution of the mortgage decree after the order of discharge. As the net proceeds of the sale were found insufficient to pay the amount due, the mortgagee applied for a decree under Or. 34, R. 6; held, (1) that the debt due to a secured creditor is not provable in insolvency and the order of discharge cannot affect his rights, (2) that the order of discharge cannot take away the statutory right of the decree-holder under Or. 34, R. 6, which materialised after the order of discharge.

Civil Revision from an order of Babu Makhan Lal, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

M. H. Faruqi for the applicant.

K. N. Katju and Banke Behari for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

Sen, J.—On August 22, 1917, one Sirajuddin took a lease of certain zemindari property from Rani Phul Kunwar. A patta and a qabuliat were executed in evidence of this transaction and the lessee agreed to pay to the lessor Rs.2,500 in certain instalments. On the same date, Niaz Ahmed stood surety for the lessee and executed a surety bond in favour of Rani Phul Kunwar, whereby he agreed to pay her Rs.2,500 together with interest at a certain rate in case of default on the part of the lessee and hypothecated his immovable property in her favour.

The lessee did not pay the stipulated instalments and a right of suit accrued to Rani Phul Kunwar against the lessee and his surety. In 1924, the surety applied to the Bombay High Court, to be declared an insolvent. It is said that notice of this application was issued to Rani Phul Kunwar.

---

*Civ. Rev. 551 of 1930

We do not know why this notice was given. A copy of this notice is not on the record and we do not know its contents.

Niaz Ahmed was duly adjudicated an insolvent.

Later on, he applied for his discharge. Notice of his application was given to his creditors and presumably to Rani Phul Kunwar who was misdescribed as the "wife of H. H. Maharajah Ranjit Singh". Rani Phul Kunwar was not the wife but the widow of Rai Bahadur Chaudhry Ranjit Singh.

The insolvent was duly discharged by the Bombay High Court on August 17, 1926.

Rani Phul Kunwar sued on her mortgage and obtained a decree for principal and interest by the sale of the mortgaged property. The decree was passed for a sum of Rs.4,643-9-0. A final decree was obtained against the mortgagor and in execution of this decree his property was sold for Rs.479.

Rani Phul Kunwar applied for a decree over under O. 34, R. 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Her application was resisted by the mortgagor on the ground that the order of discharge by the Bombay High Court in the exercise of its insolvency jurisdiction completely absolved him from all debts due from him until the date of his discharge and that the order of discharge operated as res judicata. This plea was overruled by the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad and a decree for the balance due on the mortgage after sale of the property was passed in favour of Rani Phul Kunwar.

Niaz Ahmad has applied to this Court for a revision of this order under Section 115 C. P. C. Where a simple money decree has been passed under O. 34, R. 6 C. P. C. the remedy of the defendant is to file an appeal. Where another remedy exists by statute, an application for revision under Section 115 C. P. C. is not competent.

Rani Phul Kunwar being a secured creditor, the debt due to her was not provable in bankruptcy. Under Section 17 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, the order of adjudication does not affect the power of any secured creditor to realise or otherwise deal with his security as he would have been entitled to, independently of that section.

The order of discharge has no more effect upon the right of the secured creditor than the order of adjudication. Under Section 45 (2) "an order of discharge shall release the insolvent from all debts provable in insolvency." The debt due to a secured creditor is not a debt provable in insolvency. The order of adjudication and the subsequent order of discharge cannot affect the rights of the secured creditor which flow from the mortgage contract.

There is no difference in this respect between the Provincial and the Presidency Towns Insolvency Acts. Where a mortgagor has been adjudicated an insolvent with reference to certain debts which were provable in insolvency the order of adjudication and the order of discharge do not and cannot prejudicially affect the legal rights of the creditor against the debtor in respect of debts which were not provable in insolvency.

The mortgagee was entitled to a decree over under Order 34, Rule 6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, if on the date of his application "the ba-

CIVIL 1931
NIAZ AHMED v. PHUL KUNWAR
Sen, J.

lance was legally recoverable from the defendant otherwise than out of the property sold."

The mortgaged property was sold in execution of Rani Phul Kunwar's decree after the order of discharge. The right to a decree under Order 34, Rule 6 C. P. C. did not accrue till after the sale of the property. The right to a personal decree was not time-barred on the date of the presentation of the application. The order of discharge cannot take away the statutory right of the decree-holder which materialised long after the order of discharge. We hold that the decree was rightly passed. Our attention has been drawn to Section 128 of the Indian Contract Act. This section is irrelevant. We dismiss the application with costs.

Application dismissed

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 21
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

SHANTI LAL (Applicant)
versus
RAM GOPAL (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 144—Suit for dissolution of partnership in two factories—Defendant in possession—Suit decreed—Decree included appointment of receiver—By agreement each party agreed to manage one factory—Decree set aside on appeal as no valid partnership existed—Defendant dies—His son entitled to possession of factory placed under plaintiff's management.

A suit for dissolution of partnership in two factories was decreed and the decree included the direction that a receiver be appointed, but the parties came before the court and agreed that one factory be managed by defendant and the other by plaintiff. On appeal by defendant, the High Court set aside the decree holding that there was no valid partnership. Defendant having died, his adopted son applied for restitution under Sec. 144 C. P. C. seeking inter alia to be put in possession of the factory which was under the agreement placed under plaintiff's management. Held, that as the defendant was in possession when the suit was brought, he could recover possession by restitution, and as there was no proof that his possession terminated with his death, his son was entitled to represent him after his death and to recover possession and profits, if any, accruing from the factory during plaintiff's management.

Mewa Ram v. Ram Gopal, I. L. R. 48 All. 735 mentioned.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU PREO NATH GHOSE, First Additional Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

Panna Lal for the appellant.

S. K. Dar and Janki Prasad Singhal for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an appeal from an order of the first Additional Subordinate Judge of Moradabad passed on an application for restitution under Section 144, C. P. C. The plaintiff in the suit was Seth Ram Gopal. He sued for dissolution of a partnership in two ginning factories: one at Saharanpur and the other at Chandausi, and for partition of its assets. The suit was defended on the ground that the partnership was illegal owing to the fact that there were more than 20 shareholders in the factory from the very beginning. There were two other suits, also brought by Seth Ram Gopal, for dissolution of partnership in respect of two other factories at Chandausi. In each case the principal defendant was Rai Bahadur Mewa Ram. All the three suits were decreed by the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, but we are concerned only with the suit dealing with the factory at Saharanpur and the old ginning factory at Chandausi.

---

*F. A. 554 of 1927

Niamat-ullah, J.

In this case the decree of the Subordinate Judge included the direction that a receiver should be appointed. This order was passed on August 10, 1922. On August 23, 1922, the parties came before the court and agreed that the defendant No. 1, R. B. Mewa Ram, should be appointed manager of the factory at Saharanpur and the plaintiff Seth Ram Gopal of the Old Ginning factory at Chandausi. Clearly this agreement was entered into by the parties in order to avoid the appointment of an outside person as a receiver. Against the decree an appeal was preferred by the defendant and was allowed by a Bench of this Court on May 31, 1926. The two Judges who heard this appeal disagreed, and the point of law on which they disagreed was referred to a third Judge. The decision as stated in the head note of the report in Mewa Ram v. Ram Gopal[1] is as follows:—

> When an association formed for the purposes of gain is unregistered, although under the law it ought to have been registered, and the business of the association has been going on for some years, none of its members can sue in a court of law for partition of the existing assets.

On this finding the appeal was allowed and the suit was dismissed. The defendant, R. B. Mewa Ram, had in the meantime died. On November 11, 1926 his adopted son, Lala Shanti Ram, made a petition for restitution under S. 144, C. P. C. He sought inter alia to be put into possession of the old Ginning Factory at Chandausi, which under the agreement of August 23, 1922 had been given over to Seth Ram Gopal for management. This is the sole question which is now before us in appeal.

The Additional Subordinate Judge gave on this point the following decision:—

> Section 144 merely lays down a procedure. The person who seeks its aid must show that he has a substantive right to be restored to possession. Had Mewa Ram been alive, he might have had the right to be restored to possession, but his right to possession as a manager did not devolve upon Shanti Lal by right of succession of survivorship.

He accordingly dismissed the application in so far as it sought possession of the old Ginning Factory at Chandausi and the profits. We do not consider that the view taken by the learned Additional Subordinate Judge on this question is correct. The relevant portion of S. 144 runs as follows:—

> Where a decree is reversed, the court of first instance shall, on the application of any party entitled to benefit by way of restitution or otherwise, cause such restitution to be made as will, so far as may be, place the parties in the position which they would have occupied but for such decree or such part thereof as has been reversed.

The decree directed the appointment of a receiver. In pursuance of that order the parties came to an agreement that one factory should be managed by Mewa Ram and the other by Ram Gopal. The High Court's

---

[1] I. L. R. 48 All. 735

CIVIL 1931
SHANTI LAL
v.
RAM GOPAL
Niamat-ullah, J.

order sets aside the decree on the ground that the plaintiff could not bring such a suit, thereby setting aside the whole proceedings from the beginning. The only course which could be followed in law for any party whose possession had been interfered with on account of that decree was to apply for restitution under S. 144. Possession of the factory, when the suit was brought, was with R. B. Mewa Ram, and the Additional Subordinate Judge appears to concede that had R. B. Mewa Ram been alive, he might have got back possession by way of restitution. But here the court appears to be in error in supposing that this right would have accrued to R. B. Mewa Ram as manager of the property. No doubt, the word 'manager' was used in the agreement between the parties on August 23, 1922, and no doubt, also R. B. Mewa Ram defended the original suit saying that he was a partner in the Company and the manager of the factory; but the order of this High Court was that there was no partnership, and we must accept that order as meaning that the possession of R. B. Mewa Ram when the suit was brought was not that of a manager of a partnership concern. We need not say what title R. B. Mewa Ram possessed. It is sufficient if we say that he was a party in possession. We are of opinion that not only can such a person recover possession by restitution but, where there is no proof that his possession terminated with his death, his son is entitled to represent him after his death. Mr. Dar for the respondent has argued that there is nothing to show that had Mewa Ram died his son would have succeeded to the management. It may be so; but this waives the question, for we are bound to hold that there was no management as there was no valid partnership of the concern. In our opinion, the applicant was entitled to restitution by possession of the old factory in addition to the other reliefs already decreed. He is also entitled to the profits, if any, accruing from the factory during the period of management by the plaintiff. The lower court has not given a decision as to the amount of profits. We accordingly remand the case under O. 41, R. 23, I. P. C., for disposal of the other questions arising between the parties on the merits. The appellant will get his costs of this appeal in this Court. Future costs will abide the result.

Case remanded

CIVIL 1932
Jan. 4
SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

KRIPA RAM (Defendant)
versus
KUNWAR BAHADUR (Plaintiff)*

Limitation Act, Art. 36—Applicability of—Suit for compensation—By attaching creditor—Against person who misappropriates attached goods.

A suit for compensation by an attaching creditor against a person who dishonestly removes the attached goods, sells the same and misappropriates the sale proceeds, is governed by Art. 36 of the Limitation Act, and not by Arts. 48 and 49, which apply to cases where the plaintiff has a right to possession of the goods.

FIRST APPEAL from an order of P. C. PLOWDEN ESQ., District Judge of Bareilly.

G. S. Pathak for the appellant.

P. M. L. Verma for the respondent.

---

*F. A. F. O. 63 of 1931

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a defendant's appeal from an order of remand. The plaintiff alleged that he had brought a suit against Sewa Ram and got certain sugar and treacle belonging to his debtor attached before judgment. The present defendant, Kirpa Ram, filed an objection to the attachment of the sugar and treacle claiming them as his own property, but his objection was dismissed in April 1926; and the plaintiff's suit was decreed. Thereupon the present defendant filed a suit for a declaration of his title to the properties attached; but that suit failed. According to the plaintiff, the defendant obtained a stay order during the pendency of his declaratory suit, and in collusion with the custodian of the property, who had been appointed by the court, and the judgment-debtor, he dishonestly removed the sugar, sold the same and misappropriated the sale proceeds. This misappropriation was alleged to have taken place in May or June 1926. The plaintiff filed a complaint in the criminal court on July 27, 1926, which however proved infructuous. He then filed his suit on July 29, 1929, July 27 and 28 being holidays.

The claim was resisted on merits, as well as on the ground of limitation and absence of cause of action. The trial court, without going into the facts, dismissed the suit on the plea of limitation alone, holding that Article 49 of the Limitation Act applied and the claim was more than three years after the misappropriation.

On appeal the lower appellate court has come to the conclusion that neither Article 48 nor 49, nor even Article 36 of the Limitation Act applies, but that the residuary Article 120 applies and the claim was within time. It has accordingly sent the case back to the trial court for decision on the remaining issues.

It is well settled that the residuary Article 120 cannot be applied where there is any other special article applicable to the facts of the case. If, therefore, the suit falls under any of the other articles, this omnibus article would be inapplicable.

As observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of L. P. E. Pugh v. Ashutosh Sen[1], Articles 48 and 49 are intended to apply to suits for recovery of specific movable property or for compensation for the same. Article 48 is more special, whereas Article 49 is more general. Article 48 is confined to cases where the movable property has been lost or acquired by theft or dishonest misappropriation or conversion, and for compensation for wrongfully taking or detaining the same. Article 49 applies to other specific movable properties or for compensation for wrongfully taking or injuring or wrongfully detaining the same. If we had to look to nothing but the first column in Article 48, the present case, being one of dishonest misappropriation or conversion, might be thought to fall under it. But in the last column it provides that time begins to run from the date when the person having the right to the possession of the property first learns in whose possession it is. The article is accordingly intended to apply to cases where the plaintiff having the right to the possession of the property learns of the acquisition by theft or dishonest misappropriation or conversion. In the present case the plaintiff was a mere attaching creditor and had no right to the possession of the property itself. His

---

[1] 1929 A. L. J. R. 170

CIVIL

1932

KRIPA RAM
v.
KUNWAR
BAHADUR

Sulaiman, J.

only remedy was to put it up for sale after the decree had been obtained and realise his decretal amount, although he might himself have purchased the property in lieu of it. It, therefore, seems to us that Article 48 cannot apply to the facts of the present case. Article 49 is a more general article and applies to other cases of specific movable property being wrongfully taken, injured or detained. The difference between Articles 48 and 49 is that while the former refers to cases where the property has been lost, acquired by theft or dishonest misappropriation or conversion, the latter applies to other cases of wrongfully taking, injuring or detaining movable property. No clear authority directly in point either way has been brought to our notice. But we think that having regard to its language Article 49 also is intended to apply to cases where the plaintiff had a right to possession of the movable property which was wrongfully taken from him, injured or wrongfully detained. The plaintiff's remedy is to sue for the recovery of the specific movable property or in the alternative for its compensation for wrongfully taking, injuring or wrongfully detaining. In such a case the period begins to run from the time when the property was wrongfully taken, injured or the defendants' possession became unlawful. In the present case, the plaintiff was a mere attaching creditor. He had no right to possession of the goods. His right was confined to get the goods sold through the court and realise his decretal money out of the sale proceeds. His attachment took precedence over any private transfer made by the judgment-debtor pending the same. But this right did not entitle the plaintiff to take possession of the goods direct. Article 49 accordingly is not applicable.

Article 36 is a more general article. It is applicable to suits for compensation for any malfeasance, misfeasance, or non-feasance independent of contract. It refers to action which may be on account of the commission of some act which is in itself unlawful, or being the improper performance of some lawful act, or the omission of some act which a person by law is bound to do. It is a general article for suits for compensation for all acts and omissions amounting to torts which are not provided for elsewhere. It, therefore, follows that as neither Article 48 nor Article 49 applies, Article 36 must apply. Accordingly, the residuary Article 120 cannot apply. But Article 36 gives only two years' time to the plaintiff. The suit was brought more than three years after the day when the property was wrongfully taken. The claim is obviously barred by time.

Even if we assume in favour of the plaintiff that owing to a fraudulent act of the defendant he was prevented from knowing the fact of the misappropriation of the goods, and therefore the knowledge of his right to sue for compensation was withheld from him by the defendant, and that he can get the benefit of the provision of S. 18 of the Limitation Act, the claim in hopelessly beyond time. He admitted that he came to know of the misappropriation on July 27, 1926 and the period of two years would begin to run from that day. The suit was filed on July 29, 1929 and was therefore beyond time.

We are accordingly of opinion that the plaintiff's claim would fail on the ground of limitation. We allow the appeal and setting aside the order of the court below restore the decree of the first court dismissing the suit with costs.

Appeal allowed

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 6

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

BHAGWANTI (Plaintiff)
versus
DHANWANI AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), Sec. 5—Chief Inspector of Stamps—Whether an officer whose duty it is to see that the fee is paid under Chapter II.

The Chief Inspector of Stamps is an officer whose duty it is to see that the fee is paid under Chapter II Court Fees Act, and the decision of the Taxing Officer on a difference of opinion between the Chief Inspector of Stamps and the suitor is final decision.

FIRST APPEAL from the decision of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Benares.

A. P. Bagchi for the appellant.

K. Verma for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The Taxing Officer has reported a deficiency in the court fee in this appeal of Rs.333-8-0 corresponding to a similar deficiency in the plaint in the suit and counsel for the appellant takes exception to this report. While he admits that under Sec. 5 of the Court Fees Act the decision of the Taxing Officer is final, he takes exception to the manner in which the matter was brought to the notice of the Taxing Officer. The report as to deficiency was made by the Chief Inspector of Stamps. Under the High Court Rules Chapter III, Rule 10 the person who reports to this High Court on the deficiency or otherwise of stamps is the Stamp Reporter. These words have now been explained by a recent amendment, which adds after the words "Stamps Reporter" the words "or any other officer specially appointed in this behalf." The appellant's counsel contends that prior to that amendment the words "Stamp Reporter" stood alone and did not include the Chief Inspector of Stamps, consequently no objection made by the Chief Inspector of Stamps has any validity and the decision passed by the Taxing Officer on a difference of opinion between the Chief Inspector of Stamps and the appellant is not final as laid down by Section 5 of the Court Fees Act. But the Court Fees Act takes no cognizance of the Stamp Reporter or the Chief Inspector of Stamps. It merely states "in case of difference of opinion with the officer whose duty it is to see that any fees are paid, and any suitor or attorney". In our opinion the Chief Inspector of Stamps is an officer whose duty it is to see that the fee is paid under this chapter, and the decision of the Taxing Officer on a difference of opinion between the Chief Inspector of Stamps and the suitor is final decision.

The decision being final, we may either dismiss this appeal or allow time to the appellant to make good the deficiency. We are prepared to allow time. The learned counsel asks for three months time and we allow him three months in which to make good the deficiency of Rs.667 pointed out by the Taxing Officer.

---

*Stamp Report in F. A. 448 of 1928

PRIVY COUNCIL

GHULAM MOHAMMAD (Plaintiff)
versus
GHULAM HUSAIN AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil

1931

Dec. 14

LORD THANKERTON
LORD SALVESEN
SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sec. 123—Applicability of—Suit against an executor or administrator or some person legally charged with duty of distributing the estate—Mohammedan Law—Inheritance—Surrender of their rights in exchange for annuities—By widow and daughters of deceased Mohammedan—Their interests enure for benefit of other heirs irrespective of their rights inter se—Mohammedan Law—Will—In favour of one of heirs of testator—Invalid—Unless consented to by other heirs after death of testator—Consent of minor heirs to be given after attaining majority—Consent by guardian not valid.

Article 123 of the Indian Limitation Act only applies to a suit brought against an executor or administrator or some person legally charged with the duty of distributing the estate. Nurdin Najbudin v. Bu Umrao, 45 Bom. 519, Rustam Khan v. Jani, 51 All. 101 approved. Maung Tun Tha v. Ma Thit, 44 I. A. 42 explained.

The widow and daughters of a deceased Mohammedan having surrendered their rights in exchange for annuities which were charged upon the whole estate, their interests in the entire property enured for the benefit of the other heirs irrespective of their rights inter se, and the whole estate, subject to the annuities so charged and the debts, became divisible between the remaining heirs, the sons of the deceased.

Under the Mohammedan Law a will made in favour of one of the heirs of the testator, is invalid unless consented to by the other heirs after the death of the testator. If the other heirs are at the time of the death of the testator minors, consent must be given by them after their attaining majority. A consent by their guardian on their behalf during their minority is invalid.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

B. Dube, K.C. for the appellant.

L. De'Gruyther, K.C. and A. Majid for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir George Lowndes

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—One Khadim Husain, a Mohammedan governed by the law of the Hanafi school, died on August 21, 1901. Two days before his death he made a will in the following terms:—

> I, Shaikh Khadim Husain, son of Munshi Aman Ullah, deceased, resident, jagirdar and taaluqadar of Ganeshpur, district Basti, declare as follows:—
>
> I own and possess movable and immovable property of every description (such as) houses, groves, etc., in the district of Basti, Gorakhpur and Fyzabad, and it is in my possession and enjoyment as a proprietor without the participation of anyone else. The immovable property consists of three kinds of property: One is that which is meant for maintenance of disciples and female slaves (under a Will, dated November 25, 1866, my father, Maulvi Shaikh Aman Ullah, deceased, gave (this property) to me alone). This property which he had, under a Will, dated June 13, 1837, got from his father for maintenance of the disciples and the female slaves as proprietor, is the panchmi share in the entire taaluqa of Ganeshpur. My father, having included a panchmi share in his self-acquired property to that property, conferred it on me as proprietor under the said Will. Accordingly, after the death of my father, I, the executant, entered in possession and occupation thereof under the said Will. The second kind of the immovable property is that which has devolved upon me from my deceased father and the other persons; the third is that which I, the executant, myself have acquired. I have two sons, Shaikh Ghulam Husain and Shaikh Ghulam Muhammad, minors, three daughters, Musammat Roshan-un-nisa, Musammat Khair-un-nisa and Musammat Mumtaz-un-nisa, and one wife, Musammat Amna Bibi, who is now alive. As there is no certainty of life, I, the executant, also think it proper to make a will in conformity with the custom of my family in order that no dispute may arise in future among my heirs. My elder son, Ghulam Husain, minor, shall remain in proprietary possession of the panchmi share in taaluqa Ganeshpur, together with the panchmi property acquired by my deceased father given to me under the Will, dated November 5, 1866, for maintenance of the disciples and the female slaves in accordance with the conditions laid down in the Will made by my father and a one-fifth share acquired by me, the executant; Shaikh Ghulam Husain aforesaid, should, from the income thereof, maintain the disciples and the female slaves, who are alive now, or in future those who may be increased in their generations. (Paper torn). The disciples and the female slaves have no proprietary right in the said property. They are entitled to food and clothing only. If any of them disobey or refuse to render service or take up service at another place, then Shaikh Ghulam Husain aforesaid is empowered to discontinue his maintenance. Both my sons, Shaikh Ghulam Husain aforesaid and Sheikh Ghulam Muhammad aforesaid, who is born now, shall after me be the owners in possession of all the property which I have, by right of inheritance, received from my deceased father, Maulvi Shaikh Aman-ullah, and the other persons, and which I have myself acquired and out of which property four-fifth share has been saved. So long as they live jointly, they shall appropriate the profits jointly, and after separation they should divide the profits of the said property in half and half. Both the sons should, out of the profits of the same property, pay Rs.600 a year to their mother, Musammat Amna Bibi, and Rs.300 a year to each of my daughters, namely, Musammat Roshan-un-nisa, Khair-un-nisa, and Mumtaz-un-nisa, after their marriage, generation after generation. The said Musammats have no proprietary power in the property. If Shaikh Ghulam Husain and Shaikh Ghulam Muhammad fail to pay the fixed amount to the said Musammats, the latter are empowered to recover their annual amount by bringing a suit. When both the brothers become separate, they should, out of the profits of the property in their respective possession, continue to make payment to my wife and daughters. Both my sons are still minors. God forbid, if I die before they attain majority, their mother, Musammat Amna Bibi, shall be their guardian during their minority. After attaining majority my both sons shall themselves be the owners in possession and abide by the conditions of the Will and make management. This Will shall come into force after me, the executant. As long as I am alive, no one has power to cause interference. Both the sons shall be the owners of the movable property and the houses in half and half.

---

*P. C. A. 75 of 1929

In line 15 the word milkiatan written above the line is correct.

Hence I have executed these few presents by way of a Will in order that it may serve as evidence. Dated August 19, 1901.

Signature of Shaikh Khadim Husain.

(The Will executed by me is correct, in autograph).

The principal question in this appeal is as to the construction of the will so far as regards what is referred to therein as the "panchmi" property. The appellant, the younger of the two sons of the testator, sued to establish his right, under the events which had happened since his father's death, to a moiety of this property. The first respondent denied his brother's right to any share at all, though it is not clear how far he claimed the property for himself. The trial Judge decided in favour of the appellant, but gave him a quarter share only. Both parties appealed to the High Court (their appeals being numbered respectively 132 and 164 of 1925), with the result that the suit was dismissed. These appeals were heard jointly with two other appeals in suits instituted by one of the daughters of Khadim Husain, but in which no appeal has been taken to His Majesty in Council, and with which, therefore, the Board are not concerned. The other respondents are alienees from the first respondent and have taken no part in the proceedings.

It is not disputed that under the Hanafi law, if the effect of the will was to confer a beneficial interest in the panchmi property upon the first respondent, it was invalid unless consented to by the other heirs after the testator's death. The first question, therefore, is whether this was the true effect of the will. The trial Judge held that it was: the High Court, on the other hand, took the view that the first respondent was a mere trustee with no beneficial interest in the property.

The decision no doubt concerns directly only the will of Khadim Husain, but the references by the testator to the will of his father Aman Ullah, and the trend of the arguments in the case, make it necessary to consider the terms of his will also, and this in turn brings in the will of Kadir Baksh, the grandfather of Khadim Husain, under which the panchmi property originated.

The will of Kadir Baksh is dated June 13, 1837. He in effect divided his estate into five shares, bequeathing one-fifth to each of his four sons, and setting aside the remaining fifth "for the expenses of the male and female slaves and the other defendants, etc., who are at present in addition to the sons and who may survive hereafter." This share he made over to his youngest son, Aman Ullah. The slaves and dependants were to remain in his control; they were to get from him their necessary expenses for food and clothing, but were not to be in possession of the land, and if they were disobedient they were to get nothing. It is admitted by counsel for the first respondent that this bequest was, as, indeed, the terms of the will show, confined to slaves and dependants living at the testator's death. It is also clear, their Lordships think, that they took no interest in the corpus of the share, and that the will made no express disposition of it as such.

The will of Aman Ullah followed much the same lines. It is dated September 25, 1866. It recites the will of Kadir Baksh, and after referring to the one-fifth made over to him (Aman Ullah) for the maintenance of the slaves and dependants, continues, "Under the terms of the will executed by the ancestor and admitted by his heirs, two-fifths of the whole of the taaluqa (meaning evidently the one-fifth for the slaves and his own personal one-fifth) was settled to be my own share and property, of which I am in possession and occupation by virtue of private partition." He goes on to state that he also has four sons who are "heirs and owners of my estate and property," and that following the ways of his ancestor, he has made "a will regarding, and division of, my estate." He then makes over to Khadim Husain, his eldest son, "the one-fifth share which my ancestor has given to me for the maintenance of the dependant slave boys and girls, as well as one-fifth of all my self-acquired villages (subject to all the conditions laid down in the will of my ancestor, dated June 13, 1837), together with the slave boys and girls that are alive at present and that may be born hereafter." He repeats that the slaves are to be entitled to maintenance only; that they are to have "no concern with the possession of the lands"; and that if disobedient they will forfeit their rights. The balance of his estate he divides equally among his sons.

It appears that some years before the date of this will there had been litigation between the brothers, Miran Baksh the second son of Kadir Baksh, suing for partition, and claiming that the panchmi share was divisible with the rest of the property left by his father. The principal Sadar Amir of Gorakhpur, by a judgment dated August 28, 1860, held against the plaintiff's claim in respect of the panchmi villages, and gave him a decree for partition of his share only in the other property. The issues raised the question directly whether Kadir Baksh's will established that the panchmi villages "solely belonged to the contesting defendant," i.e., Aman Ullah and their Lordships think that the decision must be regarded as having answered this question in the affirmative. They have very little doubt that Aman Ullah's will was based upon this decision, and that he regarded himself as the owner of the panchmi villages, subject only to the obligation of maintaining the slaves.

The construction of Kadir Baksh's will was again raised in 1898, after the death of the last of the slaves, the claimant on this second occasion being Karamat Bibi, a daughter of Zahur Uddin, the eldest son of Kadir Baksh. Aman Ullah was then dead, and Khadim Baksh was the principal defendant to the suit. The case went up to the High Court on second appeal, the sole question for decision being the construction of the will with reference to the panchmi share. The learned Judges, by their judgment dated August 8, 1901, held that there was a gift of this share to Aman Ullah, "but a gift burdened for the time being with the necessity of making provision, suitable and lifelong, for the slaves and slave girls who might survive the testator." They thought that the assignment of the share "was as regards time unconditional," and they accordingly affirmed the dismissal of the suit which the District Judge had decreed. It will be observed that this decision was in substantial accord with that of the Sadar Amir in 1860.

Turning now to the will of Khadim Husain, with which the present appeal is more directly concerned, their Lordships note that it was made very shortly after the decision of the High Court above referred to, and they think that its terms must have been influenced by that decision. The testator begins by stating that he is "in possession and enjoyment as a proprietor without the participation of anyone else," of immovable properties which include both the original and increased panchmi shares. He affirms that these shares were conferred upon him "as proprietor" under his father's will and that he had been in possession and occupation of them since his father's death. He then proceeds to declare that the first respondent "shall remain in proprietary possession of the panchmi share in the taaluqa, Ganeshpur together with the panchmi property acquired by my deceased father given to me under his will."

Apart from any question of a wakf which has been put forward for the first time on the argument of this appeal, and with which their Lordships will presently deal, they think that Aman Ullah took under the will of his father Kadir Baksh a beneficial interest in the original panchmi share, subject to the maintenance of the slaves during their lives. The slaves clearly took no interest in the corpus of the share, or in the surplus income as the life interests dropped out, and the only reasonable construction of the will would seem to be that arrived at by the High Court in 1901, which as between the parties to that suit was clearly res judicata.

Whether Khadim Husain took a similar interest under Aman Ullah's will may be more doubtful, but reading the will as a whole in the light of the surrounding circumstances, their Lordships think that the intention of Aman Ullah was to pass on to his son the same quality of interest in the now increased panchmi share as that which he himself had taken under his father's will. The exact date of Aman Ullah's death seems to be uncertain. It was probably not long after the date of his will, and must in any event have occurred before July, 1871, as is shown by the proceedings in a suit which went up to the High Court in 1872. Khadim Husain was therefore in possession of the villages for at least 30 years, and their Lordships have no doubt that he regarded himself as the owner, subject only to the maintenance, at his discretion, of the slaves. The only persons interested to deny his proprietorship would be the other heirs of Aman Ullah, who seem to have taken no steps to assert a claim, and they are not parties to or in any way represented in the present litigation.

Khadim Husain's will, in their Lordships' opinion, clearly purported to pass on to the first respondent a proprietory interest in the panchmi property, now again increased by the addition of one-fifth of the other estate of the testator, subject to similar obligations. The learned Judges of the High Court would attach little, if any, weight to the references in the will to "proprietorship" and "proprietory" rights. Their Lordships are unable to take this view of the expressions employed by the testator. They regard them as used in their ordinary acceptance, and as intended to make it clear that the first respondent was to be the owner of the villages, subject to provision for the slaves. The latter were to be maintained out of the income only and were to have no proprietory interest in the property: whatever surplus income there might be and the reversionary interest in the corpus was to go to the first respondent.

Their Lordships take no exception to the view of the High Court that there was a trust for the slaves. They think that this is probably a more correct way of looking at the bequest than to refer to it as an onerous gift: it would, they think, clearly come within the definition of a trust under the Indian Trusts Act, 1882, by which the will of Khadim Husain would be governed. But in the view their Lordships take, the learned Judges were wrong in thinking that the proprietorship conferred upon the first respondent by the will was a bare trusteeship accompanied by no interest of a beneficial nature.

In their Lordships' opinion, therefore, the will of Khadim Husain did purport to confer a beneficial interest in a part of his estate upon the first respondent, who was one of his heirs, and it would seem to follow that (apart from any question of consent by the appellant) the will was invalid under the Mohammedan law.

But it has been contended before the Board that the setting apart of the panchmi share under each of the three wills, to which reference has been made, was in reality the creation of a wakf, and that so considered it must be presumed that there was a dedication of the whole interest of the testator in each case to charitable purposes, leaving nothing to which the devisee could be beneficially entitled, his position being that merely of the mutwalli or manager of the charity.

No case of wakf was made by the first respondent in his defence to the suit, nor was it suggested in his memorandum of appeal to the High Court, and there is no trace of such a contention having been raised in the judgments. No one of the three wills purports to create a wakf, nor is there in any of them anything that could be regarded as a gift of the ultimate residue to charitable purposes, and no suggestion of wakf was made in any of the previous suits. It is admitted that a trust for slaves and dependants is not within the terms of the Wakf Validating Act, VI of 1913, and it is therefore unnecessary to consider the effect of Act XXXII of 1930, which purports to give retrospective effect to the Act of 1913. The argument which has been addressed to their Lordships on this point is in reality only an attempt to reopen the controversy which was finally settled by decision of this Board nearly forty years ago: see Sheikh Mahomed Ahsanulla v. Amarch and Kundu[1]; Abdul Gufur v. Nizamudin[2]; Abdul Fata Mahomed Ishak v. Russumoy Dhur Chowdhry[3]. Under these circumstances their Lordships think it sufficient to say that the contentions of the first respondent on this part of the case must necessarily fail.

Unless therefore the appellant can be shown to have consented to the terms of his father's will it cannot be binding upon him.

At the time of Khadim Husain's death both the first respondent and the appellant were minors. The former attained his majority in 1915 and the latter in 1919. Before the trial Judge an attempt was made to prove that the appellant upon attaining majority consented to the terms of the will. It was held that his consent was not proved. The High Court makes no reference to this contention, and before their Lordships no serious attempt has been made to support it.

In the High Court, however, it was contended for the first respondent that the appellant was in effect bound to the terms of the will by what was said to be a "family arrangement" embodied in a registered instrument dated March 11, 1910. The learned Judges accepted this contention, and their finding has been supported before the Board; if it is correct, the appellant necessarily fails.

The document in question was executed, during the minority of the contesting parties to this appeal, by their mother on her own behalf and purporting to act as guardian of her sons. The other parties were their sisters, the three daughters of Khadim Husain, who disputed the validity of his will. Shortly put, the effect of this arrangement was that the mother gave up, in favour of her sons, a claim to dower amounting to about a lakh of rupees, taking for herself only a life annuity of Rs.600 out of the estate, while the sisters accepted perpetual annuities of Rs.400 each charged upon specified immovable properties. Elaborate schedules of the various properties were annexed to the document, the first of which, referring to the panchmi properties, was headed "List of property which belongs exclusively to Shaikh Ghulam Husain (i.e., the first respondent), and with the income of which the slaves and slave girls will be maintained according to the conditions and restriction laid down in the wills of the ancestors."

---

[1] 17 I. A. 28

[2] 19 I. A. 170

[3] 22 I. A. 76

The learned Judges of the High Court thought that this should be read as an agreement made by the mother, acting on behalf of the younger son, with herself, acting on behalf of the elder son, that the latter should be the owner of the panchmi properties, and that it was binding upon the appellant. But quite apart from the question whether the mother could legally bind the appellant by such an agreement, their Lordships are unable to hold that this was either the intention or the effect of the document. The only object of the arrangement was, they think, to get rid of the daughter's claims, leaving the landed estates for the sons. Apart from the heading to the schedule of the panchmi properties, there is nothing to suggest that the rights of the sons inter se were considered. There was, and indeed could be, no dispute between them at their then ages, and the mother was evidently upon the terms of the document acting for them both jointly. Their Lordships must accordingly hold that the appellant was, when he came of age, free to dispute the validity of Khadim Husain's will, and to claim his share according to the Mohammedan law in the panchmi properties.

The last line of the first respondent's defence was limitation; it was contended first that the deed of March, 1910, should be read as having effected a transfer of the panchmi properties by the mother, acting on behalf of the appellant, to the first respondent, and that therefore the suit fell under Article 44 of Schedule 1 of the Limitation Act, which runs as follows:—

Description of Suit.	Period of Limitation	Time from which period began to run
44.—By a ward who has attained majority, to set aside a transfer of property by his guardian.	Three years	When the ward attains majority.

The trial Judge held that this article had no application on the ground that there was no transfer by the deed: the High Court took the opposite view. It is manifest, on the construction which their Lordships have put upon the deed, that the trial Judge was right.

Alternatively, it was argued that the suit was barred by twelve years' adverse possession under Article 144. Both the Courts in India have negatived this contention, and their Lordships have no doubt that they were right. The first respondent only attained majority in 1915, and the suit was instituted in July, 1924. Until 1915 the mother was in posses-

CIVIL

1931

GHULAM MOHAMMAD
v.
GHULAM HUSAIN

Sir George Lowndes

sion of all the immovable properties of the estate on behalf of both her sons, and it would be impossible to hold that her possession was adverse to the appellant.

Before the Board it was for the first time suggested that the suit in reality falls under Article 123, which applies to a suit "for a legacy or for a share of a residue bequeathed by a testator, or for a distributive share of the property of an intestate." The period of limitation in such a case is twelve years from the date "when the legacy or share became payable or deliverable." It is said that on the contentions of the appellant, Khadim Husain must be deemed to have died intestate, and that what the appellant is claiming is a distributive share in his estate. There is, however, a long series of decisions in India, dating at least from 1882, that this article only applies where the suit is brought against an executor or administrator or some person legally charged with the duty of distributing the estate: Issur Chunder Doss v. Juggut Chunder Shaha[4]; Keshav Jagannath v. Narayan Sakharam[5]; Umardaraz Ali Khan v. Wilayat Ali Khan[6]; Khandersa Hajee Bappu v. Puthen Veettil Ayissa[7]; and Mahomed Riasat v. Hasin Banu[8].

Counsel for the first respondent drew their Lordships' attention to a decision of this Board reported as Maung Tun Tha v. Ma Thit[9] where Article 123 was apparently applied in a suit by a Burmese-Buddhist son for his share in the paternal estate. No reference was made to the Indian case law on the subject, and the main question debated was as to whether the son was bound under the Burmese law to elect within a reasonable time afters his father's death.

Their Lordships have referred to the record of this case, and they find that in the Courts of Burma no issue was raised as to limitation, and that there was no discussion as to the article of the Act which should be applied. There had been at least one previous decision in the Lower Burma Court that Article 123 was applicable to such a case, and it seems to have been assumed on all hands that it must equally apply in the case then under consideration. After the decision in 44 I. A. it appears to have been considered in one case in the Bombay High Court that the Indian authorities had been over-ruled (Shrinbai v. Ratanbai[10]), but in two later cases the same High Court refused to apply Article 123 to claims by Mohammedan heirs: see Nurdin Najbudin v. Bu Umrao[11]. The specific question was considered by a full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in 1928, Rustam Khan v. Janki[12], another case between Mohammedan heirs, when the same conclusion was come to as in 45 Bom., the article applicable being held to be Article 144 and not 123.

Their Lordships have no doubt that it was not intended by the judgment in Maung Tun Tha v. Ma Thit to over-rule the decisions to which they have referred, and they think that, at all events in cases from the Indian Courts, these authorities should be followed. They are therefore of opinion that the present case does not fall within Article 123, and that the appellant's suit was not barred by limitation.

---

[4] I. L. R. 9 Cal. 79
[5] I. L. R. 14 Bom. 236
[6] I. L. R. 19 All. 169
[7] I. L. R. 34 Mad. 511
[8] 20 I. A. 155
[9] 44 I. A. 42
[10] I. L. R. 43 Bom. 845
[11] I. L. R. 45 Bom. 519
[12] I. L. R. 51 All. 101

It only remains to consider whether the trial Judge was right in holding that the appellant was entitled to recover a quarter share only, and not a half, of the panchmi property, and it is to be noted that upon this point the learned Judges of the High Court were in agreement with him.

The appellant's share in his father's estate under the Mohammedan law would be one-quarter only, but he contends that the widow and daughters having surrendered their rights in exchange for annuities which were charged upon the whole estate, he was entitled to share equally with his brother in all the residue.

The view taken by the Indian Courts was that the allocation of the panchmi property to the first respondent was an integral term of the arrangement under which the surrenders were made, and that if the appellant refused to be bound by this allocation he could claim no benefit from the surrenders.

In their Lordships' opinion, this view is based upon a misinterpretation of the deed of March 1910. They think that the rights of the widow and daughters, being in effect bought out by payments from the general estate, their interests enured for the benefit of the other heirs irrespective of their rights inter se, and that the whole, subject to the annuities so charged and the debts (which were considerable), became divisible equally between the two sons. If the annuities and the debts had been made payable out of the first respondent's share only, and in consideration of this the panchmi property had been allotted to him, the position would have been different, but this was not the effect of the deed.

Their Lordships are therefore of opinion that the appellant is entitled to share equally with the first respondent in the panchmi properties, and that a decree should have been entered in his favour for possession of a moiety thereof. This would, of course, be without prejudice to the rights of any persons claiming as slaves or disciples under the will of Khadim Husain. They are not parties to the present litigation, and such rights as they may be entitled to assert are not affected by it.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be allowed, that the decrees of the High Court in Appeals No. 132 and No. 164 of 1925 should be set aside, and that in lieu thereof a decree should be made in favour of the appellant for the shares in the several panchmi villages claimed by him in his plaint. The first respondent must pay the costs of the appellant in the High Court and before this Board, but, having regard to the order for costs made by the trial Judge, and to the fact that the appellant had raised issues on which he failed, their Lordships think that justice will be met by ordering the first respondent to pay only half of the appellant's costs in the Court of first instance.

Appeal allowed

Hy. S. L. Polak—Solicitor for the appellant.
Francis and Harker—Solicitors for the respondents.

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 24

MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

HIGH COURT

MAHADEO SAHAI (Applicant)

versus

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA AND OTHERS (Opposite parties)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 110—Appellant's failure to furnish security for costs of respondent—Order dismissing appeal—Whether "affirms decision of court below"—Sec. 109 (a)—"Final order passed on appeal"—Construction of.

Where on the application of the respondent under Or. 41, R. 10 the High Court ordered the appellant to furnish security for the costs of the respondent, and on his failure to do so, the appeal was dismissed, held, that the order of the High Court dismissing the appeal is an order affirming the decision of the court below within the meaning of the last paragraph of Sec. 110 C. P. C. The words in Sec. 110 C. P. C. are "affirms the decision of the court", and not "affirms the decision of the court on the merits". Re Radha Kishen v. Jumna Prasad, 5 In. Cas. 940 not followed.

The words "final order passed on appeal" in Sec. 109 (a) should be construed broadly, and include an order directing the dismissal of an appeal, consequent upon the appellant's failure to furnish security for costs of the respondent.

ORDER on an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

The applicant appeared in person.

U. S. Bajpai and Kedar Nath Sinha for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council from an order of this Court, dated June 17, 1931. The applicant prayed for a certificate under Section 109 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An ancillary prayer is contained in Paragraph 17 of his petition which is somewhat curious: "That the applicant solicits the favour of appointing a receiver and the printing and legal charges of both the parties be realised from the estate and justice be done to the case".

The subject-matter of this suit consisted principally of a property in Taluqa Imampur Pergana Ungli in the district of Jaunpur.

After various defeats in the Revenue Court going back nearly 15 years the applicant had instituted a suit in the court of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Jaunpur for declaration of title to the aforesaid properties. The suit was directed against the Secretary of State for India and against Mst. Tula and Mst. Sumitra. The plaintiff applicant had asked for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Upon a contest raised in the case, the court held that he was not a pauper. The result was that his application to sue as a pauper was dismissed with costs in favour of the Secretary of State and the other two defendants.

The plaintiff then instituted a regular suit on payment of the proper court-fee. This suit was numbered and registered as 57 of 1929.

The material allegations on which the claim was founded were that the property in Taluqa Imampur was owned by his maternal grandfather, Rai Hingan Lall who acquired the property, for loyal and meritorious services during the Sepoy Mutiny under a grant by the Government, dated June 9, 1860, that after the death of Hingan Lall, this property was settled upon Rai Daya Kishen, his son, that after the latter's demise, his son Rai Madan Makund became the owner, that the last named person died without leaving any issue, that Mst. Tula and Mst. Sumitra were not his wedded wives and that the property had devolved upon the plaintiff by force of the Crown Grants Act and the Pensions Act.

---

*P. C. A. 34 of 1931

The defendants contested the suit upon the following grounds:—

(a) The property was acquired by Rai Daya Kishen under the Grant, dated June 9, 1860, and devolved upon Mst. Tula and Mst. Sumitra, who were widows of Rai Madan Makund and that the plaintiff had no place in inheritance.

(b) The defendants Nos. 2 and 3 were in possession of the property; and the suit for a mere declaratory relief was barred by Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act; and (c) The plaintiff's claim was barred by Order 33, Rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

These pleas found favour with the trial court and the plaintiff's claim was dismissed on May 14, 1930.

The plaintiff preferred an appeal to this Court, which was duly admitted on July 21, 1930 and was registered as first appeal No. 378 of 1930.

On October 23, 1930, two of the respondents, namely, Mst. Tula and Mst. Sumitra applied to this Court under Order 41, Rule 10 of the Civil Procedure Code that the plaintiff-appellant be directed to furnish security for the costs of this Court as also of the court below for a total sum of Rs.2,500. This application was supported by an affidavit sworn by Dwarka Prasad in which he brought out very clearly the fact that the sanad, dated June 9, 1860, had been granted to Rai Daya Kishen and not to Rai Hingan Lall and that the plaintiff's suit was bound to fail. It had also been rightly dismissed by the court below as the plaintiff had contravened the imperative provision of Order 33, Rule 15 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The application was heard by a Division Bench which upon a consideration of the application, the affidavits and the judgment of the court below came to the conclusion that this was a fit case in which security should be ordered. An order was accordingly made on December 5, 1930 directing the appellant to furnish security for the respondents' costs "of this appeal" to the extent of Rs.2,500 within three months "of this date". It may be mentioned that Rs.2,500 did not represent the costs of the appeal only but included also the costs allowed by the trial court (vide affidavit of Dwarka Prasad, dated October 23, 1930, Paragraph 12).

The plaintiff-appellant moved this Court to revise the order dated December 5, 1930. By its order, dated March 11, 1931, this Court refused to revise the order in question but granted the plaintiff a further period of three months to furnish the required security. The plaintiff-appellant failed to furnish the required security and his appeal was dismissed with costs on June 17, 1931. It is against the order of this date that the plaintiff prays for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

The value of the subject-matter of the suit in the court of first instance was above Rs.10,000. The value of the proposed appeal is also above Rs.10,000. It is debatable whether an order rejecting an appeal

Civil

1931

Mahadeo Sahai v. The Secretary of State for India

Sen, J.

for the appellant's failure to furnish security for costs of the respondent amounts to an affirmance of the decision of the court below.

A preliminary objection has been taken by the respondents that the order dated June 17, 1931 is not a 'final order' within the meaning of Section 110 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that an application for leave to appeal from such an order is therefore incompetent. Our attention has been drawn to a decision of the late court of the Judicial Commissioners of Oudh in re Radha Kishan v. Jumna Prasad[1]. It has been held in this case that an order rejecting an appeal for failure to furnish security for costs is not an order affirming the decision of the court below within the meaning of the last paragraph of Section 110, nor is such an order "a final order passed on appeal" within the meaning of Section 109 of the Civil Procedure Code. This decision, in our opinion, hinges upon a very narrow and technical construction of Sections 109 and 110. Where an order of this Court dismisses an appeal it has the effect of confirming the decision of the trial court. It should be noticed that the words in Section 110 are "affirms the decision of the court" and not "affirms the decision of the court on the merits".

Similarly, we are inclined to think that the words "final order passed on appeal" in Section 109 (a) may admit of a broader construction, so as to include an order directing the dismissal of the appeal, consequent upon the plaintiff's failure to furnish security for the costs of the respondents.

The appellant however has founded his application upon Section 109 (c) which provides for a right of appeal from any order, when the case is certified to be a fit one for appeal to His Majesty in Council. This clause evidently embraces cases other than those provided in Clauses (a) and (b) and the order sought to be appealed need not be a final order passed by a High Court or a final order affirming the decision of the lower court.

We are however of opinion that the application should be dismissed, the applicant having failed to satisfy this Court either that a substantial question of law was involved in the case or that it was otherwise a fit case to appeal to His Majesty in Council.

At the earnest request of the applicant, we sent for the record of civil revision number 119 of 1920. He wished to examine the contents of an envelope which contained a petition of the applicant dated February 1926. We did so and it was found that in Paragraph 4 of this petition, the sanad dated June 9, 1860 had been reproduced verbatim. The sanad was clearly in favour of Daya Kishen and not in favour of Hingan Lall. The property has devolved upon Mst. Tula and Mst. Sumitra, who have been found to be the widows of Madan Makund and, as such, his heirs. The court below found that the plaintiff's claim by right of inheritance from Hingan Lall was absolutely baseless. There is no question of law involved here. The plaintiff in his petition has not formulated any question of law.

We have already seen that the plaintiff had attempted to sue in forma pauperis but that his application had been dismissed with costs. Before instituting the present suit, he had not paid the costs incurred by the Government and by the opposite party in opposing his application for leave to sue as a pauper. The provision of Order 33, Rule 15 of the Code of

---

[1] 5 I. C. 940

Civil Procedure was imperative. The court below was therefore bound to dismiss the suit as being barred by Order 33, Rule 15. It is not clear in which way the plaintiff hoped to get over this fatal defect by his appeal to this Court. We have not been shown on what ground the order of this Court, dated June 17, 1931, dismissing his appeal is open to attack. We have no hesitation in holding that the application now before us is devoid of substance and the case is not "otherwise a fit case for appeal to His Majesty in council". Let a copy of this order be sent to the applicant by registered post to the address given by him. Application dismissed

CIVIL
1931
MAHADEO SAHAI
v.
THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA
Sen, J.

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 8
PULLAN, J.

RAGHUNANDAN CHAUBE (Defendant)
versus
BHUWAL TEWARI (Plaintiff)[*]

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 9, R. 13—Decree specifies liability of each defendant—As against one ex parte*—Other defendants appeal—Appeal dismissed—No notice served on defendant against whom* ex parte decree passed—Whether he can apply to court of first instance to set aside ex parte decree.

The decree passed in a suit for contribution specified the liability of each defendant. The decree as against one defendant, viz., the present applicant, was ex parte. An appeal by the other defendants was dismissed by the Additional Subordinate Judge. The present applicant was made a party in the appeal but no notice was served on him. His application for setting aside of the decree having been disallowed by the munsif on the ground that no such application could be entertained by him, he appealed against this decision and on the same day applied to the Subordinate Judge for rehearing the appeal against the original decision of the munsif. Both the appeal and the application were dismissed. Held: that there was still a subsisting decree against applicant in the munsif's court and he was acting rightly when he applied to that court to have the decree against him set aside. Brij Lal Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad, 17 C. W. N. 133 relied on; that Sec. 14 of the Limitation Act applied to this case and the Subordinate Judge was wrong in dismissing the application for rehearing the appeal in his own court on the ground that it was too late. S. T. Garde v. Brij Nandan Saran, 21 A. L. J. R. 205 dissented from.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of BABU SARUP NARAIN, Second Additional Subordinate Judge of Gorakhpur.

N. P. Asthana, B. N. Sahai and Shankar Sahai Verma for the applicant.

A. P. Pandey for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J

PULLAN, J.—The circumstances which give rise to this appeal and this application in revision are as follows:—

On April 25, 1927, the Munsif of Deoria passed a decree against certain persons in a suit for contribution based on a mortgage. In the decree the liability of each defendant was specified. The decree as against Raghunandan Chaube was ex parte. The other defendants appealed against the decision, and their appeal was dismissed by the Additional Subordinate Judge on January 5, 1928. In that appeal Raghunandan Chaube was made a party, but it has been found definitely by the court below that he was not served with any notice. The plaintiff applied for a final decree on June 6, 1928, and Raghunandan Chaube applied on October 26, 1928 in the court of the munsif of Deoria to get the ex parte decree of the munsif's court set aside. The munsif dismissed the application on the ground that no such application could be entertained by him. His decision is dated March 5, 1929. On April 8, 1929, Raghunandan Chaube appealed against this decision to the Additional Subordinate Judge, and on the same day he put in an application in the Subordinate Judge's court for rehearing the appeal against the original decision of the munsif. The learned Additional Subordinate Judge dismissed the application on the ground that it was made too late, and he dismissed the appeal on the ground that the decision of the Munsif was correct. The position is, therefore, that this Raghunandan Chaube has never obtained any decision as to whether he had notice of the suit which was decreed against him ex parte. Both courts have dismissed his claim to be heard on a technical ground.

---

[*] Civ. Rev. 338 of 1931

I shall deal first with the application in revision. The view taken by both the courts below is that, as there had been an appeal against the ex parte decree, the only court which could take action in the matter was the appellate court. For this general proposition there is authority both of this High Court and of the other High Courts. But all the cases, which are directly in point, are those in which there has been a joint decree and where an appeal by one of those persons against whom the decree has been passed is in substance an appeal for all. In making this application in the court of the munsif Raghunandan Chaube relied upon a decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of Brij Lal Singh v. Mahadeo Prasad[1]. In that case a suit was brought on a mortgage and a decree was passed ex parte against some of the mortgagors. In the decree only the share of the absent defendants was ordered to be sold, but the contesting defendants were made personally liable for the unsatisfied balance of the mortgage debt. Against this part of the decision the plaintiff appealed, and the contesting defendants made cross-objections. In the appeal the absent defendants were impleaded, yet the Calcutta High Court held that as no relief was claimed in the appeal against the absent defendants there was still a subsisting ex parte decree against them over which the Subordinate Judge who was the trial court had control, and he had jurisdiction to entertain an application by the absent defendants to set aside the decree. It has not been shown to me that this ruling has ever been dissented from by the Allahabad High Court. It was considered by a Bench of this Court in Gajraj Mati Tewarin v. Swami Nath Rai[2] and it was followed in so far as was necessary for the purpose of that case, namely, to decide that persons who are not made parties to an appeal are not precluded from applying for setting aside the ex parte decree against them. It appears to me that the present case more nearly resembles the case reported in 17 Cal. W. N. 133 than any of the other cases which have been cited. The appeal preferred by the contesting defendants related only to their own specific liability and had nothing to do with the liability imposed by the trial court on the absent defendant. Moreover, it is difficult to distinguish between persons who are not parties to an appeal and persons who have been impleaded in the appeal but have never received any notice, and

[1] 17 Cal. W. N. 133

[2] I. L. R. 39 All. 13

Civil

1931

Raghunandan Chaube
v.
Bhuwal Tewari

Pullan, J.

are ignorant of the fact that any appeal has been preferred. As their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court observed:

> In cases of this description we must look rather to the substance than to the form of the proceeding.

In my opinion, the appellate court never considered the case of this person at all and was never asked to consider his case; nor had he any opportunity of putting his case before that court. I find, therefore, that there was still a subsisting decree against this Raghunandan Chaube in the court of the Munsif, and he was acting rightly when he applied to that of the Munsif, and he was acting rightly when he applied to that court rather than the appellate court to have the decree against him set aside.

On this view of the case, it follows almost inevitably that the order of the judge dismissing the application for rehearing of the appeal in his own court is erroneous. The appellate court can clearly take advantage of Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act. Until the very day on which the application was made he was contesting a bona fide application in the court of the munsif for having his case reheard. I have been referred to a single Judge decision of this Court in the case of S. T. Garde v. Brij Nandan Saran[8] in which the learned Judge observed:

> The only section which deals with the exclusion of the period during which such a case is pending in any court is Section 14 of the Limitation Act, but that Section does not apply to applications.

I cannot accept this observation as being a correct view of the law, as Section 14, Clause (2) of the Limitation Act applies in set terms to applications. Possibly some error has crept into the report. This was the case in the only other ruling on which the learned counsel relied which was a decision in Execution Second Appeal No. 1833 of 1925. The report in the All India Law Reporter showed that the learned Judge in that case also held that Section 14 of the Limitation Act did not apply to applications, but the judgment was subsequently corrected.

An attempt has been made to support the Additional Subordinate Judge on the ground that the relief claimed in the munsif's court was not the same as the relief claimed in the appellate court. I cannot, however, see that there is any difference between the reliefs claimed in the two courts. The applicant merely wished to have his case heard on the merits, and this is the prayer which he made to both courts. In my opinion, therefore, Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act applies to this case, and the Additional Subordinate Judge should not have dismissed the application on the ground that it was made too late.

In the view which I have taken on the application, it is clearly unnecessary for me to take any action in the appeal except to express my opinion that the view taken by the lower court was wrong. It is useless to send the case back to the lower appellate court, as the only order it would be able to pass would be one which I can myself pass on the application.

I allow the application in revision and direct the learned munsif of Deoria to rehear the application for setting aside the ex parte decree passed by him on April 25, 1927 on its merits. Costs both in the appeal and in the application in revision will abide the result. Application allowed

[8] 21 A. L. J. R. 205

Civil

1931

Dec. 7

Mears, C. J.

Sen, J.

KALLU MAL (Applicant)
versus
BIKRAMAJIT SINGH (Opposite party)*

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, Sec. 17—"Amount due under the decree"—Interpretation of.

The words "the amount due under the decree" as used in Sec. 17 of the Provincial Small Causes Courts Act, 1887, mean "the amount due under the decree at the date it was given" and not "the amount due under the decree at the date when the application for restoration was presented". Bisesar Ram Dassi Ram v. Har Kishan Pahlad Rai, 47 All. 623=23 A. L. J. R. 296 followed.

Civil Revision from an order of Babu Kauleshar Nath Rai, Small Cause Court Judge of Cawnpore.

S. N. Seth for the applicant.

R. C. Ghatak for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

Sen, J.—On January 20, 1930 an ex parte decree was passed in favour of Kallu Mal by a court of Small Causes for a sum of Rs.792-2-3 together with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. The decree also allowed Rs.108-8-0 as costs to the plaintiff. On November 4, 1930 the defendant applied to set aside the ex parte decree under Section 17 of the Provincial Small Courts Act. His application was accompanied by a deposit and the deposit amounted to a sum of Rs.934-2-3. The court below considered that the conditions of Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act were fulfilled and it accordingly set aside the ex parte decree. It has been contended that the amount deposited in the Court of Small Causes fell short by a small amount and the court had therefore no jurisdiction to set aside the ex parte decree. Our attention has been drawn to a ruling of this Court in re Bisesar Ram Dassi Ram v. Har Kishan Pahlad Rai[1] in which it has been held by a learned Judge of this Court that on a construction of Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887, the words "the amount due under the decree" mean "the amount due under the decree at the date it was given" and not "the amount due under the decree at the date when the application for restoration was presented." This ruling is of the year 1925. There is no published decision that we know of in which a contrary view has been taken. The ruling in question therefore was an authority for the defendant in depositing in court the amount which was equivalent to the amount which ex facie was due on the decree on the date when the decree was passed. The Small Cause Court Judge in entertaining the application under Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act was bound by this ruling. Even assuming that the case referred to above may at some time require consideration we are of opinion that this is a case in which the revisional jurisdiction of this Court should not be exercised in favour of the plaintiff under Section 25 of the Act because we think that substantial justice has been done. We accordingly dismiss this application with costs.

Application dismissed

---

*Civ. Rev. 45 of 1931

[1] I. L. R. 47 All. 623

Civil

1931

Dec. 21

Pullan, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

SOHAN PAL (Minor) THROUGH RADHA BALLABH (Defendant)

versus

MUSTAFA HUSAIN AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Arts. 60 and 59—Suit for recovery of money—Loan or deposit—Distinction between.

Where plaintiffs sued to recover a sum of money alleged to have been deposited by their mother with the defendant in the year 1921, held, that the Article applicable was Article 60 of the Limitation Act and not Article 59, and the transaction was a deposit and not a loan in the ordinary sense of that term.

Juggi Lal v. Kishan Lal, I. L. R. 37 All. 292=13 A. L. J. R. 402 followed. Dharam Das v. Ganga Devi, I. L. R. 29 All. 773 referred to.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. ALLSOP ESQ., District Judge of Aligarh, confirming a decree of MAULVI SIRAJUDDIN, Munsif of Koil.

Panna Lal, S. N. Seth and Hari Pal Varshini for the appellant.

Zafar Mehdi and Hyder Mehdi for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—The plaintiffs in this suit sued to recover a sum of money alleged to have been deposited by Mst. Sakina Begam, who was the mother of plaintiffs 1 to 8, with the defendant in the year 1921. It is alleged that two deposits were made, a sum of Rs.2,450 deposited directly by Mst. Sakina Begam and a sum of Rs.550 deposited by Mustafa Husain, plaintiff No. 1, and transferred to the account of his mother. The suit was decreed for the sum of Rs.3,000 together with interest, and the appeal was dismissed by the learned District Judge of Aligarh.

In Second Appeal the only matter pressed is the point of limitation. The defendant-appellant claims that this sum should not be held to be a deposit but rather a loan and that as such it is barred by limitation. The courts below decided that the Article of the Limitation Act which applied is Article 60, and the appellant urges that rather Articles 57, 59 and 62 should be held to apply. In our opinion the matter lies between Article 59 and Article 60. Reliance has been placed by the counsel for the appellant on a decision of this Court in the case of Dharam Das v. Ganga Devi[1] where it was held that in India the ordinary dealings between a native banker and his customers are in the nature of loans made by the latter to the former. This judgment was pronounced in the year 1907 and the Indian Limitation Act of 1908 made it clear that deposits included money of a customer in the hands of his banker. The matter was considered again by a Bench of this Court in 1915 in the case of Juggi Lal v. Kishan Lal and Mool Chand[2] and that ruling is a clear authority for the view that in a case such as the present the Article applicable is Article 60 of the Limitation Act and not Article 59. There is, in our opinion, no doubt whatever as to the nature of this transaction. It is clearly a deposit as held by the courts below and not a loan in the ordinary sense of that term.

We dismiss the appeal with costs. Appeal dismissed

---

*S. A. 1453 of 1929

[1] I. L. R. 29 All. 773

[2] I. L. R. 37 All. 292

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 6

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

NASARULLAH (Applicant)

versus

WAJID ALI AND ANOTHER (Opposite parties)*

Mussalman Waqf Act (XLII of 1923), Secs. 10, 3 and 5—'Mutawalli' furnishes particulars under Sec. 3—Deemed to have admitted 'waqf'—Failure to file statement of account under Sec. 5—Liable to be punished under Sec. 10—District Judge's jurisdiction to impose fine.

Where a "Mutawalli" complies with the provisions of Sec. 3 Mussalman Waqf Act (XLII of 1923), no question as to whether he desires the waqf or admits it can arise, because by his conduct in furnishing particulars of the waqf he must be deemed to have admitted the 'waqf' and his own position as a 'mutawalli', and having furnished particulars required by Sec. 3, he is also under an obligation to file a statement of account in terms of Sec. 5, and if omits to do so, he can be punished under Sec. 10.

The whole scheme of Act XLII of 1923 suggests that the District Judge (and not the criminal court) is the proper authority to fine a 'mutawalli', who is in default in respect of certain duties enjoined by the Act, under Sec. 10.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of D. C. HUNTER ESQ., District Judge of Moradabad.

A. M. Khwaja for the applicant.

M. A. Aziz for the opposite parties.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—This is an application in revision of an order of the District Judge of Moradabad imposing a fine of Rs.50 upon the applicant, Nasarullah, under Sec. 10 of the Musalman Waqf Act (Act 42 of 1923). The proceedings are the direct outcome of former proceedings which have been the subject of a reported ruling of this Court (Nasrullah Khan v. Wajid Ali[1]). My brother Niamatullah was a member of the Bench which decided that case. There the question was whether under S. 5 of Act 42 of 1923 the District Judge could, on the intervention of other persons, call upon a 'mutawalli' to furnish accounts of a 'waqf' and the view taken by the Bench was that the Act does not authorize the District Judge to pass an order that the 'mutawalli' should file a statement of account as contemplated by S. 5, and that the only procedure provided was to punish him under S. 10 of the same Act for not doing so. Accordingly, the same persons approached the District Judge and requested him to take action under S. 10. The Judge felt that he had to decide the question which was left undecided by this Court, namely, whether the 'waqf' was a 'waqf' covered by Act 42 of 1923, before passing an order of fine. In my opinion, he was bound to decide this question. His jurisdiction depended on the fact that the 'waqf' was one under Act 42 of 1923, and until he decided that question, he could impose no fine under the Act. Nasrullah is a person who, in compliance with S. 3 of the Act, made a statement as to the property of the 'waqf' and by so doing was held in the judgment of this Court to which I have already referred, to have fulfilled the require-

*Civ. Rev. 397 of 1930

[1] I. L. R. 52 All. 167

CIVIL
1932
NASARULLAH
v.
WAJID ALI
Pullan, J.

ments of S. 3 of the Act. I am of opinion that he brought himself under the other provisions of the Act also and established his own liability to furnish accounts and made himself open to punishment for not doing so. It is true that from time to time Nasrullah has denied that the property which he manages was a 'waqf' within the meaning of the Act, but I cannot consider that this denial is of any value in view of his own action in complying with the requirements of the Act in the first instance. Moreover, once the learned District Judge went into the facts of the case as, in my opinion, he was entitled to do, he found that in the year 1842 the Commissioner passed an order showing the nature of this 'waqf', and it is clear from that order that this was a 'waqf' such as is contemplated by Act 42 of 1923 and is not one of those 'waqfs' which are excluded from the Act by S. 2(e). Thus, in my opinion, the District Judge was in a position to deal with Nasrullah under the Act if he found that Nasrullah had not complied with the provisions of the Act in the matter of filing accounts. In such cases the District Judge appears to act suo motu; but in actual practice he can never take action, unless somebody calls his attention to the fact that a 'mutawalli' has failed to perform his duties. The part played by the opposite party in this case is merely the part of calling to the notice of the District Judge an impropriety of which he is able to take cognizance. The Judge has imposed a fine of Rs.50. His jurisdiction is not impeached in the grounds for revision, and although the wording of S. 10 is far from clear, I am of opinion that the District Judge is, under that Section, the only person who can take proceedings and who can, therefore, impose the fine. The fine does not appear to be exclusive, and I do not consider that this Court has any cause to interfere with the decision. I would, therefore, dismiss this application, but I do not consider this is a case in which costs should be allowed.

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The applicant has been held guilty of what should be considered to be an offence under Section 10 of Act 42 of 1923, and sentenced to a fine of Rs.50. Two main questions arise in revision: first, whether the applicant incurred the penalty provided for by S. 10 of the aforesaid Act, and, secondly, whether the District Judge, who convicted and fined him, had jurisdiction to do so.

As regards the 1st question, S. 10 makes an omission to do what is required of a 'mutawalli' by S. 3 or S. 5 of the Act punishable. As both these sections make use of the words 'mutawalli' and 'waqf', we must consider, at the threshhold of the case, whether the applicant is a 'mutawalli' and the property in question in the present case is 'waqf'. 'Waqf' has been so defined in Act 42 of 1923, S. 2(e), as to include all endowments other than those to which the Musalman Waqf Validating Act (6 of 1913) applies. In other words, all waqfs other than 'waqfs alal aulad' are within the purview of Act 42 of 1923. The property in dispute in this case has been in possession of the applicant and his predecessors for a considerable length of time, and its character is clearly determined by an order of the Commissioner passed in 1843. The learned District Judge has referred to the terms of that order which satisfied him that the property in question was 'waqf' for the support and upkeep of a mosque and incidental purposes, including the maintenance of a 'muazzin' who is to be selected from among the descendants of the original mutawalli, the applicant's ancestor.

Nothing has been said on behalf of the applicant which can induce me to differ from the view taken by the learned District Judge as regards the character of the property in possession of the applicant. I am, therefore, in entire agreement with my learned colleague that the property in question is 'waqf' and not dedicated for the personal benefit of the descendants or family of the 'waqf'. The applicant himself professed to act as 'mutawalli' and thereby admitted his position as such, in furnishing particulars of the property in his possession, as required by S. 3 of Act 42 of 1923. It follows from what has been said already that the property in question is 'waqf' within the meaning of that Act and the applicant is the mutawalli thereof.

It is necessary to refer to two sections of Act 42 of 1923 before examining the terms of S. 10. S. 3 requires every mutawalli to furnish particulars of the 'waqf' property in his possession. S. 5 requires him, if he has furnished particulars under S. 3, to file a statement of account within three months after the 31st day of March following the passing of Act 42 of 1923 and thereafter within 3 months after the 31st March of each year. S. 10 makes failure to furnish particulars as required by S. 3 or to file statements of accounts as required by S. 5 punishable with fine, which may extend to Rs.500. It has been argued before us that Act 42 of 1923 is applicable only to cases in which a 'mutawalli' accepts his position as such and furnishes particulars required by S. 3. This contention is correct so far as the 'mutawalli's' omission to file a statement of accounts under S. 5 is concerned, because he has to file such statement only if he has already furnished particulars under S. 3. It is, however, incorrect to say that a person is not liable to be punished under S. 10 at all, unless he admits certain property in his possession to be 'waqf' and himself to be the 'mutawalli' thereof. S. 10 makes omission to furnish particulars as required by S. 3 also punishable. All that is needed to bring home an offence under S. 10 read with S. 3 to a defaulting 'mutawalli' is to establish by evidence that he is a 'mutawalli' in respect of property which is 'waqf' within the meaning of Act 42 of 1923. Whether the character of the property as 'waqf' and his own position as 'mutawalli' are admitted or are established by evidence, if denied, S. 10 is equally applicable, if a 'mutawalli' has failed to comply with S. 3. If a 'mutawalli' has complied with the provisions of S. 3, no question as to whether he denies the 'waqf' or admits it can arise, because by his conduct in furnishing particulars of the 'waqf' property he must be deemed to have admitted the 'waqf' and his own position as 'mutawalli'.

The applicant in this case furnished particulars of the property in question under S. 3. He cannot, therefore, be convicted of an offence under S. 10 read with S. 3. Nor has the learned District Judge convicted him of such offence. But, having furnished particulars required by S. 3, he was also under an obligation to file a statement of account in terms of S. 5. He omitted to do so. S. 10 makes such omission to be as much punishable as the noncompliance with the provisions of S. 3, the penalty in either case being the same. In these circumstances, I do not think there is anything wanting in the case before us to complete an offence under S. 10 of Act 42 of 1923, and so far as the applicant's liability to pay the penalty provided for by S. 10 is concerned, there can be no doubt.

The next question, which is not free from difficulty, relates to the Court which is empowered to enforce the penal provision contained in S. 10. I was a member of the Bench which decided Nasrullah Khan v. Wajid Ali[2] which is, in fact, an earlier stage of the case before us. The only question which called for decision in that case was whether S. 5 of Act 42 of 1923, apart from laying an obligation on a 'mutawalli' to furnish a statement of account, also contemplated regular proceedings being taken before the District Judge for the determination of the question whether a certain property is 'waqf' or whether a certain person is a 'mutawalli' in respect thereof. It was held that S. 5 did not empower the District Judge to decide these questions in a proceeding taken by interested parties under S. 5. The Court went on to observe that the determination of such questions may be necessary if the 'mutawalli' is prosecuted for an offence under S. 10, and the alleged 'mutawalli' denies facts which establish his offence and which have to be enquired into. As regards the forum, it was assumed rather than decided that the District Judge can enforce the penal provision contained in S. 10. Any remark, therefore, as to whether the District Judge could impose the fine provided for by S. 10 is in the nature of an obiter dictum. The question has directly arisen in the present case and must be decided, though, I may note, that it was not argued before us that any court, other than that of the District Judge, could impose a fine under S. 10. The applicant's contention was that no court had jurisdiction to do so in the circumstances of the case. We cannot, however, refuse to take notice of the narrower question, namely, whether the District Judge as such can take cognizance of a case under S. 10. On the one hand, it can be reasonably contended that S. 10 contains merely a penal provision which declares a certain omission to be an offence punishable with fine, that the manner in which and the court by which the penalty is to be enforced are outside the purview of Act 42 of 1923, and that the 'mutawalli' should be punished by a regular criminal court in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code. There are many enactments, besides the Indian Penal Code, which declare certain acts and omissions to be offences, though the trial for those offences is regulated not by those Acts but by the general Criminal Law. On the other hand, the whole scheme of Act 42 of 1923 suggests that the District Judge is the proper authority to impose the penalty provided for by S. 10 in respect of certain duties enjoined by that Act. S. 11 requires the local Government to make rules "to carry into effect the purposes of this Act". This seems to include rules prescribing the forum and the procedure for enforcement of the penalty laid down in S. 10. No rules have, however, been framed by the local Government in this behalf. In this state of things, I am inclined to the view, though not without hesitation, that the District Judge is the proper authority to enforce the provision contained in S. 10 of Act 42 of 1923. For these reasons, I concur with my learned brother in dismissing this revision.

BY THE COURT—We dismiss this application. The parties shall bear their own costs.

Application dismissed

---

[2] I. L. R. 52 All. 167

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 6

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

AFZAL HUSAIN (Applicant)

versus

MOHAMMAD AHSAN AND ANOTHER (Opposite parties)*

Mussalman Waqf Act (XLII of 1923), Secs. 10 and 3—Failure to comply with Sec. 3—Necessary to decide whether person in default is 'mutawalli' of a 'waqf'—Sec. 10 applicable if position as 'mutawalli' established by evidence.

Before a person described as 'mutawalli' can be fined for failure to comply with the provisions of Sec. 3, Mussalman Waqf Act, it is necessary for the District Judge to decide whether the person who is alleged to be in default is or is not the 'mutawalli' of a waqf within the meaning of Sec. 2(e) of the Act. All that is needed to bring home an offence under Sec. 10 read with Sec. 3 to a defaulting 'mutawalli' is to establish by evidence that he is a 'mutawalli' in respect of property which is waqf within the meaning of Act XLII of 1923. Whether the character of the property is 'waqf' and his own position as 'mutawalli' are admitted or are established by evidence, if denied, Sec. 10 is equally applicable, if a 'mutawalli' has failed to comply with Sec. 3.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of HARISH CHANDRA ESQ., District Judge of Benares.

A. M. Khwaja for the applicant.

B. Malik for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—Many points raised in this application have already been discussed by us in our judgment in Civil Revision No. 397 of 1930*. There are, however, two facts in particular which differentiate this case from the one decided by that judgment. In both the cases the District Judge fined persons described as 'mutawallis' of the 'waqf' under S. 10 Act 42 of 1923, but in the other case the 'mutawalli' had himself filed accounts under S. 3 of the Act, and he was fined for failure to file further accounts under S. 5 of the Act, in the present case the person described as 'mutawalli' has never admitted that the property which he manages is a 'waqf', and he has been fined for failure to comply with the provisions of S. 3 of the Act. We have expressed the view in the former case that to come to a decision under S. 10 of the Musalman Waqf Act it is necessary for a Court to decide whether the person who is alleged to be in default is or is not the 'mutawalli' of a 'waqf' within the meaning of the Act. This person, Syed Afzal Husain, had on many previous occasions, described himself as 'mutawalli' and the judge has given good reasons for holding both that he is the 'mutawalli' and that the 'waqf' managed by him is one which comes within the purview of Act 42 of 1923. It would be clearly impossible to fine any person under S. 10 of the Act for failure to comply with S. 3 of the Act if all he had to do was to deny that he was the 'mutawalli' of a 'waqf' and that is all the applicant in the present case has been able to do. There is ample proof that he is the 'mutawalli' of the 'waqf' and the Court cannot be excluded from considering this question when exercising its jurisdiction under Section 10 of Act 23 of 1923.

*Civ. Rev. 481 of 1930

*1932 A. L. J. R. 262

CIVIL
1932
AFZAL HUSAIN v. MOHAMMAD AHSAN
Pullan, J.

We have also held in the connected case to which we have already referred that in our opinion the District Judge is empowered by S. 10 to impose the penalty of fine. Thus the order in this case, in so far as it is an order imposing a fine of Rs.50 on the applicant, is, in our opinion, a good order, which must be maintained, but no provision is made in the section for imposing a sentence of imprisonment in default of payment, and that part of the order of the District Judge must accordingly be set aside. We are also not of opinion that in a case of this kind any portion of the fine, when realized, should be paid to the informer. We, therefore, modify the order of the District Judge in this case, upholding the order of fine only and setting aside the order that in default the applicant should undergo simple imprisonment for one month and the order directing that Rs.25 out of the fine, if realized, should be paid to the applicants.

CIVIL
1932
Jan. 5
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

RAM KUNWAR (Plaintiff)
versus
AMAR NATH AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Hindu Law—Widow—Maintenance—In possession of a portion of joint family estate in lieu of maintenance—Whether can be dispossessed by decree-holder holding decree against rights of the family.

A widow has a right to hold that portion of the joint family estate of which she is in possession in lieu of maintenance as long as she is entitled to maintenance as a Hindu widow. On her death or if she ceases to be entitled to maintenance as a Hindu widow, the right to hold the estate would terminate. Subject to her right to hold the estate, it is open to a decree-holder of a simple money decree against the rights of the joint Hindu family to bring the property to sale.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of M. O. KARNEY ESQ., First Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur.

P. L. Banerji and Akhtar Husain Khan for the appellant.

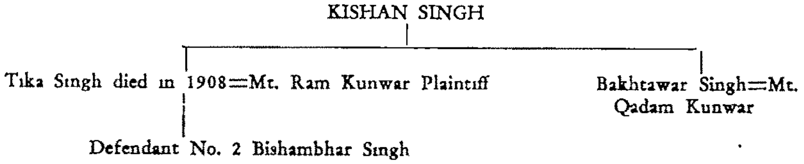
K. Verma for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a first appeal by the plaintiff Mst. Ram Kunwar whose suit has been dismissed by the court of first instance. She claimed to be in adverse possession of certain zamindari property and asked for the relief of a declaration that she was the owner of that property and that it was not attachable or saleable in execution of a decree No. 140 of 1924 held by defendant No. 1 against defendant No. 2, Bishambhar Singh. The following family tree is relevant:—



KISHAN SINGH
Tika Singh died in 1908=Mt. Ram Kunwar Plaintiff
Bakhtawar Singh=Mt. Qadam Kunwar
Defendant No. 2 Bishambhar Singh

Bishambhar Singh is the son of an earlier wife of Tika Singh and on the death of Tika Singh in 1908, there was a dispute in mutation proceedings for which there is the evidence of a witness Ajmer Singh, which, following the court of first instance, we accept. This witness states that there was an agreement made during mutation proceedings by virtue of which the property in suit was recorded in the name of the plaintiff and the remaining property which was larger was recorded for Bishambhar Singh. Subsequently to this on September 8, 1915 there was a lease executed by the plaintiff and defendant 2 of their half share in certain property which had come from Tika Singh and also by Mst. Qadam Kunwar, who owned the other half share. This lease was for a period of 10 years ending with the rabi of the year 1924-25 two years before the suit, and by virtue of the lease the net profits of the property leased, said to amount to Rs.6,000 were divided as one-half to Mst. Kadam Kunwar and the other half between the plaintiff and defendant 2 in the proportion that the plaintiff received Rs.200 annually and the remainder of the Rs.3,000 went to defendant No. 2 and to pay a debt due from defendant No. 2. The lease set forth five items of property. Of these five items the plaint claimed one-fourth of items 2 and 5 for the plaintiff and one-half of item 4. Comparing the figures for revenue in the lease with the property claimed in the plaint we find that the share of revenue on the property in the plaint would be Rs.154 per annum. The rate of profit therefore of Rs.200 per annum is not improbable as put down by the lease. The question is as to whether the plaintiff obtained possession of this property as claimed by her. She has produced four witnesses and they have given evidence to the effect that payments were made by the lessee of the Rs.200 per annum to the plaintiff and one tenant has stated that he made certain payments to the plaintiff of rent. It is true that the plaintiff might have produced very much better evidence of payment of rent such as siyaha which would be signed by the person dictating the payment. But on the other hand the defendant No. 1 has not produced any evidence to contest the evidence on behalf of the plaintiff. We consider therefore that the finding of the court of first instance is correct and that the plaintiff has proved that from the year 1908 on the death of her husband she has been in possession of the property in the plaint which has been entered in her name. We agree with the court of first instance that that possession was permissive and arose from an agreement with her step-son. Therefore it follows that the plaintiff cannot succeed in her claim that she has a title of absolute ownership to the property by adverse possession, but when possession could be referred to a lawful source adverse possession should not be inferred. In the present case the possession of the plaintiff is referable to the agreement with her step-son. It is true that the plaintiff has not put forward her case on that ground. But we consider that on the finding that she is in possession by virtue of such an agreement with her step-son the plaintiff is entitled to a declaration, although not precisely the declaration for which she had asked in the plaint.

---

*F. A. 49 of 1928

Considerable argument was made as to the right of the plaintiff holding in lieu of maintenance against a decree-holder holding a decree against the defendant No. 2, who is undoubtedly the person entitled to hold the property in the plaint, because the defendant No. 2 was a member of a joint family with his father at the time of the death of his father. Argument was made in regard to cases where there was a charge of a widow against an estate and in regard to the nature of the rights of a widow where

CIVIL
1932
RAM KUNWAR
v.
AMAR NATH
Bennet, J.

a charge had not been made. Reference was made to Mulla's Hindu Law, 6th edition, page 577, paragraph 569 for the proposition that the claim of a Hindu widow for maintenance was not a charge, and that a charge would not arise until there was a decree of a court or an agreement between the widow and the holder of the estate, and therefore that the widow's claim to maintenance is liable to be defeated by a transfer of her husband's property to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the claim of the widow for maintenance. These propositions are also contained in Section 39 of the Transfer of Property Act. But we consider that the present case is clearly distinguishable on the facts from either a claim for maintenance or a charge. The present case is not one of charge, because the widow is in actual possession of the property in the plaint. And the rights of the widow amount to more than a claim for maintenance, because she has been placed in possession of the property in the plaint in lieu of her claim for maintenance. The question before us is can the decree-holder of a simple money decree against the rights of the joint Hindu family dispossess the widow who is in possession of a portion of the estate in lieu of her maintenance? We consider that this proposition should be answered in the negative. We hold that the widow has a right to hold this portion of the estate of which she is in possession in lieu of maintenance as long as she is entitled to maintenance as a Hindu widow. On her death or if she ceases to be entitled to maintenance as a Hindu widow the right to hold the estate would terminate. Subject to her right to hold the estate it is open to the decree-holder defendant No. 1 to bring this property to sale. Accordingly we modify the decree of the lower court and the decree which we grant to the plaintiff-appellant is a declaration that the property in suit may be sold but the purchaser is not entitled to possession during the period in which the plaintiff is entitled to maintenance as a Hindu widow and the plaintiff is entitled to hold the property in suit for that period. As neither party has succeeded in their suit in full, we consider that the correct order for costs is that each party shall pay their own costs throughout.

Decree modified

BRIJ LAL
versus EMPEROR*

CRIMINAL
1932
Jan. 11
BENNET, J

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 179—Offence under Sec. 409 I. P. C.—Complainant in Cawnpore—Goods sent to agent in Bengal for sale there—Money to be remitted to Cawnpore—Agent only accounted for part of price—Whether Cawnpore courts had jurisdiction.

Where a complainant in Cawnpore employed a commission agent in Bengal and sent goods to the agent for sale in Bengal, and the agent promised to send the money on receipt of the goods but only accounted for part of the price, held, that on the allegations jurisdiction lay in the criminal courts at Cawnpore to try the agent for an offence under Sec. 409 Penal Code. Queen-Empress v. O'Brien, I. L. R. 19 All. 111, Longridge v. Atkins, I. L. R. 35 All. 29, Emperor v. Mahadeo, I. L. R. 32 All. 397 relied on; Ganeshi Lal v. Nand Kishore, I. L. R. 34 All. 487 not followed.

*Cr. Rev. 681 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1932

BRIJ LAL
v.
EMPEROR

Bennet, J.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of BABU KALI DAS BANERJI, Additional Sessions Judge of Cawnpore.

Saila Nath Mukerji for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

BENNET, J.—This is an application in criminal revision by a complainant Brijlal of Cawnpore against an order of the Additional Sessions Judge of Cawnpore confirming the order of the Joint Magistrate of Cawnpore dismissing the complaint of Brijlal on the ground of want of jurisdiction in the Cawnpore courts. The complaint of Brijlal was made under Section 409 I. P. C. against an accused Hanuman Bakhsh. The complaint sets forth that Hanuman Bakhsh, who is the owner of a firm of Bhairon Bakhsh Mangi Lal, resides in Faridpur district in Bengal, and that the agent of the Cawnpore complainant, one Hoti Lal, appointed the accused as commission agent or arahtia for the sale of oil in the district of Faridpur, and that a consignment of oil was sent to the accused and that the accused had only accounted for part of the price. The Magistrate summoned the accused and the accused raised the plea that the Cawnpore criminal courts had no jurisdiction as the offence alleged would be an offence triable only by the courts of Faridpur. The Magistrate set forth certain facts, but he was not accurate in the facts which he set forth. He states in his judgment:

> Further the connection between the accused and the firm at Cawnpore is not direct.

Now two letters (one a copy and the other in original) have been produced by the complainant in this Court; one from the complainant to the accused was sent by post on a date corresponding to June 21, 1930. A copy of this letter states:

> No letter from you. Reply by return post. Our agent (gumashta) has appointed you our commission agent (arahatia). We are sending you, therefore, enclosed with this letter, railway receipt No. 001018 for one tank of Sarson oil which please receive and acknowledge. The mustard oil sent is of a fine quality. You should sell it at Rs.22-8-0 or at the lowest at Rs.22-4-0. Make best efforts in the work. Remit us Rs.7,000 on account of the railway receipt.

To this the accused is alleged to have sent a letter in reply which is produced in original:

> Received your registered letter yesterday with the railway receipt for a tank of oil. We shall write on receipt of the goods. The wagon, i.e., the tank has not arrived yet which please note We shall send the money on receipt of the consignment.

There is therefore a direct connection between the complainant and the accused as regards this tank of oil. The complainant sent the tank under a railway receipt which the complainant sent to the accused directly by registered post and the accused acknowledged the receipt of the railway receipt and promised to send the money to the complainant. Apparently the promise means that the money should be sent directly to the complainant at Cawnpore. These are the facts alleged by the complainant. I have set them forth, but of course I do not mean to imply that I consider these facts are proved. I only set them forth, because they constitute the allegations made on behalf of the complainant in this case. On these allegations it appears to me that the case is similar to several cases which have formed the subject of rulings of this Court—strangely enough cases which are also connected with Cawnpore. One of these cases is Q.-E. v. O'Brien[1], where the learned Chief Justice of this Court held that as loss occurred to the complainant at Cawnpore by the accused failing to send the price of goods sold on tour in Bengal to the complainant at Cawnpore, therefore the Cawnpore courts had jurisdiction to try the offence of Section 408 I. P. C. In that particular case there were no doubt other facts which are not existent in the present case, but learned Chief Justice based his judgment on the point that the loss was caused by the failure to remit money to Cawnpore. A case more similar to the present was reported in Longridge v. Atkins[2], and again the criterion taken for jurisdiction for criminal breach of trust is the failure to return profits to a complainant who was residing in Cawnpore. In that particular case there were two men who were residing in Cawnpore who went to Bombay and obtained a machine and apparently had a partnership in regard to this machine and one died in Bombay and the other took the machine on tour to Madras. His failure to return the machine to the widow of his partner in Cawnpore was held to be sufficient to give jurisdiction to the Cawnpore courts. In Emperor v. Mahadeo[3] there was a case similar to the present where a complainant in Mirzapur employed an agent in Bengal and sent goods to the agent who remitted money to Mirzapur. Failure to account for certain items involved a charge of criminal breach of trust and it was held that there was jurisdiction in the courts at Mirzapur. On the other hand there was a ruling in Ganeshi Lal v. Nand Kishore[4] to the contrary in a somewhat similar case. But the weight of authority is that there is jurisdiction in a case of this nature in the courts of the district to which the accused is alleged to be bound to make a remittance. Having regard to these various rulings, I consider that I should follow the weight of judicial decision in this Court, and accordingly I hold that, on the present allegations, jurisdiction lies in the criminal courts at Cawnpore. Accordingly I set aside the order of the Magistrate and the order of the Additional Sessions Judge and I direct that the Magistrate should dispose of this complaint according to law. The letter and copy produced by the complainant in this Court will be sent to the court of the Magistrate and also the translations. Notice has been served on the accused, but he did not appear.

---

[1] I. L. R. 19 All. 111

[2] I. L. R. 32 All. 397

[3] I. L. R. 35 All. 29

[4] I. L. R. 34 All. 487

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 12

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

BHAGWANT SINGH (Applicant)

versus

BHAO SINGH AND ANOTHER (Opposite parties)*

Legal Practitioner—Payment of fees—By execution of promissory note—Whether can be taxed as costs—General Rules, Chapter XXI, Rule 1—Actual payment necessary.

Where the certificate filed by a legal practitioner showed that cash had not been paid, but that a promissory note had been executed in his favour in lieu of the unpaid part of his fees, held, that payment of fees to a legal practitioner must be made in the manner laid down by General Rules, Chapter XXI, Rule 1 (applicable to subordinate courts), which contemplates actual payment, and if payment is not actually made but is only promised, it cannot be taxed as costs recoverable from the opposite party.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of ABDUL HALIM ESQ., District Judge of Budaun.

A. Sanyal for the applicant.

P. M. L. Verma for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision directed against an order passed by the learned District Judge of Budaun in proceedings taken by the present applicant for amendment of a decree passed by him, which decree was subsequently appealed from and affirmed by this Court.

The applicant was the plaintiff in the suit originally instituted in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Budaun. It was decreed ex parte. An application for an order to set aside the ex parte decree was dismissed by that court; but on appeal to this Court it was successful. The suit was, however, remanded not to the court of the Subordinate Judge, but to that of the District Judge for trial on the merits. It was eventually dismissed by the District Judge with costs. Included in the memo of costs appended to the decree prepared by the District Judge were two sums taxed as costs properly incurred by the plaintiff: one was a sum of Rs.735, paid to Babu Sheo Narain Jafa, senior vakil, and the other a sum of Rs.299 paid to B. Prem Mohan Lal, junior vakil. It is conceded that these sums were not paid to the aforesaid vakils in cash and that a promissory note was executed by Mst. Pania, wife and 'mukhtar-i-am' of one of the defendants, in favour of both the vakils. The certificates filed by the vakils themselves showed that cash had not been paid, but that a promissory note had been executed in their favour in lieu of the unpaid part of their fees.

The defendants, on whose behalf the above-named vakils appeared, were in jail at the time the certificates were filed. The lower court has mentioned in its judgment that the promissory note was executed with the permission of the then District Judge. The learned counsel for the applicant has controverted this fact and drawn our attention to an application, dated March 8, 1927, presented by B. Sheo Narain Jafa, in which he represented to the District Judge that his clients were in jail, that those who looked after the case on their behalf had paid only Rs.140 in respect of the fees due to the vakils who acted for them and that, if payment was not made, they would not file certificates and the defendants would, on the one hand, not be entitled to have the legal practitioners' fees taxed, and would, on the other hand, be liable to pay on a suit being brought by the legal practitioners for recovery of their fees. B. Sheo Narain Jafa requested the District Judge by this application to send for the defendants, who, as already stated, were in jail, so that they might execute promissory notes in favour of the vakils, who would, in that case, file certificates and the fees thus paid would be taxed as costs recoverable from the opposite party. The only order which the learned District Judge noted on this application was "permitted". Reading this order in the context in which it occurs, we think that what the learned District Judge meant was that the defendants be allowed to come to the court to settle matters with their vakils. We are not aware whether this was done; but it is certain that no promissory note was executed by the defendants themselves and it was Mst. Pania who did so. A promissory note was filed with the certificates in which the vakils acknowledged receipt of a certain amount as fees by obtaining execution of the promissory note. The promissory note bears an order of the District Judge that the same be retained with the record. In these circumstances, it is not correct to say that the promissory note executed in favour of the two vakils, which constituted the payment referred to in their certificates was executed with the permission of the District Judge, though he was aware of the circumstances and the manner in which payment had been made; but even assuming that the District Judge expressly permitted this mode of payment, the legal aspect of the matter is not different. Rule 1, Chapter XXI of the General Rules applicable to the subordinate courts distinctly provides that > in drawing up a decree or order no fee to any legal practitioner not appearing for the Crown or Government or the court of wards as a party shall be allowed on taxation between party and party or shall be included in any decree or order unless the Munsarim or, on application to the judge, the judge is satisfied that the fees was paid to such legal practitioner at or before the hearing of the suit and unless at or before such time there shall have been delivered to the munsarim a certificate signed by the legal practitioner certifying the amount of the fee or fees actually paid to him for his own actual use and benefit by or on behalf of his client.

---

*Civ. Rev. 566 of 1930

There can be no doubt that the rule quoted above contemplates actual payment, and not a mere promise to pay, even though such promise is evidenced by a promissory note, bond or any other instrument. The learned District Judge was apparently under the impression that there is no law which made payment to a legal practitioner in the manner adopted in this case as no payment for the purposes of taxation of costs. The rule already referred to by us has the force of law, and is clearly against the view accepted by the learned Judge.

We think that B. Sheo Narain Jafa did not correctly represent matters to the learned District Judge in stating that, if payments were made to the legal practitioners by promissory notes being executed in their favour, the same would be taxed as costs in the suit. Either he did not acquaint himself with the rules on the subject, or knew the rule quoted above and yet assured the District Judge that such costs could be taxed. In either case, his action was unjustified. He was apparently anxious to secure the pay-

CIVIL

1932

BHAGWANT SINGH
v.
BHAO SINGH

Niamat-ullah, J.

ments of fees to himself and his junior colleague by promissory notes being executed in their favour. The District Judge was not opposed to that mode of payment, as he had been given to understand that payments made in that manner would be taxed as costs incurred in the suit. Be that as it may, we entertain no doubt that the payment of fees to a legal practitioner must be made in the manner laid down by Rule 1, Chapter XXI, already referred to, and that, if payment is not actually made but is only promised, it cannot be taxed as part of the costs incurred by the party alleged to have made the payment. This being so, the sums of Rs.735, taxed as fee paid to B. Sheo Narain Jafa and Rs.299 taxed as fee paid to B. Prem Mohan Lal, should not have been taxed.

The learned advocate for the opposite party has contended that the lower court had no jurisdiction to order an amendment of its own decree, which became merged in the decree of this Court passed on appeal and that, therefore, the application for amendment of decree was incompetent. According to his contention, the application for amendment of decree must be made to the court of appeal, that is, to the High Court in this case. It is not necessary for us to decide the legal question involved in this contention, because assuming the application for amendment of the decree should have been made to this Court in the first instance, we can treat and are inclined to treat the application for revision as such application and dispose of the matter on the merits to prevent multiplicity of proceedings. We have already expressed our opinion on the merits, and whether we entertain the application as one for revision or as an original application made to this Court, our view is the same. There is no doubt that the District Judge who took a contrary view acted in contravention of Rule 1, Chapter XXI, and to that extent he exercised his jurisdiction illegally. If, therefore, we entertain the application as revision, the ground for interference under Section 115 C. P. C. clearly exists.

The learned counsel for the opposite party also contended that the applicant was guilty of laches and his belated application for amendment of decree should not have been entertained by the District Judge and should not be entertained by this Court. We do not think there is any force in this argument. It is the duty of a court to prepare its decree in accordance with its judgment, and if there is any variance between the two it must correct the decree so as to make it in conformity with the judgment. The duty primarily rests with the court, and not with any interested party, to apply to that Court for amendment of the decree. When a judgment awards costs to a party, it implies costs deemed to be such according to rules. If a decree includes costs not legally taxable, it cannot be said to be in accordance with the judgment. Moreover, there are no facts on which the plea of laches or undue delay can be founded.

In view of the circumstances already stated, we allow this application in part and direct that the decree of the court of the District Judge, Budaun, in suit No. 70 of 1925, be so amended as to exclude the sums of Rs.735 and Rs.299, shown as fees paid to the defendants' pleaders, namely. B. Sheo Narain Jafa and B. Prem Mohan Lal, from the memorandum of costs incurred by the defendants.

Another prayer, which the applicant made to this Court in revision, and to the learned District Judge in the first instance, was that a sum of

Civil 1932
Bhagwant Singh
v.
Bhao Singh
Niamat-ullah, J

Rs.450, paid to the legal practitioners in miscellaneous proceedings taken for an order to set aside the ex parte decree, should not be taxed in its entirety. Rs.225 was paid to the legal practitioners of each of two sets of defendants, whose defence proceeded on a common ground. The decree prepared by the trial court allows the entire sum of Rs.450 as part of the costs incurred by the defendants against whom the plaintiff-applicant's suit was dismissed. There is no mistake in the decree in this respect. The suit was dismissed with costs, which means costs incurred by all the defendants against whom the plaintiff's suit was dismissed. We are satisfied that the order passed by the learned District Judge in this connection is not open to challenge. The application is dismissed in that respect.

In the circumstances of this case, parties shall bear their own costs of the proceedings taken before this Court and those in the court of the District Judge by an application for amendment.

Application allowed in part

Civil
1932
Jan. 18
Pullan, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

AMIR HASAN KHAN (Defendant)
versus
MOHAMMAD NAZIR HASAN (Plaintiff)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 3—'Actionable claim'—Mohammedan widow's claim to unpaid dower debt—Whether amounts to—Mohammedan Law—Dower—Widow in possession of husband's property in lieu of dower debt—Transfers claim to debt and right to possession, to a legal practitioner—Legal practitioner does not in law acquire widow's right to dower (Sec. 136 T. P. Act)—Whether husband's heir can dispossess legal practitioner.

A Mohammedan widow entered into possession of her husband's property peacefully and without force or fraud in lieu of her dower debt. Later she executed a sale deed in favour of the present defendant-appellant, a legal practitioner, transferring her right to recover the dower debt and the right to remain in possession of the property till her dower was paid. Possession was obtained by the present defendant. Thereupon the present plaintiff-respondent, in whom the ownership of the property in possession of the defendant vested as the heir of the husband, instituted a suit for recovery of possession. Held, (1) that a Mohammedan widow's claim to unpaid dower debt is an actionable claim as now defined in Sec. 3 Transfer of Property Act, and the defendant being a legal practitioner was debarred under Sec. 136 T. P. Act from taking a transfer of such claim, (2) that the defendant, who had not in law acquired the widow's right to receive dower, was not entitled to retain possession as against the husband's heir who owned the property.

A Mohammedan widow in possession of her husband's property in lieu of dower, can sue for her dower and obtain a decree against the assets of her husband if her claim is not barred by limitation.

If the right to receive dower and the right to remain in possession of certain property in lieu of such dower are vested in the same person, by inheritance or transfer, he cannot be dispossessed by the heirs of the husband until the dower debt is satisfied. Ali Baksh v. Allahdad Khan, I. L. R. 32 All. 551.

---

*S. A. 1268 of 1929

CIVIL

1932

AMIR HASAN KHAN v. NAZIR HASAN

Niamatullah, J.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of M. F. P. HERCHENRODER ESQ., District Judge of Cawnpore, reversing a decree of BABU LAKSHMI NARAIN TANDON, Additional Subordinate Judge.

P. L. Banerji and M. A. Aziz for the appellant.

Zamirul Haq for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This second appeal has arisen out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for recovery of possession of a six anna share in village Bahrampur, district Fatehpur. The Subordinate Judge, in whose court the suit had been instituted, dismissed it; but on appeal by the plaintiff it was decreed by the District Judge.

Village Bahrampur above mentioned belonged to Saghir Hasan, husband of Kulsum Bibi, defendant No. 2, and Munshi Amir Hasan Khan, a vakil practising in Fatehpur, in equal shares. The two do not appear to belong to the same family, and the fact that they were co-sharers may be due to circumstances which are not material for the purposes of this case. Saghir Husain died in or about 1920, leaving his brother Nazir Husain, plaintiff-respondent, and Mst. Kulsum Bibi, defendant No. 2, as his heirs, the latter being entitled to one-fourth of Saghir Husain's property, and the former to the remaining three-fourths. The widow, however, entered into possession of the entire 8 anna share belonging to her husband, and obtained mutation of names, as owners to the extent of 2 annas (one-fourth), and in lieu of dower to the extent of 6 annas (three-fourths). The plaintiff contested her claim in the proceedings for mutation, but was unsuccessful. He acquiesced in the order of the revenue court upholding the widow's right to remain in possession of the plaintiff's share till her dower debt was paid. She executed on September 22, 1925, a deed of sale in favour of defendant No. 1 the validity of which is in question in the present case. The deed recites that a large sum of money was due to the executant, Mst. Kulsum Bibi, in respect of her unpaid dower debt, (the exact amount of which is not specified) and that she was in possession of six annas share in lieu thereof. The deed purports to convey the entire 8 anna share to the vendee in consideration of Rs.3,875, part of which was left with the vendee. The deed also purports to assign to the vendee the vendor's right to recover her dower debt and the right to remain in possession of 6 anna share until it is paid. Defendant No. 1 obtained possession of the entire 8 anna sold by the defendant No. 2.

The present suit was instituted on May 18, 1927 for recovery of possession of 6 anna share belonging to the plaintiff but previously held by the widow (defendant No. 2) in lieu of dower. The validity of the sale deed so far as it relates to 6 anna share belonging to the plaintiff is impugned on the ground that defendant No. 2 had no right to transfer her dower debt and her right to possession of 6 anna share to defendant No. 1. According to the plaintiff the dower of defendant No. 2 stipulated at the time of her marriage with Saghir Husain was no more than Rs.1,700. It was pleaded by defendant No. 1 in defence that the dower of defendant No. 2 agreed to by her husband was Rs.50,000, and that she was entitled to possession of her husband's share till the aforesaid amount was paid, which right she validly transferred to defendant No. 1.

CIVIL
1932
AMIR HASAN KHAN
v.
NAZIR HASAN
Niamat-ullah, J.

The trial court held that the dower of defendant No. 2, stipulated at her marriage with Saghir Husain, was Rs.50,000 and that she having transferred her right to receive dower as well as her right to retain possession of her husband's share in village Bahrampur in lieu of dower, the defendant No. 1 was entitled to remain in possession, the dower debt not having been paid by the plaintiff.

The learned District Judge took a contrary view in a well reasoned judgment holding that the widow's claim to dower is an actionable claim, as defined in the Transfer of Property Act, and that the defendant No. 1 being a legal practitioner was debarred from taking a transfer of such claim. Accordingly defendant No. 1 did not acquire the right to recover the dower debt and could not, for that reason, acquire an indefeasible right of possession of six anna share which was previously in the hands of the widow subject to the lien for her unpaid dower debt. As regards the amount of dower, the learned Judge held that the burden of proving the exact amount stipulated at the time of marriage lay on the widow, who failed to establish that it was Rs.50,000. He laid stress on the recital in the sale deed which did not specify the amount of dower but mentioned it generally as a large amount. Apparently the learned Judge was of opinion that the sum of Rs.50,000 alleged in the written statement was the result of an afterthought.

It was contended before us by the learned advocate for the defendant-appellant that the widow's right to recover her unpaid dower is not an actionable claim, as defined in the Transfer of Property Act. Reference was made to Shib Lal v. Azmatullah[1] and Aruna Chelliam Chetti v. Subramaniam Chetti[2]. In the first of these cases, which was decided by a Full Bench of this Court in 1896, it was held 'that the term "actionable claim" as used in Section 130 of Act IV of 1882, means a claim in respect of which a cause of action has already matured and which, subject to procedure, may be enforced by suit'. The debt in question in that case was due under a simple mortgage payable after a specified date. It was held that a mortgage debt, before it became payable, was not an actionable claim. The second case follows the first. In view of subsequent legislation, which materially altered the definition of "actionable claim" both the above cases have become obsolete in relation to transactions entered into after 1900, when the Transfer of Property Act was amended. An actionable claim is now defined to mean "a claim to any debt, other than a debt secured by mortgage of immovable property which the civil courts recognize as affording grounds for relief, whether such debt be existent, accruing, conditional or contingent". In the Act as it stood before the amendment, Section 130 defined "actionable claim" as "a claim which the civil court recognises as affording grounds for relief whether a suit for its enforcement is or is not actually pending or likely to become necessary." A comparison of the two definitions makes it clear to us that there was room for argument before the amendment that a debt in respect of which no cause of action had arisen and which was not payable at the date of assignment did not amount to an actionable claim. The amended definition has excluded secured debts from the category of actionable claims on the

[1] I. L. R. 18 All. 265

[2] I. L. R. 30 Mad. 235

Civil

1932

Amir Hasan Khan v. Nazir Hasan

Niamat-ullah, J.

one hand and included certain debts though they are 'accruing, conditional or contingent'. It is no longer possible to contend that a debt, which otherwise amounts to an actionable claim, is not such only because a cause of action in respect thereof has not arisen or the time for its payment has not arrived. Section 135 as it stood before the amendment and which was in question in Shib Lal v. Azmatullah[3] was repealed. It is not necessary to pursue this aspect of the case further, as we are satisfied that a claim to unpaid dower debt is an actionable claim as now defined in Section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act. This being so, and the defendant No. 1 being a legal practitioner, Section 136, Transfer of Property Act, is undoubtedly applicable. It forbids a legal practitioner among others to buy any actionable claim. The prohibition being absolute, any transfer in defiance of Section 136 is calculated to defeat its provisions and as such is void.

It was contended by the learned advocate for the appellant that the transaction evidenced by the deed dated September 22, 1925 should not be viewed as (1) an assignment of dower debt by Mst. Kulsum Bibi and (2) a transfer of her right to possession, taking the two separately, and that it amounted only to a transfer of the widow's right to possession in lieu of dower. The argument was that the claim to dower debt became merged in the widow's right to retain possession and had no separate existence as an assignable right. It was emphasised that the widow could not institute a suit for recovery of her dower and that her only remedy in respect of it was to remain in possession till she was paid off. We are unable to accede to this argument. A widow in possession of her husband's property, if she obtained it peacefully and without force or fraud, is entitled to retain it till her dower is paid. No exception can be taken to this statement of the law on the authorities of this Court. It implies the existence of the dower debt and the liability of the heirs to pay it before they can take possession of their shares. There is nothing to prevent a widow from instituting a suit for her dower for the purpose of obtaining a simple money decree against all the assets of her husband, including the property in her possession, at least by surrendering possession of such property in her hands. We refrain from deciding that she must in all cases surrender possession as a condition precedent to her obtaining a decree against the assets of her husband; but we entertain no doubt that she can sue for her dower, if she is so advised and obtain a decree against the assets of her husband, subject to her claim being unaffected by the law of limitation. The right of a Mohammedan widow, who has entered into possession of her husband's property peacefully and without force or fraud in lieu of her dower debt has been held by this Court to be heritable so as to entitle her heirs to remain in posesssion until the debt is satisfied. See Ali Bakhsh v. Allahdad Khan[4]. The possession of heirs who inherited not only her right to receive the dower but also her right to remain in possession is thus not open to question. It was also laid down in that case that a widow could transfer her right to possession, if she also assigned her right to receive the unpaid dower. One of the learned Judges observed that he knew of "no valid reason in law why she should not be entitled to transfer her debt together with her right to continue in possession". The heirs of the widow had, in that case, transferred part of their right to receive the dower and to possession of her hus-

---

[3] I. L. R. 18 All. 265

[4] I. L. R. 32 All. 551

CIVIL
1932
AMIR HASAN KHAN
v.
NAZIR HASAN
Niamat-ullah, J.

band's property to strangers, who were jointly in possession with them and were defendants in the suit brought by the heirs of the husband for possession. We are bound to follow the cases of this Court, even if we thought differently, but as already stated we take exactly the same view. If the right to receive dower and the right to remain in possession of certain property in lieu of such dower are vested in the same person, he cannot be ousted by the heirs of the husband. If however the widow transfers her right to possession of the property itself, without transferring her right to receive dower, the transferee cannot defend his right to possession as against the heirs quo the latter's share. The ownership being vested in the heir of the husband, the only person who can stand between him and what belongs to him is the person who is entitled to the dower and to possession of the property in lieu thereof. In the present case the defendant No. 1, who has not in law acquired the widow's right to receive dower, is not entitled to retain possession, which the widow could not transfer without validly transferring her right to receive the dower debt.

The result is that this appeal fails, and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

GIRDHARI LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
BISHUN CHAND THROUGH SRI RAM (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL
1932
Jan. 19
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

Limitation Act, Art. 64—'Account stated'—Meaning of—Bilateral account essential—Account must be stated within limitation—Burden of proof.

The expression "accounts stated" in Art. 64, Limitation Act, implies that there must be mutual demands on each side and the account must not be a unilateral but a bilateral account. In other words the Article contemplates an account stated by one party and an account stated by the other party, that is, two accounts and not merely an account stated by a single party.

Where the plaintiffs lent money to the defendants and the defendants merely made repayments of money which had been lent and had all along been debtors of the plaintiffs, and on a certain date the accounts were gone into and a sum of money found due to the plaintiffs, and the defendants acknowledged the said sum in the books of the plaintiffs, and within three years of the acknowledgment the plaintiffs sued the defendants for a certain sum of money as due on the acknowledgment, held, that the transactions were entirely unilateral, and there was no statement of a mutual account, and the case, therefore, did not come under Art. 64 Limitation Act.

For an account stated under Art. 64, Limitation Act, the account must be stated within the period of limitation, and it is necessary for the plaintiff to show that the acknowledgment is within the period of limitation.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU MAHESHWAR PRASAD, Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur.

S. K. Dar, Shiva Prasad Sinha, Badri Narain, Hazari Lal Kapoor, Ram Nivas Shukla and Newal Kishore Seth for the appellants.

K. N. Katju and Iqbal Ahmad for the respondent.

---

*F. A. 33 of 1928

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.—This is a first appeal by the defendants against a decree of the learned Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur decreeing the plaintiff's claim for a sum of Rs.18,467-9-0 together with costs and interest. The only question before us is one of limitation. The plaint set forth that the plaintiff's firm was a firm of money lenders and that it was agreed that the defendants should borrow money from the plaintiff's firm and interest would be payable on the loans at the rate of ten annas per cent per mensem and that entries should be made of the loans in the account books of the plaintiff. Paragraph 4 of the plaint set forth that on the date corresponding to September 26, 1925 the account as between the parties was adjusted and a sum of Rs.16,043-8-9 was found due to the plaintiff by the defendants. The defendants admitted and acknowledged the said sum of money to be due by them. The plaint then set out an acknowledgment in the books of the plaintiffs but we note that it is admitted by learned counsel on both sides that the translation at page 2 of the paper-book is inaccurate as it contains the words "by us" which are not in the vernacular in the original either of the plaint or of the account books. Paragraph 6 set out that, according to this agreement, a sum of Rs.17,347-1-0 was found due to the defendants on the date corresponding to October 15, 1926, and the defendants did not pay. The plaint therefore claimed a certain sum of money as due on the acknowledgment of September 26, 1925. The suit was brought on August 17, 1927, i.e., within three years of the acknowledgment. The written statement of the defendants pleaded that the defendants now and then took money from the plaintiff's firm and the defendants admitted that they signed the acknowledgment but denied that any account was made. The additional plea set forth that the defendants never advanced any sum of money to the plaintiff's firm as loan and that the defendants had neither taken any debt from the plaintiffs nor paid any sum of money to the plaintiffs within three years of the date of institution of the suit and that the suit was time-barred. The court of first instance held that the suit was within the period of limitation. On first appeal learned counsel for the plaintiffs supported the decree of the court of first instance on the ground that the acknowledgment would amount to an account stated under Article 64 of the Limitation Act, and argued that in the alternative it would come under Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act. The acknowledgment in question is contained in the books of the plaintiff which show the loans which have been taken by the defendants and the payment made by them. A correct translation is printed on page 15 of the paper-book and is as follows:—

> Balance due to be paid after adjusting the account up to Kunwar Sudi, 9. Rs.16,043-8-9.
>
> Signature of Girdhari Lal in autograph.
>
> Signature of Ram Charan Lal in autograph.

We may note that the account book shows that the vernacular words "baqi lenna rahe Miti Kunwar Sudi Naumi Sambat 1982 tain hisab karke rupaiya 16,043-8-9" are in the account book of the plaintiff's firm in the writing of a person who kept the account book. Below this entry there occur the following words written by a defendant and signed by the defendants and written across a one anna stamp: "baqi dena rahe Miti Kunwar Sudi Naumi Sambat 1982 tainhisab karke rupaiya 16,043-8-9." The signatures of the two defendants follow.

Now the questions which have been argued in regard to Article 64 of the Limitation Act are two: firstly, was there an account stated within the meaning of that Article and, secondly, whether there can be an account stated after the period of limitation has expired in regard to the transactions between the parties. The learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondents did not show us any satisfactory authority in support of his argument that this acknowledgment would amount to an account stated. He referred to the statement of the plaintiff in evidence on pages 7 and 8 of the paper-book which is to the effect that the plaintiff had sent a note of their accounts to the defendants and that the defendants had understood the account and had then written the acknowledgment. The defendants did not give evidence to contradict that, so we accept that statement as correct. But the point is whether the words "account stated" can be applied to a money lending transaction like the present where one party the plaintiffs lent money to the defendants and the defendants merely made repayments of money which had been lent. It has been shown by the evidence of the plaintiff that the defendants never sent to the firm of the plaintiff a sum which made the defendants creditors of the firm of the plaintiff. The defendants have all along been debtors of the firm of the plaintiff. The transactions, therefore, are entirely unilateral, and there is no statement of a mutual account. In Article 64 of the first schedule of the Limitation Act the statement is "accounts stated between them." The Article, therefore, contemplates an account stated by one party and an account stated by the other party, that is, two accounts and not merely an account stated by a single party. The Article, therefore, contemplates mutual accounts. We would refer for the meaning of this expression to the case of Laycock v. Pickles[1], where it is stated as follows:—

> There is a real account stated when several items of claim are brought into account on either side, and, being set against one another, a balance is struck, and the consideration for the payment of the balance is the discharge of the items on each side.

In Jamun v. Nand Lal[2] it was held that the striking of a balance in an account, the items of which are all on one side, does not amount to an "account stated." This ruling followed Nahanibai v. Nathu Bhau[3] and Tribhovn Gangaram v. Amina[4] on this point. In Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[5] it was laid down "An account stated" in the true sense is where several cross claims are brought into account on either side, and are set off against each other and a balance is struck It was held in Jamun v. Nand Lal[6] that Article 64 of the Limitation Act applied only to such an account stated, and not to a case like the present, where there were no demand to be set off against each other, but only debts on one side of the account and payments made by the debtor on the other. In Ganesh v. Mullu Mal Girdhas Das[7] a Bench of this Court held that the term "accounts stated" will not cover the going into accounts and the ascertaining of what

---

[1] Best and Smith's Q. B. R. Vol. IV, 497 at 506
[2] I. L. R. 15 All 1
[3] I. L. R. 7 Bom. 414
[4] I. L. R. 9 Bom. 516
[5] I. L. R. 23 All. 502 at 503
[6] I. L. R. 15 All. 1
[7] 1931 A. L. R. All. 375

CIVIL

1932

GIRDHARI LAL
v.
BISHUN CHAND

Bennet, J.

is due to the plaintiff from the defendant. We may also refer to Deoraj Tewari v. Indrasan Tewari[8] where it was held that the certain chithas were not in any sense an account stated for want of mutuality. Against this array of authorities learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondents referred to Manjunatha Kamti v. Devamma alias Gomathiamma[9] where it was held that reciprocal demands were not necessary for Article 64. In that case which was very briefly reported there was an account between the partners in a shop for the profits of the shop, and it was not a case of a money lending transaction between a creditor and a debtor. No authority was shown to us in which any Court had followed this ruling in I. L. R. 26 Madras, page 186. Reference was made by learned counsel for plaintiffs to Sarifun Mandalin v. Feradoul Khatun[10] where the court held that the case did not come under Article 64, but an observation was made that in two cases of the Calcutta High Court it had been held that for Article 64 it was not necessary to have reciprocal demands. The Court however stated that it was not going to express any opinion as to whether reciprocal demands were necessary or not for Article 64. As the Court did not state what were the cases in which the proposition advanced by the learned counsel for the plaintiffs was held, this ruling does not help him in the least. Reference was also made to Kahan Chand-dula Ram v. Daya Ram Amrit Lal[11] in which it was held that there was an account stated on the facts of that case where there was some loss from cotton seed. It was further stated:

> Now, the three expressions, 'balance due', "account adjusted" and 'balance struck' mean that the plaintiffs and the defendants went through the account. The defendant accepted the statement of account contained in plaintiffs' books and made it his own by signing in the way he did. This, in our opinion, fulfils all the necessary requirements of the words 'account stated between them'.

If this paragraph in the judgment is intended to state that Article 64 will apply to a case where there is only an account on one side and not on both sides, we respectfully differ from that opinion. In our opinion the expression "accounts stated" implies that there must be mutual demands on each side and the account must not be a unilateral but a bilateral account. We consider that the definition given in Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[12] is correct and that the weight of authority supports that proposition. Accordingly we consider that the present case cannot come under Article 64, because there was no account stated between the parties.

It is perhaps unnecessary to go into the further question that the memorandum would be beyond the period of limitation and that for an account stated under Article 64 the account must be stated within the period of limitation. Supposing, for instance, a period of fifty years elapsed between the last transaction in question and the statement of the account, we are of opinion that an interval of this nature or any interval beyond the period of limitation may render the account stated useless for the purposes of saving limitation.

The next point which was advanced by learned counsel for the plaintiff-respondent was that his case would come under Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act. Section 25 lays down in Sub-section (3):

---

[8] I. L. R. 8 Pat. 706 at 709

[9] I. L. R. 26 Mad. 186

[10] A. I. R. 1923, Cal. 578

[11] I. L. R. 10 Lah. 745

[12] I. L. R. 23 All. 502 at 503

> An agreement made without consideration is void, unless it is a promise, made in writing and signed by the person charged therewith, or by his agent generally or specially authorised in that behalf to pay wholly or in part a debt of which creditor might have enforced payment but for the law for the limitation of suits.

That is, a promise to pay a time-barred debt is valid if it is made in writing and signed by the person to be charged therewith. We may observe that the plaint set forth that there were transactions between the parties, and it is established by evidence that the last transaction by way of loan to the defendants from the plaintiffs took place more than three years before the acknowledgment of September 26, 1925, i.e., on August 9, 1921 the defendants borrowed Rs.1,000 from the plaintiff. That is the last transaction which is proved to have taken place between the parties. It is proved in fact that the amount of the debt on October 10, 1921 was Rs.17,057-11-3 and it was reduced on September 26, 1925 to Rs.16,043-8-9 and this implies that certain payments must have been made by the debtor in this interval of four years, but there is no evidence to show whether those payments were made within a period of three years from September 26, 1925 or not. It is also possible that some portion of the claim might have been remitted by the plaintiff. The learned counsel for plaintiff argued that as neither side had given evidence on this point, the burden of proof to show that the acknowledgment was beyond the period of limitation lay on the defendants. But we consider that the onus of proof lay on the plaintiff to show that his case came within the period of limitation on account of this acknowledgment and, therefore, that it was necessary for the plaintiffs to establish that this acknowledgment came within the period of limitation. Another reason why we consider that the burden of proof lay on the plaintiffs is that under Order VII, Rule 6 Civil Procedure Code where a suit is instituted after the expiration of the period prescribed by the law of limitation, the plaintiff shall show the ground upon which exemption from such law is claimed.

We now turn to the question of Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act. The argument centered round the question of firstly whether an express promise is necessary for that section or an implied promise is sufficient. The learned counsel for the defendant-appellants relied on Ganga Prasad v. Ram Dayal[13], Gobind Das v. Sarju Das[14], Raj Narain Rao v. Ram Sarup[15], Allah Bakhsh v. Hamid Khan[16] and Ganesh v. Mallu Mal Girdhas Das[17] for the proposition that it was necessary to show an express promise to pay for Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, and a mere acknowledgment of liability, will not be sufficient. This doctrine of the Allahabad High Court has been followed in Deoraj Tewari v. Indrasan Tewari[18] and Magan Lal Harjibhai v. Amichand Gulabji[19] and Ramaswami Pillai v. Kuppuswami Pillai[20] and Sasi Kanta Achabji Chowdhury v. Sonaulla Munshi[21]. On the other hand, learned counsel for the plaintiff could only advance the ruling of Kahan Chand-dula Ram v. Daya Ram Amrit Lal[22] where it was held that an unconditional acknowledgment implied a pro-

[13] I. L. R. 23 All. 502

[14] I. L. R. 30 All. 268

[15] I. L. R. 52 All. 480

[16] 1931 A. L. J. R. 56

[17] 1931 A. I. R. All. 375

[18] I. L. R. 8 Pat. 706

[19] I. L. R. 52 Bom. 521

[20] 20 Mad. L. J. 656

[21] 33 Cal. W. N. 965

[22] I. L. R. 10 Lah. 745

mise to pay. We consider that the weight of authority is undoubtedly in favour of the doctrine advanced by the defendants, and we hold that it is necessary to show an express promise to pay in order that Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act should be applied. If the argument of the learned counsel for the plaintiff were correct and an implied promise were sufficient for Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act, then any acknowledgment could be used under Section 19 of the Limitation Act if the acknowledgment were made within the period of limitation and, if the acknowledgment were made beyond the period of limitation, then it could be used under Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act. If this were so, then the criterion in Section 19 of the Limitation Act that the acknowledgment must be made within the period of limitation would be useless.

We may note that it was admitted that Section 19 of the Limitation Act would not apply to the present case, because the period of limitation had expired before the acknowledgment in question was made.

Some further argument was made on the basis of a statement in a judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Maniram Seth v. Seth Rup Chand[23] which was as follows:—

> An unconditional acknowledgment has always been held to imply a promise to pay because that is the natural inference, if nothing is said to the contrary. It is what every honest man would mean to do.

We follow Gobind Das v. Sarju Das[24] in holding that as the acknowledgment before their Lordships of the Privy Council was held to come under Section 19 of the Indian Limitation Act, these words apply to an acknowledgment under that Act and are not intended to apply to Section 25 of the Indian Contract Act.

Further argument was made by learned counsel for the plaintiff to the effect that there was in the present case an express promise to pay. We consider that there is nothing whatever in the words of the memorandum to support such an argument, and we consider that the words "express promise" mean that there should be some such words as "I promise to pay". There is no such expression at all and we consider that the argument is unsound.

For the reasons stated, we consider that the case for the plaintiff is brought beyond the period of limitation. Accordingly we allow this appeal and set aside the decree of the lower court, and we dismiss the suit of the plaintiff with costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

[23] I. L. R. 33 Cal. 1047

[24] I. L. R. 30 All. 268 at 270

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 19

MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

SITA RAM AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
RECEIVER OF THE ESTATE OF RAM PRASAD, INSOLVENT AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Provincial Insolvency Act, Sec. 28(2)—Hindu father declared insolvent—Untainted debts—Whether receiver can dispossess sons from property available for payment of father's debts—Rights of receiver.

Where property in the hands of Hindu sons can be made available for payment of the father's debts, the receiver of the father is entitled to attach and sell the property, but he has no right to dispossess the son of the insolvent from the property in their possession. In the reported cases, sometime the word 'seize' has been used and sometime the word 'attach' but they have been indifferently used to express the same idea. Anand Prakash v. Narain Das Dori Lal, 1931 A. L. J. R. 122 explained.

SECOND APPEAL from an order of G. O. ALLEN ESQ., District Judge of Agra.

B. Malik for the appellants.

The respondents were not represented.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal under Section 75 of the Provincial Insolvency Act from an appellate order of the District Judge of Agra dated December 15, 1930, confirming an order of the Judge of Small Causes, dated March 21, 1930, in certain proceedings relating to one Ram Prasad insolvent.

One Girdhari Lal had four sons, two of whom are Basanti Lal and Shambhunath. The names of the two others cannot be gathered from the papers before us. Basanti Lal died in the lifetime of Girdhari Lal leaving a son Ram Prasad.

On October 13, 1913, Ram Prasad applied that he should be adjudicated an insolvent. He was so adjudicated on May 18, 1914. Babu Jado Rai, who is an advocate of this Court practising at Agra, was appointed a receiver on June 3, 1914.

The receiver took certain steps to take possession of some property in the possession of Girdhari Lal on the averment that it was joint ancestral property and that the insolvent had a share therein. This was opposed by Girdhari Lal on the ground that the entire property in his hand was his self-acquired property. This contention was upheld by the court on September 10, 1915.

Girdhari Lal died. The receiver claimed that the insolvent had inherited a one-fourth share in the estate of Girdhari Lal. Shambhu Nath and his two brothers (names unknown) repudiated the title of the insolvent and claimed the entire estate left by Girdhari Lal under a will executed by him. The insolvency court on November 12, 1917 held the will to be genuine and decided the matter against the receiver.

Sita Ram and Tulsi Ram, the two minor sons of the insolvent, brought a suit for partition of their alleged share in the estate of Girdhari Lal. This

---

*S. A. F. O. 6 of 1931

CIVIL
1932
SITA RAM
v.
RECEIVER
OF THE
ESTATE OF RAM
PRASAD
Sen, J.

suit was registered as suit No. 292 of 1921 and was directed against Shambhu Nath and his two brothers. The minors obtained a preliminary decree for partition on June 29, 1923. This decree appears to have been superseded by a compromise between the parties by which the defendants appear to have bought out the plaintiffs and the plaintiffs received from the defendants a house in haveli Bahadur Khan in Mohalla Belanganj in the city of Agra and Rs.8,000 in cash.

One of the scheduled creditors, named Beni Prasad, applied to the insolvency court to attach this house. This application was dismissed on September 24, 1923. On appeal, the learned District Judge by his order dated February 18, 1924 reversed the decision of the trial court and made the following order:—

> The receiver shall take possession of and distribute amongst the creditors the entire share of the one-sixth of the property of Girdhari Lal, etc.

The sons appealed to this Court. The appeal was heard by Walsh, A. C. J. and Dalal, J. Their judgment is reported in Sita Ram v. Beni Prasad[1]. It was held that the point at issue in the case was whether a Hindu father was entitled or not to property obtained by his sons on a division of joint ancestral property when he desired to satisfy his debts out of the proceeds of such property. This issue was answered in favour of the receiver and the following propositions were enunciated:—

> As soon as the sons received joint family property at partition, the right became vested in the receiver of taking their property to pay a Hindu father's debt. The receiver did not become entitled to this right subsequent to the partition.

It was therefore ruled that the property sought to be attached by Beni Prasad was liable for the debts due from the insolvent but the sons of the insolvent were entitled to prove the immorality of the debts. As a sequence, this Court modified the order of the District Judge dated February 18, 1924 and remanded the case under Order 41, Rule 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

On remand, the sons challenged the debts on the ground that the debts were not genuine. As the result of this objection, the insolvency court decided that the bulk of the debts was fictitious and that the sons were liable for only two debts amounting to Rs.210 and Rs.200 respectively. There was an appeal from this order and the learned District Judge held that it was not within the scope of the enquiry of the insolvency court as the result of the order of remand passed by the High Court to go into the question of the genuineness of the debts. The learned District Judge held that the debts included in the Schedule could be impugned by the sons on only one ground, namely, that they were tainted with immorality. There was a further appeal to this Court and the view of the learned District Judge was upheld.

Ram Prasad insolvent died on September 15, 1929.

On February 13, 1930 an application was presented by the receiver setting out in detail the facts which we have set out above. In Paragraph 5 of this petition we find the following statement:—

> The receiver applied to the insolvency court for orders for taking property in his possession under attachment. This application was resisted > and the application was dismissed holding that in the insolvency proceedings, the minor sons of the insolvent could not be ejected and the receiver be put in possession.

---

[1] I. L. R. 47 All. 263=22 A. L. J. R. 1097

The petition of the receiver referred to here has not been placed before us. The order of the insolvency court directing the dismissal of the petition on the ground that the minor sons could not be dispossessed by the receiver has not been placed before us. If there is such an order in existence and the petition does not state that such an order has been displaced on appeal, it is not within the competence of the receiver to make a second petition against the sons of the insolvent for the grant of the identical relief.

The petition dated February 13, 1930 with which we are now concerned does not ask for the sons of the insolvent being ejected from the property and the receiver being put into possession. In the sixth paragraph, the receiver states that there was once a sale of the attached house, that the bid of Mohan Lal creditor was for Rs.14,000, that this sale proved infructuous, that the property was again put to sale and that no one came forward to purchase it as the purchaser could not get immediate possession over the property. The relief claimed was in these terms:—

> Under the circumstances, I would request your honour to ask the scheduled creditors to bid over the house in question and the house should be knocked down to the highest bidder, or to pass such other order as the court considers reasonable and proper.

This petition was resisted by the insolvents' sons upon a variety of grounds including the ground that they were not liable to ejectment. Many of the pleas raised by them were not open to them by reason of previous orders against them which had the force of res judicata. Mr. Sayed Uddin disposed of the case by a most perfunctory judgment consisting of the following lines:—

> There is no force in the objection of the minors. The receiver should take possession of the property and after proper advertisements and notification should sell the same. The receiver may take the help of the police, if necessary. Locks, if any, may be broken open.

We are of opinion that the order was not reasonable and proper. In the first place, the receiver had not asked for the ejectment of the minors and for being put into possession of the property. In the second place, if the statement of facts embodied in Paragraph 5 of the petition are correct, such a relief would not be open to the receiver if such relief had once been claimed by the receiver before and refused by the court.

The order of Mr. Syed Uddin was affirmed by the District Judge. The judgment proceeded upon a ground which is perfectly intelligible to us although it may be erroneous. The learned Judge seemed to be of opinion that his predecessor by an order dated February 18, 1924 had directed the receiver to take possession of the property in question and that this order had been modified by the High Court but not set aside. We are of opinion that the learned District Judge had not been able to appreciate the nature and scope of the order of the High Court. We cannot enter into any question as regards the legality of the order of the High Court in the case reported in Sita Ram v. Beni Prasad[2]. If the matter were res integra, we might have held that where on a compromise the sons of an

---

[2] I. L. R. 47 All. 263=22 A. L. J. R. 1097

CIVIL

1932

SITA RAM
v.
RECEIVER
OF THE ESTATE OF RAM
PRASAD

Sen, J.

insolvent received property from certain persons who are the owners of the property under a will from their father, such property cannot be treated as the joint family property held by them (the sons of the insolvent) in co-parcenary with their father. We have already indicated we cannot enter into the question. The matter is concluded against the minors by previous judgments which are inter partes. But we have no doubt in our mind that the High Court by the judgment in the reported case did in substance though not in form supersede the order of the learned District Judge dated February 18, 1924. In modifying the order it did not intend to confirm and as a matter of fact did not adopt the order of that court authorising the receiver to take possession of the property. No question could arise as to the right of the receiver to seize the property so long as the question had not been settled as to whether the debts were enforceable against the sons. The High Court directed that as this had not been determined, the case must go back and the question determined. The question of the receiver's power to proceed in execution could not arise till that matter was disposed of. Under the insolvency law, the receiver is entitled under certain circumstances to seize or attach the property belonging to the insolvent. In the case of Anand Prakash v. Narain Das Dori Lal[3] one of the questions referred to the Full Bench was, whether it is open to the receiver in insolvency to seize the sons' share and sell it in order to satisfy the debts payable by the father, etc.? The question was answered in the affirmative and it was held that the receiver could attach and sell the joint family property so as to bind the sons. In the reported cases, sometime the word "seize" has been used and sometimes the word "attach". We are of opinion that they have been indifferently used to express the same idea. Where property in the hands of the sons can be made available for payment of the father's debts, the receiver is entitled to have recourse to the usual processes of law, namely, to attach and sell the property. Attachment does not create an interest in the property attached. It has the effect of invalidating alienations in conflict with the interest of the auction purchaser. There is nothing in the scheme of the Insolvency Act authorising the receiver to eject the sons of the insolvent from the property in their possession. The property of the sons is not the property of the insolvent. The right of the receiver to enforce the payment of the debts by reason of the pious obligation of the Hindu sons is not property which vests in the receiver under Section 28 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Looked at from every possible angle, the receiver has no right to dispossess the sons of the insolvent from the property, and his right is restricted to attach and sell the property.

In the result, we allow the appeal and set aside the orders of both the courts below with costs. The case must go back to the trial court for the disposal of the application, dated February 13, 1930 after receiver has more clearly defined the exact nature of the relief claimed by him.

Appeal allowed

[3] 1931 A. L. J. R. 122

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 21

PULLAN, J

NIAMATULLAH, J.

FATIMA BEGAM AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
BANSIDHAR (Plaintiff) AND JAFRI BEGAM AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 91 (f)—Simple money decree-holder attaches property subject to mortgage—Suit for sale on mortgage—Attaching creditor not made party—During pendency of mortgage suit attaching creditor purchases property in execution of his decree and obtains possession—Subsequent purchase by mortgagee in execution of his decree—Suit for possession by mortgagee—Whether attaching creditor's right to redeem subsists.

The defendant, who held a simple money decree, attached the property of his debtor, which was subject to a mortgage. After this attachment the mortgagee brought a suit for sale in which he did not make the attaching creditor a party. At the auction sale in execution of the simple money decree (which took place during the pendency of the mortgage suit) the defendant himself purchased the attached property and obtained possession. Subsequently a decree for sale was passed in the mortgage suit, and the mortgagee himself purchased the mortgaged property, and took out formal delivery of possession, but the revenue court refused to order mutation of names in his favour. Consequently the mortgagee brought the present suit for possession in the civil court; held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for possession subject to the defendant's right to redeem on payment of the amount due to the plaintiff on his mortgage, and this right was not lost when the sale in pursuance of the attachment took place during the pendency of the mortgage suit.

Ghulam Husain v. Dina Nath, I. L. R. 23 All. 467 and Ram Prasad v. Bhikhari Das, I. L. R. 26 All. 464 followed; Subramania Chettiar v. Sunnammal, I. L. R. 53 Mad. 881 (F.B.) not followed.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. ALLSOP ESQ., District Judge of Aligarh, reversing a decree of BABU PIAREY LAL GOVIL, Munsif of Havali.

A. M. Khwaja for the appellants.

Panna Lal for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This second appeal has arisen out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for recovery of possession of certain properties, specified at the foot of the plaint. The first court dismissed the suit; but the lower appellate court decreed the plaintiff's claim in full. Some of the defendants have appealed to this Court.

The facts of the case are no longer in controversy. The property in dispute belonged to one Chiranji and Mst. Dharman, who executed a deed of simple mortgage in favour of the plaintiff's predecessor in interest (hereinafter referred to as plaintiff). The plaintiff appellants' predecessor-in-title (hereinafter referred to as defendant) held a simple money decree against the aforesaid mortgagors and had the mortgaged property now in suit attached in execution of their decree shortly before the mortgagee instituted his suit for sale on foot of his mortgage. The sale in execution of the simple money decree in favour of the defendants was not made till after the institution of such suit. The holder of the simple money decree himself purchased at the auction and obtained possession of the property now in dispute. Subsequently a decree for sale was passed in favour of the plaintiff. The mortgaged property (the property now in dispute) was sold and purchased by the mortgagee himself, who took out formal delivery of possession but was opposed in the revenue court on applying for mutation of names by the defendant, who had purchased it in execution of a simple money decree. Mutation of names was refused to the plaintiff. Accordingly, he brought the suit which has given rise to this appeal for recovery of possession.

---

*S. A. 984 of 1929

The only defence, which it is necessary to mention for the purposes of this appeal, was that the plaintiff is not entitled in any case to an unconditional decree, that the defendant-appellants are entitled to redeem, and that only on their failure to exercise such right of redemption should the plaintiff be given a decree for possession. The learned District Judge overruled this defence. The only question argued in second appeal is that the defendant being an attaching creditor had a right to redeem the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff, that the defendant should have been made a party to the plaintiff's suit on foot of the mortgage and that he, not having been impleaded and afforded an opportunity to exercise his right of redemption, is entitled to redeem now. Subject to the defendant's right of redemption, the plaintiff's right to possession has not been disputed by the learned counsel for the appellant. The auction sale at which the defendant purchased the property in dispute in execution of his simple money decree took place during the pendency of the plaintiff's suit on foot of his mortgage. Thus the defendant's right under the auction sale was affected by the rule of lis pendens and was therefore subject to the plaintiff's right under the decree for sale. In this view, the plaintiff's right to possession, subject to the defendant's right to redeem, if he has any, cannot be disputed.

The important question for determination is whether the defendant has a right of redemption on the facts already stated. There can be no doubt that, under S. 91 (f), Transfer of Property Act, as it stood before the amendment of 1929, an attaching creditor among others has a right to redeem the property under attachment. Under O. 34, R. 1, C. P. C. all persons having a right to redeem should be made parties to a suit brought by a mortgagee for sale of the mortgaged property. It follows that the defendant had a right to redeem the mortgage in favour of the plaintiff and that he should have been made a party to the plaintiff's suit on his mortgage.

The next question is whether the defendant, not having been made a party, can now exercise the right of redemption, which he undoubtedly had when the mortgagee's suit was brought. The learned District Judge has held that an attaching creditor, such as the defendant was, has a right to redeem; but such right is extinguished when a sale in pursuance of the attachment takes place. According to this view, the defendant lost his right of redemption when he purchased the property during the pendency of the plaintiff's suit. There can be no doubt that this view makes the attaching creditor's right of redemption in a large number of cases, liable to be defeated with impunity by a mortgagee, because if the attaching cre-

Civil

1932

Fatima Begam v. Bansidhar

Niamat-ullah, J.

ditor is not made a party and the property is allowed to be sold in execution of the simple money decree, the sale itself being pendente lite can give no right to the auction purchaser against the auction purchaser in the mortgagee's suit and the right of redemption is ex hypothesi lost in consequence of such auction sale. The logical result of the view has been taken in a Full Bench case decided by the Madras High Court in Subramania Chettiar v. Sunnammal[1], which merely gives effect to two earlier cases of that Court, namely, Veyindramuthu Pillai v. Maya Nadan[2] and Chamiyappa Tharagan v. Rama Ayyar[3]. On the other hand, a contrary view has been taken by this Court in Ghulam Husain v. Dina Nath[4] and Ram Prasad v. Bhikari Das[5]. Both these cases appear to be on all fours with the present one, though the head note of the second case is misleading and shows that the sale in execution of the simple money decree had taken place before the institution of the mortgage suit. This, however, is not correct, and as would appear from the body of the judgment such sale was held during the pendency of the mortgage suit. In both of these cases the right of the attaching creditor to redeem the mortgage was deemed subsisting after the sale in execution of the simple money decree and when there was a conflict between the auction-purchser in the mortgage suit and the auction-purchaser in execution of the simple money decree, both claiming the right to possession of the property. It was clearly held that the auction-purchaser in execution of the simple money decree could redeem. The ratio decidendi adopted in both of them is well stated in Ram Prasad v. Bhikari Das[6] in the following dictum:—

> The respondents (auction purchasers in the simple money decree) are entitled to redeem. But they are not entitled to anything further by reason of the fact that the plaintiff in that suit omitted to implead them as defendants. The omission to implead them can neither improve their position nor the reverse. The plaintiff appellant, who purchased the property at a court sale, in a suit in which the mortgagee Nath Mal was the plaintiff and the mortgagor was the defendant, purchased the property, that is, whatever rights the mortgagor and mortgagee then possessed, subject to the infirmity that the present respondents had not been impleaded, and consequently he must suffer by reason of the neglect of the plaintiff to implead the respondents. He did not get a clear title to the property, but he got all the title which Nath Mal and the mortgagor could give, and that was a title subject to the equity which the respondents had of redeeming Nath Mal's mortgage and preserving the property for themselves. That right will still be secured to them.

The case of Ghulam Husain v. Dina Nath[7] was followed in Venkata Seetharamyya v. Venkataramyya[8] which was disapproved in Parameswara Aiyar v. Land Acquisition Collector, Palghat[9]. To that extent there is difference of opinion among the learned Judges of the Madras High Court on this point. We are bound to follow the rulings of this Court which were not referred to before the learned District Judge, otherwise we have no doubt his decision would have been different.

[1] I. L. R. 53 Mad. 881

[2] I. L. R. 43 Mad. 696

[3] I. L. R. 44 Mad. 232

[4] I L. R. 23 All. 467

[5] I. L. R. 26 All. 464

[6] I. L. R. 26 All. 464 at 477

[7] I L. R. 23 All. 467

[8] I L. R. 37 Mad. 418

[9] I. L. R. 42 Mad. 232

The result is that the plaintiff-respondent is entitled to possession of the property in dispute as against the defendant-appellants. This right, however, is so far qualified that the defendants are entitled to be placed in the position they would have been in if they had been impleaded by the plaintiff in the mortgage suit, that is, they would have had a right to redeem within the period of six months fixed by the preliminary decree. The proper order in this case, therefore, is that the defendants should be given the opportunity to redeem the mortgage within six months from the date on which the court of first instance will declare the amount due to the plaintiff on his mortgage, which the defendants must pay if they desire to redeem and if they fail to redeem within such time, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover possession of the property in dispute. If they redeem within that period, the plaintiff's suit shall stand dismissed. Accordingly, we allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower appellate court and also that of the court of first instance, which dismissed the plaintiff's suit in toto, and pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff respondent in the above terms. Our decree should be considered to be a preliminary decree. We remand the case to the court of first instance to ascertain and declare the amount payable by the defendants for redemption of the mortgage in question and to pass a final decree dismissing or decreeing the plaintiff's suit according as the defendants redeem or fail to redeem by payment of the amount declared by the court within the period of six months, as already stated. The costs here and hitherto incurred by the parties shall abide the result to be embodied in the final decree which the court of first instance will eventually pass.

Appeal allowed
Case remanded

PRIVY COUNCIL

KADIYALA VENKATA SUBAMMA AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
KATREDDI RAMAYYA, SINCE DECEASED, AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 12

VISCOUNT DUNEDIN
SIR LANCELOT SANDERSON
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), Secs. 4 and 90 (=Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Secs. 211 (1) and 307)—Executor—Not clothed with probate—Estate vests from date of testator's death—Vesting under Sec. 4 or power of disposal under Sec. 90—Not dependent upon grant of probate.

In case of Hindu wills to which the Hindu Wills Act does not apply, the estate vests in the executor (who accepts office) from the date of the testator's death, even though probate has not been obtained, and he is competent to deal with the testator's property. Fatima v. Shaik Essa, I. L. R. 7 Bom. 266 overruled.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Madras.

E. B. Raikes, K.C., K. V. L. Narasimham and Lakshmanne Rao for the appellants.

P. V. Subba Row for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir George Lowndes

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—The appellants are beneficiaries under the will of one Madduru Venkata Subanna, who died on January 5, 1917. He was a Hindu residing at Pedakapavaram, in the Kistna District of Madras. The respondent, Madduri Gangamma, is his widow, and was appointed (as is now admitted) executrix according to the tenor of the will, but has not obtained probate. The other respondents are a minor son, adopted by the widow, and various persons interested in the properties of the testator under alienations made by the widow purporting to act as his executrix.

The suit out of which the appeal arises was instituted by the appellants to enforce their right to particular parcels of land which they alleged had been allotted to their shares under a family arrangement made shortly after the testator's death, or in the alternative for partition of the estate without regard to the alienations which, it was contended, the executrix had, in the absence of probate, no power to make, and which were further charged as fraudulent.

The trial Judge held against the appellants as to the family arrangement, and this is no longer in dispute. He was of opinion, however, that the alienations were incompetent, and he accordingly passed a preliminary decree in the appellants' favour, declaring the rights of the parties, and appointing a Commissioner to carry out the partition and to assess mesne profits. The Commissioner duly reported to the Judge, and eventually a final decree was made.

Appeals and cross-objections were filed against both these decrees by some of the respondents, and on the hearing in the High Court the following question, upon which the decision of the appeals turned, was referred to a Full Bench, viz.:—

---

*P. C. A. 95 of 1929

> Whether an executor appointed by a will made in the muffassal of the Presidency has vested in him the estate of a testator and has all the powers of an executor as set out in the Probate and Administration Act, even though such executor does not obtain probate of the Will, or whether his powers, unless he obtains probate, are only those of a mere manager as held in respect of executors previous to the Probate and Administration Act.

The reference was heard by the Chief Justice and two puisne Judges, who recorded their opinion that—

> In case of Hindu wills to which the Hindu Wills Act does not apply the estate vests in the executor (who accepts office) from the date of the testator's death, and that the provisions of the Probate and Administration Act are applicable, even though probate has not been obtained.

The appeals then came on again before the referring Judges who by their order of December 9, 1925, set aside the decrees of the trial Judge and remanded the suit for disposal on the basis of their judgment, with directions to try the question of the bona fides of the widow's alienations, and for that purpose to ascertain what debts were outstanding at the death of the testator.

From this order of remand the appellants have brought their appeal to His Majesty in Council, and the sole matter for the consideration of the Board is whether the judgment of the Full Bench, upon which the order under appeal rests, should be upheld.

The Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870) has no application to the present case, but the greater part of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) applies to the wills of Hindus generally, and it is upon the terms of this Act that the result of the appeal turns.

The authorities have been discussed at length by Kumaraswami Shastri, J., who delivered the judgment of the Full Bench, and their Lordships think that nothing can be added by them to his careful examination of the case law on this subject. They will, however, refer later on to two decisions of the Board which have been relied upon by the appellants.

There has been a divergence of opinion between the High Courts of Madras and Bombay on the one hand, and of Calcutta on the other. It is the view of the former that has now prevailed, and their Lordships think that it is undoubtedly the right one.

The provisions of the Act directly in point are the first part of Section 4 and Sub-sections (1) and (2) of Section 90, which run as follows:—

> Section 4. The executor or administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person is his legal representative for all purposes, and all the property of the deceased person vests in him as such.
>
> Section 90. (1) An executor or administrator has, subject to the provisions of this section, power to dispose, as he thinks fit, of all or any of the property for the time being vested in him under Section 4.
>
> (2) The power of an executor to dispose of immovable property so vested in him is subject to any restriction which may be imposed in this behalf by the will appointing him, unless probate has been granted to him, and the court which granted the probate permits him by an order in writing, nothwithstanding the restriction, to dispose of any immovable property specified in the order in a manner permitted by the order .

The reasoning of the Calcutta decisions as to the meaning of Section 4 was based largely on the preamble, which showed that the object

CIVIL

1932

KADIYALA
VENKATA SUBAMMA
v.
KATREDDI
RAMAYYA

Sir George Lowndes

of the Act was to provide for grants of probate and letters of administration, and upon the heading of Chapter II, in which the section occurred, "of grant of probate and letters of administration," and it was thought to follow from this that "executor" in Section 4 could only mean an executor to whom probate had been granted.

This argument was elaborated before their Lordships, and reference was made to other sections of the Act which, it was urged, contained the same implication, particular reliance being placed upon Sections 12 and 59.

With regard to the first branch of the argument, their Lordships note that the wording of the opening paragraph of Section 4 is identical with that of Section 179 of the Succession Act of 1865, which occurs in a chapter bearing the same heading as that of Chapter II of the Act of 1881. But, so far as their Lordships are aware, it has never been held that Section 179 of the Act of 1865 applies only to an executor who has proved the will.

Section 12 of the Probate and Administration Act no doubt implies that until probate is granted the will is not "established," and it validates all intermediate acts of the executor. It is contended for the appellants that this necessarily leads to the inference that before probate there is no valid will and no authority in the executor. This was the view taken by West, J. in Fatima v. Shaik Essa[1] but which failed to find acceptance on appeal (Shaik Moosa v. Shaik Essa[2]). It is, their Lordships think, based upon a misconception of the object of the section. Before the grant, it is obvious that in every case where either the will itself, or anything done under it by the executor, is challenged, proof of execution and capacity on the part of the testator, and of the appointment of the executor, would be required. The object of the section is only to get rid of this multiplication of proofs. Probate once granted authenticates the will against all the world; it affords a ready means of proof of the contents of the will (see Sections 41 and 91 of the Evidence Act); and it is a complete answer by the executor to any challenge of his authority as such. The provisions of the section do not, in their Lordships' opinion, suggest that before probate the executor had no title, but are only intended to simplify the proof of his title as dating from the testator's death.

Section 59 merely amplifies the position by making probate conclusive of the executor's representative title against debtors of the estate, and provides for their indemnification on making payments to him. This again is only a matter of simplification of proof, with the necessary corollary protecting debtors who have paid on the faith of the probate.

There can be no doubt that in England the title of an executor is derived from the will and not from probate, though it is probate alone which authenticates his right (see Williams on Executors, 12th edition, p. 1226). Section 12 of the Probate and Administration Act is a reproduction of Section 188 of the Successsion Act of 1865, and it has always been recognized that the latter Act was largely based on English law. It is not suggested that this doctrine is for any reason inapplicable to the wills of Hindus, and their Lordships think that the material parts of Sections 4 and 90, which are set out above, afford a strong indication in themselves that the legislature intended to adopt it.

[1] I. L. R. 7 Bom. 266.

[2] I. L. R. 8 Bom. 241

Section 4 makes no reference to probate, nor does the definition of "executor" in Section 3 (again a reproduction from the Act of 1865) suggest that probate is any part of his title: he is merely the person to whom the testator has confided the carrying out of his dispositions.

So, too, Section 90(2) clearly conceives of an executor not clothed with probate being able to dispose of the property "vested in him under Section 4." It makes such power subject to any restriction imposed by the will "unless probate has been granted," in which case the Court may relieve him from the restriction. In view of the terms of this section their Lordships think it would be impossible to hold that before probate nothing vested in the executor, and that he had no power of disposal at all.

Reference was made in argument to the terms of the original Section 90, which was repealed in 1889, when the present section was substituted. It may well be that upon the old section the argument on behalf of the appellants would have had more force, but their Lordships have to interpret the Act as it has stood since 1889, and they cannot attribute to Section 4 a meaning based on the reading of the repealed section.

It only remains to consider whether the two decisions of this Board, to which allusion was made above, afford any support to the appellants.

In The Administrator-General of Bengal v. Pren Lal Mullick[8], the executors of a Hindu testator, whose will was governed by the Hindu Wills Act of 1870, after obtaining probate, transferred to the Administrator-General "all estates, effects and interest vested in them by virtue of the probate." Such a transfer was authorized in the case of "any private executor" by Section 31 of the Administrator-General's Act, II of 1874. The majority of the Judges before whom the case came in the Calcutta High Court held that the executors of a Hindu will, governed by the Act of 1870, were not within the purview of the section, and this was the only question before the Board.

The judgment was delivered by Lord Watson, who in dealing with various portions of the Succession Act which were incorporated in the Hindu Wills Act, says:—

> It is sufficient for the purposes of this case to refer to two of these clauses. Section 181 is to the effect that probate can be granted only to an executor appointed by the will. Section 179 provides that the executor or legal administrator, as the case may be, of a deceased person shall be his legal representative for all purposes, and that all the property of the deceased person shall vest in him as such.

He continues as follows, and it is this passage which is principally relied on in the present appeal:—

> It is not disputed that the immediate effect of the Act of 1870 was to place a Hindu executor who was in a position, and chose, to take advantage of its provisions, on precisely the same footing as the executor of an Anglo-Indian testator, in so far as concerns the taking out of probate, and the vesting in him of the estate of the deceased. The will of he late Nundo Lal Mullick was executed in August, 1889; and his executors therefore, on their obtaining probate, became immediately vested, by force of statute, with the whole estates which belonged to him at the time of his decease.

The question now before their Lordships, viz., as to the effect of the words of Section 179 (reappearing in the present case as Section 4 of the

---

[8] 22 I. A. 107

CIVIL

1932

KADIYALA VENKATA SUBAMMA v. KATREDDI RAMAYYA

Sir George Lowndes

Probate and Administration Act) unaccompanied by probate, was clearly not under the consideration of the Board in the case cited, as the authority to transfer under Section 31 of the Administrator-General's Act was expressly dependent upon the grant of probate, and their Lordships have no doubt that the words used by Lord Watson were not intended to have the wider significance which the appellants seek to attribute to them.

In Mirza Kurratulain v. Peara Saheb[4] the question considered by the Board was one of estoppel, affecting a Mohammedan will of which probate had been granted. Here again, therefore, the contention now raised as to the effect of Sections 4 and 90 of the Act of 1881 standing alone, did not arise. and the only support that the appellants claim from it is derived from two sentences in the judgment which will be found on pp. 256 and 257 The first of these speaks of "the title thus conferred upon every executor who has obtained probate," and the second, of the trusteeship for the purposes of the will "created by the will established by the probate." Their Lordships are unable to treat these isolated quotations as affording any support to the argument of the appellants. There is, they think, nothing in the judgment of Sir Arthur Wilson, read as a whole, to suggest that the vesting under Section 4, or the power of disposal under Section 90, is dependent upon the grant of probate.

For the reasons given their Lordships are of opinion that the order of remand made by the High Court on December 9, 1925, was right, and that this appeal should be dismissed, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly. The appellants must pay the costs of the respondents of the appeal.

Appeal dismissed

---

[4] 32 I. A. 244

SATGUR PRASAD alias BHAIYA HARI SARAN DAS (Defendant)
versus
HAR NARAIN DAS (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL

1932

Jan 18

LORD BLANESBURGH
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES
SIR DINSHAH MULLA

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 2(12)—Suit for possession—By setting aside deed of conveyance on ground of fraud—Suit decreed—Whether plaintiff entitled to mesne profits from date of suit or date of decree.

By a deed dated November 25, 1924, plaintiff purported to make over a valuable estate to the defendant subject to certain conditions. On February 21, 1927 the plaintiff instituted a suit for possession by setting aside this deed on the ground that it was procured by undue influence and fraud. The courts in India found the allegations of undue influence and fraud proved and awarded possession. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to mesne profits from the date of the deed, inasmuch as on the findings as to fraud, the possession of the defendant must be deemed to have been wrongful from the very date of the deed.

APPEALS from a decision of the Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow.

Upjohn, K.C., De'Gruyther, K.C. and L. M. Jopling for the appellant.

A. M. Dunne, K.C., Dube, K.C., Wallach and Sir T. B. Sapru for the respondent.

---

*P. C. A. 24 of 1930

The following judgment was delivered by

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—These are consolidated cross-appeals against a decree of the Chief Court of Oudh dated May 2, 1928. The appellant in the one case, Satgur Prasad, was the principal defendant in a suit instituted on the original side of the Chief Court, which was decided against him both by the trial Judge and the Court of Appeal. In the other the plaintiff, Mahant Har Narain Das, is the appellant, raising subsidiary questions on which the Court of Appeal had decided against him.

The main issue in the suit was as to the validity of a deed, dated November 25, 1924, by which the plaintiff purported to make over a valuable estate and other property to the defendant-appellant subject to certain conditions. The object of the suit was to set aside this deed on the ground that it was procured by undue influence and fraud. There are concurrent findings of both the Courts in India that this has been established, and they are undoubtedly findings of pure fact. It is not disputed that if they are to stand the appellant cannot escape the decree which has been passed against him

The practice of this Board with regard to concurrent findings of fact is well established. Such findings will not be disturbed unless it is shown that there has been a miscarriage of justice, or the violation of some principle of law or procedure: Moung Tha Hnyeen v. Moung Pan Nyo[1], Rani Srimati v. Khajendra Narayan Singh[2] per Lord Lindley at p. 131; cited and followed in Robins v. The National Trust[3].

This does not necessarily imply that their Lordships make the findings their own, for, almost ex hypothesi, they have not considered them in detail: but only that where matters of fact have been fairly tried by two local Courts, which are often in a better position to conclude upon them than this Board, and the same conclusion has been reached by both, it is not in the public interest that the facts should again be examined in the ultimate Court of Appeal.

Nothing has been suggested, during a two-days' argument for the defendant-appellant which would bring the case within the principles so laid down, the learned counsel confining themselves to a searching criticism of the reasons assigned by the learned Judges in the Courts below for the conclusions to which they had come. Their Lordships think that no useful purpose would be served by following their argument through the somewhat unsavoury details so disclosed. They will only record their opinion that no sufficient reason has been shown for disturbing the concurrent findings to which they have referred.

The cross-appeal of the plaintiff raises a question of greater difficulty. Under the decrees of both Courts he is entitled to possession of all the properties sued for. The details were set out in three schedules annexed to his plaint. These are embodied in the decree of the trial Judge, which in this respect was confirmed by the Court of Appeal.

He also claimed by his plaint mesne profits accruing during the possession of the defendant-appellant (hereinafter for convenience referred to as the defendant),* the amount of which he estimated at five lakhs of

---

[1] 27 I. A. 166

[2] 31 I. A. 127

[3] [1927] A. C. 515

*Note—There were two other defendants to the suit, but neither of them has appeared on the present appeals.

CIVIL 1932
SATGUR PRASAD
v.
HAR NARAIN DAS
Sir George Lowndes

rupees. There seems to have been no discussion upon this question in the trial Court, the learned Judge merely reciting an agreement of the parties that the issue as to the defendant's liability to account should be left to be dealt with in execution proceedings, which their Lordships understand to be in accordance with the usual practice.

In the Court of Appeal, however, it was urged on behalf of the defendant that the account should only go from the date of suit (February 21, 1927), and not from the date when the defendant got possession, i.e., approximately November 25, 1924. The learned Judges of the Appellate Court accepted this contention, assigning as their reason for so doing "that the document of November 25, 1924, was only voidable at the option of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff did not exercise that option earlier than the date of the suit."

It is against this finding only that the cross-appeal of the plaintiff has been pressed, and it is contended on his behalf that, having regard to the conclusion, now established, that the deed under which the defendant got possession was procured by undue influence and fraud, the plaintiff is entitled to the account which he has claimed.

The defendant supports the finding of the Court of Appeal on this question. Mesne profits, it is said, under the definition contained in Section 2(12) of the Civil Procedure Code, can only be awarded for the period during which the defendant was in wrongful possession, and until the plaintiff elected to avoid the contract under which possession was made over to him, his possession was not wrongful.

But in the first place their Lordships are unable to regard the deed of November 25, 1924, merely as a contract voidable at the option of the plaintiff, but good until avoided. It was in effect a conveyance, under which the title to the properties passed to the defendant, and which had to be formally set aside. Before the institution of the suit the defendant could no doubt have made a valid transfer to an innocent purchaser, but it by no means follows from this that as between him and the person he had defrauded his possession was not wrongful. To admit of such an assertion would be to allow him to take advantage of his own wrong, which no court of equity will permit.

If the matter could be regarded as one of contract, their Lordships think that it would fall within the terms of Section 65 of the Contract Act, which provides that "when a contract becomes void"—and their Lordships would have no difficulty in holding these words sufficient to cover the case of a voidable contract which had been avoided—any person who has received any advantage under such contract is bound to restore it to the person from whom he received it, or make compensation therefor.

Regarding the transaction, however, as one that has passed out of the realm of contract, it would seem to be met by Section 88 of the Trusts Act, which has always applied to the province of Oudh. Both Courts in India have found that the defendant stood in a fiduciary relation to the plaintiff, and that he procured the conveyance by taking advantage of this relationship. He would therefore be bound under the terms of the section to hold any advantage so gained for the benefit of the plaintiff.

But apart from either of these statutory provisions, their Lordships

CIVIL

1932

SATGUR PRASAD v. HAR NARAIN DAS

Sir George Lowndes

think that the plaintiff is entitled to succeed in his claim upon general principles of equity. So it is stated in Kerr on Fraud and Mistake (6th Edition, 469), dealing with the doctrine of Restitutio in integrum, that "a party exercising his option to rescind is entitled to be restored as far as possible to his former position." For this proposition there is ample authority. In Queen v. Saddlers' Company[4], Lord Blackburn says:—

> Fraud, as I think, renders any transaction voidable at the election of the party defrauded; and if, when it is avoided, nothing has occurred to alter the position of affairs, the rights and remedies of the parties are the same as if it had been void from the beginning.

In Dally v. Wonham[5] where a purchase by the agent of a vendor was set aside upon much the same grounds as here, the vendor-plaintiff was given an account of rents and profits received by the defendant, from the date of the conveyance, the defendant being allowed credit in the account for all moneys properly expended by him on repairs and lasting improvements, and all sums paid to the plaintiff on account of an annuity which was, as in the present case, part of the consideration for the conveyance.

In Mulhallen v. Marum[6] the Lord Chancellor (Lord Lyndhurst). in setting aside a lease which had been obtained by fraud and undue influence, said, "I shall give an account against the defendant from the time of filing the bill, but not before on account of the delay." In this case eleven years had elapsed since the date of the lease before the bill was filed.

Reference might also be made to the form of decree proposed by Lord Westbury L. C. in Tyrrel v. The Bank of London[7] and to Erlanger v. New Sanbrero Coy[8].

Their Lordships think that in the case now before them, where there is no difficulty in putting the parties back in the position which they occupied respectively on November 25, 1924, and where there is no proof of undue delay on the part of the plaintiff in bringing his suit, he should have an account of the rents and profits of the immovable properties from that date, the defendant being entitled to credit in the account for all payments made by him to the plaintiff. Interest should be allowed at the usual rate upon both sides of the account.

For the reasons given their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that the appeal of Satgur Prasad should be dismissed, and that of Mahant Har Narain Das allowed; and that the decree of the Chief Court of Oudh dated May 2, 1928, should be varied by substituting for the words "date of the suit" the words "twenty-fifth of November, 1924," and by adding after the words "possession by him" the words "the defendant-appellant being entitled to credit in the account so to be taken for all sums paid by him after that date to the respondent No. 1, and interest being allowed at the usual rate on both sides thereof". In other respects the decree of the Chief Court will stand.

The appellant, Satgur Prasad, must pay the costs of Mahant Har Narain Das before this Board.

Decree modified

---

[4] 10 H. L. C. 404 at 420

[5] 33 Beav. 154

[6] 3 Dr. & War. 317

[7] 10 H. L. C 26

[8] 3 A. C. 1218

HIGH COURT

KING-EMPEROR

versus

ABDUL AZIZ AND OTHERS*

CRIMINAL

1931

June 9

YOUNG, J.
BAJPAI, J.

Criminal Procedure Code, Sec. 162 and Evidence Act, Sec. 32(2)—Statement made to police officer (investigating a dacoity) by M—That A and B took part in dacoity—Police officer made entries in the diary—M was later murdered—A, B and others charged under Sec. 302—Whether entries in police diary inadmissible under Sec. 162.

A police officer in the course of investigations in connection with a dacoity made entries in the diary to the effect that a statement had been made to him by a person who attended the meeting of the villagers called by him, that two of the present appellants had certainly taken part in the dacoity along with some others. Three days after this information was given to the police the person who gave the information was beaten and killed. Six persons (including the two whose names were mentioned to the police officer as having taken part in the dacoity) were charged before the Sessions Judge under Sec. 302 I. P. C., who found them guilty of murder. On appeal to the High Court it was objected that the evidence of the police diary was inadmissible in evidence under Sec. 162 Cr. P. Code; held, that this enquiry or trial, in which it is sought to use these records in the police diary as evidence, could not even have been thought of, and was not under investigation at the time that the statements were made, and Sec. 162 did not apply; and these statements were admissible in evidence under Sec. 32(2) Evidence Act. U Htin Gyaw v. King-Emperor, I. L. R. 5 Rang. 26 at 37 followed.

CRIMINAL APPEAL from an order of BABU RAGHUNATH PRASAD, Sessions Judge of Bulandshahr.

F. Owen O'Neill for the appellants.

Sankar Saran (Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Young, J.

YOUNG, J.—Abdul Aziz, Chand Khan, Ghafur Khan, Yusuf Wahid, Tahsin, Mustafa Khan and Sahibdad Khan were charged before the Sessions Judge of Bulandshahr, the first six under Section 302 of the Indian Penal Code, and the last two under Section 302, read with Section 109 I. P. C. The first six accused were found guilty of murder, and condemned to death by the learned Sessions Judge. The last two, Mustafa Khan and Sahibdad Khan, were acquitted. Those condemned to death have appealed to this Court. They have been represented here by Mr. O'Neill; he has addressed to us an able argument and has said everything for his clients which could possibly be said.

On the morning of September 9, 1930, between the hours of 9 and 10, Mahmud Ali Khan, a man aged 60 years, was assaulted, severely beaten, and subsequently died. The case for the prosecution is that in the month of May 1930 a dacoity had taken place in village called Mirpur. On September 6, Raza Ahmad, police officer, was making investigations in the neighbouring village of Lohagara concerning this dacoity. A meeting of

---

*Cr. A. 210 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR
v.
ABDUL AZIZ

Young, J.

the villagers was called by the policeman, and questions were put. Mustafa Khan denied that either he, or his brother, Yusuf Khan one of the appellants or their partisans had taken part in the dacoity. But Mahmud Ali Khan, deceased, had stated publicly at this panchayat that certain of the people of Lohagara had taken part in the dacoity. Subsequently the Sub-Inspector took Mahmud Ali Khan aside and obtained a statement from him that Ghafur and Wahid two of the appellants had certainly taken part in the dacoity, along with some others. The relationship between the deceased and Mustafa Khan and Yusuf Khan had clearly been strained in the past. Both sides had made accusations against each other in reports to the police. It is suggested by the prosecution that this act of Mahmud Ali Khan made the party of Yusuf and Mustafa Khan make up their minds to take action against Mahmud Ali Khan, and that that action took the form of murdering him. The learned Sessions Judge has found in his judgment that there was no enmity between these two parties; but we are satisfied, on the evidence on the record, that there clearly was enmity between the two, and we think it highly probable that the fact that Mahmud Ali Khan had given information to the police implicating certain of the accused had become known to the accused. In any event, there is the positive evidence of Mahmud Illyas that the party of the accused took the action of Mahmud Ali in this matter very ill. At any rate, the one fact that is uncontested is that three days after this information was given to the police Mahmud Ali Khan was beaten and killed by some one. The evidence concerning the information to the police is contained mainly in the police diary. The Sub-Inspector who made the entries in the diary, which are Exhibits H and J on the record, was murdered a few days later. Mr. O'Neill, on behalf of the accused appellants, objects that the evidence of the police diary is inadmissible in evidence, and he relies upon Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. That Section reads as follows:—

> No statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if reduced into writing, be signed by the person making it; nor shall any such statement or any record thereof, whether in a police diary or otherwise, or any part of such statement or record be used for any purpose (save as hereinafter provided) at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made.

He lays stress upon the words in the section, "nor shall any such statement or any record thereof be used for any purpose". We are clearly of opinion that Section 162 does not apply in this case. The words after "be used for any purpose" are "at any inquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when such statement was made". Now it is obvious that this inquiry or trial, in which it is sought to use these records as evidence, was not under investigation at the time when these statements were made. In the Mirpur dacoity case, if indeed that matter had ever come to trial, it is clear these statements would have been inadmissible. But when this trial or enquiry had never even been thought of, Mahmud Ali Khan at that time never having been murdered, it is, in our opinion, perfectly clear that this section does not apply. When we look at the previous Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898), our present opinion is confirmed in the strongest possible manner. The

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR
v.
ABDUL AZIZ

Young, J.

section originally stood as follows:—"No statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation under this Chapter shall, if taken down in writing, be signed by the person making it; nor shall such writing be used as evidence". As the section originally stood, it was open to be argued that such a statement could not be admitted as evidence at any time or in any trial. The words "be used as evidence" have deliberately been omitted from the present Section 162, and the words recorded above have been substituted. The view that we take of the effect of the present Section 162 has also been taken by the High Court of Rangoon in U Htin Gyaw v. King-Emperor[1]. Section 162, therefore, not prohibiting the use of this evidence, we must fall back upon Section 32 (2) of the Evidence Act, which, in our opinion, makes these statements admissible in evidence in this case. We think these statements come under the words, "when the statement was made by such person in the ordinary course of business, and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty". There can, in our opinion, be no doubt that the Sub-Inspector, who is now dead, made these entries in the discharge of his professional duties.

[Their Lordships after reviewing the evidence came to the conclusion that the prosecution had proved strong motive for the accused to commit this crime, and that the evidence called for the Crown established the fact that these appellants did commit the murder.]

---

[1] I. L. R. 5 Ran. 26 at 37

CIVIL

1931

Dec. 16

MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

PARMARATH GIR (Applicant)

versus

RAM SARUP SINGH alias TRIGUNANAND (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 33, R. 5 (d)—Application for permission to sue as a pauper—By a mere Sanyasi—Neither nominated as successor by last Mahant nor placed on Gaddi by electoral body—No cause of action disclosed.

A person, who is a mere Sanyasi of the math and who has not been nominated as the successor by the last mahant, or elected by the mahants, the members of the sect and the raises and placed upon the gaddi after due performance of rituals is not competent to maintain a suit for ejectment and does not possess the necessary cause for action and therefore an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis by such a person is liable to dismissal under Or. 33, R. 5 (d) C. P. C. Sumatra Devi v. Hazari Lal, A. L. J. R. 1930, 901 and Ram Lal Sah v. Allahabad Bank, A. L. J. R. 1929, 1059 referred to.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of J. N. KAUL ESQ., Additional Subordinate Judge of Benares.

Harnandan Prasad for the applicant.

B. E. O'Conor and Ram Nama Prasad for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an application for revision under Section 115 C. P. C. and is directed against an order of the learned Subordinate Judge of

*Civ. Rev. 549 of 1930

Benares, dated November 3, 1930, dismissing the plaintiff's application for leave to sue as a pauper upon the ground that the plaint did not disclose any cause of action. The facts of this case which have given rise to this application are briefly these:—The plaintiff alleges that there is an ancestral Math belonging to Dasnami Sanyasis of the Gir sect in Mohalla Suraj Kund in the city of Benares and that this Math owns property worth Rs.1,000,000. A geneological table has been set out in paragraph 3 of this application. Narain Gir is alleged to be the last mahant of this Gaddi. He died a minor on July 9, 1910. Swarath Gir, Guru of the applicant, who was a chachera Guru Bhai of Narain Gir, is described as the next mahant of the Gaddi, as (according to Parmarath Gir) he was duly given the chadar according to the custom of the Math and thus became the Mahant. The property was in possession of the Court of Wards. Three suits were instituted with reference to this property; one by Jagannath Gir; the second, by Swarath Gir and the third by Trigumanand. These suits were numbered and registered respectively as No. 29 of 1913, No. 122 of 1913 and No. 27 of 1915. There was a triangular fight amongst these three persons, the position of the Court of Wards being that of a neutral which held the property in the capacity of a stake-holder. All the three suits were dismissed by the trial court in December 1915. There were three appeals lodged in this Court. The appeal of Trigumanand was allowed and the other two appeals were dismissed. These appeals were decided on April 30, 1922. Swarath Gir made two applications to this Court for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council; one in his own suit and the other in the suit of Trigumanand. Leave to appeal was granted on both these applications. Swarath Gir failed to deposit Rs.4,000 as security, in one of his appeals, and the result was that that appeal was dismissed for default of prosecution. Swarath Gir died on February 22, 1924. On July 25, 1924, Parmarath Gir, alleging himself to be the chela of Swarath Gir, applied for substitution of his name in place of Swarath Gir in Privy Council Appeal No. 17 of 1922. Trigumanand opposed this application on the ground that Parmarath Gir was not the chela of Swarath Gir at all but was an imposter. On November 28, 1924, Parmarath Gir's application was dismissed for default of prosecution and it was declared that the Privy Council Appeal No. 17 of 1922 had abated. On December 23, 1924 Parmarath Gir applied for setting aside the order, dated November 28, 1924, dismissing his application for substitution of his name and he further prayed for the setting aside of the order of abatement but this application was dismissed on January 8, 1925.

The present application for leave to sue in forma pauperis was lodged by him on March 31, 1930. This was rejected by the Subordinate Judge on the ground that so far as the claim purported to be one for the determination of his title to the property as chela of Swarath Gir, it offended against the provisions of Order 22, Rules 9 and 11 C. P. C. and was not competent, and so far as it purported to be a claim founded upon his personal right as a Sanyasi belonging to the Gir sect, which held the Math, his application did not disclose any cause of action and was therefore liable to dismissal under O. 33, Rule 5 (d) C. P. C. An application for revision has been filed against this order.

Civil 1931
Parma-rath Gir
v.
Ram Sarup Singh
Sen, J.

Upon an examination of the petition, it is clear that the applicant plaintiff has no cause of action for the reliefs claimed. He is not the successor nominated by the last mahant nor is he a person, who has been selected and placed upon the Gaddi by the electoral body in accordance with the custom of the foundation. He comes into court on the allegation that as the sole surviving Sanyasi, belonging to this Math, he has a right of action. Upon his own showing, he is not a person who is qualified to sue because he is not a person who has been duly elected to the Gaddi in accordance with the conditions set out in paragraph 4(a) of his plaint. We are therefore of opinion that the court below was right in coming to the conclusion that his petition did not disclose any cause of action.

A 'cause of action' may consist of a single fact or of an assemblage of facts which it is essential for the plaintiff to prove in order to support his claim against the defendant about the subject-matter in dispute. Where the plaintiff has no immediate title to the property in dispute, he cannot sustain an action for ejectment. A person, who is a mere sanyasi of the Math and who has not been nominated as the successor by the last Mahant or elected by the mahants, the members of the sect and the raises and placed upon the Gaddi after due performance of rituals, is not competent to maintain a suit for ejectment and does not possess the necessary cause of action.

The learned Subordinate Judge had these considerations in view when he made the following statements which have our approval:—

> In the absence of nomination, the right of appointment, according to the customs of the Math mentioned above, vests in the fraternity. The plaintiff says that he is merely a Sanyasi of the Math. Unless therefore he is elected and given the chaddar, he has no right to seek the intervention of the court   The Court have no power to give the chaddar and cannot therefore intervene against the co-sharers of the Math
> There is nothing to show that he (the incumbent) has been removed by his fraternity on account of his misconduct or that any other appointment has been made in his place by those who possess the right to do so. The plaint as it stands does not disclose any cause of action.

We have to remember that this is not a suit instituted by the relators under Section 92 C. P. C. with the sanction of the Advocate-General for the administration of the trust or for the removal of the trustees upon the ground that a breach of trust had taken place. Different considerations arise in such suits.

Our attention has been drawn to the decisions of this Court in Sumatra Devi v. Hazari Lal[1] and Ram Lal Sah v. Allahabad Bank[2]. In the former the application was dismissed not on one of the grounds specified in Order 33, Rule 5 C. P. C. but mainly upon the ground that the case of the plaintiff was weak. In the second case, the application of the plaintiff was thrown out on the ground that the evidence produced by him did not show that he had a good case. In the present case, the court definitely came to the conclusion that the plaint did not disclose any cause of action and this view was supported by an examination of the plaint, with reference to paragraphs 1, 3 and 4 of the plaint. In paragraph 18 of the plaint, the only cause of action alleged by the plaintiff is that the defendant

---

[1] A. L. J. R. 1930, 901

[2] A. L. J. R. 1929, 1059

Civil — 1931 — Parmarath Gir v. Ram Sarup Singh — Sen, J.

was put into possession of this property by the Court of Wards on January 1, 1924. That is immaterial. We are of opinion that the plaint does not disclose any cause of action against the defendant and the petition has been rightly dismissed under O. 33, R. 5 (d) of the Civil Procedure Code.

We dismiss this application with costs.

Application dismissed

Civil — 1932 — Jan. 7 — Mears, C. J. Sen, J.

BHAN DATT (Defendant)

versus

MOTI LAL (Plaintiff)*

Provincial Small Causes Courts Act (IX of 1887), Sch. II, Art. 35 (ii)—Whether suit cognizable by small cause court—Test.

Where the plaintiff sued in the Court of Small Causes to recover a sum of money on the ground that the defendant had cut a nim tree belonging to the plaintiff which was growing upon the plaintiff's ground, and had done so without the knowledge of the plaintiff and without any right, and had taken it away, held, that on a fair reading of the plaint it did not disclose a criminal offence, and the suit was cognizable by the court of Small Causes. Raghubar Dayal v. Mulwa, I. L. R. 49 All. 440 and Bandhu Pandey v. Gauri Dat Pandey, 1930 A. L. J. R. 1247 relied on.

Civil Revision from a decree of Maulvi Manzur Ahmad Khan, Small Cause Court Judge of Agra.

N. P. Asthana and B. N. Sahai for the applicant.

Jwala Prasad Bhargava for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mears, C.J.

Mears, C. J.—Chaube Moti Lal sued Chaube Bhan Dat to recover Rs.80 on the ground that Chaube Bhan Dat had cut a nim tree belonging to the plaintiff which was growing upon the plaintiff's ground and had done so without the knowledge of the plaintiff and without any right and had taken it away. Those ambiguous phrases might be deemed to cover the commission of a criminal offence but might very well be nothing more than an assertion that the defendant had committed a civil wrong. The civil revision came up before Mr. Justice Bajpai on April 21, 1931, and the case of Raghubar Dayal v. Mulwa[1] was presented to him. Also his attention was called to the case of Deoki Rai v. Harakh Narain Lal[2]. Those were the only two cases before the learned Judge. We shall have, in a moment or two, to refer to a third. Now the case of Raghubar Dayal v. Mulwa is extraordinarily like the matter that is now being debated in this revision. The headnote says that Article 35 (ii) of the Second Schedule to the Small Cause Courts Act applies only to those acts which, by the circumstances of the case, are clearly alleged or shown to be punishable by the Penal Code. Now there is no clear allegation in this plaint that the offence was one which came under the Penal Code. The headnote continues, "merely removing from or cutting trees under a bona fide claim or right or as the result of a dispute is not necessarily a criminal offence." Mr. Justice Bajpai would have had no hesitation in deciding this case of

---

*Civ. Rev. 83 of 1931

[1] I. L. R. 49 All. 440

[2] I. L. R. 49 All. 85

Chaube Bhan Dat's in favour of the plaintiff had it not been that there was the decision to be found also in I. L. R. 48 All. 85. That case decided that the test as to whether the case would be heard by a small cause court or not had to be settled by an examination of the plaint, and if upon a fair and ordinary construction of the plaint the matter appeared to be a criminal one rather than a civil matter than the case was not entertainable by the small cause court. A number of authorities were referred to, and Mr. Justice Boys dealt with the matter thus:

> There can be no question but that the jurisdiction of the court has to be determined, in the first place, by a reference to the plaint. That which is exempted from the jurisdiction of the small cause court is "a suit" of a certain nature. To determine of what nature the suit is, we have obviously got to see what is sued for, and that brings us to the plaint and there is nothing to go any further.

We can follow that as a decision and at the same time we can give effect to the case of Raghubar Dayal v. Mulwa, neither of which are in conflict with the other. In our opinion, having examined the plaint we cannot say that on a fair reading of it it discloses a criminal offence. It was open to the immediate defence of the defendant, which in fact we know later he put up, that he had a perfect right to do what he did. There has been a later case, Bandhu Pandey v. Gauri Dat Pandey[3]. There the ratio of the decision was that on an examination of the plaint there was nothing in it to indicate that the defendant was acting with such knowledge or intention as would constitute an offence under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code. That case again is very similar to the one now under discussion. The case on the other side of the line is the one we have already referred to, of Deoki Rai v. Harakh Narain Lal, because there the allegations in the plaint were that the defendants had forcibly cut and appropriated the tree which belonged to the plaintiff and that they had committed this act of cutting and taking away the tree after unlawfully conspiring together. There a criminal offence or offences were indicated. We think that no more definite rule can be laid down than is to be found in the case that we have cited and that the question whether a case is determinable by a small cause court Judge must rest upon an examination of the plaint and a decision by the judge as to whether or no the language of the plaint, on a reasonable construction, imports the commission of an offence under Chapter XVII of the Indian Penal Code. We therefore dismiss this application with costs.

Application dismissed

---

[3] 1930 A. L. J. 1247

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 6

MEARS, C. J. SEN, J.

PUTTOO LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)

versus

MUNSHI LAL AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 22, R. 3—Court disallows substitution of names in place of deceased plaintiff—Order not appealable.

Where a court rightly or wrongly comes to the conclusion that certain persons cannot in terms of Or. 22, R. 3 C. P. C. be substituted in place of a deceased plaintiff, such an order is not a decree nor is it an order from which an appeal has been provided in the C. P. C.

CIVIL REVISION from a decree of MAULVI MUHAMMAD TAQI KHAN, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the applicants.

R. C. Ghatak for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—Munshi Lal and others had executed a mortgage bond in favour of Behari Lal, Putto Lal and four others on January 20, 1914. The bond provided that the debt was to be paid after 7 years. On May 25, 1925, the mortgagees brought a suit for recovery of Rs.9,359-8-0 in enforcement of their mortgage and obtained a decree on July 21, 1925. The mortgaged property was sold for Rs.8,000 on August 21, 1929. This left a balance of Rs.3,066-8-0 still due from the mortgagors.

Behari Lal died on April 4, 1930. On July 2, 1930, two applications were presented in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad; one by Puttoo Lal and 4 others, who were co-plaintiffs with Behari Lal and the other by the widow of Behari Lal. The applicants prayed for substitution of names in place of the deceased Behari Lal. These applications were dismissed by the court below; hence this appeal. We are of opinion that where a court rightly or wrongly comes to the conclusion that certain persons cannot in terms of Order 22, Rule 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure be substituted in place of a deceased plaintiff, such an order is not a decree nor is it an order from which an appeal has been provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure. The order is not a decree because it does not adjudicate the rights of the parties on any point or points in controversy in the suit. It is therefore an 'order' but is not an order from which an appeal has been provided in Section 104 C. P. C. or in Order 43 C. P. C. The order in question is therefore not open to appeal and the appeal must fail on this ground.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha, on behalf of Puttoo Lal and others has prayed that his appeal should be treated as an application for revision, under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Mr. Shiva Prasad Sinha has argued that his application for substitution of names is a preliminary step to an application for a decree under O. 34, R. 6 C. P. C. which he intends to make. An application under O. 34, R. 6 is a proceeding in the suit. This has been held in numerous cases and the decision in re Babu Lal v. Raghunandan[1] is a case in point. In view of the fact that the mortgage suit was instituted within six years of the time when the money became payable and the projected application for a decree under O. 34, R. 6 C. P. C. will be within three years of the date when the mortgaged property was sold, we are of opinion that the right of Putto Lal and others for a decree over is not time-barred and the liability of the judgment-debtor still subsists. In view of these facts, we consider it proper to treat the appeal as an application for revision. We hold that the court below has erred in dismissing the application for substitution on the ground that the mortgaged property having been sold, the decree has practically come to an end. As we have pointed out, the liability of the defendants for the balance of the decree still subsists. Whoever allege themselves to be the legal representatives of Behari Lal are competent to make an application for substitution of names. We allow the appeal and set aside the order of the court below. It will be for the court below to determine the question as to whether or not Behari Lal was joint with Putto Lal and others. If he was joint, the widow has no right to be substituted in place of Behari Lal. If, on the other hand, he was separate, in that case Puttoo Lal and others had no right to be substituted in place of Behari Lal and the only person who could be brought on the record in place of the deceased was the widow. This matter will have to be determined by the Subordinate Judge upon the evidence which the parties may adduce. The result is that we dismiss the appeal but treating the petition of appeal as an application for revision we allow the application subject to the remarks contained above and send back the case to the learned Subordinate Judge for disposal according to law. We make no order as to costs.

---

*Civ. Rev. 41 of 1932

[1] A. L. J. R. 1930, 1200

Case remanded

Civil 1932
Jan. 7
Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

JAGDISH NARAIN AND ANOTHER (Applicants)
versus
HAZARI LAL (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 6, R. 16—Hindu son's suit—To set aside alienation by father—Plaint alleges that father was 'extravagant and dissolute'—Paragraph to be struck out.

In a suit by a Hindu son to set aside an alienation by his father on the ground that the debt contracted was tainted with immorality, the immorality must be pleaded with particularity, that is, the exact nature of the immorality must be specified, and it must be shown with precision exactly how it came about at the particular time that the particular money was needed and used for the particular immorality charged. No judge should allow a general charge of immorality (e.g., that the father was 'extravagant and dissolute' to remain on record; and if, on the application of the opposite party, the whole statement is struck out, such opposite party should have the costs.

Tulshiram v. Bishnath, 25 A. L. J. R. 753 and Gauri Shankar v. Manki, 21 A. L. J. R. 571 relied on.

First Appeal from an order of Maulvi Muhammad Taqi Khan, Subordinate Judge of Farrukhabad.

Panna Lal and M. L. Chaturvedi for the appellants.

B. Malik for the respondent.

---

*F. A. F. O. 114 of 1931

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

MEARS, C. J.—This is an appeal by two minor sons against the order of the learned Judge, who refused to issue an injunction restraining the decree-holder from selling property mortgaged to him by their father. We do not propose to interfere with the decision of the learned Judge in this matter. In view of the statement made to us by Mr. Panna Lal, it appears that the principal, if not the only, allegation upon which this suit could succeed would be to prove the alleged immorality of the father. Paragraph 3 of the plaint starts by the allegation that the father was "extravagant". As extravagance has no bearing on the matter, it is an irrelevant allegation. The paragraph further says that the father was "dissolute". That bare statement by itself is insufficient and offends against well known rules. A general charge of immorality cannot be permitted in a pleading. The immorality must be pleaded with particularity. That is, the exact nature of the immorality, be it gambling, drinking, women or anything else must be specified. Further the pleading must show with precision exactly how it came about at the particular time that the particular money was needed and used for the particular immorality charged. No judge should allow a general paragraph of this nature to remain upon the record, and the proper order to make is to have the whole paragraph struck out. If so done on the application of the opposite party such opposite party should have the costs. This rule is most clearly set out in Chapter 6, paragraph 6 of Mr. P. C. Mogha's book on "Law of Pleadings in British India", 3rd Edition, page 47 and the case of Tulshiram v. Bishnath[1] and Gauri Shankar v. Manki[2] should be consulted as also the opening paragraphs of Chapter 6 of Mr. Mogha's book. One good reason for this exactness of particularity is that this type of case in which a Hindu son seeks to set aside an alienation by his father is a suit frequently engineered by the father. In this instance Mr. Panna Lal says that the father and sons are on perfectly good terms, living in the same house and it may be that the allegations of immorality exist only in the imagination of the father who has made these assertions about himself with a view that the family should escape liability for the debt. It has not been shown that there is any apprehension that the property will be wrongfully sold in execution of the decree. This appeal therefore fails and is dismissed with costs. The Registrar should direct the attention of the learned Subordinate Judge to our observations on Paragraph 3 of the plaint.

Appeal dismissed

[1] 25 A. L. J. R. 753

[2] 21 A. L. J. R. 571

Civil

1932

Jan. 15

Pullan, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

BABU LAL (Plaintiff)
versus
RAGHUNANDAN (Defendant)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 34, R. 6—Applicable only to cases where there has been a sale.

In a suit for sale on a mortgage, a final mortgage decree was passed, but the mortgagee never brought the property to sale because one D brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgaged property belonged to him and this suit was decreed in favour of D. The mortgagee then applied for a decree under Or. 34, R. 6 C. P. C. Held, that Or. 34, R. 6 C. P. C. applies only to cases where there has been a sale and where the proceeds of the sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff. When there has been no sale, an application under R. 6 of Or. 34 does not lie. Badal Singh v. Debi Saran Dhur Dube, 49 All. 506=25 A. L. J. R. 485 explained.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of B. S. KISCH, District Judge of Allahabad, reversing a decree of BABU AMBIKA PRASAD SRIVASTAVA, Munsif of west Allahabad.

Harnandan Prasad for the appellant.

A. P. Dube and S. K. Mittra for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—One application in revision, one second appeal and one appeal from the order of a Munsif which is connected with the said application for revision and second appeal have come before us in the following circumstances. In the year 1924 Raghunandan obtained a decree against Babu Lal on a mortgage which had been executed in the year 1913. On July 2, 1925 he obtained a final decree, but he never brought the property to sale because one Datti Lal brought a suit for a declaration that the mortgaged property belonged to him (Datti Lal) and not to the mortgagor Babu Lal, and this suit was decreed in favour of Datti Lal on February 13, 1926. On August 30, 1927 Raghunandan applied for a decree under Rule 6 of Order XXXIV of the C. P. C. and obtained a decree ex parte on October 22, 1927. Babu Lal applied for setting aside the ex parte decree and at first his application was dismissed on a technical ground. The decision of the Munsif dismissing the application was upheld in appeal by the District Judge but set aside finally by the High Court which directed that the Munsif should consider Babu Lal's application for setting aside the ex parte decree on its merits. The Munsif held that Babu Lal had not been served with a summons and set aside the ex parte decree, and a revision against that decree (Civil Revision No. 135 of 1931) has been presented by Raghunandan and is one of the three decisions which are now before us. The Munsif on the merits of the case decided against the decree-holder and the appeal against that decision of the Munsif was transferred by us from the court of the District Judge to be heard along with the application for revision.

---

*S. A. 1731 of 1928 (connected with Civ. Rev. 135 of 1931, and L. A. Ct. Appeal 28 of 1931)

CIVIL

1932

BABU LAL
v.
RAGHUNANDAN

Niamatullah, J.

Babu Lal on his part brought a regular suit to have the ex parte decree set aside on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud, but the District Judge on appeal found against him and a second appeal against that decision is the third matter which we have to decide.

As to the application in revision we may say very shortly that there is no ground for a revision as required by the C. P. C. The only point argued is that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to set aside the decree, on his finding that Babu Lal had not been served with a summons, in view of the fact that in the regular suit brought by Babu Lal the District Judge in appeal expressed an opinion showing that he disagreed with the view taken by the Munsif as to the service of summons. The finding of the learned District Judge has in no way affected the jurisdiction of the Munsif, as all that the District Judge had to decide, and all that he did decide, as is clear from his judgment, was that the decree had not been obtained by fraud. It is not even inconsistent with the decision of the District Judge to hold that the summons was not actually delivered and certainly there is no question that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to make the order against which this application has been filed. We accordingly dismiss the application in revision.

In the appeal against the decision of the Munsif on the merits that the decree-holder could not succeed in an application for a personal decree under Rule 6 of Order XXXIV of the C. P. C. the appellant is met by the initial difficulty which is, in our opinion, insuperable that in this case there has been no sale. Rule 6 of Order XXXIV applies only to cases where there has been a sale and where the proceeds of the sale are found to be insufficient to pay the amount due to the plaintiff. There are numerous decisions of this Court to the effect that when there has been no sale an application under Rule 6 of Order XXXIV does not lie. We have been referred to certain decisions where although there has been a sale the sale has been subsequently nullified, in particular to a decision reported in Badal Singh v. Debi Saran Dhar Dube[1] by a Bench of which one of us was a member. In that case not only was there a decree for sale but the whole of the plaintiff's claim was satisfied by the sale proceeds, and it was only afterwards that a suit was brought by the mortgagor's grandson and a decree was passed to the effect that the whole proceedings including the mortgagee and the sale, were void against him. The Bench in that case held that as there had been a sale, it was possible to apply the provisions of Rule 6 of Order XXXIV of the C. P. C. We cannot consider that case to be an authority for the argument raised by the appellant in the present case. A further point was argued in the lower court, namely, that the appellant should be held to have a remedy under Section 68 (b) of the Transfer of Property Act. We do not consider that this is a question which can be decided in an application under Order XXXIV, Rule 6 of the C. P. C. If the terms of that order do not apply the appellant cannot go beyond them to obtain a relief of a different nature in the present proceeding. We accordingly dismiss this appeal.

There remains only the appeal filed by Babu Lal against the decision of the District Judge to which we have referred to above. In view of our

---

[1] 49 All. 506=25 A. L. J. R. 485

Civil
1932
Babu Lal
v.
Raghunandan Niamat-
ullah, J.

decisions on the revision application and the appeal filed by Raghunandan the learned counsel for Babu Lal does not wish to press this appeal which is accordingly dismissed. We consider that both in the revision and in the two appeals it is proper that the parties should bear their own costs throughout and we order accordingly.

Appeal dismissed

Civil
1932
Jan. 19
Sulaiman, J.
Young, J.

HANKAR KUNWARI (Plaintiff)
versus
ISHWAR DAYAL SINGH alias BABBAN SINGH (Defendant)*

Pre-emption—Plaintiff's property included in sale deed—Claim for possession as owner joined with alternative claim for pre-emption—Whether pre-emptor to pay proportionate amount of sale consideration for the rest of property.

Where plaintiff's property has been included in the sale deed, he can combine a claim for recovery of possession and a claim for pre-emption in one and the same suit and base his claim on alternative grounds.

Bhagwati Saran Man Tewari v. Parmeshar Das, I. L. R. 36 All. 476 followed. Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi, I. L. R. 21 Cal. 496 distinguished.

Obiter dicta—Where plaintiff's property has been intentionally included either to defraud him or to embarrass him, the consideration paid may be treated as the consideration for the property which in reality belonged to the vendor, but where the vendee has acted in good faith, it may well be argued that the total consideration paid by him must be paid by the pre-emptor even though a part of his own property was included. Abdul Aziz v. Mariam Bibi, 25 A. L. J. R. 48 doubted.

Second Appeal from a decree of T. N. Mulla Esq., District Judge of Gorakhpur, reversing a decree of Maulvi S. Zillur Rahman, Munsif of Deoria.

P. N. Sapru for the appellant.

A. P. Pandey for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

Sulaiman, J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption of shares in villages Pakri and Tengri transferred under a sale deed dated February 12, 1927 by the plaintiff's sister. The plaintiff alleged that under a deed of gift from her mother, Mst. Sunraj Kunwari, she was the sole owner of the property, and her sister had no interest in the major part of the property; as regards the rest she admitted her title. She claimed pre-emption of the property admittedly belonging to her sister, and also of the rest of the property, in the alternative, if her own title was not established. She offered to pay the amount to the court which was found to be the true consideration.

The claim was resisted on various grounds, but not on the ground that the fact that the plaintiff had asked for pre-emption in the alternative was fatal. The learned Munsif decreed the claim for pre-emption on payment of Rs.230 in cash, and subject to the charge of a mortgage deed dated September 9, 1913.

---

*S. A. 920 of 1929 (connected with S. A. 919 of 1929)

Three appeals arose out of the connected suits, but the plaintiff did not raise the question of consideration afresh before the District Judge, and submitted to the amount ordered to be paid. The vendees in their appeal for the first time raised the plea that because of the alternative grounds on which the claim for pre-emption was based, the suit ought to fail.

The learned District Judge has acceded to this contention. He noted that there were authorities of this Court under which the plaintiff was not disqualified from claiming pre-emption merely because she had set up an alternative claim of title, but he felt himself bound by the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Abdul Wahid Khan v. Shaluka Bibi[1].

In our opinion, the ruling of their Lordships of the Privy Council does not at all decide the point which arises in this case. There on the death of one Muradi Bibi, her mother Shaluka Bibi sold half of her legal share to certain purchasers, and they brought a suit for possession against Muradi Bibi's husband Abdul Wahid Khan. The defendant resisted the claim on the grounds (1) that Mst. Shaluka Bibi had before the sale relinquished all her rights in the property and (2) that the defendant had a right of pre-emption in respect of the property and that no notice as required by law was issued. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in dealing with the second plea referred to the provisions in the Oudh Laws Act relating to the right of pre-emption and the suits brought to enforce such a right and then remarked:

> This law is not applicable where the person who would be entitled to pre-emption denies the title of the person who proposes to sell and alleges that they are not co-sharers and that he is entitled to the whole of the property.

It is this observation which is relied upon by the lower appellate court. It seems to us that their Lordships had before them the contention that a defendant is entitled to resist a claim for recovery of possession based on title on the ground that he himself had a right of pre-emption and that no notice had been served upon him which took away that right. Such a plea obviously could not prevail as a defence to a suit for recovery of possession where the defendant had not exercised his right of pre-emption by suit as required by law. We do not think that their Lordships have laid down that in the converse case where the plaintiff's property has been included in the sale deed, he cannot claim his own property and, in the alternative, claim pre-emption. When such a case arises, the plaintiff can maintain a suit for recovery of possession and can also independently maintain a suit for pre-emption. There seems to be no reason why he cannot be allowed to combine both the suits in one and base his claim on alternative grounds. In the case of Bhagwati Saran Man Tewari v. Parmeshar Das[2] it was held by a Bench of this Court that there is nothing in law to prevent a plaintiff in a suit for pre-emption from also setting up a claim for possession of property as owner, and his suit ought not to be dismissed on the ground that he has put his case in the alternative. This case was followed by another Bench in Abdul Aziz v. Mariam Bibi[3], in which two other cases where the plaintiff was trying to set up the title of a third party were distinguished. A pre-emptor is not allowed to put the vendee to the proof of the title of the vendor, which will be the case if he is asserting that some other person is entitled to a part of the property transferred. That difficulty does not arise where the plaintiff is asserting that his own property has been included in the sale deed. In our opinion, the view taken in the subsequent caes of this Court cannot be said to be contrary to the opinion expressed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Abdul Wahid Khan's case.

---

[1] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 496

[2] I. L. R. 36 All. 476

[3] 25 A. L. J. R. 48

In the present case there is no difficulty as regards consideration, because the finding of the first court was not objected to by the plaintiff before the lower appellate court. We would, however, like to point out that in Abdul Aziz's case the plaintiff's title to only part of the property was established, and the Bench, of which one of us was a member, followed the earlier cases and also reduced the consideration in proportion. The question does not arise in this case, but it may be a matter for reconsideration whether there should be any reduction at all. Where the plaintiff's property has been intentionally included either to defraud him or to embarass him; the consideration paid may be treated as the consideration for the property which in reality belonged to the vendor, but where the vendee has acted in good faith, it may well be argued that the total consideration paid by him must be paid by the pre-emptor, even though a part of his own property was included.

The result, therefore, is that we allow this appeal and setting aside the decree of the lower appellate court, restore that of the first court. We extend the time of payment till two months from this date. If the amount is paid in time, the decree for pre-emption shall take precedence over the decree for possession in the connected case. The plaintiff will have her costs in all courts from the defendants.

Appeal allowed

CIVIL 1932
Jan. 21
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

HARAKH CHAND (Plaintiff)
versus
SAJIDA BEGUM AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Secs. 79 and 80, and Civil Procedure Code, Or. 20, R. 11—Suit for recovery of arrears of rent—Against tenant other than permanent tenure holder or fixed rate tenant—Revenue court incompetent to make decree payable by instalments.

In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent against a tenant other than a permanent tenure-holder or fixed rate tenant, it is not open to the revenue court to make a decree payable by instalments under Or. 20, R. 11 C. P. C.

Liladhar v. Lalji, Vol. 1, Unpublished Decisions, 259 followed.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of AKBAR HUSAIN ESQ., District Judge of Azamgarh, confirming a decree of BABU RAJ KISHORE SINGH, Assistant Collector, first class.

Rama Kant Malaviya for the appellant.

M. Waliullah for the respondents.

---

*S. A. 1679 of 1929

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

MUKERJI, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of arrears of rent, and the question that we have to decide is whether it is open to the revenue court to make a decree payable by instalments under the provisions of Order 20, Rule 11 C. P. C.

The plaintiff, who is the appellant before us, brought the suit out of which this appeal has arisen, for recovery of arrears of rent. The defendants admitted the claim but asked for permission to pay by instalments. The learned Assistant Collector directed that the arrears decreed by him might be paid by three instalments. He took care to direct that in case of any instalment being over-due the whole decree might be executed. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, and the learned District Judge dismissed the appeal. The plaintiff has come up to us, and the argument of the learned counsel for the appellant is that so far as tenants other than a permanent tenure holder and a fixed rate tenant are concerned, the provision of Order 20, Rule 11, C. P. C. is inconsistent with the provisions contained in Sections 79 and 80 of the Tenancy Act of 1926, and that, therefore, it was not open to the Assistant Collector to make a decree payable by instalments.

Under the provisions of Section 79 of the Tenancy Act the decree-holder is entitled to execute the decree at once the very next day after the passing of it by the ejectment of the tenant. We have already mentioned that certain classes of tenants are exempted from the operation of this rule. In the present case the tenants are neither permanent tenure holders nor tenants at fixed rate. If the landlord has this right of executing the decree the very next day after it is passed, the making of an instalment decree will take away from him that mode of execution which is open to him by Section 79. Section 80 of the Tenancy Act lays down that a tenant must pay within 15 days of the service of notice the amount of the decree sought to be executed by his ejectment. The section provides certain facilities for the tenants to pay up and, with the consent of the decree-holder, the time for payment can be extended to six months. In our opinion the application of Order 20, Rule 11 in the case of tenants other than a permanent tenure holder or a fixed rate tenant would be inconsistent with the provisions of Section 79 and Section 80.

The view which we take was taken by two members of the Board of Revenue in a case decided under the Old Tenancy Act of 1901—Liladhar v. Lalji[1]. In the result we allow the appeal, modify the decrees of the courts below and grant a decree payable in a lump sum for the entire amount decreed by the court of first instance. The appellant will have his costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

---

[1] Vol. I, Unpublished Decisions of Board of Revenue, 259

ZIA UDDIN AHMAD KHAN AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
AKBAR ALI (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL
1932
Jan. 18
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

Limitation Act, Art. 116—Mortgage deed—Covenant—Mortgagee entitled to sue for compensation on loss being occasioned to him in consequence of a dispute raised by a third party—Suit to enforce covenant—Limitation—Starting point.

In the proceedings in execution of a mortgage decree, a certain person objected that the property sought to be sold belonged to him. His objection was disallowed, but in the declaratory suit brought by him it was declared that the property could not be sold in execution of the mortgage decree. A suit for a simple money decree was barred on that date. Thereupon the mortgagee brought a suit for compensation against the mortgagor for breach of the covenant contained in the mortgage deed, which entitled the mortgagee to sue for compensation on loss being occasioned to him in consequence of a dispute raised by a third party; held, that the plaintiff's suit was for compensation for breach of a covenant of indemnity, and was therefore governed by Art. 116; and was within limitation, whether it was reckoned from the date of objection in execution proceedings or the date of the decree nullifying the decree in favour of the plaintiff. Collector of Mirzapur v. Dawan Singh, I. L. R. 30 All. 400 relied on.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU GANGA NATH, District Judge of Agra, confirming a decree of BABU LAKSHMAN PRASAD, Subordinate Judge.

A. M. Khwaja for the appellants.

A. Dharam Das for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an appeal by the defendants and arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-respondent for recovery of Rs.3,580-10-0 as compensation for breach of a covenant contained in a mortgage deed executed by the defendant-appellants in his favour. Both the courts have decreed the suit. The facts are that the defendants executed on March 15, 1918, a deed of simple mortgage for Rs.1,600 in favour of the plaintiff, hypothecating a house situate in Firozabad, district Agra. The plaintiff brought suit No. 10 of 1925 in the court of the Subordinate Judge, Agra, for recovery of principal and interest due under the aforesaid deed by sale of the mortgaged property. A decree for sale under Order 34, Rule 4 C. P. C. was passed in favour of the plaintiff. Ismail Khan, the first cousin of the defendants, objected, in execution proceedings, to the house being sold on the allegation that it belonged to him and not to the mortgagors, the defendants. His objection was disallowed, and thereupon he instituted a regular suit for the declaration of his right to the house in question, which was dismissed by the first court but decreed by the court of the District Judge on appeal, on February 15, 1928. It was declared that the house in question could not be sold in execution of the decree obtained by the plaintiff on foot of his mortgage deed. Conse-

---

*S. A. 1520 of 1929

CIVIL

1932

ZIA UDDIN AHMAD KHAN
v.
AKBAR ALI

Niamat-ullah, J.

quently the decree became infructuous. A suit for a simple money decree was barred on that date.

The suit, which has given rise to this appeal, was instituted on July 10, 1928 for damages for breach of a covenant contained in the mortgage-deed, which runs thus:—

> If, in consequence of any act done by me, the executant, or my heirs or in consequence of a dispute raised by a third person, any loss is occasioned to the mortgagee as regards the sum due under the deed, the person and the property of the executant shall be made liable to make good the loss and costs etc.

The cause of action for the relief claimed by the plaintiff is said to have accrued to him on February 15, 1928, when the house mortgaged by the defendant-appellants under the deed, dated March 15, 1928, was declared to be the property of Ismail Khan and not liable to be sold in execution of the decree in favour of the plaintiff.

The main contention put forward in appeal is that the plaintiff's claim, which is in substance a claim to the original debt with interest, is barred by limitation. It is argued that, in so far as, the plaintiff is claiming to recover money advanced to the defendants, Article 62 of the Indian Limitation Act is applicable and that the period of limitation began to run from the date of the deed. That article provides for suits "for money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff for money received by the defendant for the plaintiff's use". We are clearly of opinion that that article has no application to the suit as framed by the plaintiff-respondent. It is not one for recovery of any money advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant for the use of the former, but seeks to enforce a covenant which is in the nature of indemnity. The learned counsel for the defendant-appellants referred to a large number of rulings in which Art. 62 was applied to cases in which the plaintiff sought to recover the consideration paid by him under a mortgage or a lease, which failed. In none of those cases did the plaintiff seek to enforce a specific covenant of indemnity contained in the deed. In determining the particular article of the Limitation Act applicable to a case much depends on the nature of the plaintiff's claim. If the plaintiff is entitled so to frame his suit as to make a certain article giving a favourable period of limitation applicable, it is not a valid objection to say that he could have framed it otherwise so as to make a less favourable article applicable. We should, therefore, find an appropriate article applicable to a suit for compensation for breach of a covenant of indemnity. In the Collector of Mirzapur v. Dawan Singh[1], Art. 116 has been applied and, in our opinion, correctly. It provides for suits "for compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered". The only question is as to when the period of six years, provided for by it, begins to run. It was contended that as the mortgaged property did not belong to the mortgagor, a breach of the covenant occurred on the date of the mortgage. We do not think this argument can hold good in the circumstances of the case before us. The covenant already quoted entitled the plaintiff to sue for compensation on loss being occasioned to him in consequence of a dispute raised by a third party. The plaintiff's right to recover damages, therefore, accrued when loss was occasioned to him in consequence of a dispute raised by Ismail Khan for the first time in execution proceedings taken in 1926, that is, within three years before the present suit was instituted. The loss was occasioned to the plaintiff when it was declared in the suit brought by Ismail Khan that the plaintiff-respondent was not entitled to have the house sold in execution of his own decree. This was on February 15, 1928 well within 3 years. It was on this date that the plaintiff was deprived of his security and of the right to have the mortgaged house sold in execution of his decree for sale. In these circumstances, we hold that the plaintiff's suit, which is governed by Article 116 of the Limitation Act, is within limitation, whether it is reckoned from the date of Ismail Khan's objection or the date of the decree nullifying the decree in favour of the plaintiff.

---

[1] I. L. R. 30 All. 400

The lower appellate court has applied Art. 97 of the Limitation Act, holding that the consideration paid by the plaintiff-respondent under the mortgage-deed executed by the defendant-appellants in his favour failed on a decree being passed in favour of Ismail Khan. The learned counsel for the appellants made a reference to a number of cases bearing on Art. 97; but it is not necessary for us to consider the applicability of Art. 97 or of the cases relied on by him in the view of the case we have taken.

It was also argued by the learned counsel for the appellants that the decree obtained by the plaintiff-respondent for sale of the house mortgaged to him was based on a compromise and that the mortgage-deed having thus become merged in the compromise and the decree based thereon, no covenant contained in the mortgage-deed can be enforced. We are satisfied that this contention is not well-founded. It may be correct to say that the mortgage-deed became converted into a judgment debt; but this cannot have the effect of making all collateral covenants contained in the mortgage-deed inoperative. The compromise related to the controversy in the suit, namely, the amount to which the plaintiff-respondent was entitled and his right to obtain satisfaction of such amount by sale of the mortgaged property. It did not relate to any other matter, nor did the decree proceed on the basis of such compromise. There was no question as regards the plaintiff's right to recover compensation for loss occasioned to him in consequence of a dispute raised by a third person. For these reasons, we hold that the covenant now sued on was unaffected by the compromise and the decree passed in pursuance thereof.

It was further contended that the only remedy which the plaintiff-respondent had was to obtain a decree over, under O. 34, R. 6, C. P. C. We do not think that the plaintiff could obtain a simple money decree under that rule before the sale of the mortgaged property and the sale proceeds proving insufficient to satisfy the mortgage money. Where a decree for sale becomes inoperative on the mortgagor being declared not to have been the owner of the mortgaged property at the date of the mortgage, O. 34, R. 6, can have no application.

The appeal fails on all the grounds urged on behalf of the appellants. It is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 22

MUKERJI, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

KANHAIYA LAL (Plaintiff)

versus

MAHADEI AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Court Fees Act, Sec. 13—'Lower Court'—Meaning of—Second Appeal—High Court remands suit to court of first instance—Whether fee paid on memorandum of appeal refundable.

> Where on second appeal to the High Court, the following order was passed:—"We modify the decree of the court below and remand the suit to the court of first instance for trial in its entirety", held, that the expression 'lower court' in Sec. 13, Court Fees Act, includes the court of first instance where the appellate court is the High Court, and the fee paid on the memorandum of appeal was refundable.

ORDER on application for refund of court-fees.

H. P. Sen for the applicant.

M. N. Kaul for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is an application to refund the court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal by the appellant under Section 13 of the Court Fees Act. The office report is in favour of the applicant, but we have considered the provisions of Section 13, in view of the rather complicated case before us.

It appears that the suit was brought against six defendants for recovery of a certain sum of money by sale of property. The suit was dismissed in toto by the court of first instance. On appeal to the lower appellate court, the latter held that the defendants 3 to 5 were liable, but the defendants 1 and 6 were not liable. The lower appellate court accordingly sent back the case to the court of first instance for adjudication of the liability of the defendants 3 to 5.

The plaintiff was dissatisfied with this order of the lower appellate court and filed a second appeal. Here this Bench held that the defendants Nos. 1 and 6 were equally liable and passed the following order:—

> We modify the decree of the court below and remand the suit to the court of first instance for trial in its entirety.

Now the question is whether this is a case which is covered by Section 13, Paragraph 1.

If we read the words "lower court" as including the court of first instance where the appellate court is the High Court, no difficulty would arise in granting the appellant the relief he asked for. In the last line of Section 13, Paragraph 1 the words "memorandum of appeal" would mean the memorandum of appeal filed in the High Court.

We do not see why we should give the expression "lower court" a restricted meaning. This being a fiscal enactment, it should be read, as far as possible in favour of the subject, and we, therefore, decide that the words "lower court" would include the court of first instance.

Then comes the proviso for our consideration. The whole of the subject-matter of the suit has not been remanded by us and, therefore, the certificate to be granted should authorise the appellant to receive only so much of the fee as would have been originally payable on the part of the subject-matter of the suit remanded. This, we take it, is the fee which has been paid by the appellant on his memorandum of appeal to this Court, because he was appealing only against the order which was in favour of the defendants 1 and 6.

---

*Application in S. A. 270 of 1930

In the circumstances, the whole fee paid by the appellant is refundable as reported by the office. We order accordingly.

Civil 1931
Dec. 18
Sulaiman, J.
Niamatullah, J.

MISRI LAL (Plaintiff)
versus
DEBI CHARAN (Defendant)*

Pre-emption Act, Sec. 17—Sale—Price—Included mortgage money, which was in fact due—Whether value of mortgage debt limited to the market value of property—Striking disparity between ostensible price and market value—Whether burden of proving actual price shifted on vendee.

Per Niamatullah, J.—Where the mortgage money included in the price was in fact due and both the vendor and the vendee agreed that that amount be made part of the consideration, (there being no dispute as to the remainder of the consideration which was paid in cash) the ostensible price cannot be considered to be otherwise than the actual price merely because it greatly exceeds what the property can fetch in the open market. Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prashad, 18 A. L. J. R. 974 dissented from.

Per Sulaiman, J.—Where the mortgage money included in the price was in fact due (i.e., the existence of the amount due on an arithmetical calculation of the principal and interest was not disputed), the court is not bound to find that the full amount due under the mortgage was a real part of the sale consideration.

Per Niamatullah, J.—It will be a highly objectionable mode of dealing with the evidence if we seize on only the disparity between the ostensible price and the market value, ignoring other circumstances simultaneously appearing and explaining the disparity, and to reserve consideration of them for the next step in the case, namely, to find whether the vendee has succeeded in discharging the onus laid on him by proof of the market price. The evidence should be taken as a whole, and if it does not suffice to prove, prima facie, that the ostensible price is not the actual price, the issue is answered against the pre-emptor.

Second Appeal from a decree of Maulvi Shamsul Hasan, Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri, modifying a decree of Babu Brij Behari Lal, Munsif.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the appellant.

Baleshwari Prasad for the respondent.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Niamatullah, J.

Niamatullah, J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption brought by him for recovery of possession of the property in suit on payment of Rs.400, which is alleged to be the market value of such property, on the allegation that Rs.1,200, the consideration en-

---

*S. A. 554 of 1929

Civil

1931

Misri Lal
v.
Debi Charan

Niamat-ullah, J.

tered in the sale deed executed by the defendant Nos. 2 to 7 in favour of defendant No. 1, does not represent the actual price and has been fictitiously mentioned to deprive the plaintiff of his right of pre-emption. The court of first instance decreed the claim on payment of Rs.400 on a finding that the price entered in the sale deed was not the actual price. The lower appellate court took a contrary view on the question of the price shown in the sale deed being the actual price; and in allowing the plaintiff's claim to pre-emption it made him liable to pay the entire sum of Rs.1,200. The only question in dispute in second appeal is whether the lower appellate court was justified in holding that the ostensible consideration was the actual price.

Some transactions, anterior to the sale in question, have a material bearing on the controversy and should be noted in chronological order. One and a half biswa share of Nagla Balli belonged to Baji Lal and Saughar Bahadur Singh, the share of the former being one biswa and that of the latter half a biswa. Both of them hypothecated their shares under a deed, dated May 4, 1907, to one Chet Ram for Rs.300. By a deed, dated June 13, 1920, Chet Ram assigned his rights under the hypothecation bond to Debi Charan, defendant No. 1, for Rs.350, though a much larger sum was due under the deed. There is little doubt that Chet Ram sold his rights for less than the sum then due to him, because he did not expect to recover all his dues, having regard to the value of the property and the personal remedy against the mortgagor and his other property being barred by limitation. Baji Lal, one of the mortgagors, having died in the meantime, his heirs sold his one biswa share on April 29, 1926. This is the sale in respect of which pre-emption is claimed in the present case. The deed recites that two-third of the mortgage money then due was Rs.1,150 and that a sum of Rs.50 was paid in cash by the vendee so as to make a total of Rs.1,200, which was the price agreed on between the parties. It should be mentioned that Debi Charan, who, as shown, had become the owner of one biswa, had the remaining half biswa sold in execution of decree obtained by him on foot of the mortgage and purchased it himself. It is, however, not known for how much it was sold at the auction.

The Munsif's view proceeds on the reasoning that the market value of the property sold, that is, one biswa, is not more than Rs.400 calculating it on the basis of certain transactions he refers to as exemplars, and that, therefore, prima facie, it could not be the actual price. Starting with that assumption, he threw the burden of proof on the vendee to establish "that the property in suit is worth Rs.1,200." He then winds up with the observation that "the defendant vendee was out of pocket for Rs.400. The market value of the disputed property comes to Rs.400 or so." Accordingly, he decreed pre-emption on payment of Rs.400. There is a palpable error in this treatment of the case. Assuming the plaintiff discharged the initial onus, which undoubtedly lies on him, the vendee is to establish, if he can, the actual price agreed on between the parties to the transaction and not, as the Munsif thinks, that the property is worth the amount entered in the sale deed as the price. The learned Subordinate Judge, on the other hand, took the view that the ostensible consideration mentioned in the sale deed was the actual price and that there was, therefore, no occasion to ascertain the market value of the property. As I read his finding, it implies that the plaintiff failed to discharge the initial onus, which admittedly lay on him. Unless the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge is vitiated by some error of law or is not supported by any evidence, it must be accepted in second appeal, which must fail on the initial point, namely, that the ostensible price is the actual price. It is, however, argued, on the authority of Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad[1], that where personal remedy under a mortgage is barred and the mortgage money greatly exceeds the market value of the property sold to the mortgagee himself, who pays a small amount over and above the mortgage money as the price of the property, the price should be deemed to be no more than the market value plus the cash paid. The following passage is relied on:—

> We agree with the argument raised on behalf of the appellant that the vendee is entitled to recover from the pre-emptor the full amount that he has in good faith actually paid for the property purchased, but we have to see what the appellant vendee did in the present case actually pay. He gave up the debt due on the bond plus Rs.100 for the property. The value of the debt due on the bond is clearly limited to the value of the property in question. Nobody would have given to the vendee a price for his mortgage debt greater than the security afforded by the property. Just as a time-barred debt is practically of no value, so a mortgage debt where the personal remedy is barred cannot be greater in value than the security itself. No one in the open market would have given the appellant any thing more than Rs.1,250 for his mortgage debt. It, therefore, is clear that the amount which the appellant paid for the property is not the amount which was due on the face of the mortgage deed but the amount which was recoverable under the bond from the security. Nothing more than the market value of the property could have been recovered.

The ratio decidendi of the above case, which was governed by custom, in the matter of pre-emption, is that the charge should be considered to be a property, and in judging of its worth for the purpose of pre-emption its face value should be disregarded and its value should be determined with reference to what it was likely to fetch in the open market. This way of looking at it is destructive of the right of pre-emption under the Agra Pre-emption Act, which limits pre-emption to sales; and to create a charge as a property of unascertained value when given in consideration of a transfer of the land on which it exists is to give to the sale the character of an exchange. If a pre-emptor insists on the charge being valued and refuses to accept it at its face value as the price of the property sold, he is at once out of court in cases governed by the Pre-emption Act. The case may be different where pre-emption is claimed in terms of a custom which allows pre-emption in cases of exchange as well.

The report of the judgment does not show whether the custom which governed the right of pre-emption in that case entitled the pre-emptor to pre-empt on payment of the actual price agreed on between the parties to the transaction of sale, as in the case under the Agra Pre-emption Act, or on payment of their fair value of the property, regardless of the actual price which, nevertheless, should be taken as indicating the fair value of the property, and whether according to the custom relied on in that case exchange could be the subject of pre-emption.

If the custom applicable in that case was substantially the same as the provisions of Section 17 of the Pre-emption Act, I respectfully dissent from the view and the reasons on which it proceeds. The word "sale" occurring in the Agra Pre-emption Act is to be taken as defined in S. 54, T. P. A. (vide Sec. 4(10), Agra Pre-emption Act.). The word "price" occurring in the definition of sale means money only. If charge included in the price be considered to be of fluctuating value according to market rate, it ceases to be money and is to all intents and purposes a commodity given in exchange for the land transferred to the owner of the charge.

[1] 18 A. L. J. R. 974

We are not dealing with a case in which the mortgage money included in the price has been inflated to defeat pre-emptions nor should I be understood as holding that in every case the amount due on paper, if mentioned in the sale deed, must be accepted as the true consideration. No question of bad faith arises in a plain case like the one before us, in which it is not disputed that the sum of Rs.1,150 was a real charge on the property sold, and the ostensible price cannot be considered to be otherwise than the actual price merely because it greatly exceeds what the property can fetch in the open market. The words "actual price" in S. 17, A. P. A., means the price which the vendee agreed to offer and the vendor agreed to accept as consideration for the sale. If the mortgage money included in the price was in fact due and both the vendor and the vendee agreed that that amount be made part of the consideration it must be regarded as price in its entirety.

The charge gives to the charge-holder a whip hand in the matter of making a purchase of the property in competition with others, and its value cannot be judged solely with reference to the amount which can be recovered by sale of the property in open market. Much will depend upon the extent to which there is keen competition amongst the intending purchasers. If there is such competition, the mortgagee being one of the bidders, no one can purchase unless he is willing to pay more than the incumbrance. If the mortgagee obtains a decree for sale and the property is put to auction, he can offer the whole incumbrance as his bid; and if no one offers more and the property is consequently sold to him, he is entitled to have the incumbrance set off against the price. If a co-sharer were to exercise his right of pre-emption under O. 21, R. 88 C. P. C., there is no doubt he has to pay the whole of the incumbrance included in the price for which the property had been knocked down to the mortgagee. I fail to see why the position should be different if he does exactly the same thing in taking a sale directly from the mortgagor out of court. Again, if the mortgagee purchases from the mortgagor only the equity of redemption, instead of the property free from encumbrance, the pre-emptor, if he takes the equity of redemption, will have to pay the entire charge. Can it make any difference if the mortgagor and the mortgagee take an account of what is due under the mortgage and fix the price with reference to the charge and an agreed cash payment?

It was said in the course of arguments that ordinarily a great disparity between the market value of the property sold and the ostensible price should suffice for the court to form an "opinion that the ostensible price was not the actual price" and that on proof of such disparity the court should call upon the vendee to prove what the actual price was. This may be true where nothing else appears in the evidence to rebut the inference arising from the disparity between the ostensible price and the market value. But where it is equally clear, for instance, that the vendee had reason to offer a fancy price or that the price included mortgage money charged on the property and to be in fact due but not recoverable otherwise than out of the sale proceeds, the fact that the ostensible price is more than the market value of the property will, in general, not be enough to throw the burden on the vendee; for, if the onus be shifted, the vendee can prove no more than what is admitted or proved, namely, that the vendee's special requirement induced him to pay a fancy price, or that the price included money charged on the property and not otherwise recoverable. It will be a highly objectionable mode of dealing with the evidence if we seize on only the disparity between the ostensible price and the market value, ignoring other circumstances simultaneously appearing and explaining the disparity, and to reserve consideration of them for the next step in the case, namely, to find whether the vendee has succeeded in discharging the onus laid on him by proof of the market value. The evidence should be taken as a whole, and if it does not suffice to prove, prima facie, that the ostensible price is not the actual price, the issue is answered against the pre-emptor.

In my opinion there is nothing objectionable in the vendor and the vendee including in the price the whole of the mortgage money if in fact due, though they are conscious of the prohibitive effect the price fixed would have on the right of pre-emption. Such a result is inevitable if we accept the existence and the validity of the charge. There is no fraudulent device in such a transaction, which should be distinguished from a class of cases in which the element of fraud is present. For instance, where the transaction settled between the parties is one of sale but to defeat pre-emption, first a mortgage deed containing stipulations calculated to raise the amount of mortgage money in a few years is executed and afterwards a sale deed is executed in consideration of the accumulated mortgage money which greatly exceeds the market value of the property. In such cases the deeds are part of a fraudulent device to conceal the transaction of sale which had been completed long before the sale deed, indeed, even before the mortgage deed came into existence. Again, if the vendor and the vendee misrepresent in the sale deed the amount due under the mortgage deed by adopting a wrong method of calculation or otherwise and thus inflate the price, different considerations will arise. Nothing in the nature of a fraudulent device can be suggested in the present case. The vendee was an assignee of the mortgage which had taken place 19 years before the sale and as already mentioned it is not suggested that 1150 was not due in respect of two-thirds of the mortgage.

No part of the mortgage money being fictitious and the mortgagor and the mortgagee (vendor and vendee) having agreed that it was due, it is not conceivable why the vendee should have omitted to include part of it in the price, for, if he did, he must have either relinquished it gratuitously, which is not a permissible assumption, or he allowed part of it to stand, which is ordinarily an impossible position. At least some plausible suggestion of fraud ought to be forthcoming before the good faith of the

CIVIL
1931
MISRI LAL v. DEBI CHARAN

Niamatullah, J.

transaction can be doubted. It is clear that in Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad[2], already referred to, no want of good faith was imputed to the vendee. On the other hand, it was clearly accepted that he "gave up the debt" and the decision was made to rest on the value of the debt determined with reference to the value of the property on which it was charged. As I have already said, this is virtually treating the transaction as an exchange. In a later case, Mst. Chunmun Kunwar v. Jagat Bali[3], decided by a Division Bench of this Court on February 24, 1927, in which, however, no reference was made to Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad[2] it was held that, as the vendees held a mortgage decree against the vendors > for a sum in excess of Rs.1,500 and that the decree-holders were willing to take over the property in suit at a valuation of Rs.1,500 in satisfaction or, at any rate, reduction of the decretal-debt, we are not prepared to say that Jagatbali and his co-plaintiffs are entitled to have this property at Rs.1,000, although as a matter of fact it may be the case that the property is not worth more than Rs.1,000. Any person who wants to take the property from the vendees must satisfy the decree of the vendees to the same extent as the vendees were prepared to treat the sale as satisfied, and so we hold that the proper consideration is Rs.1,500.

This is, in my opinion, a correct view, though it may not be in accord with what was said in Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad[2]. I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—The only point that is pressed in appeal relates to the sale consideration. The claim was governed by the Agra Pre-emption Act of 1922, and the question has to be decided in accordance with the provisions of Section 17 of the Act. Principles deducible from previous rulings under the customary law need not be re-examined. An interpretation of Section 17 was given in the recent case of Dhanukdhari Singh v. Suresh Singh[4]. I do not understand that my learned brother in any way doubts the correctness of that ruling.

Prima facie the ostensible price mentioned in the sale deed is to be taken as the real price. In the absence of other circumstances it is to be presumed to represent the real sale consideration. The burden lies on the plaintiff to give prima facie evidence to rebut this presumption. In my opinion it would be quite incorrect to lay down as a matter of law what quantum of evidence is necessary to shift this burden of proof. The question is one of weighing evidence and circumstances and its decision primarily rests on the court which is the judge of facts.

The sale deed in this case recites that the consideration was Rs.50 paid in cash and Rs.1,150 given credit under a previous mortgage deed dated May 4, 1907. I am unable to agree that if the existence of the amount due on paper under this mortgage deed is not disputed, it absolutely concludes the question and the court is bound to find that the full amount due under it was a real part of the sale consideration. To argue that both the parties must have of necessity agreed upon this figure, because it was open to the mortgagee to go through a possibly lengthy litigation, incur the necessary costs, obtain a decree on his mortgage, and bid against all possible bidders up to the maximum amount of his mortgage decree, has an element of consi-

---

[2] 18 A. L. J. R. 974

[3] S. A. No. 1504 of 1925

[4] [1930] A. L. J. R. 561

CIVIL 1931
MISRI LAL
v
DEBI
CHARAN
Sulaiman, J.

derable speculation in it. The finding is to be recorded not on mere assumptions of possibilities. If assumptions were to be taken into account then one can conceive of another set of possibilities. It may well be that the mortgage suit would be resisted on various grounds. Even an ostensibly good mortgage may prove worth nothing if the property was joint family property of the mortgagor and there was absence of necessity. The mortgagee may be put to considerable inconvenience in procuring evidence to prove legal necessity. The court may even cut down the rate of interest. The amount of costs incurred may be considerable and may not be recoverable at all if the security is not sufficient to pay even the mortgage money. There is a possibility that the mortgagee may not happen to be present at the auction sale and an equally remote possibility that the court may not give him permission to bid. To avoid all such extra trouble, expense and risk, a mortgagee may well give up a portion of his mortgage money than insist upon obtaining a paper decree for the full amount. On the other hand, the fact that the mortgagee has already gone through the lengthy procedure and obtained his decree may be a circumstance in favour of the vendee. The recital of the price in the sale deed may be intentionally inflated by collusion. The marginal note in Section 17 of the Act shows that the section contemplates cases where the sale price entered in the deed has not been fixed in good faith. A recital in the sale deed is not absolutely binding on a pre-emptor, who is not a party to the deed. It is impossible to lay down as a matter of law that in every case the amount due on paper, if mentioned in the sale deed, must be accepted as the true consideration.

According to the learned Munsif, the plaintiff had shown that although the ostensible price was Rs.1,200, the real value of the property transferred was only Rs.400, that the vendee had himself purchased the mortgage debt which had been set off in the deed for Rs.350 shortly before the transfer and that the personal remedy on the mortgage had long since become barred and if the mortgagee wanted to realise cash he would ordinarily not have recovered more than Rs.400. Both the original mortgagor and the vendor were members of joint Hindu families. In my judgment the learned Munsif was perfectly justified in expressing the opinion that 'the plaintiff's prima facie evidence is sufficient to throw the burden of proof on the defendant vendee'. In many cases a striking disproportion between the ostensible price and the market price has alone been held to justify the opinion that the ostensible price is not the actual price, and therefore shift the burden on to the vendee under Sec. 17(1) of the Act. The existence of the previous mortgage does not raise an irrebuttable presumption as to its validity. Nor is there any absolute presumption that the total based on an arithmetical calculation of the principal and interest is in fact due, and that no part of it has been previously paid. The question in each case is entirely one of weighing evidence and circumstances. It is for the court to decide whether having regard to all the circumstances the plaintiff had or had not made out a prima facie case for shifting the burden. I think the learned Munsif was right in holding that the initial burden of proof had been shifted in this case.

It will be noticed in the case of Jagat Singh v. Baldeo Prasad[5] the Bench of which I was a member accepted the finding of the lower appellate court on the question of consideration. The appellant's argument that the finding of fact of the lower appellate court was vitiated because the amount on paper ought to be accepted as the real consideration was repelled. I do not think that Tudball, J. was at all considering whether the charge should be considered as a property. The reasons for the decision were reproduced in order to show that the finding of the lower appellate court was not in any way vitiated. A finding of fact could be interfered with only if there was a legal flaw in it. In the unreported case of Mst. Chunnu Kunwar v. Jagat Bali[6], there was no finding at all by the lower appellate court on the question of consideration. Lindsay, J. and I had to record a finding of our own on the point. The mortgagee had already obtained his decree for the full amount and in the circumstances of that case we did not agree with the view of the court of first instance and held that the ostensible consideration was the real consideration.

I still adhere to the same view and cannot agree that in every case the court has no option but to hold that the money due on paper, if recited in the sale deed, must be accepted as the real price agreed upon between the parties. Indeed, in cases where the mortgage is a charge on property other than that sold, it would most probably be not the real consideration but the measure of that consideration would be the value of this other property. I do not think it is correct to say that if the onus be shifted, the vendee can prove no more than what is already admitted. The vendee can always give other evidence to show that the parties actually accepted a particular figure as representing the true consideration for the sale. He will certainly be at liberty to produce evidence, in addition to the recital, showing the real contract price agreed upon. Under Sec. 17(2) the onus is on the vendee to prove what the actual price agreed upon was. The recital cannot be conclusive. Sufficiency of evidence is a matter for the court to decide. The question whether he has discharged his burden is one purely of fact and not of law.

In the present case the lower appellate court has not agreed with the first court that the market price of the property was Rs.400. After pointing out that the property contained a good number of trees and a large area of fallow land it has remarked 'So on the evidence on the record the plaintiff's allegation as to Rs.400 being the market price of the property is not made out'. As regards the actual agreed price there was the evidence of several witnesses for the defendant. Its finding on the question of consideration is in the following words "So the evidence adduced by the defendant vendee in this case satisfactorily proved that Rs.1,200 was the actual price paid by him." The court has not said that the burden of proof had not shifted.

It was pointed out in Dhanukdhari Singh's case that if on a consideration of evidence of both the parties the court can come to a definite conclusion as to the actual amount of the sale consideration its duty is to decree the claim for that amount, and that it is only when it is unable to make up its mind, and cannot come to a definite conclusion as to the exact sale

---

[5] 18 A. L. J. R. 974

[6] S. A. 1504 of 1925, decided on Feb. 24, 1927

CIVIL 1931
MISRI LAL
v.
DEBI CHARAN
Sulaiman, J.

price that it should proceed to ascertain the market value. The lower appellate court in this case has recorded a finding on the actual price paid. That finding must be accepted in second appeal.

On this last mentioned ground I concur in the order dismissing the appeal.

BY THE COURT—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1932
Jan. 21
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

NAND KISHORE (Plaintiff)
versus
BEHARI LAL AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Contract—Written contract—Meaning doubtful—Surrounding circumstances at creation of contract—Conduct of parties—Whether can be looked into—To arrive at true meaning.

Where a written contract was doubtful in its meaning, the surrounding circumstances existing at the creation of the contract and the subject-matter to which it was designed and intended to apply, as also the conduct of the parties might be looked into to help the court to arrive at the true meaning of the contract.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of PANDIT PRAN NATH AGHA, Additional Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, modifying a decree of BABU SHEOBARAN SINGH, Munsif.

K. N. Katju, Iqbal Ahmad and S. N. Seth for the appellant.

B. Malik for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—These two appeals arise out of the same suit brought by the plaintiff-appellant under the following circumstances:—

It appears that a number of mills which did the business of grinding corn were in existence in Moradabad in 1927 and from sometime before that date. On September 1, 1927, fourteen persons, among whom was the plaintiff, agreed that only five of the mills should carry on the business of grinding corn, that they should charge the public at certain fixed rates, that they should contribute a certain amount towards a common fund and that the fourteen members should receive out of the common fund a certain share as their profits. The whole idea of the agreement was to avoid competition and a consequent cutting down of the rates, so that the mills may not be obliged to work at a loss.

The plaintiff's case is that by paragraph 17 of the agreement he was to get his share of the profits at the rate at which he was getting them, if the agreement could not last for the whole year for which it was meant. The agreement according to the plaintiff came to an end on January 8, 1928. The plaintiff accordingly claims a certain sum of money as his share of the profits.

The lower appellate court found that the pooling agreement did work for the whole year as agreed and that the charges to be made to the public for grinding corn were reduced as also the amount to be contributed to the pooling fund. The lower appellate court accordingly directed payment to be made to the plaintiff according to the reduced rate contributed to the common fund.

---

*S. A. 1559 of 1929

In this Court it has been urged that the learned Subordinate Judge entirely misunderstood and misconstrued the pooling agreement of September 1, 1927 and that on foot of that agreement the plaintiff was entitled to a much larger sum.

A translation of the agreement of September 1, 1927 has been handed over to us. In paragraph 3 it is said that the working mills were to charge for grinding different kind of corn certain rates given therein. Paragraph 4 said that out of the charges received by the mills certain fixed rates were to be paid towards the pooling fund. Paragraph 5 said that the balance left was to go to the mill-owners to meet their expenses. Paragraph 3 also said that the charges mentioned "below" were liable to increase or decrease at a meeting of the partners. We have it as a matter of fact that on January 8, 1928 a meeting of the partners was held in which it was resolved (see resolution No. 2) that the grinding charges for wheat should be reduced from 8 annas (for large quantities) to 4 annas 3 pies and to 5 annas (for small quantities) and that out of these charges 3 pies should go to the common fund. The plaintiff-appellant was the chairman of this meeting, and the resolution shows that his proposal was that the grinding charges should be 6 annas and not the rates just mentioned. There is no indication in the proceedings of the meeting that the appellant ever objected to the sum of 3 pies per maund being contributed to the common fund.

We have been told that the language of the agreement of September 1, 1927 is clear, and it is not open to the court to hold that by the resolution of January 8, 1928 it was open to the partners to make a decrease in the rate to be contributed to the common fund.

If we look to the entire circumstances of the case, we should have no difficulty in finding that there must be a minimum cost at which the mills must work in order to work without any loss. The idea of having a common fund has behind it the principle that the mills which do work should have the working cost paid to them, and the profits alone should be shared. In this view, when it was provided that the grinding charges given "below" were liable to increase and decrease, it must have been in the mind of the parties that with the change in the grinding charges there would be a change in the contribution towards the common fund. It cannot be said the language of the agreement is absolutely clear. It cannot be expected that out of 4 annas 3 pies, the rates declared at the meeting of January 8, 1928, the mill-owners who worked their mills were to get only 3 pies and were to contribute 4 annas to the pooling fund. This would induce the mill-owners to close their mills and no mill could work under these conditions. The result would be that the whole agreement would come to an end. This would be an absurd conclusion. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have decided in an unreported case, Privy Council Appeal No. 145 of 1920, decided on May 5, 1924—Sri Raja v. Sri Poosapati, that where a written contract was doubtful in its meaning, the surrounding circumstances existing at the creation of the contract and the subject-matter to which it was designed and intended to apply, could

CIVIL
1932
NAND KISHORE
v.
BEHARI LAL
Mukerji, J.

be looked into. Again their Lordships held in another unreported case (Privy Council Appeal No. 10 of 1923, decided on December 18, 1923, Mathaung v. Mathan) that where a written contract was of doubtful import, the conduct of the parties might be looked into to help the court to obtain an explanation of the true meaning of the contract. These cases apply clearly to the facts of this case, and from the conduct of the parties and from the absurdity to which the plaintiff's contention would reduce the contract, we can clearly infer that the idea of the parties to the agreement was that not only the grinding charges could be changed, but also the amounts that were to go to the pooling fund.

In this view, the opinion of the court below was right.

As to whether the pooling contract held good for the entire period of one year or not, there is the finding of the court below that it did hold good. This is a question of fact, but it was argued that new partners were introduced on January 8, 1928 and, therefore, the original contract came to an end. This is not a correct view of the situation. The original contract was no doubt confined to fourteen persons, but there is nothing in it which precluded other mill-owners being allowed to join in the transaction. Indeed, if the new mill-owners were left free to compete, the whole object of the contract would become infructuous. We find from the resolutions passed at the meeting of January 8, 1928 that no less than six new comers were invited to come to the meeting to be held on that very day at 4-30 P.M. Under Section 253 of the Indian Contract Act, with the consent of all parties to the contract, new partners could be introduced. We have already mentioned that the plaintiff himself was the president of the meeting of January 8, 1928. He never objected to the introduction of new partners. The finding of the learned Judge, therefore, that the pooling agreement did hold good for one year, is not liable to be successfully attacked.

The result is that the appeals fail, and we hereby dismiss them with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1932
Jan. 22
MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

SHEO NARAIN (Defendant)
versus
BALA RAO (Plaintiff)*

Civil Procedure Code, Schedule II, Para 20—Agreement to refer to arbitration—Arbitrators to partition entire estate including debts due to the estate—Arbitrators allotted debts en bloc to one party and directed heirs to pay in cash half the value of the debts to the other party—Award invalid.

Where a matter is referred to arbitration by an agreement between the parties without the intervention of a court of justice, the agreement to refer to arbitration cannot be revoked without good cause and a mere arbitrary revocation will not be permitted by the court. Pestonji v. Manokjee, (1868) 12 M. I. A. 112 and Bansi Dhar v. Sital Pershad, I. L. R. 29 All. 13.

A dispute having arisen between two brothers as regards their share in the property left by their father, the matter was referred to arbitration. The governing idea in the agreement of reference was that the arbitrators

*F. A. F. O. 198 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

SHEO NARAIN
v.
BALA RAO

were appointed to partition the entire property. The estate consisted inter alia of certain amounts due to the father on bonds, promissory notes, money lending business and bahi khata accounts, the total of which amounted to Rs.14,000. The arbitrators treated the entire debts as realisable assets and allotted them en bloc to one brother and directed him to pay in cash Rs.7,000 to the other brother as being the cash equivalent of his share in these assets; held, that the arbitrators travelled outside the scope of the reference and the award was not valid, and the court was not competent to enforce it. Mustafa Khan v. Phulja Bibi, I. L. R. 27 All. 526 relied on.

FIRST APPEAL from an order of KHALILUDDIN AHMAD ESQ., Subordinate Judge of Jhansi.

K. N. Katju and P. M. L. Verma for the appellant.

P. L. Banerji and Shambhu Nath Seth for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by one Sheo Narain, defendant in suit No. 21 of 1929 of the court of the Subordinate Judge of Jhansi. Sheo Narain and Bala Rao respondent were sons of one Ganesh. Ganesh died leaving considerable property. There was a dispute between his two sons as regards their share in the said property. Mst. Dulari is the widowed aunt of Ganesh. She claimed a right of maintenance.

The dispute between Bala Rao and Sheo Narain reached such an acute stage that the police sent up a complaint against them in the court of the Magistrate recommending that they should be bound over under Section 107 Cr. P. C. During the pendency of the proceedings against them under Section 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, two agreements were entered into between Bala Rao and Sheo Narain on September 13, 1928, under which they agreed that their disputes should be referred to the arbitration of a board of arbitrators consisting of seven persons. Mst. Dulari joined in one of these agreements. On October 17, 1928, Sheo Narain gave a registered notice to each one of the seven arbitrators intimating that he had revoked the agreement of reference and that the arbitrators therefore should not proceed to make an award. On January 23, 1929, Bala Rao, by way of a counter-move, applied in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Jhansi under Schedule II, Paragraph 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the agreements, dated September 13, 1928, be filed in court. On April 6, 1929, the arbitrators delivered an award. Thereupon Bala Rao withdrew his application, dated January 23, 1929, and presented an application on June 27, 1929, under Schedule II, Paragraph 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure that the award be filed in court. This application was numbered and registered as suit 21 of 1929 in the court of the Subordinate Judge of Jhansi. Notice of this application was served upon Sheo Narain, who contested the application upon various grounds which are to be found in his petitions dated July 30, 1929 and August 8, 1929. Only some of his objections are material for the purpose of the appeal before us. The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the objections of Sheo Narain, upheld the award and directed that a decree be framed in terms of the award. This order of the Subordinate Judge has been challenged in appeal before us by Sheo Narain; and three points have been argued.

It has been contended that Sheo Narain had revoked the reference by registered notices, dated October 17, 1928 and that, as the result of the said

CIVIL 1932
SHEO NARAIN v. BALA RAO
Sen, J.

revocation, the arbitrators were functus officio on April 6, 1929, when they delivered the award. It is settled rule of law that it is not open to a party to an agreement of reference to revoke the submission to arbitration except for good cause and "that a mere arbitrary revocation of the authority is not permitted." Pestonjee Nussurwanjee v. Manokjee and Co.[1]; Bansi Dhar v. Sital Pershad[2] and Ram Chandrapal v. Krishan Lal Pal[3]. The ground on which the agreements were sought to be revoked was that one of the arbitrators, namely, Gayadin had figured as a witness for the prosecution in the case under Section 107 of the Criminal Procedure Code. This was no ground at all for resiling from the agreements. Where parties have once agreed to a submission to arbitration, the agreement is binding and enforceable and cannot be annulled except for some such reason as that the agreement had been obtained by fraud, coercion or undue influence. It is opposed to all legal principles to allow a party to the agreement to revoke it at his sweet will and pleasure. We hold that the plea put forward by Sheo Narain did not put an end to the agreement of reference and that the award was properly made.

It is next urged that the legal effect of Bala Rao's application, dated January 23, 1929 that the agreement of reference be filed in court was to oust the jurisdiction of the arbitrators. No authority has been cited in support of this contention and we are aware of none. The scope of Paragraph 17 of Schedule II is no more than this that where an agreement of reference to arbitration has been entered into by the parties but the arbitrators have not so far functioned, the court has power to enforce the agreement against the parties where the arbitrators are ready and willing to act in terms of the reference. Paragraph 17 of Schedule II, far from implying an ouster of jurisdiction, predicates that the arbitrators have the jurisdiction to act on the reference and that the court should step in and ask them to exercise their powers as arbitrators if they are agreeable to do so. We overrule the contention of the appellant and hold that the application of Bala Rao, dated January 23, 1929 did not take away the jurisdiction of the arbitrators to make an award.

Lastly, it has been urged that the arbitrators have not partitioned the property in dispute according to the terms of the reference and that therefore the award should not be filed under Paragraph 20 of Schedule II of the Civil Procedure Code. The material portion of the agreement of reference is as follows:—

> Whereas a dispute has arisen between us the executants as regards the claim of maintenance of Mst. Dulari and as regards the partition of the assets of Upadhya Ganesh deceased which consisted of bonds, promissory notes, money lending business, bahikhata account, grain, cash, houses, miscellaneous articles, business, ornaments in hand and in the possession of Mst. Dulari widow of Sheo Rakhan Lal and whereas this dispute cannot be settled without arbitration, we therefore agree to appoint the following persons as arbitrators and umpire Whatever decision is given by the majority of the arbitrators and umpire in respect of the above named properties and in respect of the points in controversy between the parties and their respective rights shall be binding on us.

[1] 12 Moore's I. A. 1868, 112

[2] I. L. R. 29 All. 13=3 A. L. J. 613

[3] 17 Cal. W. N. 351

The estate of Ganesh Upadhia consisted inter alia of certain amounts due to him on bonds, promissory notes, money lending business and bahikhata accounts, the total of which amounted to Rs.14,000. The arbitrators have not divided these debts half and half between Sheo Narain and Bala Rao. They have treated the entire debts as realisable assets belonging to Ganesh and have allotted them en bloc to the share of Sheo Narain and have directed Sheo Narain to pay in cash Rs.7000 to Bala Rao as being the cash equivalent of his share in these assets. They have made the following remark in their award:—

> That whatever be the genuine valuation of the aforesaid assets of the deceased Sheo Ganesh in possession of Ganesh comprising of bonds, promissory notes, Bahi Khata account, shall continue as before in possession of Sheonarain because of convenience in realisation, and as Bala Rao is entitled to half its value, in lieu of it, Sheonarain will pay Rs.7,000 in cash and on the failure of the latter to make the payment, the former will be entitled to recover it legally through court and no objection of Sheonarain against it will be maintainable.

It has been contended on behalf of the appellant that having regard to the terms of the reference, the arbitrators were bound to divide the debts aforesaid half and half between Sheo Narain and Bala Rao, that they were not competent to allot the whole debt to Sheo Narain and to direct him to pay Bala Rao Rs.7,000 in cash as the value of his share and that this constitutes a serious illegality which invalidates the entire award. The learned Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the method adopted by the arbitrators was "very unreasonable" and that "the more discreat arbitrators would have divided the debts themselves." The court however held that the scope of the reference was wide enough to enable the arbitrators to deal with the matter in the way in which they had done. The court observes:—

> No restriction whatsoever has been placed on the powers of the arbitrators. In dividing a property between two parties, the arbitrators would have certainly the power to give the property or a larger part to one and to award compensation to the other. The present case is similar to this.

We are of opinion that where arbitrators are appointed to make a partition of certain property, in the absence of express directions, they have an unfettered discretion as to the mode of partition and the consequent allotment of shares. Where the property is of such a nature and character as not to admit of partition, or where the division of the property is calculated to seriously impair its enjoyment, the arbitrators can properly refrain from dividing the property into small portions and allotting them to the several claimants. In such a case, the proper course is to allot the property to a particular party and with a view to equalize the share to make the said party pay the money equivalent of the share to the other party or parties who may have a claim therein. The governing idea in the agreement of reference was that the arbitrators were appointed to partition the entire property which descended from Ganesh. These debts formed part of the divisible assets and were clearly capable of partition. The agreement of reference is that the dispute between the two principal claimants was with reference to the partition of that property and the executants asked for a decision from the arbitrators in respect of the above-named property and in respect of the points of controversy between the parties and their respective rights thereto. Wide and extensive as these powers are, they did not authorise

Civil

1932

Sheo Narain v. Bala Rao

Sen, J.

the arbitrators to refrain from dividing such of the assets as were capable of division. The arbitrators were certainly not justified in directing Sheo Narain to pay Rs.7,000 to Bala Rao as the cash equivalent of his share. We do not see any real difference between the facts of this case and those of Mustafa Khan v. Phulja Bibi and Yaqub Khan[4]. In this case, it was the duty of the arbitrators to divide a number of debts outstanding in connection with a timber trade. The arbitrators did not divide the debts but directed that one of the appellants and he only should collect these debts and account to the other parties in respect of them. It was held that the arbitrators had travelled outside the provisions of the submission and that the award could not be filed.

For the reasons stated by us, we are distinctly of opinion that the arbitrators, in not dividing the debts have not acted according to the scope of the reference and that in view of the circumstances of this case and the terms of the reference they had no authority to allot the debts en bloc to Sheo Narain and to direct that Sheo Narain should pay Rs.7,000 to Bala Rao. We hold therefore that the award in question was not a valid award and that the court was not competent to enforce it on an application under Paragraph 20 of the Second Schedule of the Code of Civil Procedure. We therefore allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge, dated July 10, 1930 and direct that the petition, dated June 27, 1929, be dismissed. As Sheo Narain has not succeeded in all his pleas and in view of the way in which he conducted his case in the court below, we make no order as to costs.

Appeal allowed

---

[4] I. L. R. 27 All. 526=2 A. L. J. 416

ANANDI DEVI (Plaintiff)

versus

MOHAN LAL AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil

1932

Jan. 28

Sulaiman, J.

Young, J.

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 122—Gift—Acceptance—May be either express or implied—No presumption of acceptance operating immediately upon gift—Gift—By husband to wife—Gift within wife's knowledge—Mutation effected —Acceptance to be implied.

Under Sec. 122 Transfer of Property Act there is no presumption of acceptance operating immediately upon the gift, whether known or unknown to the donee.

There is nothing in Sec. 122 T. P. Act to limit acceptance to an express acceptance, and acceptance may be either express or implied.

Actual or constructive possession is undoubtedly proof of acceptance, and in zamindari property, and especially in a case concerning husband and wife, mutation means delivery of possession, and the acts of the husband after mutation are acts on behalf of his wife. Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal, 25 A. L. J. 69 relied on.

First Appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri.

K. N. Katju and Baleshwar Prasad for the appellant.

N. P. Asthana for the respondents.

---

*F. A. 101 of 1928

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Young, J.—This is a first appeal from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Mainpuri. The plaintiff brought an action for possession of a 20 biswas zamindari share in muhal Mohan Lal, Mauza Birsinghpur, pargana Kuraoli. The plaintiff's case was that her father, Mohan Lal, had by a deed of gift, dated June 7, 1919, given this property to his wife, Musammat Kapuri; that in 1921 Musammat Kapuri died, and she (the plaintiff) and her sister then became the heirs to their mother's stridhan; that in 1924, by two sale deeds, dated January 19 and April 14, Mohan Lal, her father, having repented of the gift to his wife, and in fraud of his own daughters, sold the property to the other defendants in the case. The plaintiff prayed for a decree for possession.

The defendants admitted the gift, but said that the gift was fictitious and was never acted upon, that Mst. Kapuri had never accepted the gift and that it was, therefore, void.

The learned Judge has found that the gift was a real gift intended to be acted upon, but that the wife never having accepted the gift, it was void as against subsequent vendees. He, therefore, dismissed the suit; and the plaintiff appeals.

We accept the finding of the learned Judge as regards the value to be attached to the oral evidence called on behalf of the plaintiff, and his finding that an express acceptance by Mst. Kapuri has not been proved. The learned Judge, however, merely finds acceptance not proved, because he disbelieves the actual case set up by the plaintiff as regards express acceptance. He never directed his mind to the vital question as to whether there was proof of acceptance within the meaning of Section 3 of the Evidence Act. It has been argued here by counsel for the respondents that the only acceptance under Section 122 of the Transfer of Property Act contemplated by that section is an express acceptance. We, however, do not find anything in the section to limit acceptance to an express acceptance, and we must take it that acceptance may be either express or implied. As the learned Judge has not considered the question of an implied acceptance based upon circumstantial evidence at all, we must consider it. It has been argued by counsel for the appellant that the law in India based upon Section 122 of the Transfer of Property Act is similar to the common law of England with regard to acceptance. There is no doubt that in England the law is that acceptance of a gift will be presumed, unless dissent is shown. That would mean that, in this case, it would be for the defendants to prove that Mst. Kapuri had dissented from the gift. Lord Halsbury in his Laws of England (Vol. 15, p. 418) says:

> Express açceptance by the donee is not necessary to complete a gift. It has long been settled that the acceptance of a gift by the donee is to be presumed until his dissent is signified, even though he is not aware of the gift, and this is equally so, although the gift be of an onerous nature or of what is called 'an onerous trust'.

This rule of law has been applied to India by a single Judge of the Patna High Court in the case of Mahammad Abdul Nayeem v. Jhonti Mahton[1]. We, however, are not prepared to go so far. If Section 122 stopped short at saying that the gift must be accepted by or on behalf of the donee, as it would be natural for any person to accept a non-onerous gift, we might be prepared to hold that the English law applied in India. However, a difficulty is put in the way of such a construction of the Section by the fact that the Section proceeds to enact that if the donee dies before acceptance, the gift is void. Such an enactment makes it, in our view, impossible to hold that there is a presumption of acceptance operating immediately upon the gift, whether known or unknown to the donee. There is no difficulty, however, in reading into the Section that the acceptance may either be express or implied.

---

[1] 41 I. C. 389

We shall look at the evidence in order to see whether it is possible to hold in this case that there is an implied acceptance.

The defendants' own case was that Mohan Lal intended to go upon a pilgrimage and wished to make some provision for his wife in case some accident might befall him, and that therefore he executed the deed of gift. This story is set out both in the deed of gift itself and in the sale deed executed by Mohan Lal in favour of the defendant vendees. We take the story of the defendants itself. The husband and wife were living together apparently, according to the story, on friendly terms. The fact that the husband intended to go upon a pilgrimage must have been known to the wife and must have been the subject of conversation between them. The intention of the husband to provide for his wife during his absence, and the precautions he intended to take in case of his death while on the pilgrimage, must in all probability equally have been the subject of discussion between the husband and wife. The question of what the husband intended to do must have been disclosed by him in all probability, to his wife, and we think it can be assumed, in view of the subsequent conduct of the husband, that the wife assented to the proposal of the husband. It is to be noted in this connection that it is nowhere suggested in the pleadings or in the deed of gift that the wife was ignorant of the deed of gift. Further, the deed of gift was witnessed by four witnesses, two of them actually resident in the village of Karauli itself. There must have been publicity of the deed of gift, and we think that apart from what we have said above, knowledge of the deed of gift must, in all probability, have come to the wife. The husband proceeded immediately to apply for mutation. In the ordinary course proclamation was made in the village of the intended change of names. This, therefore, must have been known to the inhabitants of the village, and again we think that knowledge of this must, in all probability, have come to the wife. A few days later Mohan Lal filed the deed of gift itself in the revenue court. He did everything he could possibly do to put his wife in possession of the property. The revenue court itself in its order dated July 21, 1919 says:—

> Notice was issued. "The time allowed under the notice has expired. No objection has been taken. From the statement of the patwari the transfer of share and possession are proved. The application is within time. The property of Mohan Lal has devolved upon Mst. Kapuri Kunwar by means of a gift.

It is to be noted that the revenue court says that possession was proved. Actual or constructive possession is undoubtedly proof of acceptance, and in zamindari property, and especially in a case concerning husband and wife, mutation means delivery of possession, and the acts of the husband after mutation are acts on behalf of his wife. See the case of Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal[2]. We note this specially because the learned Judge has been greatly influenced in the decision to which he has come by the fact that after the mutation, the husband performed various acts which the learned Judge thought proved the contention of the defendants that there never had been a real transfer of the property or that the deed of gift was not intended to be operative. Further, when Mst. Kapuri died in 1921, Mohan Lal proceeded to get his name recorded in the revenue papers by mutation proceedings. The papers record that mutation was obtained by way of inheritance, that is, inheritance from his wife, Mst. Kapuri. If the contention of the defendants was correct, there would, of course, have been no necessity for this entry in the revenue papers. The plaintiff and her sister at that ime were very young and minors, and Mohan Lal was the guardian, at any rate, of one of them. They were not in a position to protest against or dispute the acts of their father.

All these facts amount, in our view, to very strong circumstantial evidence of acceptance by the donee, Mst. Kapuri, of the gift, and we hold accordingly that acceptance has been proved by the plaintiff within the meaning of Section 3 of the Evidence Act.

Counsel for the respondents has strongly relied upon the acts of Mohan Lal after mutation. We have examined them, and we note with regard to them that in spite of the mutation proceedings, Mohan Lal remained the lambardar of the whole village till 1923, and, further, that no proceeding is recorded by the learned Subordinate Judge by Mohan Lal with regard to any of the properties after May 23, 1921. The whole point, therefore, of the acts of Mohan Lal goes. His actions would be in his capacity as lambardar of the village. With regard to one or two actions in the civil court, we do not consider that these isolated acts prove anything. There is nothing to identify the property concerning which the actions were brought with the gift, and, in any event, in one of the cases Mohan Lal brought a false claim and in both the cases Mohan Lal lost. The appeal is, therefore, allowed with costs, and the claim decreed.

Appeal allowed

[2] 25 A. L. J. 69

Criminal
1932
Feb. 3
Boys, J.

RAGHUNANDAN AND OTHERS (Applicants)
versus
SHEW NANDAN AND OTHERS (Opposite parties)*

Criminal Procedure Code, Secs. 137 and 139A—Order under Sec. 133—Existence of public right of way denied—Magistrate must first proceed under Sec. 139A.

Where a person against whom an order is made under Sec. 133 Cr. P. Code, appears before the magistrate and denies the existence of the public right of way, the magistrate must first proceed under Sec. 139A, and if there is reliable evidence in support of the opposite party's denial, the magistrate should stay proceedings (under Sec. 139A(2)) until the matter of the existence of the public right of way has been decided by a competent civil court. The enquiry under Sec. 137 should not take place until after the decision required by Sec. 139A that the opposite party produced no reliable evidence.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by BABU GANGA NATH, Sessions Judge of Azamgarh.

N. Upadhiya for the applicants.
K. L. Misra for the opposite parties.

The following judgment was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—This is a reference by the Sessions Judge of Azamgarh in proceedings under S. 133 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

It does not appear that the Magistrate had in view from the outset at any rate the provisions of S. 139A of the Code. I have already had to comment on the unfortunate position in which this section has been placed in the Chapter. It should really have found place immediately after S. 135. When a notice has issued under S. 133 and been duly served under S. 134, the person to whom the notice issues, and whom for the sake of convenience I will call the opposite party, must then either perform that which he is called upon to do, or appear to show cause why he should not. If he decides to show cause he will also have to decide whether he wants the matter tried by a jury, and if he does want it so tried, he will make the claim.

At this stage S. 139A should have been introduced, for it is provided that upon the opposite party's appearance the Magistrate should forthwith ask him as to whether he denies the existence of any public right in respect of the way, etc. It is only after the question contained in S. 139A has been decided that the Magistrate will then, if he decides to go on with the case at all, proceed under S. 137 to take evidence and he will take that evidence either sitting alone or, if an application has been made for a jury, he will under S. 138 proceed to the appointment of a jury. Now, the Magistrate in the present case appears to have overlooked S. 139A altogether, though it is true that in the general inquiry which he held under S. 137, and which inquiry should not take place until after the decision required by S. 139A, he has held that there was no public right of way. Now, this departure from the procedure provided is not immaterial for while dealing with the matter as if he was acting under Section 137, he would direct his mind to arriving at a final determination of the question; while if, as he should have done, he had considered the terms of Section 139A he would have only had to consider whether there was any reliable evidence in support of the opposite party's denial that there was any public right of way. I have already explained in an earlier judgment, Manohar Singh v. King-Emperor[1], what I appreciate to be the object of S. 139A, namely, that it was to substitute a test of whether there was any reliable evidence in support of the opposite party's claim for the test which the courts had gradually come to impose, whether the accused's claim was bona fide—a test which had proved very unsatisfactory.

---

*Cr. Ref. 790 of 1931

Approaching this case from the point of view, then, not whether the opposite party had finally established that there was no right of way but from the point of view whether there was any reliable evidence, I find that there was a considerable body of evidence as set out in the judgment of the learned Sessions Judge which should have given the Magistrate pause and disposed him to act under Sub-Section (2) of Section 139A.

In the reported case to which I have referred I have spoken of the discretion which is given to the Magistrate, and manifestly he has a discretion; but it is equally manifest that it is a discretion which must be judicially exercised, and in the present case I have stated the reasons which dispose me to hold that he entirely overlooked S. 139A, and applied the wrong test to the evidence. In view of the nature of the evidence as set out in the order of the learned Judge referring this case, I am satisfied that proceedings should have been stayed, and I accordingly set aside the order of the Magistrate and direct that under Section 139A, Sub-section (2) proceedings be stayed until the matter of the existence of the public right of way has been decided by a competent civil court.

Let a copy of this judgment be sent to the Magistrate.

Order set aside

---

[1] 1929 A. L. J. 385

Civil

1931

Nov. 20

Lord Thankerton

Lord Salvesen

Sir George Lowndes

PRIVY COUNCIL

MANMATHA NATH MULLICK (Plaintiff)

versus

HEDAIT ALI AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Transfer of Property Act, Secs. 6(e) and 130—Lease—Lessee agreed to pay Government revenue—On failure of lessee to do so, lessor paid revenue—Later lessor assigned his right to recover the revenue paid—Whether assignee entitled to sue.

Under a lease the lessee agreed to pay the lessor a yearly rent and, in addition, the Government revenue, cesses and other public demands. On failure of the lessee to pay the Government revenue the lessor paid the sums due. Later the lessor executed a deed of assignment in favour of the appellant by which he assigned his right to recover the amount (with interest) of the revenue paid by him. Held, that what was assigned to the appellant was not a mere right to sue but a claim for a definite sum of money which the lessee was bound by his contract with the lessor to repay to him, and this would be an actionable claim to which Sec. 130 of T. P. Act would apply.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Patna.

L. De'Gruyther, K.C. and B. Dube, K.C. for the appellant.

The other side was not represented.

The following judgment was delivered by

Lord Salvesen

LORD SALVESEN—This is an appeal from a judgment and decree dated December 21, 1928, of the High Court of Judicature at Patna, which varied a judgment and decree dated June 30, 1927, of the Subordinate Judge of Cuttack.

The facts of the case which are not in dispute may be shortly stated as follows:—One Nani Mohan Banerji was an owner of two taluks, which may be shortly described as Narendrapur and Krishnapur. These properties were mortgaged for a total sum of Rs.1,49,000 and the appellant also held two postponed mortgages over the same properties for a sum of Rs.35,500. On December 9, 1914, Banerji executed a lease of his two taluks in favour of the first defendant. Under this lease the lessee agreed to pay the lessor a yearly rent and, in addition, the Government Revenue, cesses and other public demands. The lease also contains the provision that in case of any breach of the covenants to be observed by the lessee he should be liable in damages.

In 1917 the first mortgagees brought a suit to enforce their claims under the mortgages they held. As the result the two taluks were sold in execution to the appellant in 1924. The appellant purchased Narendrapur on January 26, 1924, and Krishnapur on May 17, 1924. The lessee continued in possession of the two taluks until the expiry of his lease on September 9, 1924, when he gave up possession. He has since died and his representatives are the respondents, who have not appeared.

During the currency of the lease the obligations of the lessee were duly performed until 1923, when he failed to pay the revenue instalment

---

*P. C. A. 13 of 1930

CIVIL 1931
MANMATHA NATH MULLICK
v.
HEDAIT ALI
Lord Salvesen

due in November in respect of taluk Narendrapur. He similarly failed to pay the revenue and cesses due in April, 1924, on the said taluk, and also the instalment of revenue and cesses due in April, 1924, in respect of taluk Krishnapur. In order to save the taluks from sale the appellant paid these instalments and certain penalties to the Collector in respect of their not having been paid at the due dates. Although in the suit these penalties are sued for, Mr. De'Gruyther in the course of the hearing stated that in respect of the small amount involved he limited his claim to the instalments actually paid.

In November, 1923, when the first instalment of revenue which is sued for in respect of taluk Narendrapur became due, Banerji and not the appellant was the owner of the two taluks, and the same applies to the instalment of the revenue claimed to meet the arrears of Government Revenue in respect of taluk Krishnapur. As regards the other sum claimed, it became due after the appellant had purchased Narendrapur but during the currency of the lease which expired in September thereafter.

Both the courts have held that the appellant is entitled to recover from the respondents the instalment of Government Revenue due in April, 1924, in respect of Narendrapur after he purchased the property. The Subordinate Judge held that he was equally entitled to recover the other two instalments which fell due during the ownership of Banerji, and he accordingly gave decree for payment of all three instalments along with the penalties which the appellant had been compelled to pay.

The High Court took a different view and came to the conclusion that while Banerji could have recovered these sums from the lessee in respect of the contract between him and the lessee, the appellant could only recover the revenue instalment which became due after his purchase of the properties in question. The effect of this judgment is, in the circumstances now to be narrated, to discharge the lessee of the obligations which he had undertaken in the lease and which, as a matter of course, devolved on his representatives, the respondents.

The appellant, on the other hand, maintains that as a mortgagee at the time when the instalments in question became due, he was entitled to intervene by paying the Government Revenue on the failure of the lessee to do so, as unless he had done so the properties over which his mortgage extended might have been brought to sale in execution. In point of fact, it would appear that Banerji in effect paid these instalments because they were deducted from the purchase price paid by the appellant. In addition, however, the appellant founded on a deed of assignment executed by Banerji in his favour on July 28, 1924, by which Banerji assigned his right to recover the instalments in question with interest thereon at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from the respective dates of payment to the date of commencement of the suit. The deed also constitutes the appellant Banerji's attorney and empowers him to sue for the amount of the instalments with interest at 12 per cent and on receipt of the same to grant valid and sufficient receipts and discharges, and on non-payment to institute suits for the recovery thereof and to grant sufficient receipts and discharges for the same.

The Subordinate Judge decided that in respect of the assignment the appellant was entitled to recover the two instalments which Banerji, as the then owner of the properties, would have been entitled to recover from his lessee. On appeal the High Court held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the revenue and cesses for the instalment of April, 1924, in respect of Narendrapur. They say:—

> By his purchase on January 26, 1924, the plaintiff stepped into the shoes of the defendant No. 2 (Banerji) and he acquired the status of the lessor under the lease. He could, therefore, enforce all the rights which the original lessor could enforce as against the defendant No. 1. The claim of the plaintiff, therefore, for the recovery of the revenue and cesses paid by him for the instalment of April, 1924, must be allowed.

They further held that the penalty paid by the plaintiff to the Collector which had been allowed by the Subordinate Judge should be disallowed, but as the appellant does not now insist on this part of his claim it is not necessary for their Lordships to decide this point.

As regards the other instalments, the High Court held that these could not be recovered by the appellant either in respect of his interest as a mortgagee to preserve the property or under the assignation. The ground of judgment is thus stated so far as the latter point is concerned:—

> What was assigned by the defendant No. 2 to the plaintiff was his right to recover damages from the defendant No. 1 on account of the latter's default in payment of the Government Revenue and cesses. The right to recover damages is a mere right to sue and such a right cannot be transferred under the law.

The clause in the Transfer of Property Act on which the judgment is based is Section VI, Sub-section (e), which is in these terms:—

> A mere right to sue cannot be transferred.

Their Lordships are clearly of opinion that this clause has no application to the facts of the present case. In their Lordships' opinion what was assigned to the appellant was not a mere right to sue but a claim for a definite sum of money which the lessee was bound by his contract with Banerji to repay to him. This would, their Lordships think, be an actionable claim to which Section 130 of the Act would apply. The failure of the lessee to fulfil this obligation does not give rise to a claim of damages within the meaning of the clause in the lease on which the High Court found, but to a claim for reimbursement of the precise sum which the landlord had disbursed to meet the obligation. This is the view on which the High Court proceeded in allowing the claim for payment of the instalment paid by the appellant after he became owner of the property in respect of which it was levied by Government, and their Lordships find it difficult to understand why the same principle was not applied to the right of Banerji to recover from his lessee the two previous instalments. This right having been assigned by a formal deed to the appellant, who has moreover been constituted by the same deed Banerji's attorney to recover the instalments in question, there is on both heads a clear answer to the contention which the High Court sustained that he had no title to sue

Their Lordships are accordingly of opinion that in so far as the High Court judgment disallows the claim for payment of the instalment of Rs.3,444 with interest at 12 per cent to January 15, 1926, and the instalment of Rs.5,583 with interest at 12 per cent from July 14, up to January 15, 1926, the judgment of the High Court must be reversed as well as the order as to costs. In strictness the appellant would have been entitled to interest at 12 per cent up to February 8, which was the actual date of the institution of the plaint, but as he has limited his claim to January 15, 1926, in his plaint in respect of all three instalments, he cannot now be allowed to claim a larger sum.

In substance the decree of the Subordinate Judge falls to be sustained, but it must be varied in so far as it allows the penalties paid by the appellant to the Collector which are not now insisted on. In form, therefore, it is necessary to recall the judgments both of the Subordinate Judge and of the High Court, and to grant a decree against the respondents as the heirs of Sheikh Haider Ali for the sum of Rs.15,452.8 and for the sum of Rs.1,681, being the amount of the costs awarded to the appellant by the Subordinate Judge with interest on these sums at 6 per cent from January 30, 1927, until the date of realisation. The appellant is also entitled to the costs of the suit both in the High Court and before this Board. Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Appeal allowed

Watkins and Hunter—Solicitors for the appellant.

Civil 1931
Nov. 19
Lord Thankerton
Lord Salvesen
Sir George Lowndes

RASHID AHMAD AND ANOTHFR (Plaintiffs)

versus

ANISA KHATUN alias ANIS FATIMA AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

*Mohammedan Law—Hanafi school—Sunnis—*Talak *addressed to absent wife by name, and repeated three times—Whether constitutes an immediately effective divorce—*Talak pronounced under compulsion or in jest—Whether valid and effective.

Among Sunni Mohammedans governed by the Hanafi law, words of divorce addressed to the wife by name, though she is not present, and repeated three times by the husband, constitute an immediately effective divorce, and the validity and effectiveness of the divorce is not affected by the husband's mental intention that it should not be a genuine divorce. A talak actually pronounced under compulsion or in jest is valid and effective.

Once a divorce is proved, the fact that for fifteen years after the divorce the husband treated the woman as his wife and his children born after the divorce as legitimate, could not undo its effect or confer legitimacy on the children.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad.

S. Hyam for the appellants.

H. R. Majid for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Lord Thankerton

LORD THANKERTON—This is an appeal from a decree of the High Court at Allahabad, dated February 1, 1927, which reversed a decree of the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Bijnore at Moradabad, dated December 15, 1923.

The dispute relates to the succession to the estate of Ghiyas Uddin, a

---

*P. C. A. 86 of 1929

CIVIL

1931

RASHID AHMAD
v.
ANISA KHATUN

Lord Thankerton

Mohammedan, who died on April 4, 1920, leaving considerable movable and immovable property.

The appellants are plaintiffs in the suit, which was instituted on June 28, 1922, and are a brother and sister of Ghiyas Uddin, and, along with respondents Nos. 10 to 12, who were impleaded as pro forma defendants, would be heirs to Ghiyas Uddin according to Mohammedan law, if the respondents Nos. 1 to 6 (who were defendants Nos. 1 to 6), are unable to establish their claim to be the widow and legitimate children of Ghiyas Uddin.

The main controversy turns on four stages in the matrimonial history of Anis Fatima, respondent No. 1, viz.: (1) her marriage to Manzur Husain in 1901; (2) her divorce by Manzur Husain early in 1905; (3) her marriage to Ghiyas Uddin on August 28, 1905; and (4) her divorce by Ghiyas Uddin on or about September 13, 1905.

It is admitted that Anis Fatima was married to Manzur Husain in 1901, but the respondents maintain that the marriage was invalid on the ground that both parties were minor at the time. The Subordinate Judge held the marriage to be valid on the ground that Anis Fatima was then adult and Manzur's marriage was contracted through his mother as his guardian, and this conclusion appears to have been accepted by the High Court.

The alleged divorce by Manzur Husain early in 1905 was challenged by the appellants on the grounds that it was not proved, and that, even if proved, it was invalid in respect that Manzur had not then attained the age of discretion. Manzur himself was the only witness as to the fact of divorce, and his evidence was rejected by the Subordinate Judge, but was accepted by the High Court as proving the fact. On consideration of the conflicting evidence as to Manzur's age, the Subordinate Judge held that he had not then reached the age of discretion, but the High Court reached the opposite conclusion.

The Subordinate Judge held that the marriage of Ghiyas Uddin to Anis Fatima was not proved, but this finding was reversed by the High Court, and the appellants acquiesced in the decision of the High Court, and merely maintained the invalidity of this marriage in the event of it being held that Anis Fatima was then the undivorced wife of Manzur.

The fourth stage was the alleged divorce by Ghiyas Uddin in September, 1905. The appellants' case was that on September 13, 1905, Ghiyas Uddin pronounced the triple talak of divorce in the presence of witnesses, though in the absence of the wife, and that the latter received Rs.1,000 in payment of her dower on the same day, for which a registered receipt is produced; there was also produced a talaqnamah, or deed of divorce, dated September 17, 1905, which narrates the divorce, and which is alleged to have been given to Anis Fatima. The respondents denied the fact of the divorce, and, in any event, they challenged its validity and effect for reasons which will be referred to later. They maintained that the payment of Rs.1,000 was a payment of prompt dower, and that the deed of divorce was not genuine, in that it was not written or signed by Ghiyas Uddin.

There are concurrent findings by the Courts below that Ghiyas Uddin did pronounce the triple talak of divorce, and that the deed of divorce is genuine, and their Lordships have seen no reason to depart in this case from their usual practice of not disturbing such findings.

The Subordinate Judge held that Ghiyas Uddin irrevocably divorced Anis Fatima, and that she was, therefore, not his wife at the date of his death in 1920, and also that respondents Nos. 2 to 6, who were admittedly their offspring, but all born after the date of divorce, were not legitimate. The High Court came to the contrary conclusion on the ground that the divorce was fictitious and inoperative, because it was a mock ceremony performed by Ghiyas Uddin to satisfy his father, but without any intention on his part that it should be real or effective.

As it was obvious that, in the event of their Lordships agreeing with the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge on this stage of the case, consideration of the earlier stages of the case would be rendered unnecessary, counsel were requested to confine their arguments to this stage in the first instance, and, after full consideration of these arguments, their Lordships are of opinion that the decision of the Subordinate Judge was right, and, therefore, it will be sufficient to deal with this stage alone.

There is nothing in the case to suggest that the parties are not Sunni Mohammedans governed by the ordinary Hanafi law, and, in the opinion of their Lordships, the law of divorce applicable in such a case is correctly stated by Sir R. K. Wilson, in his Digest of Anglo-Mohammedan Law (5th edition) at p. 136, as follows:—

> The divorce called talak may be either irrevocable (bain) or revocable (raja). A talak bain, while it always operates as an immediate and complete dissolution of the marriage bond, differs as to one of its ulterior effects according to the form in which it is pronounced. A talak bain may be effected by words addressed to the wife clearly indicating an intention to dissolve the marriage, either:—
>
> (a) Once, followed by abstinence from sexual intercourse, for the period called the iddat; or > (b) Three times during successive intervals of purity, i.e., between successive menstruations, no intercourse taking place during any of the three intervals; or,
> (c) Three times at shorter intervals, or even in immediate succession; or > (d) Once, by words showing a clear intention that the divorce shall immediately become irrevocable.
>
> "The first-named of the above methods is called ahsan (best), the second hasan (good), the third and fourth are said to be bidaat (sinful), but are, nevertheless, regarded by Sunni lawyers as legally valid.

In the present case the words of divorce addressed to the wife, though she was not present, were repeated three times by Ghiyas Uddin as follows:—"I divorce Anisa Khatun for ever and render her haram for me," which clearly showed an intention to dissolve the marriage. There can be no doubt that the method adopted was the third above described, and this is confirmed by the deed of divorce, which states that the three divorces were given "in the abominable form," i.e., bidaat. The learned Judges of the High Court have erred in treating the divorce as in the ahsan form, instead of the bidaat form.

The talak was addressed to the wife by name, and the case is not affected by the decision of the High Court of Calcutta in Furzund Hossein

CIVIL

1931

RASHID AHMAD v. ANISA KHATUN

Lord Thankerton

v. Janu Bibee[1] where the words of divorce were alone pronounced. In the bidaat form the divorce at once becomes irrevocable, irrespective of the iddat (Baillie's Digest, 2nd edn., p. 206). It is not necessary that the wife should be present when the talak is pronounced Ma Me v. Kallander Ammal[2], Ful Chand v. Nazab Ali Chowdhry[3] and Asha Bibi v. Kadir Ibrahim Rowther[4] though her right to alimony may continue until she is informed of the divorce.

Their Lordships are of opinion that the pronouncement of the triple talak by Ghiyas Uddin constituted an immediately effective divorce, and, while they are satisfied that the High Court were not justified in such a conclusion on the evidence in the present case, they are of opinion that the validity and effectiveness of the divorce would not be affected by Ghiyas Uddin's mental intention that it should not be a genuine divorce, as such a view is contrary to all authority. A talak actually pronounced under compulsion or in jest is valid and effective (Baillie's Digest, 2nd edn., p. 208; Ameer Ali's Mohammedan Law, 3rd edn., vol. 2, p. 518; Hamilton's Hedaya, vol. 1, p. 211).

The respondents sought to found on the admitted fact that for about fifteen years after the divorce Ghiyas Uddin treated Anis Fatima as his wife and his children as legitimate, and on certain admissions of their status said to have been made by appellant No. 1 and respondent pro forma No. 10, who are brothers of Ghiyas Uddin, but once the divorce is held proved such facts could not undo its effect or confer such a status on the respondents.

While admitting that, upon divorce by the triple talak, Ghiyas Uddin could not lawfully remarry Anis Fatima until she had married another and the latter had divorced her or died, the respondents maintained that the acknowledgment of their legitimacy by Ghiyas Uddin, subsequent to the divorce raised the presumption that Anisa Fatima had in the interval married another, who had died or divorced her, and that Ghiyas Uddin had married her again, and that it was for the appellants to displace that presumption. In support of this contention, they founded on certain dicta in the judgment of this Board in Habibur Rahman Chowdhury v. Altaf Ali Chowdhury[5]. Their Lordships find it difficult to regard this contention as a serious one, for these dicta directly negative it. The passage relied on, which related to indirect proof of a Mohammedan marriage by acknowledgment of a son as a legitimate son, is as follows (p. 120ft) :—

> It must not be impossible upon the face of it, i.e., it must not be made when the ages are such that it is impossible in nature for the acknowledgor to be the father of the acknowledgee, or when the mother spoken to in an acknowledgment, being the wife of another, or within prohibited degrees of the acknowledgor, it would be apparent that the issue would be the issue of adultery or incest. The acknowledgment may be repudiated by the acknowledgee. But if none of these objections occur, then the acknowledgment has more than evidential value. It raises a presumption of marriage—a presumption which may be taken advantage of either by a wife-claimant or a son-claimant. Being, however, a presumption of fact,

---

[1] [1878] I. L. R. 4 Cal. 588

[2] [1926] 54 Ind. App. 61 at 65

[3] [1908] I. L. R. 36 Cal. 184

[4] [1919] I. L. R. 33 Mad. 22 at 23

[5] [1921] 48 Ind. App. 114

CIVIL 1931
RASHID AHMAD
v.
ANISA KHATUN
Lord Thankerton

and not juris et de jure, it is, like every other presumption of fact, capable of being set aside by contrary proof.

The legal bar to re-marriage created by the divorce in the present case would equally prevent the raising of the presumption. If the respondents had proved the removal of that bar by proving the marriage of Anisa Fatima to another after the divorce and the death of the latter or his divorce of her prior to the birth of the children and their acknowledgment as legitimate, the respondents might then have had the benefit of the presumption, but not otherwise.

Their Lordships are therefore of opinion that the appeal should be allowed, that the decree of the High Court should be reversed, and that the decree of the Subordinate Judge should be restored, the appellants to have the costs of this appeal and their costs in the High Court. Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly.

Appeal allowed

Barrow, Rogers and Nevill—Solicitors for the appellants.
Francis and Harker—Solicitors for the respondents.

CIVIL 1931
Nov. 27
VISCOUNT DUNEDIN
LORD BLANESBURGH
SIR JOHN WALLIS

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL, REPRESENTED BY THE COLLECTOR OF EAST GODAVARI DISTRICT (Plaintiff)

versus

SANNIDHIRAJU SUBBARAYUDU AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Riparian Rights—Riparian owner—Has inherent right to take water from river for domestic use and irrigation—Irrespective of ownership of soil of stream—When river belongs to Government—Madras Irrigation Cess Act (VII of 1865), Sec. 1, Proviso—Interpretation of.

A person who owns land abutting on a stream has an unrestricted right to take water from the stream for domestic use, and a restricted right to take water for other uses connected with the land, of which irrigation of the lands which form the property is one—in the latter case the only limitation is that the amount taken shall not be so much as to hurt the right of the lower owner to have the stream passed on to him practically undiminished. The right of a riparian owner to the use of the stream does not depend upon the ownership of the soil of that stream. This right is a natural right and not in the strict sense of the word an easement, and it is not capable of being lost non utendo. McCartney v. Londonderry and Lough Swilly Railway Company, [1904] A. C. 301.

A river only belongs to the Government when the solum of the stream belongs to the Government. This will happen either when the Government is proprietor of the lands abutting on the river on both sides or when the river is tidal and navigable.

Where riparian property passes, the property, being riparian, has inherent in it, without special mention in the conveyance, the riparian rights, and the riparian owner is entitled to the protection of the proviso to Sec. 1 of the Madras Irrigation Cess Act.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Madras.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and B. Dube, K.C. for the appellant.

---

*P. C. A. 34 of 1931

L. De'Gruyther, K.C. and K. V. L. Narasinham for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

VISCOUNT DUNEDIN—The original plaintiff in this suit is dead and the suit is continued by his legal representatives. The plaintiff owned land abutting on a branch of the Godavari called the Chilapa Kalva. From that in exercise of what he considered his riparian rights, he took water. The Government, through the Collector of Godavari, charged a water-cess of Rs.8-5-8 for his use of the water. He paid under protest and then raised the present suit against the Government to recover the money so paid.

The sole question, therefore, is whether the water-cess was legally levied. The cess bore to be levied in virtue of the provisions of the Madras Irrigation Cess Act, No. 7 of 1865. The preamble of the Act is in these terms:—

> Whereas, in several districts of the Madras Presidency, large expenditure out of Government funds has been, and is still being, incurred in the construction and improvement of works of irrigation and drainage, to the great advantage of the country and of proprietors and tenants of land: and whereas it is right and proper that a fit return should, in all cases alike, be made to Government on account of the increased profits derivable from lands irrigated by such works.

Then follow the words of the Act which, so far as material to the present case, are to be found in the first section:—

> 1.—(a) Whenever water is supplied or used for purposes of irrigation from any river, stream, channel, tank, or work belonging to or constructed by Government,
>
> * * * * * *
>
> it shall be lawful for the Government before the end of the Revenue year succeeding that in which the irrigation takes place to levy at pleasure on the land so irrigated a separate cess for such water, and the Government may prescribe the rules under which, and the rates at which, such water-cess as aforesaid shall be levied: and alter or amend the same from time to time:
>
> Provided that where a zamindar or inamdar or any other description of land-holder not holding under ryotwari settlement is by virtue of engagements with the Government entitled to irrigation free of separate charge, no cess under this Act shall be imposed for water supplied to the extent of this right and no more:

Now the facts which have not been a matter of dispute may be thus stated:—

1. The plaintiff's land is bounded by the river.
2. At the place where he has taken the water there are Government lands on the opposite side of the stream.
3. He only uses the water he takes for the purpose of the irrigation of his own property.
4. The river at this place is tidal.

There are also two disputed facts:—

First, the plaintiff originally averred that he had taken the water at this place from time immemorial. The Government said he had only taken the water recently. The latter was found to be the case both by the Judges of the inferior court and the Court of Appeal, and consequently

Civil

1931

The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Sannidhiraju Subbarayudu

Viscount Dunedin

it cannot be and has not been argued to the contrary by the respondents in this appeal. Secondly, the Government aver that the river at the place where the water is taken being tidal is also navigable. The District Munsif before whom the case depended found that the river was navigable by big boats for six or seven months and by fishing boats for the remainder of the year. He therefore found that it was navigable as well as tidal. Upon that ground and the ground that the Government owned land on the other side of the river, he held that the river belonged to the Government. Riparian rights to be good against the Government, he decided, must be customary immemorial rights, and as he had found the fact of long user against the plaintiff, he decided that the cess was duly levied and dismissed the suit. On appeal to the Subordinate Judge he confirmed the judgment of the Munsif on substantially the same grounds. Appeal being taken to the High Court in Madras, they reversed the judgment and decreed the suit.

As to the river being navigable, they were not satisfied that the evidence tendered was sufficient. They considered that navigability must extend during all the year and, as the character of the fishing boats had been left dubious, they would have been prepared to remit the case for further evidence on the point had it been necessary for them to do so, but, in their opinion, the case could be disposed of upon the assumption that the river did in terms of the section "belong" to the Government, and they accordingly proceeded on that assumption. The judgment of the Court was decided by Ramesam, J., and the deciding passage may be found expressed as follows:—

> A riparian right is a natural right and is not acquired by immemorial user. It exists by law, it may be lost by the adverse enjoyment of another but it has not got to be enjoyed to be kept up. Whatever the enjoyment at the date of the grant may be, the measure of the right that passes is determined only by the configuration and the width of the river and stream. I therefore think in this case the plaintiff is entitled to draw water from the Addarapu kalva in exercise of his rights as a riparian owner and so long as he does not exceed those rights he is not liable to water-cess. That in India rights of the riparian owner include also the right to take reasonable quantity of water for purposes of irrigation scarcely admits of any doubt.

There have been in the Madras Courts a considerable number of cases dealing with the Act of 1865. The judgments pronounced in them, and still more the dicta contained in the judgments, are exceedingly contradictory. In their Lordships' view, it would serve no good purpose to go through the cases and pick out the different dicta with which they do or do not agree. They prefer, therefore, to lay down quite shortly the various propositions in law which suffice for the determination of the present case.

The first question that presents itself is obviously whether the river in the phraseology of the Act "belongs" to the Government. Now the word "belong," easily applicable to works, etc., is obviously ill-suited to be applied to a river. Running water at common law, though many people may have the right to take and use it, belongs in a river to no one. It passes on and successive people have rights in regard to it. So that literally no "river" could belong to the Government unless it was a river which from the source to the sea was within Government lands, or tidal and navigable so that it was always Government property. But clearly the

CIVIL

1931

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. SANNIDHIRAJU SUBBARAYUDU

Viscount Dunedin

word "belongs" cannot be so restricted. The idea, therefore, must be that the river belongs to such person or persons as have the ownership of the water for the time being at the place at which it is taken. Belonging points to exclusive belonging. It therefore seems to follow that within the expanded meaning a river only belongs to the Government when the solum of the stream belongs to the Government. This will happen eiher when the Government is proprietor of the lands abutting on the river on both sides or when the river is tidal and navigable. So much for the expression as it was used in 1865. But when there is the Act of 1905. That Act with its general and sweeping enactments has certainly the effect that in future when there is a contest as to the right of water, the opponent of the Government will be put to prove his title. He will not be able, as he otherwise would have been when attacked by the Government, to put them to prove their title. But counsel for the Government did not argue that the Act of 1905 made the river belong to the Government, and as the natural rights of persons are expressly excepted it can have no effect on the riparian rights of the parties in the present case.

The result is that in this case the river only belongs to the Government if the river is both tidal and navigable. Their Lordships, without deciding, will assume, as the High Court did, it is so; for if it is not, the right to levy cess is gone. They will therefore assume that it is. Now come the following considerations:—

1. A riparian owner is a person who owns land abutting on a stream and who as such has a certain right to take water from the stream. In ordinary cases the fact that his land abuts on the stream makes him the proprietor of the bed of the stream usque ad medium filum. But he may not be. He may be ousted by an actual grant to the person on the other side, or he may be and often is ousted by the Crown when the stream is tidal and navigable, because where the stream is tidal and navigable the solum of the bed belongs to the Crown. Yet in neither of these cases are his rights as a riparian owner to take water affected. He would have no right in the two cases put to erect an opus manufactum in the bed of the stream even if from the point of view of navigation or diversion of the direction of the flow it was unobjectionable, for the land is not his, but his rights to take water remains. In Lyon v. The Fishmongers' Company[1], in the judgments of Lord Chancellor Cairns, Lord Chelmsford and Lord Selborne will be found clearly laid down these two propositions:—

(a) A riparian owner has the same rights in a tidal and navigable river as he has in a river which is not tidal and navigable.

(b) The right of a riparian owner to the use of the stream does not depend upon the ownership of the soil of the stream.

2. The right of a riparian owner to take water is, first of all, for domestic use, and then for other uses connected with the land, of which irrigation of the lands which form the property is one.

But there is a difference in degree between these primary and secondary rights. The whole matter was carefully explained by Lord Cairns in Swindon Waterworks Company v. Wilts and Berks Canal Navigation Company[2]. At p. 704 Lord Cairns says:—

---

[1] 1 A. C. 662

[2] L. R. 7 E & I. 697

> Undoubtedly the lower riparian owner is entitled to the accustomed flow of the water for the ordinary purposes for which he can use the water, that is quite consistent with the right of the upper owner also to use the water for all ordinary purposes, namely, as has been said, ad lavandum et ad potandum, whatever portion of the water may be thereby exhausted, and may cease to come down by reason of that use. But, further, there are uses, no doubt, to which the water may be put by the upper owner, namely, uses connected with the tenement of that upper owner. Under certain circumstances, and provided no material injury is done, the water may be used and may be diverted for a time by the upper owner for the purpose of irrigation. That may well be done; the exhaustion of the water which may thereby take place may be so inconsiderable as not to form a subject of complaint by the lower owner, and the water may be restored after the object of irrigation is answered, in a volume substantially equal to that in which it passed before.

The same views were expressed by Lord Macnaghten in the more recent case of McCartney v. Londonderry and Lough Swilly Railway Company[8]. At p. 317 he says:—

> In the ordinary or primary use of flowing water a person dwelling on the banks of a stream is under no restriction. In the exercise of his ordinary rights he may exhaust the water altogether. No lower proprietor can complain of that. In the exercise of rights extraordinary, but permissible, the limit of which has never been accurately defined and probably is incapable of accurate definition, a riparian owner is under considerable restrictions. The use must be reasonable. The purposes for which the water is taken must be connected with his tenement, and he is bound to restore the water which he takes and uses for those purposes substantially undiminished in volume and unaltered in character.

Now, in speaking of the returning of the water it must be remembered that both Lord Cairns and Lord Macnaghten were speaking of a diversion of the whole stream. When only a part of the stream is taken, and that for purposes of irrigation, the only limitation is that the amount taken shall not be so much as to hurt the right of the inferior owner to have the stream passed on to him practically undiminished.

3. Further, the right is a natural right and not in the strict sense of the word an easement, though in many cases it has been called an easement. In particular, it is not capable of being lost non utendo and the maxim tantum prescriptum quantum possessum has no application. It is not the only right of this class—analogous to an easement and yet not strictly an easement. The right of support, that is to say the natural right of support as distinguished from the easement of enhanced support, is another example. It is probably a confusion as to this that led the lower courts in this case astray.

Applying these principles, it follows that the plaintiff had absolute right to take the water and use it for irrigation of his property, for there is no complaint at the instance of a lower proprietor that too much has been taken, and he uses it for his own property alone. But then comes the Act, and although the plaintiff is within his rights in taking, yet on the hypothesis that the water comes from a river belonging to the Government, he is liable in cess unless he can have resort to the proviso. In Kan-

---

[8] [1904] A. C. 301

dukuri Balasurya Row v. Secretary of State for India in Council (the Urlam case)[4], which has been so often cited and so often commented on, Lord Parker puts the point quite clearly at p. 172:—

> If, for example, a riparian owner irrigates his land with water derived from a river or stream of which it can be truly said that it is a river or stream belonging to the Government, a cess would appear to be leviable even though the Government had never spent a single rupee in improving the source of supply. If in order to avoid this result, reliance were placed on the first proviso, the question would arise whether it were possible to imply some engagement with the Government arising out of the natural or prescriptive right of the riparian owner.

The case that Lord Parker is here putting is where there is no more than the naked fact that the taker of the water takes it in respect of either a natural or of an easement right. Lord Parker did not go on to decide in terms the question he had raised. He did not do so because there was something more to be considered in the case before him, viz., the effect of the sanad arranged at the time of the permanent settlement. Nor does the Urlam case actually decide the present case, because the rights of the zemindar in question were easement rights. The actual decision necessarily shows this, because the enjoyment was limited by the size of the channels and cuts which brought the water.

Nevertheless in the present case their Lordships think that what was clearly laid down in that case decided the point. It was obviously possible to argue that by engagement was meant an engagement which specially dealt with the supply claimed, but this argument was rejected. On p. 173 Lord Parker says:—

> Their Lordships cannot accept the contention that the proviso applies only where there is an express contract that the supply to which the person claiming the protection of the proviso is entited shall be free from anything in the nature of a future tax.

And then the judgment goes on, after a review of history as to the permanent settlement and an argument which need not be quoted, to find in terms that the Government sanad permanently fixing the jumma for the property (which, it may be added, was accompanied by the Zemindar's kabuliyat or counterpart engaging with Government for the payment of the permanently settled jumma) may be such an engagement, though it makes no mention of water rights. In other words, if the water rights claimed are within the property which was, so to speak, enfranchised by the jumma fixed at the permanent settlement, then the sanad which fixed the jumma is an engagement within the meaning of the Act. Of course, the permanent settlement was dealing with the Government right to a payment which represented and replaced the melvaram of more ancient times, but the test is the same as the test which would be applied to a conveyance. In a conveyance you ask what passed. In the case of the permanent settlement you ask what was the extent of the property that was settled. In the Urlam case the water rights in question passed because they were existing water rights enjoyed by way of easement at the time of the settlement. Here what passed was the property, and the property, being riparian, had inherent in it without special mention the riparian rights. While it must

---

[4] 44 I. A. 166

CIVIL

1931

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL v. SANNIDHIRAJU SUBBARAYUDU

Viscount Dunedin

be understood that their Lordships must not be held to concur in each and all of the expressions used in the judgment of the High Court, they are of opinion that the result arrived at by them was right.

An observation is not out of place that, although it is well settled that an enactment cannot be cut down in its meaning by the preamble, yet it is at least satisfactory to feel that the present judgment is in accordance with the express intention of the preamble when a judgment to the opposite effect would have been a flagrant overstepping of it.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty to dismiss the appeal, with costs as between solicitor and client, in accordance with the terms upon which the Government obtained special leave to appeal in this case.

Appeal dismissed

Solicitor, India Office—Solicitor for the appellant.

Hy. S. L. Polak—Solicitor for the respondents.

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 10

BANERJI, J.
KING, J.

HIGH COURT

BISHAMBHAR NATH (Defendant)
versus
THE AGRA ELECTRIC STORES, LIMITED THROUGH LIQUIDATOR (Plaintiff)*

Companies Act (VII of 1913)—Schedule I, Table A, Art. 28, and Limitation Act, Art. 115—Company—Share—Unpaid calls—Forfeiture—Art. 28 of Table A creates special contract on forfeiture—Limitation—Three years from date of forfeiture.

On failure of a shareholder to pay the calls due on his share, the company forfeited the share. Subsequently the Company went into liquidation, and within three years from the date of forfeiture, the liquidator instituted the present suit for recovery of money in respect of unpaid calls with interest up to the date of the institution of the suit. Held, (1) that under Art. 28 of Table A of the Companies Act the cause of action for the present suit arose when the share was forfeited, and Art. 115 of the Limitation Act applied to the present suit, which was within time (Habib Rowji v. The Standard Aluminium and Brass Works Ltd., I. L. R. 49 Bom. 715 relied on); (2) that under Art. 14 of Table A of the Companies Act the liquidator was entitled to interest at 5 per cent per annum on the unpaid calls up to the date of forfeiture. but no interest was claimable from the date of forfeiture to the date of suit, in the absence of any provision of law or contract.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. N. DIKSHIT ESQ., Additional Subordinate Judge of Agra, modifying a decree of BABU KISHORI LAL, Munsif.

N. P. Asthana, K. N. Katju, B. Malik and G. Agarwala for the appellant.

S. K. Dar and Gopi Nath Kunzru for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

King, J.

KING, J.—This is a defendant's appeal in a suit by a liquidator of a private limited liability company for recovery of money for certain calls on shares which were not fully paid up.

---

*S. A. 258 of 1930

The Agra Electric Stores Ltd. was a private limited liability company and the defendant was a signatory to the Memorandum of Association and he was a subscriber of one share of Rs.2,000. On November 10, 1924 he paid a sum of Rs.500. The balance of Rs.1,500 he was called on to pay on allotment and on two calls made by the company, that is by March 2, 1925, Rs.1,500 ought to have been paid by the defendant-appellant on his share.

On March 22, 1926 the directors of the company forfeited the appellant's share. Eventually, on May 9, 1928 Parshotam Das Agarwal was appointed a voluntary liquidator of the company by a resolution of the company and on November 3, 1928 certain powers are alleged to have been given to the liquidator. The defendant not having paid the money due, the liquidator instituted the present suit on March 16, 1929 for recovery of the sum of Rs.1,500 and interest.

Various pleas were raised in defence, but the learned munsif repelled the contention of the defendant and decreed the suit for a sum of Rs.1,500 with interest at 5 per cent per annum up to the date of forfeiture.

The defendant thereupon appealed to the lower appellate court and the plaintiff filed cross-objection. The appeal was dismissed but the cross-objection was allowed. Hence the present appeal by the defendant before us. The learned advocate for the appellant has argued before us five points. In our opinion there is no force in any of them except the fifth, which was that the cross-objection of the plaintiff in the court below should not have been allowed.

The first point taken is that the suit is barred by Art. 112 of the Limitation Act. It was contended by the learned advocate that as on March 2, 1925 the money on all the calls had become due, the suit ought to have been instituted within three years from the date when the amount became due. The courts below have held that the forfeiture of the share having been made on March 22, 1926, the suit of the plaintiff was within time. The court below repelled the contention of the defendant following the case of Habib Rowji v. The Standard Aluminium and Brass Works Ltd[1].

The learned advocate for the appellant has submitted that the articles of association in the Bombay case were different from the articles of association in the present case. We have therefore to see whether Art. 28 of Table A of the Indian Companies Act, which is applicable to this case, gives the liquidator of a company the right to sue within three years from the date of the forfeiture. We have examined the articles of association in the Bombay case and we find that there is really no difference between the provision of Art. 28 of Table A attached to the Indian Companies Act and the articles in the Bombay case. We are of opinion that the point raised by the appellant has no force as the present suit was instituted within three years from the date of the forfeiture and Art. 115 of the Limitation Act applies.

The next point that is raised here is that the liquidator had no right to sue inasmuch as in the resolutions of November 3, 1928, no power was given to the liquidator to institute suits. It was urged that all that the liquidator could do was to sell the assets of the company within one month. It seems to us that this point raised by the learned advocate does not take into account the provisions of the Indian Companies Act. Section 207 of the Indian Companies Act lays down the consequences of voluntary winding up of a company and the powers of a liquidator appointed. We find that in the resolution referred to by the learned advocate for the appellant there is no express prohibition laid down against instituting suits. It is true there is no express power given to bring suits, but we do not think that it was necessary for the liquidator to have express powers to exercise powers which the law gives him under the Indian Companies Act. We are therefore of opinion that the liquidator was not restricted from instituting the present suit and there is no force in the plea.

---

[1] I. L. R. 49 Bom. 715

The third point taken is that one of the directors of the company having written a letter to the liquidator on March 21, 1929, the liquidator could not institute the suit, it being necessary for him to obtain the consent of the directors before he could institute the suit. We find that on March 6, 1929 the liquidator wrote a letter to one of the directors. He waited for ten days for an answer. He instituted the present suit on March 16, 1929 and it was not till March 21, 1929 that one of the directors wrote the letter referred to by the defendant. In our opinion, the effect of the letter cannot be to take away the statutory rights of the liquidator to institute the present suit.

The fourth ground taken is that it was the duty of the directors to take steps to sell the forfeited share and reduce the liabilities of the defendant and that as the company was working at a profit in 1926, the directors should have sold the shares. In our opinion, there is no force in this contention and we cannot allow it to be raised for the first time in second appeal.

Lastly it is urged that the court below should not have allowed interest from the date of forfeiture to the date of suit. We are of opinion that there is substance in this plea. There was no contract or claim upon which the claim for interest is based. In our opinion the court of first instance was right in holding that no interest was claimable after the date of forfeiture and before the suit, in the absence of any provision of law or contract. The lower appellate court has held that under Art. 14, Table A, interest was payable, but in our opinion interest that is payable under Art. 14 is interest as a share-holder and the defendant ceased to be a shareholder of the company on the date when the share was forfeited. See also Stocken's Case[2].

We therefore modify the decree of the lower appellate court and restore the decree of the court of first instance. Parties will pay and receive costs in proportion to failure and success, in this Court and the lower appellate court.

Decree modified

---

[2] [1868] L. R. 3 Ch. Ap. 412

Civil

1932

Jan. 8

Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

GULAB SINGH (Applicant)
versus
RAGHUBIR SARAN AND OTHERS (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 21, R. 90 and Or. 21, R. 69(1)—Reasons of adjournment of sale not recorded in writing—Whether constitutes material irregularity.

Where, on the date fixed for sale of property, in execution of a decree on a mortgage, the sale officer verbally announced to those present that the sale was to take place on the following day but he did not record his reasons in writing for the adjournment nor notify the hour when the sale was to take place, nor was there any mention in the sale proclamation of any incumbrance upon the property although it was subject to a prior incumbrance, and the property, which had been once purchased by the decree-holder himself, in 1918, for Rs.10,000, was eventually sold in 1931, for Rs.2,700, held, that the property was sold for an inadequate consideration as a result of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale.

FIRST APPEAL from an order of B. D. KANKON, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

P. L. Banerji and Shabd Saran for the appellant.

S. K. Dar and B. Mukerji for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mears, C. J.

MEARS, C. J.—This is an appeal by the decree-holder and is directed against an order of the learned Subordinate Judge of Moradabad, dated May 9, 1931, refusing to set aside an auction sale on the petition of the decree-holder under O. 21, Rule 90 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

Gulab Singh held a decree against Rup Basant Singh and others in enforcement of a mortgage, dated August 18, 1923. In execution of this decree, the zemindari property of the judgment-debtors was advertised for sale and July 21 was fixed for sale. On that date, the officer conducting the sale had no time to put up this property to sale. He continued the sale on July 22, 1930 and the property was knocked down to Raghubir Saran for Rs.2,700. Gulab Singh made an application for setting aside this sale on the ground that there was material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale and that the property had been sold for a grossly inadequate value. The lower court repelled these contentions of Gulab Singh and dismissed the application; hence this appeal.

Under Order 21, Rule 90 C. P. C. three points have got to be determined:—(1) Whether there has been a material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale, (2) Whether the property has been sold for an unreasonably low price? and (3) Whether the injury to the judgment-debtor or the decree-holder has resulted in consequence of the material irregularity?

The decree-holder complains that the sale officer did not record his reasons in writing for the adjournment of the sale from July 21 to July 22. Under Order 21, Rule 69(1) C. P. C. a statutory duty was cast upon the officer conducting the sale that in the event of his adjourning the sale he must record his reasons for such adjournment. No reasons for the ad-

---

*F. A. F. O. 128 of 1931

CIVIL

1932

GULAB SINGH
v.
RAGHUBIR SARAN

Sears, C. J.

journment were recorded in writing. We are of opinion that this constitutes a material irregularity.

Thakur Bijaipal Singh, the officer conducting the sale has been examined in this case on behalf of the auction-purchaser. He has stated that he verbally announced to those persons present that the sale was to take place on the following day. The court below has believed him and we do not see any reason for discrediting him. The fact however remains that he did not record any reasons in writing. It is also in evidence that he did not notify the hour when the sale was to take place. He states that it was customary with him to hold the sale every day at 2-30 P.M. He left it to the persons assembled before him to infer from this circumstance that the sale would take place the following day at the usual hour, namely, at 2-30 P.M. This procedure seems to us to be irregular and clearly opposed to Order 21, Rule 69 C. P. C. Apart from these irregularities we find that in the sale proclamation there is no mention of any incumbrance upon this property. We have been told however that this property was subject to a prior incumbrance dated January 3, 1918. This was another irregularity which seriously vitiates the sale proclamation. Considering all the circumstances we hold that there was material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale.

The property which is the subject-matter of dispute was purchased by Gulab Singh under a sale deed dated October 2, 1918 for Rs.10,000. On August 18, 1923, Gulab Singh sold this property to Rup Basant Singh for Rs.20,000. Out of the consideration, the vendee was not in a position to pay Rs.6,000 to Gulab Singh and so the mortgage bond in suit was executed in his favour. The Government revenue of the property in dispute is said to be Rs.77. We have got no clear evidence before us to come to any conclusion as regards the real value of this property or why it increased so markedly in value in 1923. The property has been sold for Rs.2,700. It appears to be a curious circumstance that the property which was purchased by Gulab Singh for Rs.10,000 on October 2, 1918, could have depreciated so much as to be of the value of only Rs.2,700 on July 2, 1931. We are of opinion that the property has been sold for an inadequate consideration. Considering all the surrounding circumstances, we have no doubt in our mind that the depreciation in value has resulted by reason of material irregularity in publishing and conducting the sale. We therefore allow the appeal, set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge, dated May 9, 1931 and remand the case to the trial court with direction to execute the decree after a fresh proclamation in due course of law. We make no order as to costs.

Appeal allowed

Civil 1932
Jan. 20
Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

SIDH NATH TEWARI (Decree-holder)
versus
TEJ BAHADUR SINGH (Decree-holder) AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 73—'Where assets are held by a court'—Meaning of—Judgment-debtor deposits a certain sum to secure postponement of sale—Whether money so lying in court is an 'asset' available for rateable distribution.

The first seven words in Sec. 73 C. P. C., viz., where assets are held by a court, must be given the plain and ordinary construction, and the word 'assets' is not confined to 'assets' realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree.

The property of a judgment-debtor was about to be put up for sale at the instance of a decree-holder when the judgment-debtor deposited a certain sum in court in order to secure the postponement of the sale. Thereupon another decree-holder, who had, before the above-mentioned payment by the judgment-debtor, made an application to the court for the execution of his decree for the payment of money passed against the same judgment-debtor, claimed to have a rateable distribution of the aforesaid sum held by the court; held, that the money so lying in court was an 'asset' available for rateable distribution. Noor Mohamed v. Bilasiram, I. L. R. 47 Cal. 515 relied on.

Civil Revision against the order of the Subordinate Judge of Allahabad.

A. P. Pandey for the applicant.

Banke Behari Lal for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mears, C. J.

Mears, C. J.—On the Civil Revision being opened Mr. Bankey Behari Lal referred the court to the decision of Lachmi Dayal v. Sri Kishan Das[1] and also to Section 295 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1882 and contended that as there was an undoubted remedy by suit in respect of matters of which Mr. Pandey sought revision, the proper practice for this Court is not to hear the revision. Mr. Pandey brought to our notice the case of Lila v. Mahange[2] and the observations of Mr. Justice Sulaiman in that case. The position today with regard to revisions is that there is no hard and fast rule about the matter and when it manifestly appears to be right and convenient and proper that this Court should decide a revisional application in preference to allowing the parties to embark on long and expensive litigation, it is within the competence of the court so to decide the revisional application. In each case it is a matter for the Judge to exercise his discretion but it is undesirable that there should be a flood of revisions or that there should be a general departure from the rule of long standing. We however regard this as a case which raises in a very neat form a point of law which has not come before the Allahabad Bench since 1908 at which date the legislature made what we regard as important alterations in Section 73. The facts of the case from which this application arises are that a debtor by name Sarju Pershad Narain Singh had three decrees against him one of December 14, 1923 being Moti Lal's decree, the second of August 18, 1925 being Tej Bahadur Singh's decree and the last of August 30, 1927 being the decree of Pandit Sidh Nath. All of the decree-holders were seeking recourse to the property of the judgment-debtor and execution proceedings were taken on November 20, 1928 by Tej Bahadur Singh, on July 1, 1929 by Sidh Nath and on July 8, 1930 by Moti Lal. The property was about to be put up for sale at the instance of Tej Bahadur Singh when on April 10, 1930 the judgment-debtor deposited Rs.500 in order to secure the postponement of the sale. Thereupon on May 9, 1930, Sidh Nath asked that he might be allowed to have rateable distribution of that money as between himself and Tej Bahadur Singh. Later on a date not given to us, a thousand rupees was paid by the judgment-debtor apparently to secure some further concession from Tej Bahadur Singh but as that money was never received by the court, Mr. Pandey raises no point about any right of Sidh Nath to participate in that sum but he does contend that his client had put himself, by May 9, 1930, in a position in which he was entitled to demand rateable distribution from the court. His complaint is that the Court never really considered this matter or exercised any discretion or judicial determination and that the Subordinate Judge wiped off his claim for rateable distribution on the grounds, that the sum of Rs.500 was not part and parcel of any sale proceeds, that the sum was deposited and paid by the judgment-debtor for and on account of Tej Bahadur Singh alone and that the application of May 9, 1930 was presented on a date subsequent to the deposit and payment. We must now examine each of those propositions. The first was that the sum of Rs.500 was not part and parcel of any sale proceeds. Now there is no doubt that if Mr. Maheshwar Prasad had been deciding this case in accordance with Section 295 of Act XIV of 1882 his decision would have been in conformity with the authorities of this Court. The authority which we have been specially referred to is Gopal Dei v. Chunni Lal[3] but in the year 1908 as we have mentioned there came into existence the remodelled Section 73 and it is to be noticed that at this date there had been conflicting decisions in the Indian Courts. Some of the Indian Courts attributed to the words "or otherwise" in Section 295 a much wider significance than was given to them by other Courts and therefore Section 73 was drafted with these introductory words "where assets are held by a Court." It has been argued before us that the assets to be held by the court must be part and parcel of some sale proceeds. We do not agree with this construction and we think that the case of Noor Mohamed Dawood v. Bilasiram Thakursidass[4] has given the right and proper interpretation to this matter. The judgment of Mr. Justice Rankin at page 519 and onwards gives what, in our opinion, is the true ground of interpretation of this Section and we must give to the first line of Section 73 the plain and ordinary construction "Where assets are held by a court." The court undoubtedly did receive on April 10 Rs.500 paid by the judgment-debtor in part satisfaction of a decree and the court held that money. That money, in our opinion, was an asset and we cannot hold that the word "assets" is to be confined to "assets" realised by sale or otherwise in execution of a decree. If we do

---

*Civ. Rev. 38 of 1931

[1] 2 A. L. J. R. 370

[2] 1931 A. L. J. R. 974

[3] I. L. R. 8 All. 67

[4] I. L. R. 47 Cal. 515

then we revert at once to the language of Section 295 which has been deliberately abandoned by the incorporation of much wider words in Section 73 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908. The second reason given by the learned Judge is that the sum was deposited and paid for the use and benefit of Tej Bahadur Singh alone. So it was in the sense that the Rs.500 was paid as a bargain between Tej Bahadur Singh and the judgment-debtor that the judgment-debtor could buy a certain amount of time from Tej Bahadur Singh by the deposit of that money in satisfaction of his decree. The judgment-debtor is not injured because whatever happened to the Rs.500 he would still get the time for which he bargained. The decree-holder is not injured because every decree-holder must know perfectly well that if by his exertions assets are received by and are held by the court there is always the possibility that another decree-holder may come in and bring himself within the necessary status for being given rateable distribution and the original decree-holder has to see part of the assets obtained through his exertions pass into the hands of a rival decree-holder. The third point that the application made on May 9, 1930 was presented on a date subsequent to the deposit and payment can only, we think, have arisen from a misreading of Section 73. Section 73 does not say that before the receipt of such assets an application must be made to the court. The first step that is necessary in these cases is that there must be assets held by the court. The next step is that there must be a decree-holder who has a decree for the payment of money passed against the same judgment-debtor. That decree-holder must not have obtained satisfaction and he must have made an application to the court for the execution of his decree before the receipt of the aforesaid assets. Having satisfied all those conditions he can then claim to come in and have a rateable distribution of assets held by the court. We agree that Sidh Nath had fulfilled all these conditions at the date when he made the application. We are of opinion that the application should have been granted and that the Judge should have exercised the jurisdiction vested in him and have made the order. We therefore set aside the decision of the Subordinate Judge and declare that in respect of the Rs.500 deposited by the judgment-debtor in favour of Tej Bahadur Singh on April 10, 1930, Sidh Nath is entitled to rateable distribution. As it was extremely doubtful whether this revisional application was likely to be heard, we think that the proper order to make is that no costs to either party shall be given.

HARNAM CHANDAR (Defendant)
versus
RUP CHAND AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil
1932
Jan. 26
Mukerji, J.
Bennet, J.

Provincial Insolvency Act, Sec. 28 (2)—"Commence any suit or other legal proceeding"—Meaning of—Appeal—Relief—Declaratory decree that certain property was not attachable be set aside—Whether Sec. 28 barred appeal.

The sons of a judgment-debtor sued for and obtained a declaration that certain property was not saleable or attachable under a decree against their father. Prior to the passing of the decree the father was adjudged an

---

*F. A. 34 of 1929

CIVIL

1932

HARNAM CHANDAR v. RUP CHAND

insolvent. The decree-holder appealed to the High Court (and although he did not in the first instance implead the official receiver, he was given time to do so when the appeal came on for hearing) without obtaining permission of the insolvency court; held, that all that the appellant asks is that the declaratory decree should be set aside, so that the property be attachable under the decree of the appellant, and that would not be a remedy against the property of the insolvent within the meaning of Sec. 28 and that section did not bar the present appeal.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of MAULVI SHAMSUL HASAN, First Subordinate Judge of Saharanpur.

P. L. Banerji and G. S. Pathak for the appellant.

Binod Behari Lal, Nanak Chand, P. M. L. Verma and Vishwa Mittra for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a first appeal by defendant No. 1 who is a creditor who holds a decree against defendant No. 4, one Shib Singh. The plaintiffs in the suit were four sons of Shib Singh and they sued for and obtained a declaration that certain property was not saleable or attachable under certain decrees one of which was the decree of the appellant against Shib Singh. The decree of the court of first instance was made on September 15, 1928, and prior to that date on August 24, 1928 Shib Singh was adjudged an insolvent. The appellant has named Shib Singh as one of the respondents, and he has not made the official receiver a party. A preliminary objection is taken on behalf of certain respondents, firstly to the effect that the appellant had not had the permission to bring this appeal and, secondly, that the official receiver should be made a party as representing the estate of Shib Singh. In regard to the first objection learned counsel for respondents argues that Section 28(2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act stated that > on the making of an order of adjudication no creditor shall during the pendency of the insolvency proceedings have any remedy against the property of the insolvent in respect of the debt, or commence any suit or other legal proceedings, except with the leave of the court on such terms as the court may impose.

Learned counsel argued that this appeal was a legal proceeding and as the appellant had not got the permission of the insolvency court, therefore the appellant was not entitled to commence this appeal. We consider, however, that the words "commence any suit or other legal proceeding" must be read in conjunction with something else in the Sub-section, for if they were read independently, they would prevent a creditor from indulging in any litigation at all. The expression in the Sub-section which must govern this clause is "have any remedy against the property of the insolvent in respect of the debt." The present appeal is not an appeal of that nature. All that the appellant asks is that a declaratory decree should be set aside. That declaratory decree was that property was not attachable under the decree of the appellant. The effect of the appeal being allowed would be a declaratory decree that the property was attachable under the decree of the appellant. That we consider would not be a remedy against the property of the insolvent within the meaning of Section 28. No doubt, if the appellant having obtained a decree on appeal from this Court proceeded to apply for execution, then he might possibly be met with the bar of Section 28(2), but that Section does not bar the present appeal

The next point which was urged was the second objection that the official receiver should represent the estate of the insolvent Shib Singh as a respondent. We consider that this objection is sound and, as the learned counsel for the appellant has undertaken to apply today to make the official receiver a party, we adjourn this appeal for a sufficient period for the official receiver to be brought on the record. Costs will abide the result of the appeal.

CIVIL
1932
HARNAM CHANDAR v. RUP CHAND
Bennet, J.

IN THE GOODS OF R. V. A. STOCK*

CIVIL
1932
Feb. 15
MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Sec. 369—Executor—Liability of—Funds in his hands remain uninvested—Liability to payment of interest.

No one is bound to become an executor but if he does accept the position he must act with the ordinary care and the prudence of a reasonable and diligent business man. He must make the funds in his hands productive and in order to do this he must invest them in interest bearing securities. If he fails to do this, he will be liable for the consequent loss.

O. M. Chiene for the applicant.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mears, C. J.

MEARS, C. J.—Mr. R. V. A. Stock died on August 4, 1928. He left a widow and a minor daughter. By his will dated October 14, 1927, he appointed Mr. H. L. Stringer executor. The estate consisted of Rs.11,741-12-0 in the Provident Fund, about Rs.700 realised from the sale of furniture and a sum of over Rs.13,000 odd as Lee Commission dues. There were said to be other assets also; the proceeds derived from the sale of a motor car and some balances outstanding in the Allahabad Bank Ltd., Calcutta and the Eastern Bank Ltd., Calcutta.

Mr. Stringer took over the duties of executor and made little or no attempt to carry out these duties. On February 2, 1929, he applied in the Benares Court for probate and that application was granted. On November 4, 1929, he came into the possession of Rs.11,741-12-0 and in breach of his duty as executor he failed to invest it in any interest bearing security and it has in fact laid in the bank unproductive from November 4, 1929 until the date of our order passed on January 4, 1932. On August 30, 1930, the probate granted by the Benares court was revoked but that revocation did not in any way affect the antecedent duty of Mr. Stringer to invest the money that came into his hands. He applied to the High Court for probate which was granted on February 9, 1931. Mr. Stringer in an application of December 8, 1931, disclosed that there were Rs.14,608-8-0 deposited in the Imperial Bank of India and Rs.200 in the Post Office Savings Bank and upon inquiry it transpired that the large sum of Rs.14,000 odd had been lying, as we have said, uninvested. We therefore passed the order of December 14, requiring Mr. Stringer to explain his position. He appeared before the court on Monday January 25, 1932 and was perfectly frank about the matter. He

---

*Testamentary Case 32 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

R. V. A. STOCK in re

Mears, C. J.

said that he had no knowledge of business and that the task of an executor was thankless and that he did not know he had to invest the money. The value of these replies was somewhat lessened by his stating in answer to a question that if he received a legacy of Rs.11,000 he would at once go to the Bank, obtain advice, and invest the money in interest bearing securities. He agrees that on the very lowest showing the estate has lost at the least a sum of Rs.1,000 by his negligence. He says that he has spent Rs.200 on necessary journeys to Benares and elsewhere and giving him credit for this, the net result is that the estate, by his negligence, has lost Rs.800. Logically, we should order him to make good to the estate every penny which has been lost to it through his negligence. No one is bound to become an executor but if he does accept the position he must act with the ordinary care and the prudence of a reasonable and diligent business man. As is said in Agnew's "Law of Trust in British India", 2nd Edition at page 163, he "must make the fund productive and in order to do this he must invest it in some form of security". If he fails to do this he will be liable for the consequent loss. The consequent loss here is at least Rs.800, but as we are of opinion that Mrs. Stock ought to have interested herself in this matter and made inquiries, we limit the amount which Mr. Stringer must pay to the estate to Rs.500. There is not of course the slightest suggestion that Mr. Stringer has been in any way dishonest but he has acted with great negligence and must make good his default.

There is a further question as to the failure of Mr. Stringer to collect the Lee Commission money. We think he has been negligent in this respect; and but for the fact that some delay may have been occasioned by the revocation of the Benares probate, we should have held him liable for this also.

We remove Mr. Stringer from the office of executor. Notice of this judgment is to be given to the Administrator General who will then, in accordance with the Rules, make application for Letters of Administration.

We order Mr. Stringer to pay to the Registrar on behalf of the estate the sum of Rs.500 in monthly instalments of Rs.50. The first instalment is to be paid on April 1, 1932 and the succeeding nine instalments on the 1st day of each succeeding month. They are to be paid direct to the Registrar and if any one instalment is unpaid by the end of the 7th day of any one month, the whole amount then outstanding is thereupon immediately to become due and the Registrar is to put the case in the list for an order to Mr. Stringer to show cause why execution should not issue.

All sums of money received by the Registrar are to be paid over to the Administrator General, who will, by April 1, 1932, have obtained from the court the necessary formal order of appointment which is in consequence with the wishes of Mrs. Stock.

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 3

SULAIMAN, J.
MUKERJI, J.
BOYS, J.

GOBARDHAN DAS (Judgment-debtor)
versus
DAU DAYAL (Decree-holder)*

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 48, and Or. 20, R. 11—'Subsequent order'—Meaning of—Must be an order of the court which passed the decree—'Subsequent order' not confined to orders passed under Or. 20, R. 11—Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 47—Whether execution court empowered to substitute a compromise between the parties for the decree originally passed—Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Sec. 253—Revisional powers of High Court—Not governed by Sec. 115 C. P. C.—But confined to Sec. 253.

The execution court has no power to vary the terms of the decree under execution. The "subsequent order" in Sec. 48 C. P. C., which provides a fresh starting point for limitation, must be an order of the court which passed the decree, and not an order of the court executing the decree. Jurawan v. Mahabir, I. L. R. 40 All. 198 approved. The 'subsequent order' in Sec. 48 is not confined to orders passed under Or. 20, R. 11.

While an application for execution of a decree for money was pending and a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor had been issued, the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor came to terms that the decretal amount be paid in nine instalments spread over four years. When the compromise was filed the execution court passed the following order:—"Parties have come to a compromise. Warrant may be cancelled". The court allowed the compromise to be placed on the record. Eight instalments were regularly paid. The decree-holder refused to accept the last instalment as the balance of the amount due was not paid in full, and the day after the expiry of the date fixed for payment he made an application for execution by attachment and sale of property. This application was made after the expiration of twelve years from the date of the original decree. Held, (1) that the order of the execution court amounted to an order substituting the compromise for the decree originally passed; (2) that the execution court had no power to pass such an order; (3) that the parties could not extend the period of limitation under Sec. 48 C. P. C. by means of a compromise, and it was open to the judgment-debtor to plead that the decree-holder's application was barred by limitation. Kristo Komel v. Hurree Sirdar, 13 W. R. 411, East India Company v. Oditchurn Paul, 5 Moore's I. A. 43 at 70 followed; (4) that the action of the judgment-debtor in pleading limitation did not amount to fraud within the meaning of Sec. 48(2)(a) C. P. C.

Per BOYS, J.—The order of the execution court that a compromise has been arrived at and the warrant may be cancelled did not amount to an order substituting the compromise for the decree originally passed.

Sec. 115 C. P. C. is inapplicable to revenue cases, and the revisional power of the High Court is restricted to Sec. 253 of the Tenancy Act (III of 1926), and the High Court has therefore no jurisdiction to interfere in revision with an order of the District Judge passed by him in a revenue appeal, but the High Court has power to revise the order of the first court if it is open to any of the three objections mentioned in Sec. 253, and if it does so revise it, the order of the District Judge in appeal has to be assumed to be a nullity by implication. Badami Kuar v. Dinu Rai, I. L. R. 8 All. 111; Ram Adhin v. Ram Bharose, 22 A. L. J. 1041 relied on.

*L. P. A. 11 of 1930

Civil

1932

Gobardhan Das
v.
Dau Dayal

By Sec. 248(3) of the Agra Tenancy Act (III of 1926) an appeal lies to the District Judge from an order of the revenue court passed in proceedings in execution of a decree for profits, but by Sec. 249 no further appeal is allowed, and no second appeal therefore lies to the High Court from the order passed by the District Judge in the execution appeal before him.

APPEAL under Section 10 of the Letters Patent, from a judgment of HON'BLE JUSTICE SIR B. J. DALAL.

The following is the Referring Order:—

SULAIMAN, A. C. J. and BAJPAI, J.—This is a Letters Patent Appeal arising out of an execution proceeding. A simple money decree was passed on February 10, 1915. On March 21, 1923, an application which was in accordance with law had been filed for execution praying for attachment and sale and in the alternative for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. In the course of the execution proceedings the parties appear to have come to terms, the judgment-debtor agreeing to pay the decretal amount in instalments extending over several years, the last date being January 15, 1928. All the instalments except the last one were paid. On January 10, 1928, the judgment-debtor sent Rs.57-3-0 by money order which was refused by the decree-holder who appears to have claimed Rs.222 in all.

The decree-holder filed an application for execution on January 16, 1928, for recovery of the balance claimed by attachment and sale of the property of the judgment-debtor. He admitted that the last application for execution was for the arrest of the judgment-debtor which had been struck off on August 2, 1923 on a compromise having been entered into between the parties for the payment of the amount by instalments.

An objection was taken that the application was barred by Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The court of first instance held that the conduct of the judgment-debtor amounted to fraud which saved limitation. The lower appellate court was inclined to the view that when the compromise was entered into the judgment-debtor honestly intended to pay and has proved his bonafides by paying eight instalments. It did not find that there was fraud committed by him. It however held that the original execution case was still pending and the court had the right to re-open it at any time and pass fresh orders.

On appeal to this Court a learned Judge of this Court relying on the case of Lalta Prasad v. Suraj Kunwar, 20 A. L. J. 185, thought that the action of the judgment-debtor in putting off the decree-holder from executing his decree at once should be taken as fraud if the result thereof is to bar the execution of the decree under the 12 years rule. He has also pointed out that the subsequent order referred to in Section 48, Clause (1) (b) can only be passed within six months of the passing of the decree under Article 175 of the Limitation Act.

The first question that arises in this case is whether a compromise can be validly entered into in an execution proceeding and be treated as a decree capable of execution.

Another question is whether the conduct of the judgment-debtor who originally intended to abide by the compromise can be said to amount to fraud because the result of his default is to bar an execution.

The third question is whether when a new relief is claimed in an application it can be treated as one for revival.

Another question may be whether the subsequent order referred to in Section 48, Sub-section (i) (b) can apply to an order accepting such a compromise in an execution proceeding irrespective of any plea of limitation.

Civil

1932

Gobardhan Das v. Dau Dayal

Sulaiman, J.

As these are substantial questions of law of some importance, we direct that this appeal may be laid before the Chief Justice for the consultation of a higher bench.

G. S. Pathak for the appellant.

S. B. Johari for the respondent.

The following judgments were delivered:—

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a judgment-debtor's appeal arising out of an execution proceeding. A decree for money was passed on February 10, 1915. While an application for execution dated March 21, 1923, was pending and a warrant for the arrest of the judgment-debtor had been issued, the parties entered into a compromise and a written application was filed in court on August 29, 1923, signed both by the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder. They agreed that the decretal amount should be paid in nine instalments spread over four years. The eighth instalment was to be paid on July 15, 1927 and the whole of the balance due under the decree was to be paid as the ninth instalment on January 15, 1928. The court ordered that the parties had come to a compromise and the warrant be cancelled. The judgment-debtor paid the first eight instalments in due time. On January 10, 1928 he sent a money order for Rs.57-3-0 which was refused by the decree-holder on January 16, 1928 with the endorsement that it was short. On the same date the decree-holder filed the present application for execution claiming Rs.222. The judgment-debtor objected that the application was not according to law and that it was time-barred. The first court held that the conduct of the judgment-debtor amounted to a fraud and the limitation was saved by Section 48 (2) C. P. C. The District Judge was inclined to the view that the judgment-debtor honestly intended to pay the money and had proved his bona fides by paying eight instalments. He however held that the execution file had not been completed in 1923 and was still pending and must have been pending until the amount was paid off in full. He accordingly overruled the objection. On appeal to the High Court a learned Judge of this Court held that the present application could not be treated as a revival of the previous application because the earlier application was based on the original decree and was for the arrest of the judgment-debtor while the latter one was based on the agreement of 1923 and was for execution by attachment. Relying on the authority of Jorawan v. Mahabir[1] he further held that a subsequent order within the meaning of Section 48 (1) (b) can be passed by the court only within six months of the passing of the decree under Article 175 of the Limitation Act and not after. He however held that the decree-holder was entitled to a cessation of the period of limitation on the ground of fraud. He relied on Lalta Prasad v. Suraj Kumar[2] for the view that fraud in Section 48 should not be interpreted in a narrow sense, and held that any action of the judgment-debtor which puts off the decre-holder from executing his decree at once should be taken as fraud if the result thereof is to bar the execution of the decree under the 12 years rule. On this finding he dismissed the appeal (reported in 124 I. C. 43). The Letters Patent appeal came up for disposal before a Bench of which I was a member. The case was referred to a larger Bench because it involved questions of law of some importance.

[1] I. L. R. 40 All. 198

[2] 20 A. L. J. R. 185

One of the questions mentioned in the referring order was whether, when a new relief is claimed in an application for execution, it can be treated as one for the revival of a previous application.

The appeal as an appeal must fail on a ground which was neither brought to the notice of the learned single Judge of this Court, nor was it suggested before the Bench which referred the case to us, nor has it been pressed before us on behalf of the respondent. That ground is that no appeal lay to the High Court at all, and consequently we cannot interfere with the decree of the District Judge in this Letters Patent Appeal. As the point involves a question of jurisdiction it can be taken up in the Letters Patent Appeal even for the first time.

The original decree was one for profits passed by a revenue court. Under Section 177 of the old Tenancy Act of 1901 appeals were allowed from decrees only and not from orders. The controversy was set at rest by the pronouncement of the Full Bench in Zobra v. Mangla[3] where it was held that an order passed in execution by a revenue court was not a decree within the meaning of Section 2 C. P. C. and that no appeal lay from it to the District Judge.

Although the decree in this case was passed in 1915 the present application for execution and the order thereon were made after the coming into force of the new Tenancy Act. A right of appeal from an order in execution has been conferred by Section 248 (3) and the appeal lies to the court which can hear an appeal from the decree in the suit. But that section is under the heading "appeals from order" and its language also makes it clear that the order under Section 47 C. P. C. is merely an order and not a decree. Whether it be treated as laying down a rule of procedure or conferring a substantive right of appeal the new Act applied. The appeal accordingly lay to the District Judge. But Section 249 provides that no appeal shall lie from any order passed in appeal. Accordingly no second appeal lay to the High Court from the order passed by the District Judge in the execution appeal before him. The single Judge of this Court could not but dismiss the appeal before him. Accordingly we have no power to interfere with the order passed by the District Judge on appeal.

It is however urged before us that the appeal should be treated as a revision. There was room for argument under the Old Tenancy Act that a civil revision could be entertained from an order passed by the District Judge even in a revenue appeal. Such a view is not now possible under the New Tenancy Act. It was pointed out by a Bench of which I was a member in Jagdeo Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh[4] that under Section 264 of the Tenancy Act only selected provisions of the Civil Procedure Code are made applicable to cases under this Act, and list I of the Second Schedule clearly excludes the provisions of Section 115 C. P. C. Both Section 264 and the heading in list I of the Second Schedule show that Section 115 is not applicable to suits and other proceedings under this Act. As provisions for appeals are to be found in the Act itself there can be no doubt that the appeal before the District Judge was a proceeding under the Act. This conclusion is further strengthened by the language

[3] I. L. R. 28 All. 753

[4] I. L. R. 51 All. 1020

CIVIL

1932

GOBARDHAN DAS
v.
DAU DAYAL

Sulaiman, J.

of Section 230 under which the exception is confined to "appeal or revision as provided in this Act". It is, therefore, quite clear that Section 115 C. P. C. is wholly inapplicable to revenue cases, and has been entirely replaced by Section 253 of the Act. The High Court has no power of revision outside the scope of the latter Section.

As pointed out in Jagdeo Singh's case, the High Court can call for the record of only a subordinate revenue court, and revise the order of such subordinate revenue court. According to the definition of 'revenue court' in Section 3(12) of the Act read with Section 4(8) of the Land Revenue Act, the District Judge cannot be a revenue court. It follows that the High Court has no power to revise orders passed by a District Judge however ultra vires, irregular or illegal it may be. This is an unfortunate result calling for the attention of the legislature. There seems to be no good reason why the legislature should not allow a revision from an order of the District Judge passed in a revenue appeal. It was observed in Jagdeo Singh's case that if the order passed by the trial court is open to objection it can be revised. The learned advocate for the respondent contends that it would be anomalous to allow revision from the order of the original revenue court which has been affirmed by the District Judge, when the High Court has no power to interfere with the order of the District Judge. But such an anomaly has not stood in the way of permitting revisions under Section 115 C. P. C. Badami Kunwar v. Dinu Rai[5] and Vuppuluri Atchayya v. Sri Kanchumarti Venketa Sutharamachandra Rao[6]. Section 253 allows a revision from an original revenue court only where an appeal lies to the District Judge, and therefore contemplates a case where an appeal might have been actually filed. Indeed, if the contrary view were upheld, the result for all practical purposes may be to nullify the provisions of the Section, for the High Court may very well decline to entertain a revision when a remedy by way of appeal to the District Judge is open and may feel helpless when such an appeal has been filed and disposed of. In cases where the first court acted with illegality or material irregularity and the District Judge in appeal rectified that mistake, the High Court would in the exercise of its discretion refuse to interfere. If the order of the District Judge proceeds on grounds which do not appeal to the High Court, it may inspite of that order set aside the order of the first court if it is open to any one of the three objections mentioned in the section. It therefore seems to me that a revision from the order of the Assistant Collector lies if there has been a want of jurisdiction, a failure to exercise jurisdiction or illegality or material irregularity irrespective of the question whether an appeal has been filed before the District Judge.

This civil revision would have been ordinarily cognizable by a single Judge, but we also have jurisdiction to interfere in revision suo moto. The attention of Dalal, J. was not called to the fact that no appeal lay to him, and that he might interfere in revision. This is therefore not a case where a single Judge has in his discretion declined to interfere, but one where he has not at all considered the matter. There is accordingly nothing to prevent us from interfering.

---

[5] I. L. R. 8 All. 111 (F.B.)

[6] I. L. R. 39 Mad. 195 (F. B.)

Civil

1932

Gobardhan Das
v.
Dau Dayal

Sulaiman, J.

As will be pointed out later the revenue court failed to record any finding that there was any fraud of the judgment-debtor which prevented the execution of the decree at some time within 12 years immediately before the present application for execution and yet applied Section 48 (2) (a) to the case. The failure to apply its mind to the provisions of that Section and to record a finding required by that Section was a material irregularity because the Section prohibits the making of any order upon the application unless the conditions laid down in it are fulfilled. The District Judge, on the other hand, made out a new case that the old execution proceeding was still pending.

The decree-holder in his present application admitted that the previous application of 1923 was for the arrest of the judgment-debtor and had been struck off. In the present application his prayer was for attachment and public sale of the property of the judgment-debtor and not for his arrest. The first court did not suggest that the previous application also was for attachment and sale. Nor was there any such suggestion in the judgment of the District Judge. As a matter of fact the record of the execution proceedings of 1923 does not appear to have been sent for in the District Judge's court. Similarly that previous record was not before the single Judge of this Court. It was taken for granted before the learned Judge that the previous application of 1923 was only for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. Indeed he emphasised this fact and made it the basis of his decision. Even before the Bench which heard this appeal first there was no suggestion that the prayers in the earlier and the later applications were substantially the same. As mentioned above, one of the questions which the Bench considered would arise in the case was "whether when a new relief is claimed, the present application can be treated as one for revival of the old one". After dictating the order, the Bench by way of precaution directed that the old execution record should be sent for. On its arrival it was discovered that the original application dated August 29, 1923 was for the attachment and public sale of the property of the judgment-debtor and in case the decretal amount could not be realised in that way for his arrest. But the record further disclosed that the decree-holder did not file any list of the properties of the judgment-debtor which he wanted to get attached, nor deposited the expenses for such attachment. He deposited only the expenses for the issue of a warrant which the court ordered to be issued. According to his own application the occasion for arrest would have arisen only when the decretal amount could not be realised in the other way. It is possible to argue that the record gives an indication of the prayer for attachment having been abandoned by the decree-holder and the relief confined to arrest, as admitted by the decree-holder in his present application. In the present execution proceeding, a list of the properties of the judgment-debtor was filed which had not been mentioned in the proceedings of 1923. It seems to have been conceded all along that the previous application was for arrest only. I am therefore of opinion that the decree-holder should not now be allowed to raise a new question of fact that there had been no abandonment of the relief for attachment which question had not been raised before the single judge of this court.

The present application for execution asks for attachment and sale of the judgment-debtor's property, and new properties have been specified which were never mentioned before. The application is not now for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. It does not purport to be an application for a revival of the previous application and there is no suggestion in it that the previous application is still pending. On the other hand it is admitted that that application was struck off. The present application is based on the fact of the compromise for the payment of instalment. Although a decree-holder need not be tied down to the form of his application, the circumstances mentioned above make it quite clear that the present application which asks for a new relief cannot be treated as an application for the revival or continuation of the previous execution proceeding. When the character of the present application is different from that of the previous one, it can hardly be treated as a continuation.

I find it most difficult to hold that the conduct of the judgment-debtor amounted to fraud. The proposition that any action of the judgment-debtor which puts off the decree-holder from executing his decree at once must be taken as fraud if the result thereof is to bar the execution of the decree under the 12 years' rule, is much too broadly stated. In the present case the terms of the compromise were known to both the parties and the decree-holder was in a position to find out their legal consequences. There was no concealment of any fact, nor any misrepresentation on the part of the judgment-debtor. Indeed, the fact that the judgment-debtor paid the eighth instalment even after the expiry of 12 years and attempted to pay the ninth instalment also shows that he had no intention in 1923 to stop payment as soon as 12 years expired. I think the District Judge was right in not accepting the first court's view that his conduct amounted to fraud. Section 48 (2) (a) is therefore inapplicable.

The learned Assistant Collector has remarked that the parties filed a compromise 'and on the strength of that compromise the decree-holder agreed to accept the moneys by instalments 'Now when the last date of payment is over the J. D. takes up the plea of limitation which means a fraud on his part'. But the plea of limitation was taken after the expiry of the period of limitation, and the mere taking of such a plea cannot be a fraud. The trial court did not record any definite finding that at the time of the compromise the judgment-debtor had the dishonest intention of pleading limitation after the 12 years had expired. As pointed out above such an inference was impossible.

The learned advocate for the decree-holder supports the decree of the learned Judge of this Court on the ground that there was a subsequent order for the payment of money at certain dates within the meaning of Section 48 (1) (b).

The learned single Judge of this Court has naturally followed the Divisional Bench ruling in Jorawan v. Mahabir[7] where it was laid down that a subsequent order directing payment of money in Section 48 (1) (b) means a subsequent order made by the court which made the decree and acting as that court, and not an order of a court executing the decree.

---

[7] I. L. R. 40 All. 198

The learned Judges added that in all probability the Section contemplates orders made under Order 20, R. 11. They could not have intended to say that a subsequent order in Section 48 is confined to orders passed under the last mentioned rule. Section 48 contains the substantive provision of the Code, whereas Order 20, R. 11 can be altered by High Courts, and other similar provisions can also be added in the rules. Furthermore, the last mentioned rule applies only to decrees for payment of money, whereas Section 48 (1) (b) covers decrees for the delivery of properties also. Section 48 is accordingly of a wider scope, and there is no reason to confine it to the particular orders passed under Order 20, R. 11. The view taken in Jorawan's case that Section 48 contemplates a subsequent order passed by the original court and not the execution court has been followed by other courts as well.

On the other hand, in numerous cases a compromise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor entered into in the course of execution proceedings, which was duly recorded, has been enforced, and various efforts have been made to find a legal basis for upholding it.

The Bombay High Court in Apte v. Trimal Hanumant[8] expressly dissented from the view taken in Jorawan's case and held that the expression 'any subsequent order' cannot be limited to orders passed by the court which passed the decree, but means any order made by a competent court. In one sense this view is sound because the words 'subsequent order' are general in their meaning. As will be shown later, the fallacy lies in the supposition that an execution court is competent to pass every kind of order, provided it is based on a compromise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor.

In some cases the courts have gone so far as to hold that the original decree can be altogether superseded by a new arrangement entered into in the execution department, enabling the decree-holder to execute the substituted decree, Hridoy Mohan v. Khagendra Nath[9]. I would say with great respect that such a position is utterly untenable. The original decree cannot be altered or varied by the parties even with the sanction of the court. In the absence of interference in appeal, revision, review or under Section 152 C. P. C. the original decree becomes final and the court itself is functus officio. As provided in Order 20, R. 3 the judgment cannot afterwards be altered or added to, and as directed in R. 6 the decree must agree with the judgment. In Debi Rai v. Gokul Prasad[10] a Full Bench of this High Court laid down that a decree altered by agreement of parties cannot be executed as a new decree, and the acquiescence of the judgment-debtor in such execution cannot estop him from objecting to further execution of it. The function of an execution court is to execute the decree as it finds it and not to substitute a new decree therefor, even though the substitution may be with the consent of the parties. Such an agreement may be a binding contract between the parties enforceable by a separate suit, but it cannot take the place of the original decree and become itself capable of execution.

In other cases it has been suggested that a compromise can be entertained in the course of execution proceedings much in the same manner

---

[8] I. L. R. 49 Bom. 695 [9] 1929 A. I. R. Cal. 687 [10] I. L. R. 3 All. 585

CIVIL
1932
GOBARDHAN DAS
v.
DAU DAYAL
Sulaiman, J.

as in a regular suit, and authority for it has been sought for in Mohammad Sulaiman v. Jhukki Lal[11], Vide Ram Prasad v. Hari Das[12] and Hirdoy Mohan v. Khagendra Nath[13]. But the Allahabad case was based on an interpretation of Sections 375 and 647 of the old code, and reference was also made to Section 257A of the Code of 1882, for which there is no corresponding provision in the new Code. The general observations made by the learned Judge were in the nature of an obiter dictum. In view of the opinion expressed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Thakur Prasad v. Faqir Ullah[14] the explanation added by Act No. 6 of 1892 to Section 647 of the old Code has been deleted from the present Section 141. Now Order 23, R. 4 makes R. 3 of that Order inapplicable to execution proceedings, and there is therefore no obligation on an execution court to record a compromise as it would have to do in a pending suit. It is not correct to say, as was done in Chaudhri Jagdish Misir v. Chaudhri Sureshwar Misir[15] that the word 'suit' in Order 23, R. 3 was used 'in a broad sense as including not only the stages of suit to its termination by the decree of the first court but as including its appellate stage and proceedings in execution of the decree made in the suit'. In that case a compromise was entered into in the proceedings relating to the setting aside of a sale. Without holding that the word 'suit' includes an execution proceeding, Order 23, R. 3 might well have been applied with the help of Section 141 C. P. C. In like manner Section 107(2) would apply to proceedings in appeal.

The line of reasoning adopted in some cases is that a compromise in an execution court is in the nature of an adjustment within the meaning of Order 21, R. 2 and that, if certified, it can be enforced by the execution court. But an adjustment within the meaning of that rule should be a transaction which extinguishes the decree as such in whole or in part and results in its total or partial satisfaction. A transaction by which parties agree to vary the mode by which the reliefs granted by the decree are to be realised in execution or vary the time when the decree becomes executable would really be a transaction attempting to vary the terms of the decree. Mallamma v. Venkappa[16] and Ladd Govindoss v. Ramdoss[17] followed in Azizpur Rahman v. Ali Raja Chaudhri[18]. The adjustment referred to in Order 21, R. 2 is one which completely or partially extinguishes the decree and cannot mean a compromise to give effect to the terms of which a new decree at variance with the original decree would have to be created, which will again have to be executed. An execution court has no power to alter or vary the decree under execution, and to substitute a new decree for it. A mere consent of the parties cannot confer such a jurisdiction on the execution court.

Another line of reasoning adopted in some other cases is that a compromise for the payment of the decretal amount by instalment or for delivery of property is not at all a variation of the decree for money, but merely fixes a mode of satisfaction. It has therefore been assumed that where the parties agree, the execution court has an inherent power to accept such a compromise and pass a new decree in terms of it. But the original decree which fixes no deferred date for payment or for delivery of property is executable immediately. Where the compromise fixes new dates for payment or delivery it undoubtedly alters the time of satisfaction and therefore varies the decree. It is not a mere case of postponement of execution which the court under special circumstances recognised by the Code of Civil Procedure can order. It is in effect the substitution of a new decree in place of the old decree which new decree will itself become capable of execution.

---

[11] I. L. R. 11 All. 228

[12] 97 I. C. 768

[13] 1929 A. I. R. Cal. 687

[14] I. L. R. 17 All. 106

[15] 6 Pat. L. J. 253

[16] I. L. R. 8 Mad. 277

[17] 28 I. C. 376

[18] 1928 A. I. R. Cal. 527

It is quite obvious that the legislature does not contemplate the prolongation of execution proceedings by successive compromises of this type being entered into at long intervals. Authority has been conferred by Order 20, R. 11 C. P. C. for directing payment by instalment. But unless passed at the time of the passing of the decree such an order can be passed only on the application of the judgment-debtor with the consent of the decree-holder. Article 175 of the Limitation Act places a limitation on the period during which such an application can be made, which must be within six months of the decree. It is the duty of the execution court not to entertain any such application for the payment of the amount of the decree by instalment, if made after the expiry of that period, even though the decree-holder is agreeable to it. Had the legislature intended that the court has always an inherent power to accept a compromise of this kind entered into between the parties, the short period of limitation would not have been prescribed.

In some cases the difficulty has been attempted to be got over by the supposition that where the decree directs that money be recoverable only on some failure, it is open to the plaintiff to ask the court for a declaration that the failure has taken place and for an order directing payment in consequence. Nawab Shujaul Mulk Bahadur v. Amirul Umra Bahadur[19]. But where the decree is self-contained, the mere fact that the contingency mentioned in it has occurred subsequently would not justify the making of a fresh executable order by the court, which had become functus officio, after the passing of the decree. Without such a fresh declaratory order, the execution court is competent to execute the decree when such contingency has happened.

In other cases the enforcement of a compromise between the parties has been based on the principle of estoppel. No doubt a judgment-debtor can in certain circumstances be estopped from going behind his own agreement. But no one can contract himself out of the statute of limitation. Estoppel cannot be placed against a statutory bar of limitation. Similarly, as the Code by Section 48 prohibits the court from making any order upon an application presented after the expiration of 12 years, the statutory obligation of the court cannot be got rid of on account of any private contract to the contrary. It will be the duty of the court to ignore the private agreement and to give effect to the statute. As was pointed out by the Full Bench in Debi Rai v. Gokul Prasad[20] the agreement may give rise to a separate suit, but cannot estop the judgment-debtor from objecting to the further execution of the decree. In the words of Sir Barnes

[19] I. L. R. 48 Mad. 846

[20] I. L. R. 3 All. 585

Peacock in Kristo Komal v. Hurree Sirdar[21] quoted in Raghunath Prasad v. Kashi Prasad[22] ' a man may bind himself not to execute a decree within a certain period, but he cannot, by binding himself not to execute the decree for a certain period add to the time which the law allows him to execute it'.

On the contrary, in some cases it has been suggested that if an order purporting to have been passed under Section 210 corresponding to Order 20, Rule 11 has been passed on an application filed more than six months after the decree, it cannot be treated as an order under that section 'inasmuch as the court on that date had no jurisdiction to pass an order under that section more than six months having elapsed from the date of the decree'. Banarsi Das v. Ramzan[23]. I am not sure whether the learned single Judge of this Court has not taken the same view when remarking that 'a subsequent order for payment by instalment can be passed by the court which gave the decree within six months and not after'.

The correct position appears to be that although the court should not entertain an application for payment of the decretal money by instalment under Order 20, R. 11, if made after the expiry of six months from the date of the decree (Article 175), the order if actually passed on such a time-barred application is not a nullity. Just as a decree passed in a suit which was time-barred is binding on the parties, and the question of limitation is by implication deemed to have been decided against the defendant, so an order for payment by instalment is binding on the judgment-debtor. It must be assumed that the court by oversight decided the question of limitation wrongly. But a wrong decision, whether express or implied on a question of limitation does not oust the jurisdiction. Limitation is a question of procedure and not one of jurisdiction. Nathu Ram v. Kallan Das[24]. The court was seized of the case and was competent to pass orders on the application. The mere fact that it overlooked the bar of limitation or acted wrongly in not applying it, would not make the order without jurisdiction. So long as it has not been set aside, the order is binding on the judgment-debtor, and cannot be challenged by him on the ground that it was passed on a time-barred application. When the court prevents the judgment-debtor from impugning such an order it is not giving effect to any contract to get out of the law of limitation, but is enforcing the principle of res judicata against him. When the decree-holder takes advantage of such an order he is not trying to extend the period fixed in Section 48 by any contract between the parties, but he is merely urging that there is in existence a subsequent order binding on the parties, although it so happens that that order had been passed on a time-barred application without any objection. A somewhat similar, though not exactly the same, view was expressed in Banarsi Das v. Ramzan[25], when reversing the judgment of the single Judge mentioned above. It is no doubt the duty of the court to see that no such order is passed when the application is beyond time. But when such an order has been passed

---

[21] 13 W. R 411

[22] 72 I. C. 477=1924 A I R Lah 3·2

[23] 13 I. C. 88

[24] I. L R 26 All 522

[25] 73 I. C. 671

CIVIL

1932

GOBAR-DHAN DAS v. DAU DAYAL

Sulaiman, J.

and remains unreversed, the judgment-debtor cannot be allowed to ignore it.

Although the words in Section 48 C. P. C. are more general, the order under Order 20, R. 11 C. P. C. can be passed by the original court only. Where the execution court happens to be the same court which made the decree, one need not be too technical in insisting that the order must have been passed by the original court acting as such and not acting in the execution department. What is essential is that the intention must have been to pass an order under Order 20, R. 11 on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder. Where the courts are not different, it would hardly matter how the court actually describes itself, but the order must be intended to be an order under that rule. On the other hand, if an execution court merely records a compromise entered into between the parties, it does not necessarily pass an order of its own. 'Order' is defined in Section 2(14) C. P. C. as the formal expression of any decision by a civil court which is not a decree. It must therefore be the formal expression of a decision, i.e., an adjudication between the parties, and not merely a mechanical recording of something which the parties want to be noted. The order must be intended to be one passed by the court imposing an obligation capable of enforcement by that court. We have therefore to see whether the court intended to make any order under O. 20, R. 11 and made one.

As pointed out above, when the compromise was filed in 1923, the court merely ordered that the warrant should be cancelled. The record appears to have been consigned to the record room. If the decree-holder's relief had by that time been confined to one for arrest only, that prayer was obviously disallowed, at any rate for the time being. There can also be no doubt that the court took cognizance of the original compromise which had been filed and allowed it to be placed on the record. In that sense it tacitly accepted it and even acted upon it; but in my opinion such an order was not made under O. 20, R. 11 and cannot be treated as a subsequent order made by the court itself directing the payment of the decretal amount by instalment within the meaning of Section 48(1)(b). The decree-holder is therefore not entitled to count 12 years from this date.

As the operative portion of the judgment of Dalal, J. was correct, I would dismiss the appeal; but in the exercise of my revisional jurisdiction, I would set aside the order of the Assistant Collector on the ground of material irregularity, and dismiss the application for execution for the reasons given above.

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The facts involved in this case briefly are these. A suit for profits was decreed in favour of the respondent Dau Dayal and against the appellant Gobardhan Das in 1915, by the revenue court. After some applications for execution had been made from time to time, an application was made on March 21, 1923. The prayer was that the property of the judgment-debtor was to be attached and in case it was not found possible to realise the money in that way, he might be arrested. No list of properties to be attached was filed with the application, nor was it stated that the movable property in the possession of the judgment-debtor, as pointed out by the decree-holder on the spot, should be attached.

Civil

1932

Gobardhan Das
v.
Dau Dayal

Mukerji, J.

Instead of attachment of property warrants for arrest of the judgment-debtor were issued from time to time, and ultimately parties agreed, on August 29, 1923, that the whole of the decretal amount then due should be paid by the judgment-debtor in several six monthly instalments of certain fixed amounts and that on January 15, 1928 the judgment-debtor should pay up the balance of the decretal amount. When this compromise was filed the Assistant Collector executing the decree passed the following order:—"Parties have come to a compromise. Warrant may be cancelled".

The instalments were regularly paid, and on January 10, 1928 the judgment-debtor sent by money order a sum of Rs.57-3-0 to the decree-holder as the balance of the amount due to the latter. The decree-holder refused to accept this amount on the ground which was correct, that it was insufficient and the day after the expiry of the date fixed for payment he made an application for execution. This application was presented on January 16, 1928 and prayed that the amount due might be realised by attachment and sale of property.

The judgment-debtor thereupon pleaded limitation as contained in Section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code.

The learned Assistant Collector held that the judgment-debtor by raising the plea of limitation was guilty of fraud and that on that account the decree-holder's application was taken out of the purview of the twelve years' rule of limitation. He accordingly dismissed the objection and allowed the execution to proceed.

The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge. The appellate court did not agree with the court of first instance as to its view of fraud but held that the application for execution made in 1928 might be treated as a continuation of the application of 1923 and that the latter must be deemed to have been still pending. The District Judge accordingly dismissed the appeal, and thereupon the judgment-debtor filed a second appeal to this Court.

The appeal came before Dalal, J., and that learned Judge dismissed the appeal holding that, although the District Judge was not right in treating the application of 1923 as still pending, the case fell within the exception created in the case of fraud on the part of the judgment-debtor. The learned Judge relied on the case of Lalta Prasad v. Suraj Kunwar[20] and said:

> Any action of the judgment-debtor which puts off the decree-holder from executing his decree at once should be taken as fraud if the result thereof is to bar the execution of the decree under the twelve year's rule. By making an agreement he (judgment-debtor) derived an advantage and when he is not prepared to fulfil the agreement his conduct amounted to fraud.

The second appeal was dismissed and the present Letters Patent appeal has been filed by the judgment-debtor. At the outset, it seems to be clear to me that no second appeal lay to the High Court, as the case arose out of a suit for profits heard by a revenue court. The Agra Tenancy Act of 1926 by Section 249 disallows an appeal from an appellate order. By Section 248 of the Agra Tenancy Act, an appeal to the District Judge is allowed in the case of an execution of a decree for profits, but by Section 249 no further appeal is allowed. By Section 264 of the Tenancy Act 1926 the Civil Procedure Code is to apply to the revenue courts with certain exceptions, and one of the exceptions is "provisions inconsistent with anything in this Act, so far as the inconsistency extends". To allow a second appeal from the order of the District Judge in this case, on the ground that the order passed by the District Judge was a decree within the meaning of Section 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, would be inconsistent with the clear provision of Section 249. I hold, therefore, that no second appeal lay to this Court.

---

[20] 20 A. L. J. R. 185

The learned counsel for the appellant has asked us to take up the matter in revision.

The revisional jurisdiction of this Court over the revenue courts is conferred by Section 253 of the Tenancy Act. It says that in cases where an appeal lay to the District Judge, the High Court may call for the record of any suit which has been decided by a subordinate revenue court and in such cases may pass such orders as it thinks fit. In this case an appeal did lie to the District Judge and, therefore, where a case falls within any of the Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of Section 253, a revision would be maintainable.

On behalf of the respondent it was argued that the order of the Assistant Collector having been confirmed by the District Judge, unless we are able to set aside the order of the District Judge also, we are not competent to interfere with the order of the Assistant Collector.

It does appear that the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere in revision with the order of a District Judge passed by him in a revenue matter, on appeal. This is due no doubt to an oversight, but the fact is there. Section 264 of the Tenancy Act made Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code inapplicable to "all suits and other proceedings" under the Tenancy Act and, therefore, an appellate order of the District Judge is exempted from the operation of Section 115 of the Civil Procedure Code. This was held to be the case in Bhagwat Das v. Chhedi Koeri[27] and also in Jagdeo Singh v. Kesho Prasad Singh[28]. The result is that where a revenue court passes a right order and on appeal the District Judge passes a wrong order and the District Judge's order is otherwise capable of being revised by this Court, the District Judge's order cannot be touched.

It, however, does not follow that because the District Judge's order cannot be touched in revision, the order of the subordinate revenue court cannot be touched simply because it has been affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. Section 253 of the Tenancy Act does not say that to enable the High Court to interfere, it is necessary that there should be no appeal from the order of the revenue court. All that is needed is that the matter before the revenue court should be appealable to the District Judge.

In numerous cases decided by this Court it has been held that the High Court could interfere with the order of the first court, although the same may have been affirmed by the lower appellate court, in the exercise of the High Court's revisional powers under Section 625 of the Old Act and Section 115 of the New Act of 1908 (C. P. C.). One of these cases is a Full Bench decision of this Court and will be found reported in Badami Kuar v. Dinu Rai[29]. Another case and a more recent one is Ram Adhin v. Ram Bharose[30]. I hold that a revision is maintainable.

[27] 24 A. L. J. R. 537 (F.B.)

[28] I. L. R. 51 All. 1020

The next question is whether the matter before us is a fit one in which we should interfere, in other words, whether the case falls within any of the Clauses (a), (b) and (c) of Section 253 of the Tenancy Act. In my opinion the case falls under Clause (c). The learned Assistant Collector has not found as a fact that at any time prior to the lapse of twelve years from the date of the decree the judgment-debtor by fraud prevented the execution of the decree. If he had found on evidence however flimsy that such was the case, there would have been no case for the High Court for interference. But what the Assistant Collector found was that the very act of raising the plea of limitation was a fraud on the part of the judgment-debtor. If it was, that act was committed more than twelve years after the date of the decree. There can, therefore, be no doubt that the Assistant Collector acted with material irregularity in the exercise of his jurisdiction and, therefore, his order is liable to revision.

Now I come to the question whether the compromise which was entered into by the parties on August 29, 1923 was in the nature of a "subsequent order" within the meaning of Clause (b) of Section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code. By Section 48 no application for execution shall be entertainable by a court executing a decree, if it was made more than twelve years after the date of the decree or more than twelve years after the date fixed for payment by the decree or by any subsequent order.

But before I take up this question I would like to say one word about an argument which prevailed before the learned District Judge and was reiterated before us. The question is whether the application of the decree-holder made on January 16, 1928 can in any way be treated as a continuation of the previous application of August 29, 1923. I have already pointed out that the previous application, although it was for attachment of property and arrest, did not contain any list of property to be attached and was continued and prosecuted as an application for arrest. No less than four warrants for arrest were issued one after another and that on the filing of the compromise, the proceedings were allowed to be dropped. In his present application, dated January 16, 1928, the decree-holder stated that his previous application of August 29, 1923 was one for the arrest of the judgment-debtor. This was a correct statement of the circumstances, and it is not right on his part now to say that he made a misstatement of fact.

Before going back to the question what is meant by a "subsequent order" as the expression is to be found in Section 48, I might dispose of another small point, namely, whether we are to treat or not the order of August 29, 1923 as an order accepting the compromise and thereby directing payment of money on certain dates. On this point I am of opinion that, although the learned Assistant Collector does not in so many terms say that the judgment-debtor is to pay the decretal amount on the date fixed in the compromise, yet when he accepted the compromise and cancelled the warrant, he tacitly, at any rate, directed that the terms of the compromise should be carried out.

[29] I. L. R. 9 All. 111

[30] 22 A. L. J. R. 1041

Now I go back to the interpretation of the expression "subsequent order".

The principal question that arises is whether an order, passed by an execution court as such, by which it accepts, as in the present case, a compromise and directs that the terms of the compromise should be carried out and orders the judgment-debtor to pay the decretal amount on the dates fixed, amounts to or not a subsequent order within the meaning of Section 48. On principle it is abundantly clear that an execution court cannot go behind the decree and cannot alter it. By the provisions of Order XX, Rule 3, a judgment, when once pronounced and signed, cannot be afterwards altered or added to except as provided by Section 152 or on review. The action of the executing court cannot come within the provision of Order XX, Rule 3 and, therefore, it is not competent to alter the terms of a decree. Where the decree says that a certain sum of money is to be paid at once, it will not be open to an executing court to say that the decretal amount shall be paid in a different way, i.e., by instalments and on dates convenient to the judgment-debtor. Even where the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor come to terms, neither of them has the power to so contract as to supersede the rule of limitation or to extend it. The judgment-debtor, in the case of a contract otherwise valid, may be estopped. I do not decide that he is estopped from pleading that he is not bound by the compromise. But where the result of a compromise is that the limitation provided by the law is extended, it is open to the judgment-debtor to plead that the decree-holder's application is barred by limitation. This was held in The East India Company v. Oditchurn Paul[81]. See observations at page 70.

On general principles, therefore, an executing court as such cannot make an order which would operate as a 'subsequent order directing payment of the decretal amount on a certain date.'

One illustration of a "subsequent order" mentioned in Section 48 will be found in the provision of Order XX, Rule 11, Sub-rule (2) by which, after the passing of a decree for payment of money, the court, on the application of the judgment-debtor and with the consent of the decree-holder, may direct the payment of the decretal amount by instalments. But for the purpose of such an order, the parties must go to the court which passed the decree and within six months of the making of the decree, as provided by Article 175 of Schedule I of the Limitation Act. It may be that where the parties approach the court which passed the decree after six months and the delay is overlooked by the parties and the court and then an order as contemplated by Order XX, Rule 11 is passed and is not set aside on appeal the order will be binding on the parties on the ground of res judicata; but that is not the case here. In this case it cannot be pretended that the parties were approaching the court to exercise its powers under Order XX, Rule 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, even if we assume that the Assistant Collector's court was the very court which had made the decree for profits in 1915.

[81] 5 Moore's I. A. 43

Civil
1932
Gobardhan Das
v.
Dau Dayal
Mukerji, J.

I am of opinion, therefore, that on principle the subsequent order must be an order made by the court which passed the decree and not an order made in the course of execution.

The view taken by me is the view that has always been held in this Court with some exceptions which were due to the existence in the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 a section, namely, 257(a) and to the fact that at one time execution applications were treated as miscellaneous applications to which rules as to trial of suits applied. But Section 257(a) is no longer the law, and Order XXIII, Rule 4 clearly states that the rule as to withdrawal and adjustment of suits do not apply to proceedings in execution of a decree or order. The decision of Mahmood, J. in Muhammad Sulaiman v. Jhukki Lal[32] is one of the few exceptions I have in mind. On the other hand, the cases in Debi Rai v. Gokal Prasad[33] and Jurawan Pasi v. Mahabir Dhar Dube[34] show that the view taken by me was the view that prevailed in this Court.

No useful purpose will be served by examining the cases decided by other courts, but it will be enough to examine two cases which were decided after the passing of the Civil Procedure Code of 1908.

One of these cases is Hridoymohan Sanyal v. Khagendra Nath Sanyal[35]. With all respect I am unable to agree with the view laid down in the case. It seems to have been held there that by a compromise entered into in the execution department a decree is substituted for the original decree, and the so-called substituted decree may be executed as if it were the decree originally passed.

The second case is Apte v. Tirmal[36]. In this case the learned Judges do not give sufficiently convincing reasons for holding that an order passed by an execution court may be a subsequent order within the meaning of Section 48 of the Civil Procedure Code.

Before leaving the case, I might notice the last argument of the learned counsel for the respondent, namely, in the case of a decree directing delivery of property what would be a subsequent order within the meaning of Section 48, if it be not an order made in the execution department. For reasons already given, I am clear that an order made in the execution of a decree cannot be "a subsequent order" within the meaning of Section 48. Section 151 of the Code of Civil Procedure allows the court to make such orders as may be necessary in the ends of justice, and it is conceivable that there may be a case in which, in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction, as recognised by the said Section 151, a court may direct a certain property to be delivered at a date other than the date already fixed by the decree passed. Then again the court is always entitled and authorised to correct clerical and arithmetical mistakes in judgments and decrees, and a decree when properly corrected may fix a date for delivery of property other than the date originally contained in the decree. These are possible cases that occur to me now and there may be other cases.

In the result, I would set aside the judgment of Dalal, J., on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, upholding his

---

[32] A. W. N. 1889, 53

[33] I. L. R. 3 All. 585 (F.B.)

[34] I. L. R. 40 All. 198

[35] A. I. R. 1929 Cal. 687

[36] I. L. R. 49 Bom. 695

CIVIL
1932
GOBARDHAN DAS
v.
DAU DAYAL
Boys, J.

decree dismissing the appeal to the High Court, take up the case in revision and setting aside the order of execution passed on the respondent's application of January 16, 1928, would direct the said application to stand dismissed. In the circumstances of the case, I would direct that the parties should pay their own costs throughout.

BOYS, J.—I have had the advantage of seeing the judgment of my brother Mr. Justice Mukerji, and as I am in practical agreement with him, it is not necessary for me to discuss every point. The facts are very fully set out in the judgment of my brother, and there is only one further fact to which I shall have to refer later.

On the first point that no appeal lay to this Court I agree.

On the next point as to whether a power of revision is limited to S. 253 of the Tenancy Act, or whether we can also act under S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure, I agree that our powers are limited to S. 253. This is not a conclusion which can be regarded as satisfactory, but the difficulty arises from the wording of S. 253, and oversight by the Legislature. To apply S. 253 literally and excluding S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure involves three undesirable results:—

Firstly, treating the section literally, it is applicable to all cases where an appeal lies to the District Judge, whether an appeal has actually been filed or not. Where an appeal has in fact been filed, the section gives us no power to revise the order of the District Judge, but does give the High Court power to revise the order of the subordinate revenue court, in this case, the Court of the Assistant Collector. If we exercise that power and find ground within Clauses (a), (b) or (c) to set aside the order of the Subordinate Revenue Court, we cannot set aside the order of the District Judge in appeal. It has to be left in the air and assumed to be a nullity by implication. While this is unsatisfactory, it cannot perhaps be said to do much harm.

Secondly, where the trial court was wrong within the meaning of Clauses (a), (b) or (c) of S. 253, but the District Judge deciding the case on different grounds was right his reasoning being unassailable. Here logically the subordinate court's order being the only one which we could consider, and being one which ought to be set aside, it cannot be set aside without also automatically rendering the order of the District Judge a nullity. This difficulty might be avoided by refusing to exercise the revisional power, which is discretionary. But this could hardly be regarded as a satisfactory solution.

The third difficulty that arises is more serious. A case can easily be imagined where the subordinate revenue court was absolutely right and its decision has been set aside in appeal—the District Judge being hopelessly wrong. We can, on the hypothesis we are considering, set aside the order of the trial court; but it is right and does not require to be set aside, while we cannot touch the order of the District Judge though it is very wrong, wrong actually within Clauses (a), (b) or (c) of S. 253.

I have endeavoured to state these difficulties in their degrees of increasing gravity. Taken as a whole, the result, in my view, should be to incline the court strongly, if there was room for the view, to hold that it had power to act under S. 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure; but that power is excluded by S. 264 and Schedule II, list 1 of the Tenancy Act, for it is impossible, without undue straining of language, to hold that an "appeal" is not a "proceeding". No other view, therefore, is possible than that our revisional power is restricted to S. 253 of the Tenancy Act; and further it is clear that we have power to revise under S. 253 the order of the Assistant Collector, and if we did so revise it, the order of the District Judge in appeal can only be treated as a nullity.

As to whether there are grounds for our interference, I agree with my brother that the Assistant Collector did not in fact find that any fraud was committed within the period of 12 years. It is clear that the point did not occur to him. He uses the phrase: "The decree-holder never knew that the judgment-debtor will in the end take such a plea". The words "never knew" clearly refer to the point of time at which the compromise was being entered into. The words "will in the end take such a plea" clearly refer to a point of time after the lapse of the 12 years. No other view, then, is possible but that he did not in fact find fraud to have been committed before the lapse of 12 years.

As to the order of the Assistant Collector of August 29, 1923, which states that a compromise has been arrived at and the warrant may be cancelled, I would hold that this did not amount to an order substituting the compromise for the rights which the decree-holder had under the decree standing by itself. The order is itself ambiguous, and I think that as we shall be holding in this case that the execution court has no power to vary the terms of the decree, we should not assume that the Assistant Collector was passing an order which he had no power to pass, unless his action is capable of no other interpretation. In the present case the essential thing, so far as he was concerned, was that he was being asked to withdraw the warrant. It may well have been his attitude, and the subordinate courts have not too much time for debating refinements, "Very well, if you both say you have compromised I am prepared to withdraw the warrant." I do not think that the facts or the language of the order justify us in holding that he considered himself to be substituting, or can be held to have substituted, the compromise for the decree. I think, therefore, that he did not pass any order, and the question whether he would have power to pass such an order so as to extend the period of limitation under S. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not arise. But I would add that if it be treated as an order, I agree that the execution court has no power to pass such an order.

There is only one further point to which I need briefly refer, and that is the question whether the proceeding of January 16, 1928, was merely a continuation of the original application of March, 1923, or whether that application had finally terminated on August 29, 1923, and the application of January 16, 1928, was an entirely new proceeding. I should be disposed to hold that the second was a continuation of the first application, and I would not hold the decree-holder too literally bound by the phraseology of the application of January 16, 1928. But it is unnecessary for me to consider this point further because while it has been urged before us, it does not appear to have been ever hinted at by the decree-holder at any earlier stage of the proceedings.

Civil 1932 Gobardhan Das v. Dau Dayal Boys, J.

I agree with the order proposed by Mr. Justice Mukerji.

BY THE COURT—We dismiss the appeal, but in the exercise of our revisional jurisdiction we set aside the order of the Assistant Collector dated February 24, 1928, and dismiss the application for execution. In the circumstances of this case we direct that the parties should bear their own costs throughout. Appeal dismissed

Civil 1932 Jan. 29 Mears, C. J. Sen, J.

BANDHAN SINGH (Plaintiff)
versus
DAULATA KUAR AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Hindu Law—Reversioner—Acts of waste by life-tenant—Remote reversioner not entitled to challenge—Act II of 1929—Effect of—Sisters and sisters' sons of last male-holder—Precedence in order of succession over distant collaterals.

Under the Hindu Law the person entitled to challenge any acts of waste or alienation by a life-tenant like a Hindu mother is the next presumptive reversioner on the date of the suit. By operation of Act II of 1929, sisters and sisters' sons obtained a precedence in the order of succession over distant collaterals and therefore a remote reversioner is not entitled to sue for an injunction restraining the mother of the last male-holder and her transferee from committing acts of waste unless he satisfies the court that the nearest reversioner has colluded with the life-tenant or has otherwise done acts precluding him from maintaining an action.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL from the judgment of the HON'BLE JUSTICE SIR S. M. SULAIMAN.

S. N. Verma for the appellant.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff and arises out of a suit for an injunction restraining the defendants from committing certain acts of waste. Baijnath was the last male holder of this property. He died before the year 1924 leaving a mother of the name of Musammat Daulata Kuar.

The plaintiff claims to be a reversioner of this property as being a distant collateral of Baijnath. The suit was resisted by Mst. Daulata and her transferee upon the ground that the plaintiff was not the next presumptive reversioner of Baijnath. The defendants contend that the nearer heirs were Mst. Satraji, Mst. Sabhraji and Mst. Chabraji who were sisters of Baijnath and also three sisters' sons. Prior to the passing of Act II of 1929, under the Hindu law as administered in these provinces, sisters were no heirs at all. Sisters' sons were heirs but they were not entitled to inherit the property till all the collaterals of the last male holder were exhausted. The effect of Act II of 1929 was to grant a right of inheritance to sisters and to place sisters and sisters' sons in the list of heirs immediately after the father's father and before the father's brother. Act II of 1929 received the assent of the Governor General on February 21, 1929. It has been provided in Section 5 (1) of the General Clauses Act (Act X of 1897) that where any Act of the Governor-General in Council is not expressed to come into operation on a particular day, then it shall come into operation

---

*L. P. A. 13 of 1931

CIVIL
1932
BANDHAN SINGH
v.
DAULATA KUAR
Sen, J.

on the day on which it receives the assent of the Governor-General. Under the Hindu law the person entitled to challenge any acts of waste or alienation by a life tenant like a Hindu mother is the next presumptive reversioner on the date of the suit. By operation of Act II of 1929, sisters and sisters' sons obtained a precedence in the order of succession over distant collaterals like the plaintiff. Under the circumstances the plaintiff's claim was bound to fail. A mere remote reversioner is not entitled to sue unless he satisfies the court that the nearest reversioner has colluded with the life tenant or has otherwise done acts precluding him from maintaining an action. We are of opinion that the view taken by Mr. Justice Sulaiman was perfectly correct and was the only possible view. We therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1932
Feb. 13
KING, J.

A. U. JOHN AND OTHERS
versus
SURAJ BHAN*

Court Fees Act, Schedule I, Art. I—Appellants seek to establish priority of their debentures over plaintiff's claim—Ad valorem court-fee payable on value of debentures or decretal debt, whichever is less.

Plaintiff's suit for recovery of a certain amount from a company and from certain debenture-holders of that company, and for a declaration that the amount was recoverable in priority over the debentures, having been decreed, the debenture-holders appealed to the High Court for modification of the decree by refusing the declaration that plaintiff's claim had priority over the debentures. Held: that the appellants sought to establish the priority of their debentures—in other words, they sought to exonerate the property which was security for their debentures from liability to satisfy the decretal debt—and the court-fee was payable ad valorem on the decretal debt, or on the value of the debentures whichever was less. Moti Begam v. Har Prasad, 16 A. L. J. R. 81.

Ram Nama Prasad for the appellants.

The following judgment was delivered by

KING, J.—This is a reference under S. 5 of the Court Fees Act, 1870. King, J.
The suit was for recovery of Rs.37,246 from the Agra United Mills Ltd. and from certain debenture-holders of that Company, and for a declaration that the amount is recoverable in priority over the debentures in favour of defendants 2 to 7.

The debenture-holders have appealed to the High Court to modify the decision of the trial court by refusing the declaration that the plaintiff's claim has priority over the debentures. The appeal is valued at Rs.37,246 and a court-fee of Rs.10 only has been paid. The question is, what is the proper court-fee payable on the memorandum of appeal?

The Stamp Reporter contends that an ad valorem fee on Rs.37,246 amounting to Rs.1,055 is payable. The appellants' learned advocate contends that the appeal challenges nothing more than the declaratory portion of the trial court's decree and the court-fee is governed by Art. 17 (iii) of the 2nd Schedule.

---

*Stamp Ref. in F. A. (?) of 1931

In my opinion, Art. 17(iii) has no application to the facts of this case. That provision applies to a memorandum of appeal in a suit "to obtain a declaratory decree where no consequential relief is prayed." The present suit was of a very different nature. It was primarily a suit for money. It is true that a declaration was also prayed for, as a further relief, but the suit was obviously not for a mere declaration without consequential relief, so Art. 17(iii) cannot apply. Moreover, the relief claimed in this appeal is not a mere declaration but a modification of the trial court's decree, which is a substantial relief.

The appellants rely upon Chunia v. Ram Dial[1], Moti Singh v. Kaunsilla[2], Bagala Sundari Debi v. Prosanna Nath Mukerjee[3] and Shrimant Sagajirao v. Smith[4], but they are quite beside the point. They refer to the court-fee payable on the plaint in a suit which is held to be for a declaration pure and simple. Nekho Tewari v. Kishun Prasad Pandey[5] is also cited. The suit was for a declaration and for consequential relief in the form of a temporary injunction pending the disposal of the suit. A decree was granted for the declaration only. The court-fee on the defendants' appeal against this declaratory decree was held to be governed by Art. 17 Schedule II as the temporary injunction was granted at an early stage of the suit and thereafter the suit was reduced into a mere suit for a declaration and it was tried as such. This ruling therefore is also clearly distinguishable upon the facts.

As Art. 17(iii) does not apply, and there is no suggestion that the memorandum of appeal is otherwise specially provided for, I think it follows that the court-fee is payable ad valorem under Schedule I Art. 1 upon the amount or value of the subject-matter in dispute in the appeal. The appellants seek to establish the priority of their debentures. In other words, they seek to exonerate the property which is security for their debentures (to the extent of the value of their debentures) from liability to satisfy the decretal debt. I think the court-fee is payable ad valorem on the decretal debt, or on the value of their debentures, whichever is less.

This conclusion is supported by a decision of this Court in Moti Begam v. Har Prasad[6]. That was a suit for sale upon a mortgage and one of the defendants Moti Begam, claimed priority for a mortgage executed in her favour to secure her dower debt. The court held that the plaintiff's mortgage was prior in date. Mst. Moti Begam appealed for a declaration that she had a prior charge for the amount of her dower debt and that the property could duly be sold subject to her prior charge. The facts are therefore similar to those of the present case. The Taxing Judge repelled the contention that the court-fee was payable as in a suit for a mere declaration, and held that it was payable on the amount of the prior charge.

I am also supported by the following decisions of other High Courts. Venkappa v. Narasimha[7], Kesavarapu Ramakrishna Reddi v. Kotta Kota Reddi[8], Jugal Pershad Singh v. Parbhu Narain Jha[9] and Premsukh Das v. Shah Gopi Saran[10].

---

[1] I. L. R. 1 All. 360

[2] I. L. R. 16 All. 308

[3] 21 C. W. N. 375

[4] I. L. R. 20 Bom. 736

[5] I. L. R. 3 Pat. 640

[6] 16 A. L. J. 81

[7] I. L. R. 10 Mad. 187

[8] I. L. R. 30 Mad. 96 (F.B.)

[9] I. L. R. 37 Cal. 914

[10] 4 Patna L. J. 323

The Madras Full Bench decision lays down that where the appellant in an appeal against a mortgage decree does not dispute the amount decreed but disputes the liability of certain properties for the decretal amount, then the court-fee is payable on the value of the properties, or on the decretal amount, whichever is less. The other rulings are consistent with this view and I think the same principles are applicable to the present case.

I therefore hold that the court-fee is payable ad valorem on the decretal amount, or on the value of the debentures, whichever is less.

SABIR HUSAIN AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
FARZAND HASAN AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil
1932
Feb. 16
King, J.

Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), Schedule I, Art. 1—Appeal—Valuation of—Dispute about liability of certain properties for the decretal amount—Value of such properties or decretal amount, whichever is less, is the proper valuation.

Where the trial court entirely excluded the assets of one S in the hands of defendants 2 to 5 from liability for the decretal amount, and in the appeal from the decree of the trial court the plaintiffs asked that the suit may be decreed against the assets of S in the hands of defendants 2 to 5, held, that ad valorem court fee was payable on the liability sought to be imposed or the value of the assets of S in the hands of defendants 2 to 5, upon which the liability was to be imposed, whichever was less.

STAMP REFERENCE in first appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

A. M. Khwaja for the appellants.

The following judgment was delivered by

KING, J.—This is a reference under S. 5 of the Court-fees Act, 1870. King, J.

The suit was for Rs.8,333-5-4 as the plaintiffs' share of the dower of their deceased daughter who was married to defendant No. 1. Rs.2,994-0-8 were also claimed as interest. The trial court decreed the plaintiff's suit for Rs.8,333-5-4 against the person and personal property of defendant No. 1 but refused to pass a decree against the assets of Sibte Hasan in the possession of defendants 2 to 5. The claim for interest was dismissed.

The plaintiffs in this appeal claim a further sum of Rs.2,166-10-8 on account of interest. They also ask that the suit may be decreed against the assets of Sibte Hasan in the hands of defendants 2 to 5. An ad valorem court-fee has been paid on the amount of interest claimed. In respect of the relief that the suit be decreed against the assets of Sibte Hasan in the hands of defendants 2 to 5, a court-fee of Rs.10 only has been paid.

The Stamp Reporter contends that the court-fee in respect of this relief is payable ad valorem on the value of the assets of Sibte Hasan and that there is a deficiency of Rs.345 in the court-fee paid.

The appellants' counsel urges that he only seeks a declaration that the assets of Sibte Hasan in the hands of defendants 2 to 5 shall be made liable for the decretal amount, and if a court-fee is payable on the value of such assets, then it is impossible to put a money value upon the assets and therefore a court-fee of Rs.10 is sufficient under Art. 17 (vi) of the Second

---

*Stamp Ref. in F. A. 256 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

SABIR HUSAIN v. FARZAND HASAN

King, J

Schedule.

I am unable to accept the appellants' contention. They seek to make defendants 2 to 5 liable for a sum of Rs.10,500 to the extent of the assets of Sibte Hasan which may be in their possession. The value of the subject-matter in dispute in this appeal therefore should, in my opinion, be held to be the value of the assets of Sibte Hasan in the possession of defendants 2 to 5, or the sum of Rs.10,500 claimed by the appellants, whichever is less.

The appellants have relied upon In re Ujagar Lal v. Mohan Kunwar[1]. In that case, the plaintiff claimed to recover a certain sum by enforcement of a mortgage upon two immovable properties P and K. The trial court decreed the plaintiff's claim for a certain sum, but annexed a condition that the property P be first proceeded against and only in the event of its not satisfying the decretal amount, recourse may be had to property K. The plaintiff appealed claiming inter alia that the condition in the decree be set aside and that he be allowed to proceed against both the properties at once. The court held that in respect of this relief, a court-fee of Rs.10 only was payable, apparently on the ground that it was not possible to estimate this relief at a money value. I think this ruling can be clearly distinguished upon the facts. In that case, both the properties mortgaged were made liable for the satisfaction of the decretal amount, the only restriction imposed upon the decree-holder being that he should proceed first against the property P before having recourse to property K. In the present case, the trial court has entirely excluded the assets of Sibte Hasan in the hands of defendants 2 to 5 from liability for the decretal amount. The appellants now seek to make this property liable. If they succeed, then they could recover the whole amount of Rs.10,500 from defendants 2 to 5 to the extent of the assets of Sibte Hasan in their possession. In these circumstances, I think the decision in Kachera v. Kharag Singh[2] which follows the Full Bench ruling of the Madras High Court in Kesavarapu v. Kotta Kota Reddi[3] and the decision in Jugal Pershad Singh v. Parbhu Narain Jha[4], Amir Chand v. Kanhaya Ram[5] and Ramasami v. Subbusami[6] are applicable. I take the correct view to be, in accordance with these rulings, that so far as the appellants seek to render the property in the hands of defendants 2 to 5 liable, the court-fee is payable ad valorem on the liability sought to be imposed, namely, Rs.10,500 or the value of the assets of Sibte Hasan in the hands of defendants 2 to 5, upon which the liability is to be imposed, whichever is less. I am quite unable to accept the view that Art. 17(vi) applies. It may be difficult to make an exact estimate of the value of the assets, but it is clear that the assets have a money value and this clause cannot apply to the case of property which clearly has a money value, although it may be difficult to estimate such value correctly. The appellants should be required to state the value of such assets and this valuation will govern the amount of the court-fee payable in the first instance. The court-fee payable on this relief will be in addition to the ad valorem court-fee which has already been paid in respect of the interest claimed by the appellants both against defendant No. 1 and against the assets in the hands of the other defendants.

---

[1] [1886] A. W. N. 312

[2] I. L. R. 33 All. 20=7 A. L. J. 842

[3] I. L. R. 30 Mad. 96

[4] I. L. R. 37 Cal. 914

[5] 16 I. C. 777

[6] I. L. R. 13 Mad. 508

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 15

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

BHAGWATI PRASAD, RAIS, ALINAGAR, GORAKHPUR— IN THE MATTER OF*

Income-tax Act, Secs. 30 and 23 (4)—Assessment under Sec. 23 (4)—Appeal by assessee—On the ground that case did not fall within Sec. 23 (4)—Appeal not admitted without hearing assessee or his counsel.

An assessment under Sec. 23 (4) of the Income-tax Act of 1922 having been made against the assessee, he filed an appeal before the Assistant Commissioner contending that the Income-tax Officer was not justified in treating the case under Sec. 23, Sub-sec. 4. The Assistant Commissioner, after scrutinizing the order and the memorandum of appeal behind the back of the assessee or his counsel, came to the conclusion that the order had been rightly made and refused to admit the appeal. Held, that the Assistant Commissioner must satisfy himself on hearing the assessee or his counsel and not by an ex parte examination of the record in his chambers, that the case fell within the purview of Sec. 23 (4), and was, therefore, not open to appeal.

REFERENCE submitted by the Commissioner of Income-tax.

K. N. Katju and A. Sanyal for the applicant.

U. S. Bajpai for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is a reference by the learned Commissioner of Income-tax, made in pursuance of an order of this Court, dated June 19, 1931.

It appears that an assessment under Section 23 (4) of the Indian Income-tax Act of 1922 was made against the assessee, one Babu Bhagwati Prasad of Gorakhpur. He filed an appeal before the Assistant Commissioner and one of his contentions was that the income-tax officer was not in the circumstances justified in treating the case as one falling under Section 23, Sub-section (4).

The Assistant Income-tax Commissioner scrutinized the memorandum of appeal and the assessment order of the Income-tax officer, but he did so behind the back of the assessee or his counsel. He came to the conclusion that the order under Section 23 (4) had been rightly made, in the circumstances of the case. He refused to admit the appeal and directed that the appellant, the assessee, should be informed of the fact. The assessee went before the Commissioner of Income-tax, and he contended that the Commissioner should state the case before this Court. The Commissioner having declined, the assessee came to this Court and he obtained the order, dated June 16, 1931.

The two questions that really arose in the case were indicated in the order of this Court and were:

(1) Was the assessee entitled to be heard before the Assistant Commissioner in order to show that in the circumstances of the case the Income-tax Officer was not justified in making an assessment under Section 23, Sub-section (4)?

(2) Was the notice issued under Section 22, Sub-section (4) rightly issued, although an inquiry into the assessment had started?

The learned Commissioner in stating the case has framed the ques-

*Mis. Case 58 of 1931

CIVIL

1932

BHAGWATI PRASAD In re

Mukerji, J.

tion No. (2) but in framing the question No. (1) has missed the point that really arose for decision.

It has been held in this Court in two cases, and that opinion has been followed by the Bombay High Court, that it is open to a High Court to resettle the issues arising in the case and to answer them. The cases decided in this Court are Shiva Prasad Gupta v. Commissioner of Income-tax, U. P.[1], Kajori Mal Kalyan Mal of Generalganj, Cawnpore—In the matter of[2]. The Bombay case is The Commissioner of Income-tax, Bombay Presidency, Bombay v. The National Mutual Life Association of Australasia, Limited[3].

We consider that in this case we ought to resettle the first issue and answer it. It is obvious that if the issue No. (1) be answered in the affirmative, the issue No. (2) will not require any answer, nor will the issue No. (3) as framed by the learned Commissioner.

The contention of Dr. Katju on behalf of the assessee is that the mere fact that the Income-tax Officer quoted Section 23, Sub-section (4) in his assessment order, was not enough to preclude an appeal. To shut out an appeal there must be a genuine case under Section 23, Sub-section (4). The Assistant Commissioner in hearing an appeal must satisfy himself, on hearing the assessee or his counsel, and not by an ex parte examination of the record in his chambers, that the case fell within the purview of Section 23, Sub-section (4) and was therefore, not open to appeal. The learned Government Advocate has argued that Section 27 furnishes the real remedy of the assessee and that instead of appealing he should follow the procedure laid down in Section 27.

We are of opinion that Section 27 is applicable to the particular cases noted therein, and the present case does not fall within the purview of Section 27. Further, where Section 27 is applicable, it may still be open to the assessee, if he has a good case, to file an appeal and to show that the order under Section 23, Sub-section (4) was not justified.

Our view is supported by two Full Bench decisions of the Patna and Punjab High Courts respectively and they are Kunwarji Ananda v. Commissioner of Income-tax, Bihar and Orissa[4] and Duni Chand v. the Commissioner of Income-Tax[5].

Our answer to the issue No. (1) as resettled above, is that the Asssistant Commissioner should have heard the assessee or his counsel and then should have decided whether the case really fell under Section 23 (4) of the Income-tax Act.

As no other question arises, we direct that a copy of this judgment be sent under the seal of the Court to the Commissioner of Income-tax. The Government must pay the costs of this reference to the assessee. The Government Advocate is entitled to a fee of Rs.100 to which he will certify within the period allowed by the rules of this Court. There was a previous hearing of this case on June 19, 1931, and we assess the fee of the learned Government Advocate for that day at the same figure of Rs.100. The gentleman, who officiated as the Government Advocate on that day, will on receipt of the fee certify within the prescribed period.

[1] A. I. R. 1929 All. 819

[2] Mis. Case 6 of 1929=28 A. L. J. R. 78

[3] I. L. R. 55 Bom. 637

[4] A. I. R. 1931, Pat. 306

[5] I. L. R. 10 Lah. 596

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 22

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

NATHU RAM (Opposite party)
versus
MADAN GOPAL (Objector)*

Provincial Insolvency Act, Secs. 68 and 4—Attachment by official receiver in pursuance of court's order—Application challenging attachment made more than 21 days after attachment—Sec. 68 inapplicable—Court entitled to decide question of title under Sec. 4.

The official receiver attached certain property alleged to belong to the insolvent under an order of the insolvency court. Later on the objection of the son of the insolvent the insolvency court decided that the house belonged to the son, and released it from attachment. The objection was made more than twenty-one days after the attachment by the receiver. Held, that Sec. 68 did not apply and the objection was not barred by time. The objector was not challenging the act of the receiver, but the order of attachment passed by the court ex parte, and it was open to the court, acting under Sec. 4, to enquire into the question of title and adjudicate upon the rights of the objector.

Bhairon Prasad v. S. P. C. Das, 17 A. L. J. R. 787 and Husaini v. Muhammad Zamir Abedi, 74 I. C. 802 distinguished.

SECOND APPEAL from an order of G. O. ALLEN ESQ., District Judge of Agra.

S. N. Seth and Raj Narain Singh for the appellant.

Nanak Chand for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is an appeal arising out of an insolvency proceeding. On an application made by a creditor the insolvency court ordered the official receiver to take possession of certain property alleged to belong to the insolvent. The official receiver, in pursuance of the said order, attached this property on June 8, 1929. On July 2 the son of the insolvent applied to the insolvency court alleging that the property was his own property. The insolvency court decided that the house belonged to the son, and released it from attachment. In that court no objection was taken that the application to the court had been made more than 21 days after the attachment by the receiver.

An appeal was preferred to the District Judge, before whom it was urged that the application having been made more than 21 days after the date of the attachment, it should not have been entertained.

The learned Judge has overruled this contention, and in our opinion rightly. The house was attached under an order of the insolvency court, and not by any independent decision of the official receiver. The actual attachment was a mere ministerial act done in pursuance of the order of the court. The objector was not challenging the act of the receiver, who had no voice in the matter, but the order of attachment passed by the court ex parte. It seems to us that it was not an act or decision of the receiver within the meaning of Section 68. On the other hand, it was a claim put forward by a stranger to the insolvency proceedings setting up his own independent title, and it fell within the scope of Section 4 of the

---

*S. A. F. O. 3 of 1931

Civil

1932

Nathu Ram v. Madan Gopal

Sulaiman, J.

Provincial Insolvency Act. It was open to the court to enquire into the question of title and adjudicate upon the rights of the objector. The learned District Judge is not wrong in holding that the application was not barred by time.

The learned advocate for the appellant relies on the case of Bhairon Prasad v. S. P. C. Dass[1] and Husaini v. Muhammad Zamir Abedi[2]. But in those cases there was not any order of the court directing attachment, but the act complained against was an act of the receiver himself. Those cases are, therefore, distinguishable.

It is further urged that owing to some misapprehension on the part of the counsel for the appellant, he did not press all the points in the grounds of appeal before the District Judge and confined the argument to this question of limitation only. The learned District Judge in refusing to rehear the case has pointed out that he does not believe that there was any misunderstanding. After arguments had been heard the case was put down for delivery of judgment, and not for further hearing on the next date. In these circumstances, if the counsel did not advance any arguments on some of the grounds of appeal, it must be assumed that he had abandoned them. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] 17 A. L. J. R. 787

[2] 74 I. C. 802

Civil

1932

Jan. 29

Sulaiman, J.
Young, J.

SRIDAT (Applicant)
versus
MOHAR SINGH AND ANOTHER (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 21, Rule 92 and Sec. 151—Whether sale can be set aside outside the provisions of Order XXI—Auction-purchaser under honest mistake—That amount for which property was knocked down included mortgage money also—Whether court can set aside sale.

Where the court set aside a sale on the ground that the auction-purchaser was under an honest mistake that the amount for which the property was knocked down included the mortgage money also, and the auction-purchaser was not misled by anything done or said by the sale officer, held, that there is no inherent jurisdiction in a court to set aside a sale outside the provisions of Order XXI, and the order of the court was ultra vires.

Where the Collector is appointed the sale officer by the court, it is he who has to sell the property and to declare the purchaser. Jai Bahadur Jha v. Matukdhari Jha, I. L. R. 2 Pat. 548 not followed.

Civil Revision from an order of I. B. Mundle Esq., District Judge of Saharanpur.

M. L. Agarwala for the applicant.

S. N. Seth for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

Sulaiman, J.—This is an application in revision by the judgment-debtor arising out of a proceeding relating to the sale of his property. Shiam Lal had a money decree against Shri Datt, in execution of which the zamindari property of the judgment-debtor was attached. The court,

---

*Civ. Rev. 235 of 1931

Civil
1932
Sridat
v.
Mohar
Singh
Sulaiman, J.

acting under Chapter 4, Rule 11(2) of the General Rules (Civil), appointed the Collector as the sale officer to conduct the sale. The sale proclamation stated that the amount of the decree was Rs.3,300, the encumbrances on the property attached amounted to Rs.2,000 and the estimated value of the property was Rs.2,500. The property was put up at auction and several bids were made, including a bid by the decree-holder himself up to Rs.2,300 which was followed by a bid made by the respondent auction-purchaser for Rs.2,400. The property was knocked down to him. When asked to deposit ¼th of the sale price, the auction-purchaser expressed his astonishment and told the sale officer that he had thought that the amount for which the property was knocked down included the mortgage money also. The sale officer considered that the auction-purchaser was honest in his statement, and reported to the civil court that the property might be resold. On the receipt of the report of the sale officer, the court ordered: 'I agree with the sale officer. Let the property be sold again'. The judgment-debtor appealed from this order to the District Judge, who dismissed the appeal holding that the order had not been passed under O. 21, R. 92 and no appeal lay to him. The learned Judge thought that the court had in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction under Section 151 C. P. C. set aside the sale.

In revision the judgment-debtor challenges the propriety of the order of the first court. There is no doubt that no material irregularity in the conduct of the sale was committed, because the sale officer correctly announced the price as given in the proclamation of sale. We may assume in favour of the auction-purchaser that he himself was under some misapprehension or mistake. The decree-holder who was following close with his bids could not have been under any such misapprehension. The learned advocate for the respondent has argued that under Or. 21, R. 84 no person can be declared to be the purchaser until the court itself has declared him to be the purchaser. He relies on the case of Jaibahadur Jha v. Matukdhari Jha[1]. That case, apparently proceeded on the special practice which prevails in Behar. We are not concerned with that in this case. Here the Collector was appointed the sale officer by the court, and it was he who had to sell the property and to declare the purchaser. It was the sale officer who had to demand the deposit of 25 per cent of the purchase money, under Rule 84. Previous to his making such a demand, he necessarily declared the respondent to be the purchaser. Under our Rules the declaration is not made by the court. If the respondent makes default, the property may have to be resold, and he would be liable to make good the deficiency, if any.

We are of opinion that the purchaser is not entitled to have the sale set aside on the ground of any misapprehension or mistake on his own part, when he was not misled by anything done or said by the sale officer. A unilateral mistake cannot avoid a contract. There appears to be no inherent jurisdiction in a court to set aside a sale outside the provisions of O. 21. There is an express provision in Rule 92 to the effect that where no application is made under Rules 89, 90 or 91, or where such application is made and disallowed, the court shall make an order confirming the sale, and thereupon the sale shall become absolute. This precludes the court from setting aside a sale on any other ground. We are, therefore, of opinion that the order of the court setting aside the sale after the property had been knocked down, and when there was no irregularity or fraud, was ultra vires and cannot be allowed to stand. The learned District Judge was right in holding that no appeal lay to him. We accordingly allow this application in revision, and setting aside the order dated May 1, 1930 passed by the Subordinate Judge, send the case back to him to proceed with it and dispose of it according to law. The applicant will be entitled to his costs of this revision from the respondent.

---

[1] I. L. R. 2 Pat. 548

CIVIL
1932
Jan. 26
SULAIMAN, J.
BANERJI, J.
KING, J.

SWADESHI COTTON MILLS CO. LTD.—IN THE MATTER OF*

Stamp Act, Sec. 2(10) and Companies Act, Sec. 104—Deed of conveyance—Test of—Agreement to transfer business, good will, etc.—Agreement for allotment of shares in future—Duty to be paid.

If the parties choose to be satisfied with a mere contract for sale, without an actual deed of sale, stamp duty payable on a conveyance cannot be demanded. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. G. Angus and Co., [1889] 23 Q. B. D. 579 at 593 followed.

The proprietors of a private firm called 'the vendors' of the one part and the Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd. called 'the company' of the other part entered into an agreement which provided that the vendors shall sell all their business undertakings and assets, including good will, free-hold plant, etc., that the purchase was to be completed on such date as might be arranged mutually between the parties, and possession of the premises was to be given to the company on the completion of the purchase, that in the meantime the vendor was to carry on the business on behalf of the company, that part of the consideration be paid by allotment of shares in the company, and that the costs of all the documents required for the purpose of transferring the properties agreed to be sold were to be paid by the company. After the execution of this agreement a sale deed was executed by the vendors in respect of the immovable property but no subsequent deed of transfer was executed as regards the good will or the movable properties. The allotment of shares was made subsequent to the agreement which bore a stamp of eight annas only, and was filed with the Registrar of the Joint Stock Companies under Sec. 104 of the Companies Act (VII of 1913). Held: that the instrument in question could not be regarded as a deed of conveyance but was only an agreement for which the duty due under the Stamp Act was fully paid.

There is nothing in the provisions of Sec. 104 of the Companies Act which requires that a duty payable on a conveyance should be levied on an agreement for the allotment of shares by a company in future.

ORDER on reference submitted by the Junior Secretary, Board of Revenue.

K. N. Katju and M. N. Kaul for the Swadeshi Cotton Mills Ltd.
U. S. Bajpai for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

---

*Mis. Case 684 of 1931

Civil
1932
Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd. In re
Sulaiman, J

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a reference from the Board of Revenue under the Stamp Act. The instrument in question is an agreement dated January 26, 1921 between Messrs. Horsman who were the proprietors of a private firm carrying on business under the name of Swadeshi Cotton Mills called "the vendors" of the one part and the Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd. called "the company" of the other part. The vendors agreed to sell all their business undertakings and assets as from January 1, 1930, including good will, free-hold hereditaments, plants, machinery, etc., contracts, outstanding debts and other goods, with the exception of profits for a short period which had to be assessed on a certain basis and some furniture. The nominal capital of the Company was Rs.30,00,000 which was divided into 15,000 preference shares and 15,000 ordinary shares of Rs.100 each. Part of the consideration consisted of the allotment of all the shares with the exception of 33 ordinary shares, the consideration for the costs of stores, etc., was to be their market value, and as for the residue of the consideration the company was to pay all the outstanding debts.

The agreement stated:

> Now it is agreed and declared (that) the vendors shall sell and the Company shall purchase with effect as on and from January 1, 1920, etc.

It again recited that > the purchase shall be completed on such date as may be mutually arranged between the parties hereto with effect as on and from the said January 1, 1920, possession of the premises shall be given to the Company on the completion of the purchase.

It was repeated that 'the possession of the said lands and premises shall be retained by the vendors up to completion' and in the meantime the vendors shall carry on the business as heretofore and shall be deemed to be carrying it on for and on behalf of the company as from January 1, 1920. The agreement further provided that all the necessary parties > shall at the expense and cost of the company execute and do or cause to be executed and done, all such leases assurances and things for vesting the said premises in the company.

It also stated that the costs of > all documents and things required for the purpose of transferring the properties hereby agreed to be sold to the company shall be paid by the company.

After the execution of this document a sale deed dated November 8, 1922 was executed by the vendors in respect of the immovable property but no subsequent deed of transfer was executed as regards the good will or the movable properties. It however appears that this very agreement was filed with the Registrar of the Joint Stock Companies under Section 104 of the Indian Companies Act (No. 7 of 1913) after the allotment of shares had been made subsequent to the agreement.

The learned Government Advocate on behalf of the Board of Revenue contends that the agreement was in substance a deed of conveyance of movable properties as defined in Section 2(10) of the Stamp Act and a contract of sale in respect of the shares within the meaning of Section 104 of the Companies Act, and should therefore have been stamped as a deed of transfer. The instrument was stamped as a mere agreement and bore a stamp of eight annas only.

The language of the instrument as quoted above on the face of it, shows that it was a mere contract entered into between the parties, which was to be subsequently completed although the parties intended that when completed it should take effect from January 1, 1920. So far as the immovable properties were concerned there was a subsequent deed of transfer in pursuance of this agreement. So far as the movable properties were concerned, their transfer could take place by mere delivery and there was no necessity to execute a fresh deed of transfer. The only difficulty was about the good will which could not be 'delivered.' It seems to us that if the parties chose to be satisfied with a mere contract for sale, without an actual deed of sale, stamp duty payable on a conveyance cannot be demanded. By entering into a mere contract short of an actual conveyance they run a certain amount of risk. If either party resiles from the contract, the other party may have to institute a suit for specific performance of the contract. Trouble may also arise if the vendors subsequently convey the property to a bona fide transferee for value. But if in spite of this risk the parties refrain from getting an actual deed of conveyance prepared, they can successfully evade the payment of higher duty. As observed by Lord Esher in the Commissioners of Inland Revenue v. G. Angus and Co.[1].

> But it is said that if the appeal be decided against the Commissioners purchasers will rest satisfied with an agreement of which specific performance would be declared and will not go on to execute a conveyance, and so the Crown will lose the stamp duty and it is rather suggested that this would be cheating the Crown and committing a fraud. The Crown, however, must make out its right to the duty, and if there be a means of evading the stamp duty, so much the better for those who can evade it. It is no fraud upon the Crown, it is a thing which they are perfectly entitled to do. The Crown cannot have the stamp duty unless the parties to the sale chose to effectuate the transaction by an instrument which of itself conveys the property, and, if they chose to be satisfied with something less, the matter is not brought within Section 70 (of the Stamp Act of 1870).

It was also observed in the same case that even the good will of the business did not pass by the instrument, which was a mere contract to sell the business, premises and good will, etc. The learned Government Advocate relies on the Civil Reference under Section 46 of the Indian Stamp Act (I. L. R. 20 Bombay 432). But in that case, apart from the agreement to transfer the business, good will, assets, etc., there was an actual grant of the premises valued at Rs.1,50,000, which grant the other party confirmed. The learned Judges treated it as a conveyance of the premises for Rs.1,50,000 and the stamp duty was charged on this sum only. The agreement to transfer the business, goodwill, etc., was not treated as a deed of conveyance and duty on its value was not charged as on a conveyance. In this sense this case actually supports the company.

Having considered the agreement as a whole, we are of opinion that it cannot be regarded as a deed of conveyance, but is only an agreement for which the duty due under the Stamp Act has been fully paid.

It is not for us to consider whether the Registrar of the Joint Stock

---

[1] [1889] 23 Q. B. D. 579 at 593

Civil

1932

Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd In re

Sulaiman, J.

Companies was right or wrong in accepting this agreement as a contract of sale under Section 104 of the Indian Companies Act. The allotments of shares were to be made after this agreement was executed. The allotments were in fact made subsequently. We do not think that there is anything in the provisions of Section 104 of the Indian Companies Act which requires that a duty payable on a conveyance should be levied on an agreement for the allotment of shares by a company in future.

This is our answer to the reference.

MAHABIR PERSHAD AND ANOTHER
versus
CHITTOO LAL AND OTHERS*

Civil

1932

Feb. 12

Sulaiman, J.
Young, J.

Pre-emption Act, Secs. 9 and 20—Sale of Sir land—Vendor becomes ex-proprietary tenant—Right of pre-emption accrues in favour of plaintiffs—Before institution of suit for pre-emption vendee sells property back to vendor—Whether Sec. 9 bars suit for pre-emption.

On a sale of Sir lands, the vendor became an ex-proprietary tenant, and a right of pre-emption under Sec. 11 of the Pre-emption Act accrued in favour of the plaintiffs against the vendee. Before the institution of a suit for pre-emption the vendee sold the property back to the vendor. The suit for pre-emption was instituted within one year of the original sale. Held, (1) that Sec. 9 did not apply, as it did not say that if property ultimately passed on to an ex-proprietary tenant the right of pre-emption previously acquired was automatically extinguished; (2) that Sec. 20 applied, and the suit was maintainable against the subsequent transferee who, being an ex-proprietary tenant, had no right of pre-emption equal or superior to that of the plaintiffs.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. C. MALIK ESQ., Additional Subordinate Judge of Fatehpur, reversing a decree of N. P. SANYAL, Munsif.

S. N. Seth and S. B. L. Gaur for the appellants.

Kirpa Shankar Misir for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a plaintiffs' appeal arising out of a suit for pre-emption. On July 5, 1927 Chittu Lal sold his sir rights to Madari with the result that he became ex-proprietary tenant of the plots. He transferred his entire proprietary interest and ceased to be a co-sharer. Subsequently on May 30, 1928 apparently on getting notice of the claim of pre-emption, Madari sold the property back to Chittu Lal. The suit for pre-emption was instituted on July 4, 1928, i.e., within one year of the original sale deed. In the plaint the plaintiffs mentioned the dates of both the documents and also stated that the cause of action arose on both the dates and they wanted a decree for pre-emption as against both the defendants. The claim was decreed by the first court but the lower appellate court has dismissed the suit holding that there has been a transfer to an ex-proprietary tenant within the meaning of Section 9 of the Agra Pre-emption Act and the suit is not maintainable.

---

*S. A. 987 of 1929

There is no doubt that so far as the second sale of May 30, 1928 is concerned no right of pre-emption accrued on it. Section 9 makes it quite clear that no right of pre-emption accrues on a sale to an ex-proprietary tenant. Therefore if a suit had been brought more than one year after July 5, 1927, the plaintiffs would not have been entitled to pre-empt the property as against Chittu Mal on the strength of the transfer made to him on May 30, 1928. But there can also be no doubt that the right to pre-empt accrued under Section 11 of the Act on July 5, 1927 in favour of the plaintiffs against Madari, and Chittu Lal is a subsequent transferee and therefore a representative of Madari. The right of pre-emption thus accrued must subsist unless it has been extinguished. Section 9 does not say that if property ultimately passes on to an ex-proprietary tenant the right of pre-emption previously accrued is automatically extinguished. It only lays down that no right of pre-emption shall accrue on a sale to such a tenant. It is Section 20 which is applicable to a case where property is reconveyed by a vendee to another person before the institution of the suit. If the property is transferred to a person having a right of pre-emption equal or superior to that of the plaintiff then no suit shall lie. It is therefore obvious that a suit can be brought against Chittu Lal, who being an ex-proprietary tenant, has no right of pre-emption equal or superior to that of the plaintiffs. A right of pre-emption as defined in Section 4(9) means the right of a person on a transfer of immovable property to be substituted in place of the transferee by reason of such right. There is no explanation to Section 20 similar to that subsequently added to Section 12(3) which would justify the inference that an ex-proprietary tenant is to be deemed to have a right of pre-emption equal or superior to that of a co-sharer. Nor can any such inference be drawn from the language of Section 9. It seems to us that in view of the definition of the right of pre-emption given in the Act it is not possible to hold that an ex-proprietary tenant has a right of pre-emption equal or superior to that of a co-sharer. All that is provided is that no right of pre-emption shall accrue on a sale to him taking place, and not that a right of pre-emption which has already accrued shall be extinguished. We must accordingly hold that the plaintiffs' right of pre-emption subsists.

The lower appellate court has found that the correct sale price is Rs.208-3-3. We accordingly allow this appeal and setting aside the decree of the lower appellate court restore the decree of the court of first instance, and extend the time for payment by two months from this date. If the amount is deposited within the time allowed the plaintiffs will have their costs from the defendant Chittu Lal. If the amount is not deposited within the time allowed, the suit shall stand dismissed with costs in all courts.

CRIMINAL

1932

Feb. 16

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

NAZIRAN (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR THROUGH MUNICIPAL BOARD, AGRA
(Opposite party)*

Municipalities Act (Local Act II of 1916), Sec. 298H(e)—Bye-law under—Prohibits prostitutes from residing within the municipal limits except certain streets—Whether bye-law ultra vires.

Where a municipality frames a bye-law under Sec. 298H(e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act prohibiting public prostitutes from residing 'within the municipal limits' except certain streets, held, that having regard to the definition of 'municipality' in Sec. 2(9) of the Act, the municipality is itself an area the limits of which are defined and specified, and the bye-laws themselves show what the municipal limits are, and therefore the mention of such limits with the exception of certain parts of it, does amount to specifying a particular area within the meaning of Sec. 298H(e), and the bye-law is not ultra vires.

Where a municipality framed a bye-law prohibiting public prostitutes from residing 'within the municipal limits' except certain streets, but the exception permitted those who owned houses within the area other than the streets excepted, to continue to reside in such houses, held, that reading the whole bye-law together with the exception in it, there was no absolute prohibition against prostitutes residing within the specified area, and the bye-law was ultra vires. Chanchal v. King-Emperor, [1932] A. L. J. R. 28 followed.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by J. N. MUSHRAN ESQ., Sessions Judge of Agra.

The following is the Referring Order:—

BENNET, J.—This is a criminal reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Agra, forwarding an application in revision of one Mst. Nasiran, a prostitute, against a sentence of 8 annas fine per day passed on her under Section 299 of the Municipalities Act, U. P. Act II of 1916. She had been convicted of residing in Takeri Gali in Agra City on the complaint of the Municipal Board and of plying her trade as a prostitute there. The conviction was under a bye-law of 1917 made by the Municipal Board as follows:—

No public prostitute shall reside in any house or building or ply her trade within the municipal limits, excepting on both sides of the street beginning from shops Nos.3215 and 3096 in Phulatti Bazar down to Kinari Bazar up to shops Nos. 2007 and 4765 and from there on both sides of the street in Kashmiri Bazar down to Malka Bazar cross road shops Nos. 2723|II and 2175 on each side of the street."

This bye-law was framed by the board in virtue of the power given by Section 298H(e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act, Act II of 1916. This Section empowers a municipal board to make bye-laws for the following purposes among others.

"Prohibiting in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes and the keeping of a brothel or the letting or other disposal of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel."

The ground which has been taken in revision is that there is a decision of a learned single Judge of this Court dated May 18, 1931—Mst. Muhammadi v.

---

* Cr. Ref. 718 of 1931

K.-E. through the Municipal Board of Agra, Criminal Revision No. 147 of 1931, in which it has been held that the bye-law in question is ultra vires. As I find that I cannot agree with this view of Section 298H(e), I therefore forward this criminal reference to the learned Chief Justice with a recommendation that this case should be laid down before a bench of two Judges.

The view of Section 298H(e) which I take is as follows:—The sub-section begins with the words "prohibiting, in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes". The word which has to be interpreted is the word "area". In a municipality it appears to me that for the purpose of residence there are four units of area as follows:—

(1) Houses, (2) streets, (3) mohallas, (4) Municipality. It does not seem to have been previously argued that the word "municipality" can mean an area, but I find in Section 2(9) of the Act the definition of "Municipality" as follows: "Municipality" means any local area which is a municipality by reason of a notification issued under Section 3 or, subject to the provisions of the said Section, any local area which was a municipality at the time immediately preceding the commencement of this Act".

I consider therefore that the word "area" in Section 298H(e) must include the word 'area' used in Section 2(9), and therefore the municipality itself must be an area in regard to which the Municipal Board may prohibit the residence of public prostitutes. From this it would follow that a municipal board may either prohibit the residence of public prostitutes in any particular house or street or mohalla or any number of the above areas or in the municipal area itself, and if it may prohibit the residence of public prostitutes in the whole municipal area it may prohibit the residence of public prostitutes in the whole municipal area less any particular part. The reasoning in Criminal Revision No. 147 of 1931 is based entirely on the argument that the bye-law in question did not specify an area within which public prostitutes were prohibited from residing. This reasoning is based on the supposition that the words "within municipal limits", do not mean an area. I have pointed out that the definition of municipality in Section 2(9) shows that municipality does mean an area. There is therefore in the bye-law in question in the first clause a prohibition against public prostitutes residing in an area, that is within the municipal limits. The remainder of the clause excepts certain parts of the municipal area from the prohibition. I am not able to see anything in the bye-law which is beyond the powers granted to the municipal board by Section 298H(e).

A further argument was addressed to me by learned counsel to the effect that the bye-law was unreasonable. I consider that it would be necessary for the applicant in revision to prove by evidence that the bye-law in question was unreasonable, and there is no evidence on this point on the record. I note that the plea was put forward by learned counsel in Criminal Revision No. 147 of 1931 and was rejected, and in that case it was put forward on an oral statement by learned counsel as regards the facts of the exempted area. It is obvious that a matter of this nature must be proved by evidence and not by allegations of counsel on matters of fact. For the reasons noted above I forward this criminal revision to the learned Chief Justice.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This case has been referred to a Division Bench because a learned Judge of this Court differed from the opinion expressed in Criminal Revision of Muhammadi v. King-Emperor[1]. The Municipality of Agra made the following bye-law in 1917:—

> No public prostitute shall reside in any house or building or ply her trade within the municipal limits, except on both sides of the streets.

The accused is a public prostitute carrying on her trade and residing in a place not within the excepted streets. She had been fined thrice before and was found guilty of continuing her trade. Accordingly the magistrate convicted her again and imposed a fine of eight annas per day for the period during which it was found that she had broken the bye-law.

The learned Sessions Judge has referred the case to the High Court in view of the decision in the Criminal Revision referred to above.

Power has been conferred on Municipal Boards under Section 298H(e) of the U. P. Municipalities Act (Act No. 2 of 1916) for making a bye-law for the following purpose among others:—

> Prohibiting in any specified street or area, the residing of public prostitutes and the keeping of a brothel or the letting or other disposal of a house or building to public prostitutes or for a brothel.

The definition of 'Municipality' as given in Section 2(9) of the Act is as follows:—

> Municipality means any local area which is a municipality by reason of a notification issued under Section 3 or, subject to the provisions of the said Section, any local area which was a municipality at the time immediately preceding the commencement of this Act.

It is therefore clear as pointed out by Bennet, J. that the Municipality is itself an area the limits of which are specified, well-known and defined. The bye-law undoubtedly prohibits public prostitutes from residing 'within the Municipal limits' except certain streets. It seems to us that the bye-law does specify the rest of the area within the Municipal limits other than the excepted streets as the area in which public prostitutes shall not reside. We can see no force in the contention that the area in which residence is prohibited must be a smaller area and not a larger area of the town. There is no such restriction. It is however not necessary in this case to decide whether the word 'area' may not include the entire area within the municipal limits. It has been suggested that there can be no specification of an area unless a bye-law mentions or names or designates particular streets or parts of mohallas. But when the bye-laws themselves show what the municipal limits are, the mention of such limits with the exception of certain parts of it, does amount to specifying a particular area.

A new point has been urged before us which apparently was not discussed before the learned Judge who referred this case to us. The bye-law as quoted in the order of reference is not complete. The last portion of it is as follows:—

"Exception—Prostitutes owning houses in places other than these mentioned above may continue to reside in such houses, but future acquisitions of property shall not entitle them to live and carry on their profession there."

---

[1] [1932] A. L. J. R. 15

CRIMINAL

1932

NAZIRAN v. KING-EMPEROR

Sulaiman, J.

It is quite clear that reading the whole bye-law together with the exception in it, there is no absolute prohibition against prostitutes residing within the area other than the streets excepted. One class of prostitutes, namely, those who own houses, are still allowed to carry on their trade within such area. This involves an invidious distinction between the two classes of prostitutes. As held in Chanchal v. King-Emperor[2] there should be no discrimination of this kind; the prohibition must be general and of universal application within the specified area, and must not make an exception in favour of any particular group or class of prostitutes.

In view of this last consideration we are of opinion that the bye-law, inasmuch as it failed to lay down an absolute prohibition within the specified area was ultra vires, and illegal.

The Municipal Board would be well advised to reconsider the bye-law so as to make it of a general application within specified areas where it intends that prostitutes should be prohibited from residing.

We accordingly accept this reference though on a ground different from that on which it was based, and setting aside the conviction of the accused acquit her of the offence with which she was charged.

Reference accepted
Conviction quashed

---

[2] [1932] A. L. J. R. 28

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 25

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

THE OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF MORADABAD
versus
MURTAZA ALI AND OTHERS*

Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), Sec. 28, and Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Sec. 264—Whether insolvency law applicable to suits and proceedings under the Tenancy Act.

Before the coming into force of the Tenancy Act of 1926 the law was that provisions of the insolvency law did not apply to proceedings in the revenue court. But that portion of Sec. 193 of the old Tenancy Act (II of 1901) which had the effect of making the insolvency law inapplicable to cases under the Tenancy Act has been deleted from the corresponding Sec. 264 of the new Act (III of 1926), and the bar has been automatically removed. The Provincial Insolvency Act must now be held to be applicable to suits and proceedings under the Tenancy Act.

History of the law reviewed.

SECOND APPEAL from an order of D. C. HUNTER ESQ., District Judge of Moradabad.

S. N. Seth for the appellant.

Mushtaq Ahmad for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is an appeal by the official receiver in insolvency from an order under Section 4 of the Provincial Insolvency Act. It appears that the respondent Murtaza Ali held a simple money decree for arrears of rent against Ahmad Ali, a thekadar. This decree was in execu-

---

*S. A. F. O. 4 of 1931

CIVIL
1932
OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF MORADABAD
v.
MURTAZA ALI
Sulaiman, J.

tion but before the property was attached the judgment-debtor was declared an insolvent on May 1, 1929. In spite of his insolvency, the decree-holder proceeded to attach certain zamindary properties belonging to his judgment-debtor, and they were put up for sale by the revenue court and sold at auction on March 25, 1930. When the sale was confirmed the official receiver moved the insolvency court under Section 4 of the Act for deciding the question whether any title had passed to the auction-purchaser by the revenue court's sale. The original insolvency court decided the point in favour of the official receiver holding that as a result of the insolvency of the judgment-debtor, his estate had become vested in the official receiver and no court other than the insolvency court was seized of the jurisdiction to sell the property. On appeal the learned District Judge came to a contrary conclusion. He pointed out that up to September 7, 1926, when the new Tenancy Act came into force, the law undoubtedly was that provisions of the insolvency law did not apply to proceedings in the revenue court. He then proceeded to ask himself the question whether the authors of the Tenancy Act really intended to alter the law which had stood for at least 30, if not 50, years, and whether the omission of all reference to the insolvency law was deliberate. He was also influenced in his view by a note in a certain pamphlet issued under the authority of the Government and by there being no reference to the alteration of the law in the reported debates held in the Legislative Assembly. He, therefore, came to the conclusion that it was very difficult to suppose that the legislature really intended that the law should be altered. He accordingly disallowed the application of the official receiver.

We agree entirely with the view taken by the learned District Judge that up to 1926 the law was as he has stated. We may briefly summarise the previous enactments, in order to make the point of view pressed by the District Judge clear.

Chapter 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1877 (Act 10 of 1877) contained provisions relating to the insolvency of debtors. In the Rent Act of 1881 special procedure was laid down for suits between landlords and tenants, and the rules of civil procedure were applicable in some cases only. The Civil Procedure Code of 1882 (Act 14 of 1882), Chap. 20, dealt with insolvency proceedings. In Section 4, there was an express provision that nothing contained in the Code shall be deemed to affect any law prescribing special procedure for suits between landlords and tenants. Thus Chap. 20 of the Code dealing with insolvency matters was not applicable to suits between landlords and tenants. In the Tenancy Act of 1901, Section 193 in express terms made Chap. 20 of the Code inapplicable to all suits and proceedings under the Tenancy Act. It was accordingly held by a Full Bench of this Court in Kalka Das v. Gajju Singh[1] that the provisions of the Insolvency law did not apply to revenue cases. Section 56(2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act (Act 3 of 1907) expressly enacted that where in any enactment in force at the time of the commencement of the Act, reference is made to Chap. 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1877 or of 1882, such reference, so far as may be practicable, shall be construed as applying to this Act. Under the same

---

[1] 19 A. L. J. R. 439

Section Chap. 20 of the Code was repealed because the provisions relating to the insolvency of debtors were embodied in a separate Act. It, therefore, followed that the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act were inapplicable to cases under the Tenancy Act, in view of the exception contained in Section 193 of the latter Act. The new Code of Civil Procedure of 1908 did not alter the position in any way. The Provincial Insolvency Act (Act 5 of 1920) also contained Section 83, in which it was again provided that where in any enactment at the time of the commencement of the Act reference is made to Chap. 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1877 or 1882, the reference shall, so far as may be practicable, be construed as applying to this Act. The result obviously was that the Insolvency Act of 1920, by virtue of the exception contained in Section 193 of the Agra Tenancy Act of 1901, remained inapplicable to cases in the revenue courts. The learned District Judge was, therefore, perfectly right in holding that this was the state of the law up to 1926 when the new Tenancy Act was passed.

But in order to interpret the provisions of the New Tenancy Act, when the sections themselves are clear, we cannot allow our minds to be influenced by the previous history of the law, and draw any inference as regards the supposed policy of the legislature. It is only in the case of ambiguity that previous legislation may be referred to in order to throw light on the interpretation of a particular section. But where the Act itself is clear, the presumption is that the legislature deliberately intended to alter the law, and we must interpret the sections as they now stand. If our interpretation in any way conflicts with the policy of the legislature, it is open to it to amend the Act.

Section 264 is the new section which in some ways corresponds to Section 193 of the old Act. It is the only section which makes the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1908 applicable to suits and proceedings under the Tenancy Act, subject to certain exceptions. The legislature had before it the previous provision in Section 193, under which Chap. 20 of the Code of Civil Procedure dealing with insolvency matters had been expressly excluded. But in enacting the new sections the legislature omitted any further reference either to that chapter of the old Code of Civil Procedure, or to the new Provincial Insolvency Act. Whether the omission was deliberate or accidental, it is not for us to speculate. The fact remains that that portion of Section 193 which had the effect of making the insolvency law inapplicable to cases under the Tenancy Act has been deleted from Section 264 of the new Act. The Provincial Insolvency Act is an Imperial Act and applies to all proceedings, except those which are excepted by it. Section 28 of the Act, which lays down that the property of an insolvent shall vest in the court or the receiver, as the case may be, itself contains an exception in Sub-section (5) as regards any property which is exempted by the Code of Civil Procedure, or "by any other enactment for the time being in force, from liability to attachment and sale in execution of any decree." There is no law in force which now makes the proceedings in insolvency inapplicable to a revenue suit or proceeding. The inapplicability of the Insolvency law to revenue cases depended mainly on the provision in Section 193 which made such

CIVIL
1932
OFFICIAL RECEIVER OF MORADABAD
v.
MURTAZA ALI
Sulaiman J

law inapplicable. By deleting that provision from Section 264 of the new Act, that bar has been automatically removed. There is, therefore, nothing to prevent the applicability of the insolvency law to proceedings under the Tenancy Act. Whether the result is unfortunate or not, there can be no doubt that this is the result of the language of Section 264 as it now stands.

The learned District Judge himself felt this difficulty, and, therefore, suggested that "it is possible that Section 6 of the United Provinces General Clauses Act covers the point."

Sub-clause (a) of that section, which has been referred to, merely provides that when any Act repeals any enactment hitherto made, then, unless a different intention appears, the repeal shall not revive anything not in force or existing at the time at which the repeal takes effect. This sub-section merely implies that a repealing Act does not bring into existence the previous Act which had been itself repealed by the repealed Act. For instance, the mere fact that the Tenancy Act of 1926 repealed the Tenancy Act of 1901 would not revive the Rent Act of 1881. The effect of the section in the General Clauses Act undoubtedly is that the fact of repealing the Tenancy Act of 1901 does not by itself revive anything not in force at the time when the repeal took effect. But the applicability of the insolvency law to revenue cases does not depend on the repealing Tenancy Act of 1926. The Insolvency Act applies, unless there is a bar to its application. It is that bar which has been removed in the new Tenancy Act.

We are, therefore, clearly of opinion that the Provincial Insolvency Act must now be held to be applicable to suits and proceedings under the Tenancy Act because there is no bar to its applicability in existence. In this view of the matter, it is wholly unnecessary for us to consider what would be in accordance with public policy.

We are accordingly of opinion that the order passed by the original insolvency court was correct, and that the official receiver's application for a declaration that the auction sale held by the revenue court outside the insolvency proceedings did not pass any title to the auction-purchaser and that the sale proceeding was null and void as against him, should be allowed. We direct that the appellant shall have his costs from the respondents in all courts.

CIVIL 1932
Feb. 18
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

MELA RAM GORWARA (Applicant)
versus
THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL THROUGH THE COLLECTOR, ALLAHABAD AND OTHERS
(Opposite party)*

Railways Act, Secs. 77 and 140—Suit for refund of over-charge—Not imperative to mention in plaint that refund had been demanded from railway—Notices purporting to be under Sec. 80 C. P. C. served on managers—Requirements of Sec. 77 complied with—Whether notices good.

There is nothing in Sec. 77 or 140 of the Railways Act which makes it imperative on a plaintiff to mention in the plaint that refund had been demanded from the railway administration in the manner required by law. If the fact is denied by the defendant but is proved from the evidence, the plaintiff's suit is not liable to be dismissed.

---

*Civ. Rev. 551 of 1931

Where in a suit for refund of an over-charge in respect of goods carried by four state railways, it was proved that notices purporting to be those under Sec. 80 C. P. C. were served on the managers in the manner provided by Sec. 140, Railways Act and the notices substantially complied with the requirements of Sec. 77, Railways Act, held, that the mere fact that Sec. 80 C. P. C. was mentioned in the notices will not detract from their real character as demands made under Sec. 77 Railways Act.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of BABU KALI DAS BANERJI, Small Cause Court Judge of Allahabad.

Ajodhiya Prasad Verma for the applicant.

U. S. Bajpai for the opposite parties.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision from the decree passed by the Judge of the court of Small Causes at Allahabad dismissing the plaintiff-applicant's suit for refund of over-charge realized from him by a Railway Company in respect of a consignment sent by him from Lohgara railway station to Ultadanga. The sole ground on which the suit was dismissed by the lower court was that no notice under S. 77, Railways Act, was given and the fact that such notice had been given was not mentioned in the plaint.

The suit was instituted against four defendants, namely: (1) Secretary of State for India in Council, (2) The G. I. P. Railway, (3) The East Indian Railway and (4) the Eastern Bengal Railway. The three railway administrations above mentioned are all State railways and were impleaded as the goods in question had to pass through them in transit. It is not disputed that notices, purporting to be those under S. 80, Code of Civil Procedure, were given by the applicant within six months of the delivery of the goods and of the levy of the overcharge (which occurred on the same day) and more than two months before the institution of the suit. The fact was recited in the 4th para of the plaint. The lower court apparently thought that the plaintiff should have stated that a notice under S. 77, Railways Act, had been given and that a reference to S. 80 C. P. C., was not sufficient. The learned Judge seems also to have been of the opinion that a notice under S. 80, C. P. C., cannot be accepted as one under S. 77, Railways Act.

It has not been denied before me, nor was it denied in the court below, that notices given by the plaintiff-applicant complied with the provisions of S. 80, C. P. C., in all respects. S. 77, Railways Act, debars a person from obtaining a refund of an over-charge in respect of goods carried by railways, unless his claim to the refund has been preferred in writing by him to the railway administration within six months from the date of the delivery of the goods. S. 140 of the same Act requires a notice or other document to be served on a Railway Administration to be served on the manager thereof in case that railway administration be the Government. In this case, notices under S. 80, C. P. C., were given to the managers of the Railways already mentioned. The notices given by the plaintiff-appli-

CIVIL
1932
MELA RAM
v.
THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL
Niamatullah, J.

cant substantially complied with the requirements of Ss. 77 and 140 of the Railways Act, and the mere fact that S. 80, C. P. C., was mentioned will not detract from their real character as demands made under S. 77. They were served in the manner provided by S. 140 of the Railways Act. There is nothing in either of the two sections which makes it imperative on a plaintiff to mention in the plaint that refund had been demanded from the Railway Administration in the manner required by law. If the fact is denied by the defendant but appears from the evidence, the plaintiff's suit is not liable to be dismissed. The requirements of S. 77 Railways Act, differ in this respect from those of S. 80, C. P. C., which expressly provides that the fact of the notice being given should be mentioned in the plaint. Even if it were otherwise, a mention in the plaint of notices under S. 80, C. P. C., would, in the circumstances of this case, be a sufficient compliance with such rule.

For these reasons, I am of opinion that the decree of the lower court dismissing the plaintiff's suit is erroneous and should be set aside. Accordingly, this revision is allowed, the decree of the lower court is set aside and the suit is remanded for disposal on the merits. The respondent will pay the costs of this revision.

Application allowed

CIVIL 1932
March 1
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

JITMAL RAM GOPAL THROUGH RAM GOPAL (Decree-holder)
versus
NATHU RAM (Objector)*

Provincial Insolvency Act, Secs. 31, 75 and 5(2)—Insolvency court refusing protection as regards all debts due from insolvent—Appeal—Only three creditors who contested application for protection in the first court impleaded—Protection granted—Other creditors entitled to execute decrees against insolvent.

The insolvency court having refused protection as regards all the debts due from the insolvent, he appealed to the District Judge impleading only the three creditors who had appeared in the first court to contest the insolvent's application for protection and obtained a protection order from the District Judge. Subsequently, the appellant, who was not one of the three creditors, took out execution of his decree praying for the insolvent's arrest. Held, that the order of the insolvency court of appeal though general in its terms, must be limited to the debts due to the three creditors, who had been impleaded and as against whom the order of the first court was set aside, but as regards the other creditors, including the appellant, the order of the first court became final, and the appellant was therefore entitled to execute his decree against the insolvent.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL from a decree of ALI AUSAT ESQ., District Judge of Aligarh, reversing a decree of MAULVI ZAMIRUL ISLAM KHAN, Munsif of Hathras.

B. N. Sahai for the appellant.

Panna Lal for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This appeal arises out of insolvency proceedings.

---

*E. S. A. 848 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

—

JITMAL RAM GOPAL
v NATHU RAM

—

Niamat-ullah, J.

One Nathu Ram, respondent in this appeal, was adjudged insolvent. He applied under Section 31 of the Provincial Insolvency Act for a protection order. The Judge in insolvency refused to grant the protection order. Notice of the application had been given to all the creditors. Only three appeared to contest the application but the order was couched in general terms and refused protection as regards the debts due to all of the creditors. The insolvent appealed to the District Judge and impleaded the three creditors who had appeared in the court and who contested his application for a protection order. No notice of the appeal was issued to any of the other creditors. The District Judge allowed the appeal and granted an order for the protection of the insolvent from arrest or detention. Subsequently the appellant before us, who was not one of the three aforesaid creditors, took out execution of his decree and prayed for the arrest and imprisonment of the insolvent-judgment-debtor. The latter objected relying on the protection order granted by the insolvency court of appeal. The learned Munsif before whom the execution proceedings were pending overruled the objection holding that the protection order did not apply to the decree-holder before him. The learned District Judge took a different view holding that, as the protection order was unqualified, it should be deemed to apply to all the debts due from the insolvent. The decree-holder has preferred the present second appeal.

There can be no doubt that the order of the insolvency Court of original jurisdiction refused protection as regards all the debts due from the insolvent and as against every one of the creditors. The fact that only three of the creditors appeared to contest the application for the protection order will not detract from the effect of the court's refusal for an order of protection as regards all debts.

Section 5, Sub-section (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act makes the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code applicable to all proceedings under that Act before the High Court and the district court exercising appellate jurisdiction. The insolvent should have impleaded all his creditors as respondents who were entitled to a notice of the appeal. Section 31(4) provides that "every creditor shall be entitled to appear and oppose the grant of a protection order." The order of the insolvency court of appeal, though general in its terms, was effective only so far that it set aside the order of the court of first instance as regards the three creditors, who were impleaded as respondents, and who had an opportunity of contesting the grant of a protection order. As regards the other creditors including the appellant before us, the order of the court of first instance became final. As between them and the insolvent it was the only operative order. It follows that the order of the insolvency court of appeal must be limited to the debts due to the three creditors, who had been impleaded and as against whom the order of the first court was set aside. In this view, the lower appellate court was not right in reversing the order of the first court which allowed process to issue in execution of the appellant's decree against the insolvent. Accordingly we allow this appeal, set aside the order of the lower appellate court and restore that of the court of first instance. The appellant shall have his costs from the respondent.

Appeal allowed

L. C. DeSOUZA, CAWNPORE—IN THE MATTER OF*

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 12

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

General Clauses Act, Sec. 27—Presumption as to service of notice—Rebuttable—Income-tax Act, Sec. 22(2)—Notice sent to assessee by registered post, acknowledgment due—Delivery taken by minor son of assessee—Whether service good.

On a true construction of Sec. 27 of the General Clauses Act the presumption as to service raised by "properly addressing, prepaying and posting by registered post" a notice (which an Act authorises to be served by post), is a rebuttable presumption.

Where a notice, issued by the Income-tax Officer, by registered post, acknowledgment due, under Sec. 22(2) of the Income-tax Act, was taken delivery of by his son without stating the name of the addressee for whom he purported to sign the receipt, and the son, though a minor, was possessed of ordinary intelligence and was living with his father and had on previous occasions received such notices on his father's behalf, held, that the service of the notice was a good service.

ORDER on reference submitted by the Commissioner of Income Tax, Ghazipur.

K. N. Katju for the applicant.

U. S. Bajpai for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is a reference under Section 66(2) of the Income-tax Act by the learned Commissioner of Income tax under the following circumstances:—

The assessee, Mr. L. C. DeSouza, is a resident of Cawnpore. On May 29, 1930, the Income-tax Officer of Cawnpore, issued, by means of registered post, acknowledgment due, a notice under Section 22(2) requiring him to submit by July 2 or within 30 days of the service of the notice, a return of the income for the assessment year 1930-31. This notice was not complied with, although it was delivered by the postal peon to the assessee's son, Mr. J. DeSouza. There was another notice issued under Section 22, Clause (4) of the Income tax Act, and it was served on another son of Mr. DeSouza. At one time there was a controversy about the validity of this notice, but the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax having held that this service was not good, we are not called upon to express any opinion on that point.

As no compliance had been made of the notices issued, an assessment was made on Mr. L. C. DeSouza under Section 23, Sub-section (4) of the Indian Income tax Act.

Mr. DeSouza, when a notice of demand was served on him, made an application under Section 27 of the Income-tax Act to have the assessment revised. He had to show sufficient cause for non-compliance with the notice and one of the points that were raised was that the service of notice issued on May 29, 1930 was not a proper service. Certain statements of facts were made by him, but those facts were not accepted by the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax and we are not concerned with those facts.

---

*Civ. Mis. 714 of 1931

Civil

1932

L. C. DeSouza in re

Mukerji, J.

The Commissioner of Income-tax has stated the following question for our answer:—

> In the circumstances of this case, did the fact that the postal acknowledgment receipt was signed by the assessee's son who was a minor and signed without stating the name of the addressee for whom he purported to sign, vitiate the service of the notice under Section 22(2) which was issued by registered post?

There are two contentions before us. On behalf of the assessee it is argued that the rule as to service by post in S. 63 of the Income tax Act has to be read along with Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, and in view of the language employed in Section 27, there is a rebuttable presumption as to the service effected through post. On behalf of the Crown it is argued that Section 27 of the General Clauses Act has two portions. One relates to the service being effected and the other relates to the time at which service is effected, and it is further argued that in respect of the service the presumption is conclusive when the notice has been posted, properly addressed and prepaid and in a registered cover.

We have considered the two arguments and are of opinion that the presumption raised by Section 27 is a rebuttable one. This appears from the language employed by Section 27 itself, and even if the language did not warrant any such conclusion, analogy of Section 4 of the Indian Evidence Act would lead to the same conclusion.

To consider Section 27 first we find the words "unless the contrary is proved" used. Those words refer both to the service and to the time. It is true that those words come just before the words "to have been effected at the time", but the whole import of the Section seems to be that the presumption holds good unless the contrary is proved. There is no reason to suppose that the first portion of the section containing the words "service shall be deemed to be effected" is to be taken as a completed sentence before we read the words "to have been effected at the time, etc."

Assuming that the words "unless the contrary is proved" as used in Section 27 do not apply to the words "shall be deemed to be effected", we may apply by analogy Section 4, Paragraph 2 of the Indian Evidence Act. It lays down:

> whenever it is directed by this Act that the court shall presume a fact, it shall regard such fact as proved unless and until it is disproved.

These words do not, in terms, apply to the General Clauses Act, but we find that the words used are "shall be deemed" as we have got the words "shall presume" in Paragraph 2 of Section 4.

Let us take an example which no doubt is an extreme case, but it will show what would be the consequence of the contrary conclusion. The example we have in mind is this. Suppose a notice is posted as laid down by Section 27 of the General Clauses Act and the notice is actually returned as undelivered by the Post Office. If the presumption is conclusive, or in other words, if the evidence afforded by "properly addressing, prepaying and posting by registered post" be conclusive evidence of service of notice, the fact that the notice has been returned as unserved, will not be admissible as evidence of the fact of non-service. This could hardly have been considered a right rule of law by the Legislature. We hold, therefore, that the presumption raised is a rebuttable presumption.

Civil
1932
L. C. DeSouza in re
Mukerji, J.

Now the question is whether the fact that the notice was delivered at the place of the assessee is a good service. For this purpose we have to look to the rules framed under the Post Office Act in the Postal Guide. According to Paragraph 113 relating to delivery of articles, "No registered article will be delivered to the addressee unless and until he or his agent has signed a receipt for it, etc." The service, therefore, of a notice will be good on the assessee if it is received either by him or by his agent.

This leads us to consider whether the assessee's son Mr. J. DeSouza was or not an agent for his father in the circumstances of this particular case.

We find, according to the finding of fact arrived at by the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax, that Mr. J. DeSouza was technically a minor and was possessed of ordinary intelligence. This would mean that Mr. J. DeSouza was verging on the age of majority and was an intelligent man. We have further facts that he was living with his father and that when on previous occasions notices had to be served on Mr. DeSouza, the assessee, they were taken delivery of by his sons. The fact, that Mr. J. DeSouza was a minor, did not prevent him from being an agent of his father, for the purpose of accepting delivery of an article. Under Section 184 of the Contract Act as between principal, the father in this case, and third persons, any person may become an agent. It follows, therefore, that in proper circumstances, a minor son may be an agent of his father. We hold, in the circumstances, that the delivery of the postal article, namely, the notice, was a good delivery. It would follow, therefore, and we hold accordingly, that the service of the notice in the circumstances of this case was a good service. Let a copy of this judgment under the seal of the Court be sent to the Assistant Commissioner of Income Tax. As regards costs of this reference, the assessee must pay the same, and we assess the fees of the learned Government Advocate at Rs.100. He will certify to the payment of his fees within the prescribed period.

CHANDI RAM AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)
versus
KUNJ BEHARI LAL AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Civil
1932
March 3
Mukerji, J.
Bennet, J.

Costs—Suit decreed against three defendants—Interest of each defendant separately valued—Liability to costs—Proportionate.

Where a suit was decreed against three defendants, and the interest of each defendant was separately valued, each defendant should contribute to the costs in proportion to the property held by him out of the estate in suit.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of J. R. W. BENNET ESQ., District Judge of Kumaun, Naini Tal, modifying a decree of BABU SADA NAND, Assistant Collector first class of Kashipur.

Iqbal Ahmad and Mansur Alam for the appellants.

M. L. Agarwala for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

---

*S. A. 743 of 1930

Civil
1932
Chandi Ram v. Kunj Behari Lal
Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This appeal raises an interesting question of law of contribution in the following circumstances:—

One Rani Durga Kunwar was in possession of her husband's estate. She granted a lease of a portion of the estate in favour of the plaintiffs one of whom has since died and has been succeeded by his legal representatives. She granted another lease in favour of the ancestors of the respondents the defendants in the case. One Kunwar Anand Singh claimed the entire estate in the hands of Durga Kunwar and her transferees on the allegation that he was an adopted son of the Rani's late husband. During the pendency of the suit Rani Durga Kunwar died. The suit succeeded ultimately and the decree that was made as regards costs was that a sum of Rs.3,400 should be paid to the plaintiff by the present parties and out of the estate, if any, of the late Rani Durga Kunwar. Rani Durga Kunwar left no property out of which any costs could be recovered. The present plaintiffs, thereupon, the entire costs having been realised from them by Anand Singh, sought to recover one-half of the costs recovered from them from the defendants.

The first court decreed the claim. There was an appeal by the defendants and the learned Judge reduced the claim to a sum of Rs.826. The argument that found favour with the learned District Judge was this. There were really three defendants against whom the suit had been decreed. The interest of each defendant was separate and was valued as follows:— The plaintiffs' interest was valued at Rs.17,319 being the value of the property in their possession; the defendants' interest was valued at Rs.21,540 being the value of the property in their possession; Rani Durga Kunwar's interest was valued at Rs.50,000 and odd, the total estate having been valued at Rs.88,930. The learned Judge held that each party should contribute to the costs in proportion to the property held by it out of the estate in suit. To calculate on that basis the plaintiffs were granted a decree for 2154|8893 out of Rs.3,400. In other words, the defendants were made liable for a portion of the costs proportionate to the amount of property held by them.

We think that the method adopted by the learned District Judge was correct. There were three parties liable for the costs and if one of them was unable, from poverty or otherwise, to pay the costs, it was no reason why that party's share or a portion of it should be recovered from any other party.

In the result, the appeal fails and is hereby dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL
1932
Jan. 29
MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

BALBHADDAR UPADHYA (Defendant)
versus
SHEO MANGAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Mortgage—Prior and subsequent mortgages—Prior mortgagee takes another mortgage—Part of mortgage consideration left with him to pay up his own mortgage and the subsequent mortgage—Subsequent mortgage not paid up—Suit for sale on subsequent mortgage—Whether prior mortgagee can use his paid up mortgage as a shield.

Where a mortgagee having a prior lien upon the property, takes another's mortgage of the property with a distinct stipulation with his mortgagor to discharge with the mortgage money left in deposit with him his own lien and that of another mortgagee (of a date subsequent to his own), and the mortgagee satisfies his own incumbrance but fails to discharge the other incumbrance, he cannot be allowed in equity to use his paid up mortgage or charge as a shield against the suit of the subsequent mortgagee for sale. Muhammad Sadiq v. Ghaus Mohammad, I. L. R. 33 All. 101 (F.B.) and Makhan Lal v. Nathi, 21 A. L. J. R. 382 relied on.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL against the judgment of the HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE SIR B. J. DALAL.

U. S. Bajpai for the appellant.

Haribans Sahai for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by.

Mears, C. J.

MEARS, C. J.—This is a defendants' appeal and arises out of a suit for sale on a mortgage dated June 1, 1916. Lachhmi Narayan and others were possessed of 2 bighas 13 biswas of fixed rate holding in mouza Sipahi. On May 27, 1912 they made a usufructuary mortgage of this property in favour of Balbhaddar. On June 1, 1916 they made a simple mortgage of the said property in favour of Murlidhar, father of the plaintiffs for Rs.400. On August 30, 1921 they executed another simple mortgage of the same property in favour of Balbhaddar's grand-son in consideration of Rs.1,425. It has been found as a fact by the court below and the finding is not challenged in appeal that the real mortgagee under this document was Balbhaddar himself. The details of the mortgage consideration were as follows:—Rs.499 were left with the mortgagee for payment to himself on account of his prior mortgage dated May 27, 1912 and a sum of Rs.799 was left with him for payment to Murlidhar on account of the mortgage bond now in suit. On August 31, 1921 the mortgagors executed another simple mortgage in favour of Balbhaddar of the fixed rate holding and also a house.

The suit was resisted by Balbhaddar on the ground that he was entitled to hold as a shield against the plaintiff his prior mortgage, dated May 27, 1912. This plea was repelled by the court of first instance and the defendant-appellant has lost in all courts.

Under the contract, dated August 30, 1921, Balbhaddar had undertaken not only to pay up his own mortgage, dated May 27, 1912, but

---

*L. P. A. 14 of 1931

CIVIL
1932
BALBHADDAR UPADHYA v. SHEO MANGAL
Mears, C. J.

also to pay up the mortgage bond in favour of the plaintiff, dated June 1, 1916. He never paid this mortgage. Having regard to the nature and character of the transaction as embodied in the document, dated August 30, 1921, it is patently clear that it could never have been in the contemplation of Balbhaddar that he should use his mortgage bond, dated May 27, 1912, as a shield as against the plaintiff because the parties had agreed that both the mortgages of 1912 and 1916 should be completely wiped off. Whether a mortgage paid off is kept alive or extinguished depends upon the intention of the parties and ordinarily such an intention is to be presumed where it would be for the preservation or protection of one's contract against a third party. This is the settled law and is founded upon considerations of justice, equity and good conscience. But this rule is not to be extended to the case of a transferee, who has flagrantly failed to carry out his obligations in full under his contract with his transferor. Where a transferee of immovable property, having a prior lien upon the property, purchases the property with a distinct stipulation with his vendor to discharge with the purchase money left in deposit with him his own lien and that of another mortgagee (of a date subsequent to his own) and the transferee satisfies his own incumbrance but fails to discharge the other incumbrance, he cannot be allowed in equity to use his paid up mortgage or charge as a shield against the latter. Muhammad Sadiq v. Ghaus Mohammad[1] and Makhan Lal v. Nathi[2]. We are of opinion that the view taken by the learned single Judge of this Court is perfectly correct. We accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] I. L. R. 33 All. 101 (F.B.)

[2] 21 A. L. J. 382

CIVIL
1932
Feb. 18
SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

MOHAMMAD AHMAD SAEED KHAN (Defendant)
versus
KISHORI LAL AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)*

Mohammedan Law—Waqf—Waqif reserved right to transfer property to pay off previous debts—Subsequent mortgage of part of waqf property—Mortgage valid.

Where the waqif expressly reserved to himself the right to transfer a part of the dedicated property in order to pay off the previous debts, and it was merely in exercise of that power that he subsequently mortgaged a part of the waqf property with a view to satisfy those debts, held, that the mortgage was valid.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of PANDIT RUP KISHAN AGHA, Subordinate Judge of Etah.

T. A. K. Sherwani (for whom N. A. Sherwani) for the appellant.

U. S. Bajpai, Binod Behari Lal and S. B. L. Gaur for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a defendants' appeal arising out of a suit for sale on the basis of a mortgage deed dated April 13, 1923 executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiffs.

---

*F. A. 173 of 1928

It appears that by the year 1922 the defendant was indebted to various creditors to the extent of about Rs.52,000. On October 1, 1922 he executed a deed of waqf which was a settlement in favour of his descendants, but made provision for the payment of the outstanding debts. The waqif laid down that he would discharge his previous liability, and reserved the right to transfer a part of the dedicated property in order to pay off the previous debts, if he was not able to discharge them otherwise. Such a power was expressly reserved in Clause 8(2) of the deed. Apparently he was not able to pay off the previous debts, and accordingly executed the mortgage deed in suit with a view to satisfy those debts. It is to be conceded that there was no fresh advance made by the mortgagees, but the deed was executed in order to pay off the previous debts, the payment of which had been provided for in the deed of waqf.

Under this deed of mortgage the mortgagor undertook to pay to the creditors the entire mortgage money on demand with interest at the rate of 0-10-6 per cent per mensem. It was further provided that interest would be paid by him half yearly, but if there was default, it would be added to the principal and would itself carry interest.

The claim was resisted on two grounds only. First, that in view of the previous dedication, the mortgage deed was not valid. Secondly, that there was a private agreement between the parties that the mortgage would be a usufructuary mortgage and not a simple mortgage.

There is obviously no force in the first contention. The waqif expressly reserved to himself the right to transfer the property in order to pay off the previous debts, and it was merely in exercise of that power that he mortgaged a part of the waqf property. We can see no ground for holding that the mortgage deed was invalid.

The second contention amounts to a plea that although, according to the terms of the registered mortgage deed, the whole of the mortgage money was payable on demand with interest, there was a contemporaneous oral agreement between the parties that the amount would not be payable on demand, but shall be accepted in instalments. The learned Subordinate Judge has rightly held that the defendnat cannot be allowed to prove any such contemporaneous oral agreement.

The learned advocate for the defendant puts forward two grounds on which such evidence, according to him, would have been admissible. He first urges that it is open to a party to prove the subsequent conduct of the opposite party, and Section 92 of the Evidence Act does not prevent such evidence. But subsequent conduct can only be circumstantial evidence of some fact which he wants to prove. The fact which he wants to prove is that of an alleged contemporaneous agreement, and not a subsequent oral agreement.

The second ground urged is that such evidence comes within the scope of Proviso No. 3 to Section 92. It must, however, be noted that the plea is not that the mortgage transaction itself was to be wholly inoperative and ineffective, unless a condition precedent was fulfilled; but the plea is that one of its terms was modified by the oral agreement entered into between the parties. The case, therefore, does not fall under Proviso 3, nor does it fall under Proviso 4, because it is not a case of a

Civil
1932
Mohammad Ahmad Saeed Khan
v.
Kishori Lal
Sulaiman, J.

subsequent oral agreement. Even if it had fallen under Proviso 4, the fact that the terms were entered in a registered document would preclude the defendant from proving a subsequent oral agreement. In our opinion, the case is covered by the express provisions of the substantive part of Section 92, under which it is not open to a party to a written contract to lead evidence to prove any oral agreement for the purpose of varying, adding to or substracting from its terms.

The learned Subordinate Judge, therefore, was perfectly justified in refusing to admit evidence of this sort.

The defence accordingly fails, and the appeal is dismissed with costs. We, however, extend the time for payment by six months.

Appeal dismissed

Civil
1932
Feb. 19
Mears, C. J.
Sen, J.

INAYAT HUSAIN (Plaintiff)

versus

BASHIR AHMAD AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Court Fees Act, Sec. 7(iv), Suits Valuation Act, Sec. 8 and Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 15—Valuation of suit—Contested—Court must determine value—Plaintiff cannot be allowed to over-value or under-value his claim with a view to choose his forum.

Where the valuation of the suit for purpose of jurisdiction is contested, the value must be determined by the court; and where the valuation can be ascertained correctly, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to put an arbitrary value upon his claim, nor can he be allowed to overvalue or undervalue his claim with a view to choose his forum.

Rachappa Subrao Jadhav Desai v. Shidappa Venkatrao Sadhav Desai, 17 A. L. J. R. 418 (P.C.) relied on.

The Suits Valuation Act and the Court Fees Act are purely fiscal enactments and they have no bearing on the question as to which is the proper court for the institution of the suit having regard to the value of the property.

Civil Revision from an order of P. C. Plowden Esq., District Judge of Bareilly.

M. A. Aziz for the applicant.

A. M. Khwaja and Mahmudullah for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J.

Sen, J.—On August 10, 1929 plaintiff instituted a suit in the court of the Munsif of Bareilly for dissolution of partnership, rendition of accounts and partition of certain immovable property. He also prayed for the appointment of a receiver. He stated in paragraph 15 of his plaint:—

> For purposes of jurisdiction and payment of court-fee, the suit has been valued at Rs.2,500 but a further court-fee would be paid within the period allowed by the court on such additional amount as is found due to the plaintiff against the defendant at the time when the decree is passed.

The Munsif had jurisdiction to entertain suits upto the value of Rs.4,000. Where the value of the subject-matter in dispute exceeded Rs.4,000, the proper forum for the suit was the court of the Subordinate Judge of

---

*Civ. Rev. 206 of 1931

Bareilly. The defendants contested the correctness of the value put by the plaintiff and contended that the plaintiff had intentionally undervalued his claim and that the property in dispute was worth more than Rs.10,000. There being a contest regarding the value of the suit, the court amin was directed to submit a report as to the valuation of the property. His report was that the value of the partnership assets exceeded Rs.20,000. No objection was taken to the valuation put by the amin. The plaintiff however contended that his suit was in substance a suit for accounts within the purview of Section 7, Clause 4(f) of the Court Fees Act, that the court-fee was payable on the amount on which the plaintiff chose to value his claim, that Section 8 of the Suits Valuation Act having provided that the value as determinable for purposes of court-fees and the value for purposes of jurisdiction should be the same, and the plaintiff having valued his claim at Rs.2,500 the Munsif had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. This contention was repelled by the Munsif. He held that the value of the suit being more than Rs.4,000, the proper court to entertain the suit was the court of the Subordinate Judge. He accordingly ordered that the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court. An appeal was preferred to the District Judge. He agreed with the view of the Munsif and dismissed the appeal. An application has now been presented to this Court under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the contention raised is that the Munsif had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of the application for revision on the ground that it was within the jurisdiction of the Munsif to go into the question as to what was the value of the subject-matter in dispute and that even assuming that the Munsif had gone wrong, he had jurisdiction to decide the case rightly or wrongly and no application for revision lay under Section 115 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The learned counsel for the applicant relies upon a ruling of this Court reported in re Chhatarpali v. Kalap Dei[1]. We are clearly of opinion that this case has no bearing upon the question in issue. In Jageshra v. Durga Prasad Singh[2] Tudball, J. held that > it was of considerable doubt as to whether under Section 7, Clause 4 of the Court Fees Act a plaintiff was entitled to put on his relief a fictitious value and not the correct and proper value which was known to him.

Richards, C. J. held that > the proper meaning to be attached to the latter words of Section 7, Clause 4 of the Court Fees Act was that the plaintiff should truly state the amount at which he valued the relief sought, and that he was not entitled to put in a fictitious value when the relief was capable of valuation.

We are of opinion that the Suits Valuation Act and the Court Fees Act are purely fiscal enactments and they have no bearing on the question as to which is the proper court for the institution of the suit having regard to the value of the property. This matter must be taken to have been set at rest by the decision of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Rachappa Subrao Jadhav Desai v. Shidappa Venkatrao Sadhav Desai[3] in which it has been laid down as follows:—

---

[1] [1931] A. L. J. 837
[2] 12 A. L. J. 844
[3] 17 A. L. J. R. 418

CIVIL

1932

INAYAT HUSAIN v. BASHIR AHMAD

Sen, J.

When a notional value, different from the real value, is placed upon property for the purpose of the court-fee, such notional value cannot displace the real value for the purpose of jurisdiction.

The following propositions of law may be laid down:—

(1) Where the valuation of the suit for purpose of jurisdiction is contested, the value must be determined by the court; and (2) where the valuation can be acertained correctly, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to put an arbitrary value upon his claim, nor can he be allowed to overvalue or undervalue his claim with a view to choose his forum. In our view, the courts below have arrived at the right decision. The application for revision is entirely without force. We accordingly dismiss it with costs.

Application dismissed

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 1

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

LAL BHUPENDRA NARAIN SINGH (Appellant)

versus

ASHTABHUJA RATAN KUER (Respondent)*

Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Secs. 299 and 271—Objector moves District Judge under Sec. 271—District Judge decides not to refuse application for letters of administration—Whether so-called order passed by him appealable.

Where the appellant moved the District Judge under Sec. 271 of the Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), which does not in terms require any application by the objector, to refuse to hear the respondent's application for letters of administration and exercise his discretion to return it for presentation to another court, and the District Judge decided to go on with the proceeding and not to refuse the application for letters of administration, held, that the District Judge did not refuse the application for letters of administration and therefore literally speaking did not make any order by virtue of the power conferred on him by Sec. 271, and the so-called order passed by him was more or less in the nature of a finding and it could not be treated as a final order adjudicating upon the rights of the parties or disposing of any matter absolutely, and the case therefore did not come within the scope of Sec. 299 so as to give the objector a right of appeal.

Quaere. Whether appeals under Sec. 299 Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925) are limited exclusively to the appeals which are provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of HARISH CHANDRA ESQ., District Judge of Benares.

Binod Behari Lal for the appellant.

K. N. Katju and M. N. Kaul for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This appeal arises out of proceedings relating to the grant of letters of administration. The respondent filed an application in the court of the District Judge of Benares, who has jurisdiction over Jaunpur district, on the basis of a will alleged to have been executed by her father at Jaunpur. In the objection which was originally filed by the objectors, no point was taken that the convenience and justice of the case required that the proceedings should not be carried on in the court at

*F. A. 208 of 1931

Benares. Later on it was argued on behalf of the objectors that the point arose by implication, and the discretion of the District Judge under Section 271 of the Indian Succession Act was invoked. The report of the Collector undoubtedly indicated that a very insignificant part of the property was situated within the district of Jaunpur, and almost the whole of the estate was in Oudh. It was, however, urged on behalf of the respondent that as the will was executed at Jaunpur, the witnesses would come from that city and it would be more convenient to them to come to Benares than to go to Fyzabad. The learned Judge did not think that there was any difficulty in investigating the matter at Benares, because in his opinion both Jaunpur and Fyzabad were in one and the same province as defined in the General Clauses Act. He, therefore, apprehended no difficulty, if letters of administration were granted by him. His opinion is open to question, as the definition of province given in the Indian Succession Act would seem to make any division of British India having a court of the last resort as a province within the meaning of that Act. The initial difficulty in the way of the appellant is that, in our opinion, no appeal lies. It is contended on behalf of the appellant that under Section 299 of the Indian Succession Act any order by the District Judge is appealable as of right, and it is only the procedure relating to the filing or the hearing of the appeal that is governed by the Code of Civil Procedure. Stress is laid on the fact that in the Probate and Administration Act the corresponding words were "under the rules contained in the Code of Civil Procedure", whereas in Section 299 the legislature has substituted therefor the words "in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908".

We doubt very much whether it has been intended to make every order passed by the District Judge necessarily appealable. If orders postponing a case or refusing to adjourn a case were appealable, the position might well become intolerable. It may be pointed out, as the preamble to the Indian Succession Act (39 of 1925) indicates, that the object of the Act was to consolidate the law. One would, therefore, not feel inclined to hold that drastic changes have been introduced by the new Act, unless the language of the section clearly leads to that conclusion. It cannot be disputed that under the old section the courts in India generally used to hold that the right of appeal was limited to the cases provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure. No doubt there are one or two cases in which appeals were entertained from orders which would not have been appealable under the Code; but they stand by themselves. It may be a matter for consideration whether the slight change in the phraseology of Section 299 necessarily implies that the old policy has been altered and a drastic change in the law introduced by the new Act. But it is not necessary for us in this case to answer the wider question whether appeals under the Indian Succession Act are limited exclusively to the appeals which are provided for in the Code of Civil Procedure. It is clear to us that in order to have a right of appeal there must be an order made by the District Judge by virtue of any of the powers conferred upon him by Part 9 of the Act. "Order" generally implies an adjudication of the rights of the parties and a direction to be carried out by them. The appellant had moved

CIVIL

1932

LAL BHUPENDRA NARAIN SINGH v. ASHTABHUJA RATAN KUER

Sulaiman, J.

the District Judge under Section 271, which does not in terms require any application by the objector. That section confers power on the District Judge to refuse an application for letters of administration, if in his judgment it could be disposed of more justly or conveniently in another district, provided that the deceased had no fixed abode at the time of his death in the district under the jurisdiction of the Judge concerned. The learned Judge obviously has not refused the application for letters of administration, and has therefore literally speaking not made any order by virtue of the power conferred upon him by Section 271. He has decided merely to go on with the proceeding, and not to refuse the application for letters of administration. The question whether it was more just or convenient to hear the application at Benares was a matter of discretion for the Judge. He was not bound to refuse the application merely because the deceased had no fixed abode at the time of his death at Benares; nor does the fact that only an insignificant part of the property is situated within his jurisdiction make it any the more obligatory to refuse the application. The operative portion of the so-called order which is appealed against is in the following words:

> I accordingly find that the petition should not be refused by this Court under Section 271 of the Indian Succession Act. Let March 7, 1931 be fixed for the framing of the remaining issues.

Section 295 requires that proceedings in his court should, as nearly as may be, take the form of a regular suit, according to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, and under Section 268 the proceedings have to be regulated, so far as the circumstances of the case permit, by that court. The order passed by the District Judge is more or less in the nature of a finding on the question whether he should hear the application or exercise his discretion to return it for presentation to another court. It cannot be treated as a final order adjudicating upon the rights of the parties or disposing of any matter absolutely. We, therefore, do not think that this is a case which comes within the scope of Section 299 so as to give the appellant a right of appeal.

The learned advocate for the appellant has argued before us that we should interfere with the so-called order on our revisional side. It may be that another District Judge when considering the proportion of the values of the properties situated in the two provinces, the inconvenience of a second set of proceedings being taken later on in Oudh and the fact that the witnesses did not live at Benares where the case would be tried, might have exercised his discretion in a different way. Even in appeal an appellate court seldom interferes with an exercise of discretion. In revision we cannot interfere with mere errors of law. It is impossible to say that in this case there had either been a failure to exercise a jurisdiction vested by law or any illegality or material irregularity in the exercise of such jurisdiction. We are, therefore, unable to interfere under Section 115 C. P. C. We dismiss the appeal, but direct that the parties should bear their own costs.

Appeal dismissed

Civil

1932

March 14

Pullan, J
Niamat-ullah, J.

RAM PATI KUNWAR (Plaintiff)
versus
PHOOL SINGH (Defendant)*

Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sec. 14—Applicability of—Plaintiff admits—That suit, as framed, not cognizable by civil court as pleaded by defendant—Plaint returned for presentation to proper court—Whether plaintiff entitled to benefit of Sec. 14.

A party may be in doubt as to whether a suit should be instituted in a civil or a revenue court. If a suit is honestly and with due care and caution instituted in one of such courts but at a subsequent stage it is found that a wrong forum had been chosen, it cannot be doubted that if an admission to that effect be made and the court which has no jurisdiction returns the plaint for presentation to the proper court, Sec. 14 of the Limitation Act, which is couched in comprehensive terms, will be applicable.

It was possible to construe the plaint filed in a civil court as one for avoidance of a lease and for compensation for use and occupation of land. Both the parties and the Subordinate Judge, however, put the construction which was equally plausible, viz., that it was a simple suit for arrears of rent by a landholder against the thekadar and as such it was cognizable by a revenue court. Accordingly, the plaint was returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court; held, that there was no want of good faith and the plaintiff was entitled to the benefit of Sec. 14 Limitation Act.

Second Appeal from a decree of M. F. P. Herchenroder Esq., District Judge of Cawnpore, modifying a decree of Babu Ganga Ram Yadav, Assistant Collector first class of Fatehpur.

N. Upadhiya for the appellant.

S. S. Shastry for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

Niamatullah, J.—This appeal has arisen out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-appellant for arrears of rent for 1329-1334F and for the appointment of a receiver in terms of the relief claimed in the plaint. The suit was originally instituted in the court of the Munsif, Fatehpur. One of the pleas taken in defence was that the civil court had no jurisdiction. Another plea was that the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata. The Munsif did not decide the question of jurisdiction raised by the defendant, but held that the plaintiff's suit was barred by res judicata. Accordingly, he dismissed the suit. The plaintiff appealed to the court of the Subordinate Judge, who held that the suit was cognizable exclusively by a revenue court. Accordingly, the plaint was returned to the plaintiff for presentation to the proper court. The claim for 1329 to Kharif 1330 was time-barred when the suit was instituted in the civil court. It was subsequently abandoned by the plaintiff. When the plaint was presented in the revenue court, the plaintiff's claim for Rabi 1330F and Kharif 1331F was also barred by limitation unless the benefit of Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act could be extended to her. The plaintiff's suit was decreed by the Assistant Collector except for the years 1329 to Kharif 1331F. He also decided some subsidiary questions. Both parties appealed to the District Judge, who confirmed the decree of the first court subject to slight modifications, which it is not necessary to mention at this stage. He upheld the view of the first court that the plaintiff's claim for Rabi 1330F and Kharif 1331F was barred by limitation. He further held that Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act did not apply to the circumstances of the case. The plaintiff has filed the present second appeal against that part of the decree of the lower appellate court which relates to the arrears for Rabi 1330F and Kharif 1331F. The defendant has filed certain cross-objections, the nature of which will be stated in a later part of this judgment.

---

*S. A. 1296 of 1929

The plaint, as originally framed, was very complicated. It recited the facts that Sheoratan Singh and Dayashankar Singh plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 granted a lease to the defendant Phool Singh who agreed to pay a certain rent for the theka. Sheoratan Singh and Dayashankar Singh assigned their proprietary rights to Mst. Rampati Kuer, plaintiff No. 2 the wife of Sheoratan Singh plaintiff No. 1. It was alleged in the plaint that one of the lessors was minor at the time the lease was executed, while the other lessor was devoid of common sense and not capable of understanding matters. It was further alleged that the lessee did not pay out of the rent interest due to one Dwarka Prasad as he was bound to do under the lease. The whole plaint contains allegations challenging the validity of the lease. The plaintiff claimed the right to recover possession of the property to which the lease related, but she reserved liberty to sue for that relief in a subsequent suit. The relief claimed in the present suit was for recovery of what the lessee was liable to pay under the theka and for the appointment of a receiver, who, it was prayed, should be directed to take possession of the property and to manage it during the term reserved by the lease and make payments in accordance with the stipulations contained in the lease. We have stated in detail the allegations contained in the plaint for a proper consideration of the question, whether Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act can apply to the circumstances of the case. The learned District Judge held that Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act did not apply to cases in which the plaintiff himself withdraws a suit instituted in the wrong court and subsequently institutes it beyond limitation in the right court. It should be explained in this connection that the Subordinate Judge, who disposed of the appeal from the decision of the Munsif, directed the plaint to be returned for presentation to the revenue court, because it was admitted on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant before him that the suit, as framed, was not cognizable by a civil court as pleaded by the defendant. There being no controversy between the parties on the question of jurisdiction and the Subordinate Judge himself not taking a different view, he acted on the admission of both the parties and passed his order thereon. In these circumstances it cannot be considered that the plaintiff-appellant withdrew the suit instituted in the civil court and subsequently instituted it in the revenue court which ex hypothesi was the proper court.

It has not been argued before us by the learned advocate for the defendant that the civil court had jurisdiction. We take it that the suit had been wrongly instituted in the civil court, that both the parties admitted before the Subordinate Judge that the civil court had no jurisdiction and that the Subordinate Judge held that the civil court had no jurisdiction.

The learned advocate for the defendant-respondent has referred us to certain cases in which it was held that where a suit is withdrawn under Order 23, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure with liberty to bring a fresh suit and a second suit is instituted after the expiry of limitation, though the first suit was within time, Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act cannot apply. That view is obviously based on the language of Rule 2 of Order 23 C. P. C. which runs as follows:—

> In any fresh suit instituted on permission granted under the last preceding rule, the plaintiff shall be bound by the law of limitation in the same manner as if the first suit had not been instituted.

It is clear that there is no room for the application of Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act where Order 23, Rule 2 C. P. C. is applicable. The law is mandatory and the court must start with the assumption that the subsequent suit is the only suit that was instituted by the plaintiff so that there can be no question of any other civil proceeding having been prosecuted in good faith by the plaintiff as required by Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act. In the case before us the plaintiff did not withdraw her suit with liberty to bring a fresh one and the plaint filed in the revenue court was the self same plaint which she had previously filed in the civil court. We are clearly of opinion that the class of cases to which reference has been made above is wholly inapplicable and that Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act is not inapplicable on that ground.

The learned District Judge seems to be of opinion that Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act is applicable > only to cases where the previous suit was dismissed by the court itself, because it was unable to entertain it.

There is nothing in Section 14 which warrants the proposition of law laid down by the learned District Judge. It clearly provides that

> In computing the period of limitation prescribed for any suit, the time during which the plaintiff has been prosecuting with due diligence another civil proceeding, whether in a court of first instance or in a court of appeal, against the defendant, shall be excluded, where the proceeding is founded upon the same cause of action and is prosecuted in good faith in a court which, from defect of jurisdiction, or other cause of a like nature, is unable to entertain it.

The important question to decide is whether the plaintiff prosecuted another civil proceeding in good faith. It is perfectly immaterial whether such proceeding ended in an order of dismissal or in some other order showing that the court refused to entertain it. Cases are easily conceivable in which a party may be in doubt as to whether a suit should be instituted in a civil or a revenue court. If a suit is honestly and with due care and caution instituted in one of such courts but at a subsequent stage it is found that a wrong forum had been chosen, it cannot be doubted that if an admission to that effect be made and the court which has no jurisdiction returns the plaint for presentation to the proper court, Section 14 of the Indian Limitation Act, which is couched in comprehensive terms, will be applicable. If the section be so restricted as to apply only to cases in which a previous suit is dismissed, it will cease to apply to a familiar class of cases in which plaints are returned without the suit being dismissed for presentation to the proper court. We are clearly of opinion that Section 14 is not so limited and that, if the plaintiff instituted the suit in good faith in the court of the Munsif of Fatehpur, she is entitled to the benefit of Section 14. The lower appellate court has not expressed any opinion as to whether the plaintiff acted in good faith in instituting her suit in the civil court. It has however observed:

> It is possible that a suit framed in this manner should have been tried by the civil court. The point is really only of academic interest,—now that the matter has reached the appellate court, since under Section 269, Agra Tenancy Act, 1926 I have clearly the power to decide the matter in controversy upon the merits.

We have already stated the salient features of the plaint as originally framed and think that the plaintiff and her pleader in the Munsif's court might well have considered that the suit was cognizable by a civil court. It is possible so to construe the plaint as one for avoidance of the lease and for compensation for use and occupation of land. Both the parties and the Subordinate Judge however put the construction which, to say the least, is equally plausible, namely, that it is a simple suit for arrears of rent by a landholder against her thekadar and as such it is cognizable by a revenue court. We are of opinion that there was no want of good faith on the part of the plaintiff or her legal adviser and that the suit was prosecuted in good faith upto the time when the plaint was returned by the Subordinate Judge for presentation to the revenue court. It is not disputed that if the whole of the period from the institution upto the date of the return of the plaint be excluded, the plaintiff's claim for Rabi 1330F and Kharif 1331F is within time.

The result is that the plaintiff's appeal succeeds and, in addition to the amount decreed by the lower appellate court, rent for Rabi 1330F and Kharif 1331F should also be decreed at the rate allowed by the learned District Judge for subsequent years.

The defendant Phool Singh has filed cross-objections relating to certain deductions which according to him should have been made in the decree prepared in accordance with the judgment of the learned District Judge. It is pointed out that the court of first instance had allowed Rs.45 a year as compensation to the defendant in respect of a grove which the lessors retained in their own possession. The defendant-lessee claimed compensation at the rate of Rs.150 a year in the court below. The learned District Judge's order as regards this dispute is a little ambiguous and led to the preparation by the office of an incorrect decree. The relevant portion runs as follows:—"The lower court has allowed Rs.45, while Rs.150 is claimed in respect of this item. I shall allow Rs.100". In preparing the decree it was assumed that Rs.100 was allowed for all the years in suit. It is contended on behalf of the defendant that the learned District Judge meant to allow Rs.100 a year. We think this contention is correct. The court of first instance had allowed Rs.45 for each year and the de-

CIVIL
1932
RAM PATI KUNWAR
v.
PHOOL SINGH
Niamat-ullah, J.

fendant claimed before the learned District Judge at the rate of Rs.150 a year. Reading the order of the learned District Judge in the light of these circumstances it is clear to us that he meant to allow Rs.100 for each a year. The decree, which will be prepared in accordance with our judgment, should proceed on the basis indicated above.

Another ground taken in the cross-objections is that the plaintiff lessor retained some khud-kasht land and that the defendant is entitled to deduction in respect thereof. There is nothing in the judgment of the learned District Judge to suggest that this point was raised before him. In any case, the claim being in the nature of a claim to a set off in a suit for arrears of rent is inadmissible. In fact, the deduction allowed in respect of the grove was not rightly allowed by the learned District Judge; but, as the plaintiff-appellant has not impugned the decree on that point, we must allow it to stand. As regards the deduction claimed in respect of khud-kasht land there is a contest before us and we must give effect to the plain provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act in this respect. Accordingly this cross-objection is disallowed.

Lastly exception is taken to the interest by the lower appellate court on the arrears of rent. There is no force in this objection.

In view of our findings the decree of the lower appellate court is modified in two respects: (1) The plaintiff's suit is decreed for all the years to which it relates; and (2) Rs.100 a year instead of Rs.100 for all the years in suit should be deducted from the amount found due to the plaintiff. The plaintiff-appellant shall have her costs from the contesting defendant Phool Singh in all the courts.

Decree modified

SUBAH LAL (Defendant)
versus
FATEH MOHAMMAD AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)*

CIVIL 1932
March 1
SULAIMAN, J.

Limitation Act, Art. 144—Co-owners—Transferee from co-owner takes transfer of whole property—Other co-owner has no knowledge of extent of share transferred—Whether adverse possession commences as against other co-owner.

Where a transferee from a co-owner takes a transfer of the whole property, the other co-owner, if he has actually no knowledge of the extent of the share transferred, is entitled to presume that the co-owner has transferred his own interest only and that the transferee by virtue of his right to that share is enjoying possession of the whole property. Of course, if the assertion of title to the whole is brought to his knowledge, and it is accompanied by his ouster and exclusion, adverse possession would then commence as against him.

If a co-owner is in possession of the whole of the joint property and asserting his exclusive title makes a possessory mortgage of the whole and knowledge of the fact is communicated to his co-owners, he can treat his

---

*S. A. 440 of 1928

CIVIL

1932

SUBAH LAL
v.
FATEH
MOHAMMAD

mortgagee's possession as his own constructive possession and count the period of occupation by his mortgagee as a part of the period of his own adverse possession. But where the possession of the co-owner himself was not adverse to his co-owners, and it is not he, but his mortgagee who, having become his subsequent vendee, is setting up adverse possession, then the mortgagee vendee cannot join the two periods together in order to complete his period of prescription for acquiring full title.

Corea v. Appuhami, 1912 A. C. 230, Prahlad Singh v. Baru Mal, 1930 A. L. J. 1420, N. Varada Pillai v. Jeevanath Nammal, 18 A. L. J. 274, Halim Shah v. Rahim Bux, 1930 A. I. R. Oudh 475, Vaijapuri Chettiar v. Subramania Chettiar, 1929 A. I. R. Mad. 27 and Ghulam Mohammad v. Mst. Begam, 1930 A. I. R. Lah. 251 referred to.

Two persons jointly owned a shop in equal shares. A lease was granted to the defendant by the managing co-owner, who remained in possession as a lessee for some time. In 1910 the managing co-owner made a usufructuary mortgage of this very shop to the defendant, and in 1913 the managing co-owner sold the shop to the defendant, who continued in possession all this time. The other co-owner had no reason to suspect the conduct of the managing co-owner, and no evidence was led to prove that the other co-owner had knowledge of the mortgage. On a suit for joint possession by the other co-owner instituted in 1924, the defendant pleaded adverse possession. Held, (1) that in the absence of proof that knowledge of the extent of the property mortgaged was communicated to the other co-owner the defendant's possession did not become adverse as against him; (2) that assuming that possession became adverse after the execution of the sale deed of 1913, it was not open to the defendant to tack on the period of his possession as usufructuary mortgagee to the period of his possession as vendee so as to acquire full title by prescription.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of G. C. BADHWAR ESQ., District Judge of Farrukhabad, confirming a decree of MAULVI MOHAMMAD ZIAUL HASAN, Subordinate Judge.

This appeal was heard by Mukerji and Niamatullah, JJ. who differed in their opinions, and a reference was made to a third judge, Sulaiman, J. The judgments of Mukerji and Niamatullah, JJ. are reproduced below.

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The defendant in the suit is the appellant before us. The facts that have been found by the court below are as follows:—There were three brothers, Husain Baksh, Makhnu and Qadir Baksh. Their pedigree is given at page 7 of the printed paper book. The shop in dispute belonged one half to Qadir Baksh and the other half to Husain Bakhsh. Qadir Bakhsh died in the lifetime of his brothers and Makhnu survived Husain Baksh. Makhnu inherited the half share of Husain Bakhsh. He did not obtain possession and the entire shop continued to be in the possession of the sons of Qadir Baksh.

The sons of Qadir Bakhsh leased out the shop in dispute to the defendant-appellant, and then, in the life time of Makhnu, made a usufructuary mortgage of the shop in favour of the defendant-appellant, on April 21, 1910. Thereafter on January 16, 1913, they sold outright the shop to the defendant. Makhnu died some time after March 12, 1912.

The plaintiff respondents are son and daughter respectively of Makhnu. They claimed the entire shop as the exclusive property of Husain Bakhsh inherited by their father Makhnu. The defence was that Makhnu predeceased Husain Baksh, and on the death of Husain Bakhsh the sons of Qadir Bakhsh took possession of the property. As stated above, the courts below found that the stories told by both the parties were false. The defendant's plea of adverse possession has been negatived by the courts below, and in this appeal we have to consider whether the plea has been established.

The contention on behalf of the plaintiffs that found favour with the courts below was that the sons of Qadir Baksh and the children of Makhnu were co-owners of joint property, and possession of some of the co-owners, viz., of the sons of Qadir Bakhsh, could not be adverse to the plaintiffs till it was established that the factum that Qadir Bakhsh's sons were claiming adversely had been brought to the notice of the plaintiffs.

As a general proposition of law, there can be no doubt that possession, where it is referable to a title, cannot be considered to be adverse, and hence a co-owner's possession is prima facie not adverse to the other co-owners. This was held in numerous cases and was laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the well-known case of Corea v. Appuhami, [1912] Appeal Cases, page 230. Here, however, we are concerned not merely with co-sharers but with a third party, viz., the defendant-appellant.

So long as possession remained with the sons of Qadir Bakhsh and conceding for the sake of argument but not admitting, so long as possession remained with the tenants of the sons of Qadir Bakhsh, the possession was with co-owners, and that possession could not, ordinarily, be regarded as adverse to the other co-owners; but as soon as the defendant obtained a usufructuary mortgage from the sons of Qadir Bakhsh and got possession under it, in my opinion, it must be taken that the possession of the defendant became adverse to the plaintiffs. The possession of the defendant after the mortgage could not be referred to mere co-ownership of the mortgagors with the plaintiffs. A mortgage of the entire property by one of the proprietors is a clear assertion of adverse title and the possession of the mortgagee is surely adverse to the co-owners of the mortgagors.

Article 144 of the Limitation Act, column 3 puts down the date of starting limitation as "when the possession of the defendant becomes adverse to the plaintiff". We note here that, in 1910, the mortgage was executed and it was followed in 1913, by a sale deed in favour of the defendant, the original mortgagee. In my opinion, by no stress of argument can it be established that the initial possession of the defendant as a mortgagee was not adverse to the plaintiffs, although it is conceded that the possession following the sale was adverse.

The view expressed above is supported by a two Judge decision of this Court, viz., Prahlad Singh v. Baru Mal, [1930] A. L. J. 1420, a decision to which I was also a party. This decision upheld, on Letters Patent Appeal, the decision of a single Judge of this Court, so the view expressed in the decision is the view of three Judges of this Court.

On behalf of the respondents the case of Hafiz Abdullah v. Ali, 4 L. R. All. 139 has been cited. The facts of that case are not on all fours with the facts of the present case. There, the co-owner had made a usufructuary mortgage and, although the mortgagee had been in possession for more than twelve years, the possession had been taken back by the mortgagor on redemption, before the suit was brought by the mortgagor's co-owner for a share in the property. At the date of the suit the possession was with a co-owner, and it was for the co-owner to establish when this possession became adverse to the plaintiff. It was held that the mere fact that he had made a mortgage was not sufficient, because the factum of the mortgage had not been brought to the notice of the plaintiff. I need not consider whether this case was rightly decided or not, as, as I have said, it is a case clearly distinguishable from the facts of the case before me. Unless we are prepared to hold that a usufructuary mortgage by a co-owner stands on the same footing as an ordinary lease by a co-owner and a usufructuary mortgage is no indication of a claim of adverse title, we are bound to hold that the possession of a mortgagee under a usufructuary mortgage is adverse to the co-owners of

CIVIL

1932

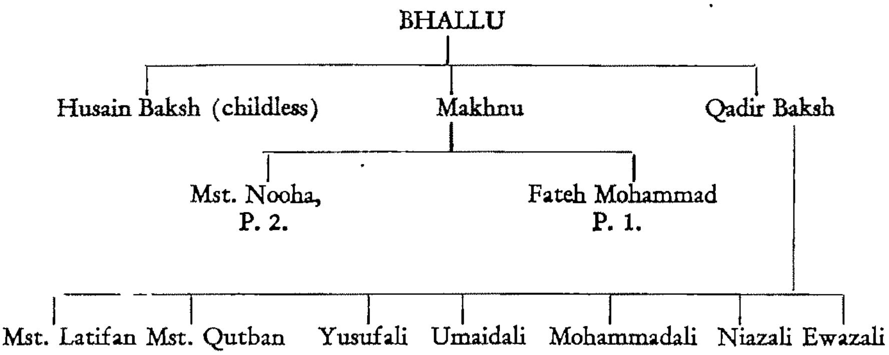
SUBAH LAL
v.
FATEH MOHAMMAD

Niamatullah, J.

the mortgagor, from the date the mortgagee takes possession under the mortgage.

In the result I would hold that the appellant has established more than twelve years adverse possession against the plaintiffs and would, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the decrees of the courts below and dismiss the plaintiffs' suit with costs throughout.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The suit which has given rise to this appeal was brought by the plaintiff-respondents for recovery of possession of a shop situate in Kanauj. The following pedigree will explain the nature of the plaintiffs' claim:—



It is no longer in dispute that the shop in question together with other shops belonged to Husain Bakhsh and Qadir Bakhsh, shown in the above pedigree. Their brother Makhnu had originally no interest in it. Qadir Baksh predeceased both of his brothers, leaving his sons and daughters. On Husain Baksh's death, his moiety devolved upon his sole heir, Makhnu, and thereafter the ownership of the shop was vested in Makhnu to the extent of half and in Qadir Baksh's children to the extent of the other half. The plaintiff's allegation that the entire shop was allotted to Husain Bakhsh on a partition between him and his brother Qadir Bakhsh has been found by both the courts below to be untrue. Similarly, the defence that Makhnu did not survive Husain Baksh has been held to be false. Husain Baksh died in 1909 or 1910. Makhnu died sometime after March 1912. The shop in dispute was let by the descendants of Qadir Bakhsh to Subah Lal, the appellant, as a tenant. Subsequently, in 1910, a usufructuary mortgage of the shop was made by Ewaz Ali and others the heirs of Qadir Bakhsh in favour of the appellant. In 1913, Ewaz Ali and others sold the shop to him. The present suit was instituted on November 16, 1924.

The only defence, which it is necessary to consider in second appeal, is one of adverse possession, pleaded by the defendant appellant. Both the courts below have overruled the defence, and the only question argued in second appeal is whether the plaintiffs' suit was barred by limitation.

The record affords no indication as to how Husain Bakhsh and Qadir Bakhsh jointly enjoyed the shop in question. It has, however, been found by the lower courts that, during the life time of Makhnu, actually possession was with the descendants of Qadir Bakhsh, specially Ewaz Ali. The finding of the lower appellate court on the question of possession is as follows:—

"Somehow or other, the children of Qadir Bakhsh got possession of the shops inherited by Makhnu   The relations between the descendants of Qadir Bakhsh and the plaintiffs appear to have been cordial and intimate, inasmuch as Mst. Nooha, the daughter of Makhnu, is married to a son of Qadir Baksh, and Fateh Muhammad, the son of Makhnu, is married to one of the daughters of Qadir Baksh. Makhnu was blind and was a cripple, and his son Fateh Mohammad lived away from Kanauj for a number of years and returned home about 6 or 8 years ago, and even then he was confined to bed for 4 years. Ewaz Ali used to manage the property, and the plaintiffs had no reasons to suspect the conduct of Ewaz Ali".

Accordingly, the lower appellate court held that the possession of Ewaz Ali and others, who were co-sharers of the plaintiffs, was not adverse, nor was that of the mortgagee (the appellant) adverse to the plaintiffs, who had no reason to think that the character of the appellant's possession had changed from that of the lessee to that of the mortgagee. The trial court had, likewise, held that "Subah Lal's vendors, Ewaz Ali and his brothers and sisters, were jointly in possession of the shops with Makhnu and his heirs. Their possession cannot be said to be adverse to the plaintiffs even if we disbelieve the evidence for the latter that they continued to receive rent of the shops from the tenants through Ewaz Ali. It can, no doubt, be argued that the mortgage of April 21, 1910 was an act by which the defendant mortgagors asserted full title to the shop in question against their co-owners the present plaintiffs; but there is nothing to show that the mortgage was brought to the notice of the plaintiffs. I find no difficulty in believing the plaintiffs' case that it came to their knowledge only recently, seeing that Subah Lal had admittedly been occupying the shop as lessee from before the mortgage and thus there was nothing to excite the plaintiffs' suspicion. There is absolutely nothing to show that either Subah Lal or his mortgagors ever asserted a title adverse to the plaintiffs to the knowledge of the latter. I cannot, therefore, hold that the plaintiffs' co-owners, Ewaz Ali and his brothers and sisters, or their mortgagee, the present defendant Subah Lal, was in adverse possession of the shop in question prior to the date of the sale in Subah Lal's favour".

I have quoted at length the findings of the two courts below to indicate how far they conclude questions arising in this second appeal. Adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact. We must accept the facts found by the lower appellate court and proceed to decide whether the law was correctly applied to those facts. There can be no doubt that both the courts below have concurrently found that possession of Ewaz Ali and others was not in denial of the plaintiffs' title and that the possession of Subah Lal was that of a lessee up to 1910 and, therefore, not adverse. Both the courts below have further found that the plaintiffs had no reason to suspect that Subah Lal obtained a mortgage deed from Ewaz Ali and others. For aught we know, the plaintiffs had no knowledge of the sale made by Ewaz Ali and others in 1913! but as the suit is within 12 years from its date, the courts below appear to have assumed, for the purposes of the case, that the plaintiffs were aware of it and that Subah Lal's adverse possession began in 1913. On the findings of fact arrived at by the lower appellate court, it is not possible to distinguish this case from Ali v. Hafiz Abdullah, decided by a Division Bench of this Court in a Letters Patent Appeal reported in 4 L. R. All. 139 (Letters Patent Appeal No. 35 of 1921). The learned Judges observed as follows:—"The mere possession of the house by the brothers or the possession of a mortgagee from them would not amount to adverse possession, unless there was what may be deemed to be an ouster of the plaintiffs or their predecessor Maula Bakhsh. There might be actual ouster, or there might be conduct which would amount to ouster. In the present case what was found was that the two brothers mortgaged the whole house to the mortgagee, who remained in possession. From this fact alone it could not be concluded that the plaintiffs or Maula Bakhsh had been ousted from the house. It was not found by the lower appellate court that the plaintiffs or Maula Bakhsh had any information as to the nature of the mortgage effected by the brothers of Maula Bakhsh. If two-thirds only had been mortgaged, the mortgagee would have been in possession of the house. The mere fact therefore of the mortgagee being in possession was not sufficient to constitute ouster from the property". The case before the Bench was stronger in that they held that the mortgagee's possession would not amount to ouster, unless the plaintiff was aware of the extent of the share mortgaged. It should be noted that, in that case, the mortgagee entered into possession from the start as mortgagee and not, as here, as a lessee.

The above case proceeds on the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Corea v. Appuhami, [1912] A. C. 230, which is an authority for the proposition that the relationship between co-sharers comes into existence as soon as title is vested in them by the operation of the rules of inheritance; and that actual possession by one of them not accompanied by a denial of the title of the other and not amounting to ouster or anything equivalent thereto, is not adverse.

It was contended on behalf of the appellant that Ewaz Ali and others might have been co-sharers of the plaintiffs; but their mortgagee (the appellant) was not. Assuming this is so, the appellant's possession has to be pronounced to be adverse before limitation for the plaintiffs' suit is reckoned from the date of the mortgage. To be adverse, it must be such as to be in open denial of the plaintiffs' right. This principle is not peculiar to co-sharers, but is applicable to all persons claiming adverse possession. It is true possession is prima facie adverse but if the apparent circumstances suggest a lawful title in the possessor, his denial of the right of the mortgagor's co-sharer, implied in a transaction, not coming to his knowledge cannot set limitation running against him—registration cannot in such a case give rise to the presumption of notice nor can knowledge of the transaction be imputed to the rightful claimant where there is nothing to put him to inquiry. If the appellant's possession as lessee was not adverse to the plaintiff (it is not contended that it was), the subsequent execution of a deed of usufructuary mortgage which did not introduce any visible change in the character of the appellant's possession cannot make his possession adverse. Apart from this consideration, the transferee of a co-sharer can acquire no more than what belongs to his transferor. By the mortgage in favour of the appellants, no more than the share of Ewaz Ali and others passed to him. At the date of the mortgage, his possession, in the eye of law and as regards title, was that of a co-sharer in relation to the plantiffs. Of course, if the fact that he claimed to be in possession in denial of the plaintiff's title was known to the plaintiffs, his possession would be adverse to them, just as the possession of his mortgagor would have been so, if he had repudiated the plaintiffs' title to their knowledge. In the absence of repudiation of the plaintiffs' title to their knowledge either by Ewaz Ali and others or by their mortgagees, the possession of neither can be adverse.

The case of Prahlad Singh v. Barumal, [1930] A. L. J. 1420 was also referred to in the course of arguments. It was held in that case that "it is permissible for a person claiming adverse possession to add the period of his possession as usufructuary mortgagee to the period of his possession as a vendee from his usufructuary mortgagor". This rule, so far as it goes, is quite correct, if I may say so with respect. It does not, however, decide that the possession of the mortgagee of a co-sharer is always adverse to the other co-sharers. It was apparently common ground in that case that the mortgagee's possession was adverse. In any case, the decision of the learned judges proceeds on the assumption that it was so. If the mortgagee's possession is adverse to the co-sharer of the mortgagor, it is the adverse possession of the mortgagor through his mortgagee and if the mortgagee continues in possession for more than 12 years, it is the mortgaging co-sharer who would acquire proprietary rights by prescription, the mortgagee merely obtaining mortgagee rights by adverse possession. If, before the expiry of the period of 12 years, the mortgagor sells his interest to the mortgagee or to a third person he transfers not only such rights as he originally had in the property but also his possessory right as against his co-sharers, which would ripen into ownership if his possession through the mortgagee had been left to continue for full 12 years. In this view, I am clearly of opinion that there is no conflict between the case last mentioned and the earlier one which I have followed.

For the foregoing reasons, I would dismiss the appeal and uphold the decree appealed from.

BY THE COURT—As we are not agreed as to how this appeal is to be decided although on points of law that arise in this case there is not much difference in our opinions, and as the difference consists in how the law is to be applied to the facts found, we direct that the record of the case be laid before the Hon'ble the Chief Justice for reference to a third judge under Sec. 98 C. P. C. or Clause 27 of the Letters Patent of the High Court whichever of the two may be applicable. As the matter is not of any general importance, we do not consider that a reference to a larger number of judges will be necessary. The point to be decided is "whether, in the circumstances found by the lower appellate court, the suit was rightly decreed or whether it should have been dismissed as being barred by time under Article 144 of the Limitation Act?".

B. Malik (with him U. S. Bajpai) for the appellant.

M. N. Kaul (for K. N. Katju) for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—In this case the learned Judges constituting the Bench who heard it first differed in their opinions. As the order of reference shows there was not much difference of opinion on the point of law that arose in the case, the main difference was as to how the law was to be applied to the admitted facts. Accordingly the point of law which the learned Judges have referred is as follows:—

> Whether in the circumstances found by the lower appellate court, the suit was rightly decreed or whether it should have been dismissed as being barred by time under Article 144 of the Limitation Act?

The facts as found by the lower appellate court are that one Bhallu had three sons, Husain Baksh, Makhnu and Qadir Baksh. In 1879 Husain Baksh and Qadir Baksh purchased the shop in dispute in equal shares. On the death of Qadir Baksh his half share devolved on his children Ewaz Ali and others. About 1909 Husain Baksh died, and his half share devolved on his brother Makhnu. Makhnu died in 1912 and that half share devolved on his descendants, the present plaintiffs. Thus so far as the legal title is concerned there can be no doubt that on the findings the plaintiffs had a legal title to a half share in the disputed shop.

According to the lower appellate court Ewaz Ali used to manage the property. A lease had been granted either by Ewaz Ali alone or jointly with his brothers and sisters to the defendant Subah Lal, who remained in possession as lessee for some time. On April 24, 1910 Ewaz Ali and his brothers and sisters made a usufructuary mortgage of this very shop to the defendant Subah Lal, who had been in possession from before. Later on January 16, 1913 Ewaz Ali and others sold the shop to the defendant, who has continued in possession all this time. The lower appellate court has further found that "the plaintiffs had no reasons to suspect the conduct of Ewaz Ali." It may also be noted that there was no evidence led as to the actual knowledge of the plaintiffs or their predecessors of the usufructuary mortgage made by Ewaz Ali and others to the defendant.

The substantial question which arose in second appeal was whether in the absence of any proof of knowledge of the usufructuary mortgage, the plaintiffs' claim was barred by time because adverse possession of the defendant commenced from the date of the possessory mortgage.

In order to indicate the difference of opinion between the two learned Judges it is necessary to give a brief summary of their conclusions.

Mukerji, J. held that:

> As a general proposition of law, there can be no doubt, that possession, where it is referable to a title, cannot be considered to be adverse and hence co-owner's possession is, prima facie, not adverse to the other co-owners.

The learned Judge distinguished the case of Corea v. Appuhami[1] on the ground that here we were concerned not merely with co-sharers but with a third party, viz., the transferee. He then remarked:

> So long as possession remained with the sons of Qadir Baksh and conceding for the sake of argument but not admitting, so long as possession remained with the tenants of the sons of Qadir Baksh, the possession was with co-owners, and that possession could not ordinarily be regarded as adverse to the other co-owners, but as soon as the defendant obtained a usufructuary mortgage from the sons of Qadir Baksh and got possession under it, in my opinion it must be taken that the possession of the defendant became adverse to the plaintiffs. The possession of the defendant after the mortgage could not be referred to mere co-ownership of the mortgagors with the plaintiffs. A mortgage of the entire property by one of the proprietors is a clear assertion of adverse title and the possession of the mortgagee is surely adverse to the co-owners of the mortgagors.

He accordingly held that the possession of the defendant as a mortgagee was adverse to the plaintiffs and the claim was barred after the lapse of 12 years from that date. He further held that the period of occupation as a usufructuary mortgagee could be tacked on to the period of occupation as a vendee and relied on the case of Prahlad Singh v. Baru Mal[2] and distinguished the case of Hafiz Abdullah v. Alli[3].

On the other hand Niamatullah, J. held that

> If the appellant's possession as lessee was not adverse to the plaintiffs (it is not contended that it was) the subsequent execution of a deed of usufructuary mortgage which did not introduce any visible change in the character of the appellant's possession cannot make his possession adverse. Apart from this consideration, the transferee of a co-sharer can acquire no more than what belongs to his transferor. By the mortgage in favour of the appellants, no more than the share of Ewaz Ali and others passed to him. At the date of the mortgage, his possession, in the eye of law and as regards title, was that of a co-sharer in relation to the plaintiffs. Of course, if the fact that he claimed to be in possession in denial of the plaintiff's title was known to the plaintiffs his possession would be adverse to them, just as the possession of his mortgagor would have been so if he had repudiated the plaintiffs' title to their knowledge. In the absence of repudiation of the plaintiffs' title to their knowledge, either by Ewaz Ali and others or by their mortgagees, the possession of neither can be adverse.

As regards the other question the learned Judge observed:—

> If the mortgagee's possession is adverse to the co-sharer of the mortgagor, it is the adverse possession of the mortgagor through his mortgagee, and if the mortgagee continues in possession for more than 12 years, it is the

---

[1] [1912] A. C. 230

[2] [1930] A. L. J. 1420

[3] 4 L. R. All. 139

> mortgaging co-sharer who would acquire proprietary rights by prescription, the mortgagee merely obtaining mortgagee rights by adverse possession. If, before the expiry of the period of 12 years, the mortgagor sells his interest to the mortgagee or to a third person, he transfers not only such rights as he originally had in the property, but also his possessory right as against his co-sharers, which would ripen into ownership, if his possession through the mortgagee had been left to continue for full 12 years.

As regards co-owners the law is now well settled that there can be no adverse possession by one co-owner unless there has been a denial of title and an ouster to the knowledge of the other. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in Corea v. Appuhami[4] approved of the well known principle recognised by Wood, V. C. that "possession is never considered adverse if it can be referred to a lawful title"; and remarked:

> entering into possession and having a lawful title to enter (a co-sharer) could not divest himself of that title by pretending that he had no title at all; his title must have enured for the benefit of his co-proprietors.

It is however clear that their Lordships did not mean to suggest that a co-owner can never acquire adverse possession against other co-owners, even though he openly declares himself that he had exclusive possession as an owner of the whole and he does so to the knowledge of the other co-owners. What was obviously meant by Wood, V. C. was that possession by itself is never considered adverse if it can be referred to a lawful title. If however exclusive possession of one co-owner is accompanied by an open assertion of adverse title which amounts to an ouster of the other co-owners, and the fact of such assertion is brought to their knowledge, there is nothing to prevent the character of his possession from changing into adverse. This is so even when co-ownership existed before any adverse possession could commence. But where a person has begun to hold possession adversely to certain co-sharers and then before the statutory period of limitation he succeeds to the title of one of them, his possession may continue to be adverse to the other co-sharers, though he has become jointly interested in the latter. N. Varada Pillai v. Jeevarath Nammal[5].

When co-owners are jointly entitled to a property each of them has a right to enjoy the whole property but without excluding the others. It follows that the mere fact that one co-sharer is in possession of the whole property at any time does not necessarily imply his denial of the title of his co-owners, their ouster or any assertion of adverse possession against them. If the other co-owners find no occasion to effectively enjoy the property at the time, they need not mind the possession by one of them. In the eye of the law they are deemed to be in constructive possession of the joint property. The position becomes different when their title has been denied and their right of enjoyment of the property has been repudiated to their knowledge. From that moment the character of the possession of the co-sharer changes, and it becomes adverse against those who have knowledge of the ouster, and time begins to run against them. I am not saying that if the adverse possession of a person commenced before he was a co-owner, the mere fact that he subsequently acquires a share too in the property would necessarily break the continuity of his adverse possession. But where from the very commencement of possession, there was co-ownership, the possession of one must prima facie be deemed to be permissive and not adverse.

---

[4] [1912] A. C. 230

[5] 18 A. L. J. 274

The question in the present case is whether the same principle can be extended to a transferee from a co-owner who professedly takes a transfer of the whole property. There is some conflict of judicial opinion on this question. In Sheikh Abdul Ghafur v. Ashmath Bibi[6] a Bench of the Madras High Court held that the entry of an alienee from a co-owner into the property alienated is adverse to the other co-owners from the very moment of that entry. Reliance was mainly placed on certain previous rulings, without examining the question afresh. This case was followed by single judges of the Lahore High Court in the cases of Anwar v. Kishan Singh[7] and Ibrahim v. Ali Mohammad[8] and by a learned Judge of the Rangoon High Court in the case of Maung Tun U v. Maung Tun Aung[9].

In the case of Hafiz Abdullah v. Alli[10] a Bench of this Court held that the mere possession of a house by the brothers or the possession of a mortgagee from them would not amount to adverse possession, unless there was what may be deemed to be an ouster of the plaintiffs or their predecessor Maula Baksh. In that case it was found that the two brothers mortgaged the whole house to the mortgagee who remained in possession, and it was held that from that fact alone it could not be concluded that the plaintiffs had been ousted from the house. The case however was peculiar inasmuch as the mortgage had been redeemed and the brothers who had made the mortgage had taken back possession by the time the suit was instituted. They were asserting their own adverse possession and wanted to count the period of occupation by their mortgagee. This case has been followed in the cases of Vaiyapuri Chettiar v. Subramania Chettiar[11] and Ghulam Mohammad v. Mst. Begam[12]. See also the case of Spencer v. Devadoss[13] and Sheoraj v. Ajudhia[14].

The case-law has been recently reviewed in an elaborate judgment delivered by a Bench of the Oudh Chief Court in Halim Shah v. Rahim Bux[15].

It is contended before me that there is a marked distinction between a co-owner who started with premissive possession originally but wanted to change the character of his possession so as to make it adverse, and a tranferee from a co-owner who from the very start has been asserting his adverse possession. It is accordingly urged that the principle governing the possession by co-owners should not be applied to transferees from co-owners. But if this argument were accepted, the same legal position would arise in the case of heirs of a co-owner who had asserted his exclusive and adverse possession before his death.

It cannot be disputed that the underlying principle is that the possession by one co-owner of the entire joint property is perfectly lawful as he has the title not only to his undivided share but to the whole of the property, and has possession of the whole property as well as of every un-

[6] 54 I. C. 385

[7] 71 I. C. 171

[8] 116 I. C. 890

[9] 5 Rang. 93

[10] 4 L. R. All. 139

[11] 1929 A. I. R. Mad. 27

[12] 1930 A. I. R. (Lah.) 251

[13] 1924 A. I. R. Mad. 241

[14] 4 Luck. 503

[15] 1930 A. I. R. (Oudh) 475

divided part. An owner of an undivided share in a property can be rightly in possession of the whole. The possession by him of the entire common property is therefore referable to his legal title and is not adverse to the other co-sharers.

It would follow that there can be no difference in principle whether a person is the original co-owner, or has become a co-owner by virtue of a transfer. From the moment of his acquiring a share in the common property he becomes a co-owner and has the same legal title as his predecessor to enjoy the whole. His possession of the whole is equally referable to his legal title and his possession need not necessarily be adverse. The other co-owners, if they have actually no knowledge of the extent of the share transferred, are entitled to presume that their co-owner has transferred his own interest only and that the transferee by virtue of his right to that share is enjoying possession of the whole property. The mere fact that a transferee is in possession would not put them on enquiry for the transferee has just as much right to enjoy the whole property as his transferor had. The principle of law based on the mere fact of co-ownership would apply with equal force to a transferee from a co-owner, who steps into the shoes of his vendor. A co-owner has no duty cast upon him to watch the conduct of another co-owner and be on the look-out to find out the extent of the share purported to be transferred by him, and to intervene if more than the real share has been transferred. He is entitled to assume that the permissive nature of the possession has passed on to his co-owner's transferee who has now become the co-owner in place of the original co-owner. Of course, if the assertion of title to the whole is brought to his knowledge, and it is accompanied by his ouster and exclusion, adverse possession would then commence as against him. The burden therefore would be on the transferee to establish that the denial of title and ouster were brought to the knowledge of the other co-owner and in the absence of such proof he would not be able to perfect his adverse possession.

The second question which arose for consideration was whether the defendant was entitled to tack on the period of his occupation as the usufructuary mortgagee to the period of his possession as a vendee. If a co-owner is in possession of the whole of the joint property and asserting his exclusive title makes a possessory mortgage of the whole and knowledge of the fact is communicated to his co-owners, he can certainly treat his mortgagee's possession as his own constructive possession, and count the period of occupation by his mortgagee as a part of the period of his own adverse possession. But where the possession of the co-owner himself was not adverse to his co-owners, and it is not he, but his mortgagee who, having become his subsequent vendee, is setting up adverse possession, then the mortgagee vendee would not be able to join the two periods together in order to complete his period of prescription for acquiring full title. When a person is in possession of the property in the capacity of a usufructuary mortgagee, unlawfully against the true owners, the only title which he can acquire by adverse possession is that of a mortgagee. If that title is perfected, he would be entitled to insist on being redeemed. But he could not after a lapse of 12 years' possession as a usufructuary mortgagee, successfully claim to have acquired the full pro-

CIVIL

1932

SUBAH LAL
v.
FATEH
MOHAMMAD

Sulaiman, J.

prietary interest. He can never acquire title which he did not profess to hold during his possession as mortgagee. In such an event he cannot add his period of mortgage to the period of occupation as vendee in order to complete 12 years' adverse possession as a full owner. Only his title as a mortgagee would be unimpeachable.

In the case of Prahlad Singh v. Baru Mal[16] on which reliance has been placed, there was no question of a mortgage having been made by a co-owner, followed by a subsequent sale. There Mst. Manohari had first held permissive possession of the shop, but it was assumed, presumably on the pleadings, that she could set up adverse possession. Accordingly it was held that the plaintiff's claim against her transferee had become barred by time because of the lapse of 12 years from the initial assertion of adverse possession by her. I do not imagine that the learned Judges meant to lay down that even if a licensee is estopped under Section 116 of the Evidence Act from denying the title of the true owner until she has first given up possession, her mortgagee can nevertheless set up the licensee mortgagor's adverse possession of the whole proprietary interest for his own (mortgagee's) benefit.

No doubt adverse possession is a mixed question of law and fact; but the findings of the lower appellate court that the plaintiffs had no reason to suspect the conduct of Ewaz Ali must be accepted in second appeal. In the absence of any proof that knowledge of the extent of the property mortgaged was communicated to the other co-owners, the defendant's possession did not become adverse as against them. It is not clear that it became adverse even after the execution of the sale deed of 1913. But even if the possession since 1913 had been adverse, it would not have been open to the defendant to tack on the period 1910-1913 so as to acquire full title by prescription.

I must not be understood to imply that Section 41 of the Transfer of Property Act cannot be applicable to a transferee from a co-owner where he fulfills the requirements of that section. I may note that no question has arisen in this case as to the defendant having taken a transfer from an ostensible owner after having taken reasonable care to ascertain that the transferor had power to make the transfer and acted in good faith.

My answer to the question referred therefore is that in the circumstances found by the lower appellate court, the suit was rightly decreed, as it was not barred by time under Article 144 of the Limitation Act.

---

[16] [1930] A. L. J. 1420

CIVIL
1932
Feb. 27
SULAIMAN, J.
BOYS, J.
SEN, J.

SIRAJ FATIMA
versus
MAHMOOD ALI AND OTHERS*

Minor—Right of—To institute a suit to avoid a decree or order against him—On the ground of negligence of his guardian—Evidence Act, Secs. 44 and 2—Whether bar evidence of negligence in such a suit.

A minor has a right to institute a suit in the civil court to avoid a decree or order passed by a competent court against him on the ground of the negligence of his guardian. The negligence in order to be a good ground for the avoidance of a decree must be of such a nature as to justify the inference that the minor's interests were not at all protected and therefore he was not properly represented. Brijraj v. Ram Swarup, I. L. R. 48 All. 44 approved.

Per SULAIMAN and SEN, JJ. (BOYS, J. dissenting)—The Evidence Act does not purport to destroy any substantive right that may exist independently of that Act. Sec. 44 of the Act is merely permissive and not prohibitive. There is nothing in Sec. 44 or Sec. 2 of the Act which precludes the plaintiff from proving that a judgment previously obtained had been obtained by the negligence of his guardian, and was not binding on him.

The plaintiffs were clearly the rightful owners of the entire zamindari property in suit but in the revenue papers their names were recorded jointly with the defendants. On the strength of these entries in the revenue papers the defendants applied in the revenue court for partition of their shares. The plaintiffs being minors were represented by their certificated guardian, who objected that the defendants had no right in the property. A question of proprietary title having been raised the revenue court directed the guardian to file a civil suit within three months. The guardian failed to file any suit, and as a result the revenue court decided the question against the present plaintiffs and ordered partition. One of the plaintiffs on attaining majority instituted the present suit for a declaration of title to the property and for possession in his own right and acting as the next friend of his minor brothers and sisters, against the defendants who were applicants for partition. Held, (1) that the legal rights of the plaintiffs being absolutely clear, the failure of the guardian to file a civil suit as ordered by the revenue court prejudiced the interests of the minors, and the guardian ceased to represent the minors properly and effectively, and the inaction of the guardian amounted to negligence, and the minors were entitled to treat the partition order as not binding on them; (2) that when the partition order under the Land Revenue Act itself fell to the ground, Sec. 233 (k) would have no application, and the present suit was maintainable.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RAJ BEHARI LAL, Additional District Judge of Cawnpore, confirming a decree of BABU SARUP NARAIN, Second Subordinate Judge.

The following is the Referring Order:—

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—In view of the order that we propose to pass, it is not necessary to say more than is sufficient to show how the case comes before the Court. One Afzal Ali had two wives, by the first of whom he had two daughters, Siraj Fatima and

---

*S. A. 1871 of 1928

Nisar Fatima. Of these, Nisar Fatima is dead, and her daughter Kaniz Fatima is defendant No. 3. Siraj Fatima is defendant No. 1. By the other wife, Afzal Ali had, we were variously informed, three sons and a daughter or three sons and two daughters. It is immaterial which is correct. On Afzal Ali's death 7/8 of his property descended to his children, about which there is no dispute. 1/8 went to Saghirunnissa, his second widow. She died in 1918, and in the ordinary course the 1/8 share should have descended to her own children. In fact Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima succeeded in getting their names recorded along with the children by the other wife Saghirunnissa.

The next stage was that Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima applied to the revenue court for partition of their share of the 1/8 relying on an oral gift. The children of the other wife Saghirunnissa through their certificated guardian, Wajid Ali, objected to any partition in favour of Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima. The guardian was directed to file a suit in the civil court. He failed to do so within the specified time, and then the revenue court, as it was bound to do, presumed that there was no force in the objection, and directed partition.

Hence the present suit by the children of Saghirunnissa against Siraj Fatima and Kaniz Fatima, the daughter of Nisar Fatima, who by this time had died. The other defendants are transferees, and Wajid Ali was impleaded as defendant No. 4. The plaintiffs alleged fraud and collusion on the part of Wajid Ali in not going to the civil court as he had been directed, and he was alleged to have colluded with the defendants.

Both courts held that there was no oral gift, and with this we are no longer concerned. Both courts further held that there was gross negligence on the part of the guardian Wajid Ali and, semble, that they were, therefore, justified in passing over the provision of Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act and decreeing the plaintiffs' claim.

The appeal to this Court was first of all heard by Mr. Justice Sen and myself, no one appearing on behalf of the respondent. We decreed the appeal upon a reference to the cases Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram, I. L. R. 38 All. 452, a decision of two Judges, and Bachan Singh v. Bhika Singh, 106 I. C. (All.) 49, a decision of a single Judge.

On the application of the respondent the appeal was subsequently restored and has come up again for a further hearing before us today. It is unnecessary to mention any other cases that have been quoted to us than the decision of Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup, I. L. R. 48 All. 44. It is also a decision of two Judges. The decisions are directly opposed. No reference was made in the latter case to the earlier. In view of the difficulty of the question and of the very great importance of it, it is desirable, in our opinion, that the case should be heard by a Full Bench.

We direct, therefore, that the case be laid before the Hon'ble the Chief Justice for the appointment of such a Bench, if he see fit.

M. L. Agarwala and A. M. Khwaja for the appellants.

Ambika Prasad Dube for the respondents.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a second appeal by the defendants arising out of a suit for a declaration of title to certain zamindari properties consisting of shares in certain villages, and for recovery of possession and mesne profits. One Afzal Ali had two daughters Siraj Fatima and Nasir Fatima from his first wife, and he had a second wife Saghirunnissa whose children are the plaintiffs. Abid Ali defendant No. 2 is the husband of Nisar Fatima and Kaniz Fatima defendant No. 3 is her daughter. Afzal Ali died in 1918 leaving his two daughters from the first wife, his second wife and her

CIVIL

1932

SIRAJ FATIMA v. MAHMOOD ALI

Sulaiman, J.

children. Two annas share in his estate devolved on his wife Mst. Saghirunnissa. Saghirunnissa also died later in the same year and according to the strict Mohammedan Law her share devolved upon her children and not on her step-daughters. But the names of all the children of Afzal Ali were recorded in the revenue papers against the two annas share left to Saghirunnissa on her death. Sometime after this Nisar Fatima also died and her share devolved on her husband and her daughter, and sister.

An application for partition was filed in the revenue court by Abid Ali the husband of Nisar Fatima (presumably both on his own behalf and on behalf of his minor daughter) and Siraj Fatima against the other children of Afzal Ali, who are the present plaintiffs. The application is not before us, and it is not clear whether it was for a perfect partition of the mohal or for an imperfect partition. It appears however that the minors were represented in the proceeding by Wajid Ali who was the grandfather-in-law of the plaintiff Mahmood Ali. It is also clear that Wajid Ali had been the certificated guardian of the minors. An objection was filed by the guardian-ad-litem that the plaintiffs were entitled to the entire share left by Saghirunnissa and that the applicants had no interest in that share. As the names of the applicants were already recorded in the revenue papers the partition court decided to proceed under Section 111(1)(b) of the Land Revenue Act and directed that the plaintiffs through their guardian should institute a suit in the civil court within three months for the determination of that question. Admittedly no suit was filed by the guardian. The revenue court therefore acting under Sub-section (2) decided the question against the objectors and ordered partition. The final order for partition was made on October 18, 1922. Mahmood Ali attained majority in 1923, and the present suit was filed by him, his brothers and sisters on July 9, 1924 against the defendants who had been the applicants for partition in the revenue court and also against Wajid Ali. The plaint was very badly drawn up and there were allegations in paragraph 8 of the plaint to the effect that the defendant No. 2 Abid Ali won over the plaintiffs' guardian Wajid Ali and colluded with him to cause harm to the plaintiffs; accordingly the plaintiffs' guardian did not properly look after the partition case on behalf of the plaintiffs, nor did he put forth any objection with respect to the plaintiffs' right of ownership while the minor plaintiffs were unable to take any proceeding; and when the defendant came out successful in the partition case they wanted to deprive the plaintiffs of their right, but the proceeding has legally no effect as against the plaintiffs. The reliefs sought were for the establishment of the plaintiffs' right of ownership and proprietary possession over the property and for the dispossession of the defendants, mesne profits, interest and costs. There was a general prayer for any other relief which may be just and beneficial to the plaintiffs. The defendants contested the claim on the ground that there was no fraud, collusion or negligence on the part of the guardian and that the claim was barred by Section 233(k) of the Land Revenue Act. They further pleaded that there had been an oral gift of the share made by Saghirunnisa to the defendants.

In spite of the allegations of fraud, collusion and negligence the second part of issue No. 2 was framed in a very vague and general way:—

CIVIL

1932

SIRAJ FATIMA v. MAHMOOD ALI

Sulaiman, J.

Are the proceedings not binding on the plaintiffs as they were minors and were the plaintiffs minors at the time or not?

Both the courts below have found that the alleged oral gift made by Mst. Saghirunnissa was not proved. They have also found that the plaintiffs were minors during the proceedings in the revenue court. None of the courts finds that there was any fraud or collusion on the part of the defendants. The lower appellate court has further found that there was gross or culpable negligence on the part of the guardian in not filing a civil suit. It has held that the suit was in consequence not barred by Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act, and that the plaintiffs had a right to maintain it.

The case was first disposed of ex parte and was subsequently restored. The Bench hearing the appeal have referred it to a Full Bench in view of an apparent conflict of opinion between the cases of Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram[1] and Bachan Singh v. Bhika Singh[2] on the one hand and the case of Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup[3] on the other.

The allegations in the plaint and the reliefs claimed therein were vague and so was the issue framed at the time. But there is no doubt that the plaintiffs sought to avoid the effect of the revenue court partition by alleging the negligence of their guardian in addition to their allegations of fraud and collusion. The finding of the lower appellate court that under the circumstances of this case there was gross or culpable negligence on the part of the guardian must be accepted in second appeal. The only question that remains for consideration is whether a suit for possession of the property previously partitioned by the revenue court can lie in a civil court.

There are a large number of cases containing observations for and against the view that negligence of the guardian is a ground for avoiding the decree. It may be convenient briefly to refer to them before discussing the reasons on which those decisions are based. In the case of Raghubar Dayal Sahu v. Bhikya Lal Misra[4] one of the learned Judges, Field, J. at page 76 referred to Gregory v. Molesworth[5] where it was said:

> It is right to follow the rule of law, where it is held that an infant is as much bound by a judgment in his own action as if of full age, and this rule is general, unless gross laches, or fraud and collusion, appear in proche in ami, then the infant might open it by a new bill.

He then referred to the practice in the Court of Chancery that if it were sought to question a decree passed against a minor on the ground of fraud or collusion, it might be done by an original bill, but if it were sought to impeach the decree passed against an infant on the ground of laches in the proche in ami, that the next friend had omitted to put forward proper available grounds of defence, this was usually done by re-opening the original case upon motion or petition. He also referred to the case of Hoghton v. Fiddey[6] where this practice was explained. The learned Judge then said that for suits in this country the procedure was different, and if an infant desired to have a decree set aside on the ground that his next friend had neglected his interest and had not put forward on his behalf good grounds of defence which were available the proper mode of procedure was to apply for a review under the C. P. C.; but if he sought to set it aside by a separate suit, then the plaintiff in such a suit could proceed only upon proof of fraud or collusion. The other learned Judge did not discuss the question but held that the decree was good because no fraud was established. The question as to the proper procedure did not therefore really arise in the case.

---

[1] I. L. R. 38 All. 452=14 A. L. J. 438

[2] I. L. R. 48 All. 44=23 A. L. J. 901

[3] 106 I. C. (A) 49

[4] 12 Cal. 69

[5] 3 Atkyns 626

[6] L. R. 18 Eq. 573

In the case of Daulat Singh v. Raghubar Singh[7] the learned Judges observed:

> But short of fraud being established and proved and fraud not only on one side but on both, i.e., on the part of the then plaintiff and on the part of the present plaintiff's then guardian, we know of no right which the present plaintiff can now have to dispute the validity of the decree which became final. Even if the guardian was negligent and through her negligence did not properly protect the interest of the minor in the previous suit the minor is well bound by the decree, so long as the guardian did not act fraudulently and in collusion with the minors then petitioners. If the law were otherwise no person could be certain of the finality of any decree obtained against a minor, whether the minor had been a plaintiff or defendant in the suit. The minor having been represented by a lawfully constituted guardian he is as much bound by the decree in that suit as if it had been sui juris at the time and had represented himself.

But in that case the plaintiff had come to court on the allegation of fraud which was not proved, and there was even no finding that there had been a negligence of the guardian. The observations were therefore obiter dicta.

In the case of Chandra Shekhar Tewari v. Balakdhar Dube[8] a learned Judge of this Court remarked:

> If the guardian neglected to support the case of the defendant, and there is nothing to show that he did so deliberately, that circumstance alone would not entitle the defendant to avoid the operation of the decree.

There too the plaintiffs had come into court on the allegation of fraud which was not established.

In the case of Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram[9] the Bench remarked that they entirely agreed with the remarks of Field, J. in Raghubar Dayal's case, which have been quoted by me above. But this observation also was an obiter dictum. There was no evidence of any kind to connect the opposite party with the omission of the guardian to plead limitation, and as pointed out by the learned Judges the plea of limitation was one to which effect could have been given even though not pleaded, because the court is bound to give effect to it under its own motion. The learned Judges clearly held that even if a minor could avoid a decree by a separate suit merely on the ground of gross negligence of his guardian, he could not do so in that case because no such negligence had been established. In the case of Bechan Singh v. Bhika Singh[10] a single Judge of this Court followed the view expressed in Chandra Shekhar's case and in Beni Prasad's case.

On the other hand, it was laid down in the case of Lalla Sheo Churn Lal v. Ram Nandan Dobey[11] that gross negligence on the part of a next

---

[7] [1894] A. W. N. 141

[8] I. L. R. 38 All. 452 at 454

[9] 10 A. L. J. 149

[10] 106 I. C. 1927, 49

[11] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 8

Civil

1932

Siraj Fatima v. Mahmood Ali

Sulaiman, J.

friend in the conduct of a suit brought on behalf of a person under a disability prevents the effect of the bar contained in the old Section 103 of the C. P. C. (now Order IX, Rule 9). In the course of the judgment the learned Judges referred to the English Law as contained in "Macpherson on Infants" that an infant plaintiff though bound by the decree can reopen the proceedings upon a new matter or on the ground of laches or of fraud and collusion. They also referred to Simpson on the Law of Infants, where it was stated that a decree may be impugned where there has been gross negligence by the next friend in the conduct of the infant's case or new matter discovered since the date of the decree. They quoted the observations of the V. C. in re: Hoghton[12].

> I am clearly of opinion that she cannot be called upon to endure that inconvenience (to suffer by any negligence or want of knowledge on the part of her then next friend). The proposition that an infant of tender years may have her whole fortune wrecked by the neglect of her friend is so monstrous that I cannot pay attention to it. She is entitled to have a next friend who is diligent and who will protect her interests.

They concluded that according to the law as administered in England, the gross negligence of his next friend could entitle an infant to obtain an avoidance of proceedings undertaken on his behalf. The learned Judges then went on to point out that the setting up of fraud in a fresh suit was an answer to the statutory bar and remarked:—

> As fraud and negligence are on the same footing the plaintiff has the same relief in each case (page 13).

They distinguished an earlier case of the Calcutta High Court on the ground that the general propositions laid down therein were subject to the exception of fraud, and they considered that if the question of gross negligence had been in any way before the Bench, it would have been excepted in that case also. The principle laid down in Lalla Sheo Churn Lal's case has been applied to a fresh claim brought even after a decree in a contested suit. I may simply give references to a few cases of the other High Courts.

Jwala Singh v. Jaimal Singh[13], Mohammad v. Sukha Singh[14], Bonda Chinnaya v. Pothala Achanma[15], Gottepati Subamma v. Gottepati Narasamma[16], Mohan Lal v. Neki[17], Hanmantapa v. Jivubai[18] and Chunduru Punnayyan v. Rajani Viranna[19]. I may also mention the case of Ram Sarup Lal v. Shah Latafat Hossein[20] where an application for the review of an order allowing the withdrawal of a suit by a next friend filed through another next friend was entertained and the case of Parmeshwari Pershad Narain Singh v. Sheo Dutt Rai[21] where an ex parte decree was set aside on the ground of the negligence of the guardian. See also the case of Bipin Chandra Das v. Menajaddi[22].

The case of Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup[23] decided by a Bench of this Court contains a well considered judgment reviewing at some length the various authorities. The learned Judges referred to Macpherson on Infants, Simpson on the Law of Infants in re: Hoghton's case, Gregory v. Moles-

---

[12] L. R. 18 Eq. 573 (576)

[13] 1 I. C. 400

[14] 13 I. C. 20

[15] 16 I. C. 543

[16] 26 I. C. 16

[17] 37 I. C. 195

[18] 24 Bom. 547

[19] 45 Mad. 425

[20] 29 Cal. 735

[21] 6 Cal. L. J. 448

[22] 47 Cal. L. J. 287

[23] I. L. R. 48 All. 44

worth and also Halsbury's Laws of England Vol. XVII, Paragraph 316. The court concluded that the same rule of law would be applied in India, viz., that the gross negligence of his next friend would entitle a minor to the avoidance of proceedings undertaken on his behalf, and by parity of reasoning the same rule would apply in the case of a minor defendant who had been represented in a litigation by a guardian-ad-litem. The learned Judges then went on to hold that the negligence or laches of the guardian which entitles a minor to avoid a decree must be of a gross character.

There is thus a clear conflict of opinion between the observations made in the case of Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram[24] and Brij Raj v. Ram Sarup.

The cases which contain observations that negligence is not a good ground for the setting aside of a decree passed against a minor proceed mainly on the doctrine that an infant is as much bound by a judgment or order as an adult, provided he was represented by a proper guardian. The idea seems to be that the only duty cast upon the litigant is that he should see that the opposite party, if a minor, is properly represented by a duly constituted guardian and that there is no duty cast upon him to see that the guardian-ad-litem vigilantly prosecutes the case on behalf of the minor. On the other hand, the cases which have laid down that negligence is a good ground proceed on the circumstance that according to English Law the negligence of the guardian entitles a minor to avoid the decree, and infer that the same rule is applicable in India. In some cases the learned Judges have gone so far as to remark that negligence stands on the same footing as fraud.

That in England gross negligence of the guardian is a good ground for the avoidance of a decree against a minor cannot be doubted. It however appears that the usual practice there is to allow review in a case where negligence is asserted and remedy by a separate action where fraud or collusion is asserted. But no difficulty arises in England where these provisions are part of the common law and are not contained in any statutory enactments. The rule of equity allowing a party to avoid a decree on the ground of fraud or a minor to avoid it on the ground of negligence of his guardian is just as well established a rule as the rule of res judicata.

In India we have codified law. The rule of res judicata is contained in Section 11 of the C. P. C. That section may not be absolutely exhaustive, and the principle of res judicata may apply for instance to execution proceedings, although execution proceedings do not come within the letter of the section. But to say that Section 11 has certain exceptions not set forth therein is quite another matter. We here have a statutory enactment prohibiting a court from re-trying an issue in which the matter directly and substantially involved has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties litigating under the same title in a court competent to try a subsequent suit which has been heard and finally decided by such a court. In the face of the express language of the Act it cannot be said that the section is not of general application, but that there are certain exceptions to it which are not set forth therein.

The rule of res judicata is however a rule of procedure. The Evidence Act also contains adjective law and is an act of procedure. Section 44 of that Act permits a party to a suit or other proceeding to show that a previous judgment or order which is relevant, was obtained by fraud or collusion. Thus we have a statutory provision permitting a party to show that a judgment or order which would have operated as res judicata is not binding upon the party because it had been obtained by fraud or collusion. Reading the two provisions of law together it would follow that a suit to avoid a previous judgment on the ground of fraud or collusion would not be barred. But Section 44 does not contain any exception as regards the negligence of the guardian of a minor. The effect of Section 11 C. P. C. therefore cannot be got rid of by a reference to Section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act.

---

[24] I. L. R. 38 All. 452

It has been contended before us that Section 44 read with the provisions of Section (2) (1) contains an exhaustive list of the circumstances under which a judgment can be avoided, and that all other rules of evidence, whether based on common law or otherwise, which permitted evidence to be led for avoiding a judgment are now excluded under the provisions of this latter section. But this last mentioned section merely excludes all rules of evidence not contained in any statute, Act or regulation in force. The Evidence Act does not purport to destroy any substantive right that may exist independently of that Act. Section 44 is merely permissive and not prohibitive. It allows a party to prove fraud and collusion in order to avoid a judgment or order. But it does not go further to prevent him from adducing evidence of negligence of his guardian, provided of course he had a right independently of the Evidence Act. There is in fact no provision in the Evidence Act which would prevent a person from adducing evidence to prove his right to avoid a judgment, provided the right is a substantive right and not a mere matter of procedure. The right is not merely one of adducing evidence in a particular way. A person who wants to establish his alleged substantive right to avoid a decree is prepared to abide by all the rules of evidence laid down in the Indian Evidence Act, and is not contravening any provision which prevents the leading of such evidence to prove the alleged right, provided of course, such a right exists independently and is not excluded by any section of the Act, as, for instance, hearsay evidence and evidence of a contemporaneous oral agreement are expressly excluded. There is therefore nothing in Section 44 or in Section 2 of the Evidence Act which precludes the plaintiffs from proving that a judgment previously obtained had been obtained by negligence of the guardian.

This however does not by itself get rid of the difficulty created by Section 11 C. P. C. The language of that section is unqualified, and no exception can be admitted to it. But there is yet another aspect of the matter. When a person seems to avoid a judgment, for instance on the ground of fraud, he concedes that the judgment so long as it stands is good but he claims that he has a right to avoid it. The option to avoid the judgment accrued to him after the judgment was delivered, and it was open to him to accept it or to avoid it. His right to exercise the option of avoiding the voidable judgment when exercised would vacate the judgment itself. There would then no longer be any previous determination of the question as an obstacle in his way. Under Section 11 C. P. C. the court is

CIVIL
1932
SIRAJ FATIMA
v.
MAHMOOD ALI
Sulaiman, J.

prevented from trying an issue which has already beeen determined; but if the judgment previously determining that issue is vacated because of the right of the applicant to avoid the judgment on the ground of fraud, the obstacle contemplated by Section 11 is automatically removed.

In my opinion there can be no doubt that a right to avoid a judgment on the ground of fraud exists independently of Section 44 of the Evidence Act. A contract obtained by fraud is voidable at the option of the party defrauded. In the same way a judgment obtained by fraud is voidable at his option. One may give the instance of a compromise decree. The decree cannot stand on a footing higher than that of the contract itself. If the compromise was obtained by undue influence, coercion or fraud and was voidable, the decree could be equally avoided. If this were not the case then a party against whom a judgment has been obtained by undue influence would have no remedy whatsoever. Undue influence is not one of the exceptions mentioned in Section 44 of the Evidence Act and would not be covered by it. Furthermore, as in the case of undue influence the party concerned has full knowledge of all the facts, his attempt to avoid the judgment subsequently would not be based on any matter analogous to the discovery of a new matter within the meaning of Order 47, Rule 1. As was observed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Chhaju Ram v. Neki[25] the general words "any other sufficient reason" mean a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously, viz., the discovery of a new matter or evidence, or some mistake or error apparent on the face of the record. A case of undue influence would not be covered by O. 47, R. 1. Nathu Lal v. Raghubir Singh[26]. That was a case of a compromise obtained by undue influence or collusion (not fraud). I pointed out in my judgment that the cases of fraud on the court (not on a party) or a mutual mistake or where there is no due representation of a party might stand on quite a different footing. The case of fraud on a party might in certain circumstances, when the party is not aware of the fraud practised upon him at the time, may be a matter analogous to the discovery of a new and important matter and the order may be open to be reviewed. But in the case of an undue influence knowledge exists all along. It may also be difficult to hold that a judgment obtained by undue influence would be open to be reviewed under the inherent jurisdiction of the court, because it is no concern of the court to watch that the parties are acting at arm's length. The only conclusion that one can therefore come to is that a right to avoid a judgment on the ground of undue influence or fraud just as much as a right to avoid a contract on those grounds is a substantive right because the binding character of the transaction itself is impugned. It is not a mere matter of procedure or rule of evidence. It therefore exists independently of the Evidence Act.

The next question is whether the right of a minor to avoid a decree on the ground of negligence of the guardian is also a substantive right. That in England such a right is recognized admits of no doubt. But it is wrong to say that negligence is either included in fraud or stands on exactly the same footing. In the case of fraud or collusion not only the

[25] 49 I. A. 144

[26] 1926 A. I. R. (A) 50

CIVIL
1932
SIRAJ FATIMA
v.
MAHMOOD ALI
Sulaiman, J.

guardian is to blame, but the blame also rests on the opposite party. Whereas in the case of a mere negligence of the guardian, short of collusion or fraud, the opposite party may be wholly innocent. Where the conduct of the opposite party has been tainted by fraud or collusion he has no real grievance if the order so obtained is set aside when the fraud or collusion is proved. On the other hand, a party who was innocent can have a serious grievance if an order obtained by him fairly in a contested matter is subsequently sought to be set aside on the ground that the minor's guardian acted negligently. There is some force in the observation that it is not any part of the duty of the opposite party to watch the conduct of the guardian-ad-litem and to see that he is acting with due care and caution. After all in many cases a minor litigant may suffer serious loss owing to the negligence of his guardian or trustee. A remedy may be recognized in law by way of a suit for damages for the negligence of the person whose duty it was to take proper care. Another difference between negligence and fraud or collusion is that the former does not come within the scope of Section 44 of the Evidence Act which lays down exceptions whereas the latter do.

But the principles recognized in England show that the right of a minor to avoid a decree on the ground of the negligence of his guardian is a well established rule of common law, and is therefore a substantive right. But such negligence is recognized to give the minor a right to avoid the decree. No one should be allowed to obtain a decree of a binding character against a minor unless the latter has been properly represented. If there is no such proper representation the minor ought to have a substantive right to avoid it. The right of the minor is to impugn the judgment itself. He is not trying to go behind a finding arrived at in the previous suit, but is attacking the very judgment itself. When the judgment itself is vacated, no question of res judicata would arise.

It seems to me that it is also possible to avoid the effect of the provisions of Section 11 C. P. C. by holding that the minor ceased to be a party to the suit when his guardian-ad-litem was grossly negligent. Of course, there can be no bar of res judicata where a party in the subsequent suit was not, properly speaking, a party to the previous suit.

The case of a minor litigant is very peculiar. While the litigation is being fought he is in a helpless position and cannot protect his interests or defend his rights. The courts have therefore a duty cast upon them to watch his interest vigilantly and the minor is considered to be under the protection of the court. The guardian-ad-litem who is appointed to represent the minor has to be appointed by the court and he must be a proper person to be his guardian for the suit. There is however no such formal order in the case of a next friend who sues on behalf of a minor and who is not appointed by the court. The guardian is bound to take care of the interest of the minor in the same way as a prudent man would look after his own interest. Negligence on his part would be a breach of duty. The test of negligence should be the not doing of what a reasonable man, guided by prudent considerations which regulate the conduct of human affairs would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do. The minor who is not able to resist the claim himself is represented by the duly constituted guardian, who is under an obligation to exercise due care and skill which a prudent man would exercise if he himself were a party. If the guardian appointed is not a proper guardian, for instance where his interest is adverse to that of the minor or where the guardian is grossly negligent in looking after the interest of the minor, it can hardly be said that the minor is properly represented in the litigation. Even where there was a duly constituted guardian and there was no flaw in his appointment, their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Durga Prasad v. Kesho Prasad Singh[27] held that as the guardian named in the case was not a legal guardian and had no right to defend the suit on behalf of the minor, the decree was not binding upon him. In the case of Rashidunnissa v. Mohemmad[28] their Lordships of the Privy Council remarked that where the guardian was a disqualified person, the minor "was never a party to any of these suits in the proper sense of the term." In the case of Raja Bahadur Raja Brij Narain Rai v. Mangla Prasad[29] the counsel for the defendant had to admit before their Lordships of the Privy Council that the previous decree was not binding on the minors in respect that they were not properly represented. There the father had been appointed as their guardian though his own alienation was being impugned by the minor sons. Side by side with this view, their Lordships of the Privy Council have also laid down that even though there be no formal appointment of a guardian-ad-litem, a minor is bound by a decree obtained by him if his interest had been duly protected and he was effectively represented by his mother, even though there was an absence of an order appointing her as his guardian Walian v. Bankey Behari[30].

It therefore follows that the real basis of the binding character of a decree against a minor is the fact of his having been duly represented by a proper person, and not the mere existence of any formal order appointing a guardian for him. Even when there be such an order, if the guardian does not properly represent him, the decree would not be binding. On the other hand, even if there be any defect in the formal appointment of a guardian, the decree would be binding upon him, if he is sufficiently represented and his interests are well protected.

The rules contained in Order 32 C. P. C. relate to the appointment of a guardian-ad-litem which can be altered or added to by the High Courts. They are not substantive provisions of law. It seems to me that even in his duties, he ceases to represent the minor properly and effectively, and where a guardian has been formally appointed, but he is grossly negligent the result is the same as if no proper guardian had been in existence. As pointed out above it is a part of the duty of the court itself to see that the minor is properly represented and his interest is being looked after adequately. It is also the duty of the court to see that the guardian appointed is a proper person who would safeguard the interest of the minor. If therefore the guardian ceases to take any interest in the case or is grossly negligent so as to sacrifice the interest of the minor, it cannot be said that the minor is still properly represented in the litigation. Wilful and wanton neglect on the part of the guardian disqualifies him. This also therefore appears to me to be a basis on which the avoidance of a decree against the minor can be allowed.

---

[27] I. L. R. 8 Cal. 656

[28] I. L. R. 31 All. 572

[29] I. L. R. 46 All. 95

[30] [1903] 30 Cal. 1021

In ordinary civil cases the more speedy and appropriate remedy would be by way of a review of judgment on an application presented to the court which passed the decree. Such an application can be said to be based on the discovery of a new important matter or evidence because the minor cannot be considered to have been aware of the negligence of his guardian during his minority. He must be deemed to discover it after attaining majority because it is only then that he can move in the matter. The ground of negligence is therefore analogous to that of a discovery of a new or important matter or evidence which will come within the purview of Order 47, R. 1. But such a remedy is restricted by the law of limitation, and the application has to be made within the prescribed short time.

The question is whether a separate remedy by way of a suit is also not available. No doubt the questions did not come up for consideration in the case of Bibi Walian v. Banke Behari Persad Singh[81]. All the same their Lordships of the Privy Council did not throw out the subsequent suit brought by the minor on the mere ground that his remedy, if any, was by way of review of judgment and not by a separate suit. If the principle of res judicata is not a bar there is no ground for holding why a separate suit would not lie. The same thing happened in Raja Bahadur Raja Brij Narain Rai v. Mangala Prasad[82].

In the present case there is clear reason for allowing a separate suit. There is no provision for a review of judgment by a subordinate revenue court under the U. P. Land Revenue Act. The doctrine of inherent jurisdiction can hardly be invoked in such a case. It would not be open to the revenue court to re-open the partition on the allegation that the guardian of the minor had been negligent. As a matter of fact so far as the provisions of that Act go there is no section expressly applying the provisions of the C. P. C. relating to the appointment of a guardian for a minor to the proceedings in the revenue court. The remedy of the minor, if any, can be only by a separate suit. The suit for avoidance of a previous order of a competent court is undoubtedly one of a civil nature and falls within the scope of Section 9 C. P. C. Such a suit is maintainable in a civil court. If a review of judgment by the Revenue Court is not permitted, there is no reason why remedy by way of a fresh suit in the civil court should not be allowed.

It may further be noted that in the present case the alleged negligence of the guardian consisted of the omission to file a suit in the civil court as directed by the revenue court, and not in omitting to do anything in the revenue court itself. The suit in the civil court would have been brought by Wajid Ali as next friend of the minor and his position there would not have been identical with that of a guardian-ad-litem of a defendant to a suit. The question is therefore not one of a review of the Revenue Court's order in consequence of anything done in that court.

In Brij Raj's case the learned Judges quoted remarks made in some judgments that there was no substantial difference between 'negligence' and 'gross negligence'; but that it was the same thing with the addition of a vituperative epithet. The learned Judges however very properly pointed out that it was not every kind of negligence, which would entitle a minor to avoid a decree, but that the amount of care required should be judged by the standard of ordinary men. Of course, every sort of negligence, however trivial, would not be a sufficient ground, for there may be some negligence, the effect of which may not be prejudicial to the interest of the minor. The negligence in order to be a good ground for the avoidance of a decree must be of such a nature as to justify the inference that the minor's interests were not at all protected and therefore he was not properly represented. The direct result of the negligence must be a serious prejudice to the minor and the negligence must not be merely such as might be innocently committed even by a reasonable person taking the ordinary precautions which he would have taken in his own case. Where the negligence is so gross as to amount to a clear violation of the duty cast upon the guardian, although not brought to the notice of the court at the time, the decree can be avoided. In the present case, the negligence lay in the omission to file a suit as ordered by the revenue courts, and the lower appellate court has found that in the circumstances of this case, when the legal rights of the plaintiffs were clear, it amounted to a gross or culpable negligence.

---

[81] I. A. 30, 182

[82] I. L. R. 46 All. 95

It has been contended by the learned advocate for the appellants that even if there is a right to avoid a decree or order passed by a competent court on the ground of gross negligence of the minor's guardian there is an absolute bar created by Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act against a civil suit being filed after a revenue court has partitioned the property.

The position was well settled under Act XIX of 1873 after the pronouncement of the Full Bench in the case of Muhammad Sadiq v. Laute Ram[88]. The nature of the partition proceedings in a revenue court, the purpose and effect of the order for partition, and the nature of the adjudication of the rights of the parties were well explained in the elaborate judgment delivered by the Chief Justice in which the other learned Judges concurred. But the case turned on the language of Section 241 (f) of the old Act which said "re-distribution of land." We now have Section 233 (k) in its place where the words are "partition or union of mohals". In one sense it may be said that the language of the new Act is more general and wider because partition includes distribution of lands and the section covers all suits "with respect to" it.

The language is undoubtedly unhappy and has been a source of some conflict of opinion. In some cases it has been construed strictly literally and it has been held that a suit for possession filed in a civil court relating to property allotted to the opposite party in a revenue court partition does not seek to disturb the partition of the mohal and is therefore not prohibited. If mohals are treated as geographical areas, the division into those areas is not interfered with by handing over possession of a small share or lands from the owner of one mohal to the owner of another mohal. It has been suggested that where no question of res judicata arises, the civil

---

[88] I. L. R. 23 All. 291

CIVIL

1932

SIRAJ FATIMA v. MAHMOOD ALI

Sulaiman, J.

court's jurisdiction is not barred.

On the other hand, in other cases it has been pointed out that a partition court does not merely adjudicate upon the rival claims of recorded co-sharers but must ascertain lands held in common and in severalty and has power to allot lands belonging to one co-sharer to another co-sharer if the partition cannot otherwise be conveniently made; and therefore after the partition has been effected and lands have been allotted in different mohals that allotment cannot be interfered with by a civil court on the basis of any title that existed before the partition. Again a person may want to have his share and all his lands separated and constituted into a new and separate mohal. He does not want to have any longer any joint liability for the payment of Government revenue with the other co-sharers. With this object in view he applies to the revenue court and gets his properties partitioned and put into a separate mohal. After this process has been gone through, it should not be left open to a co-sharer in the other mohal to come to the civil court and again claim that he still owns some lands in this separate mohal and is a co-sharer with the owner of the mohal, or that the owner of the separate mohal is still a co-sharer in the other mohal and has therefore a joint liability for the payment of Government revenue. It has been suggested that the whole object of a partition proceeding is to allot specific lands to specific co-sharers and place them into a separate mohal in the case of a perfect partition and into separate pattis in the case of an imperfect partition even though in order to prepare convenient compact areas it may be necessary to take some lands from one and give them to another in exchange for something else. Where parties were arrayed on different sides and a conflict of interest was necessarily implied, the allotment should not be allowed to be altered by the civil court on the basis of a title prior to such allotments. Under Section 4(4) of the Land Revenue Act it is an area under a separate engagement for the payment of land revenue. The engagement for payment of revenue with a co-sharer would be disturbed if some plots allotted to him are taken out of his possession. There would have to be a fresh assessment of revenue on those particular plots.

Since Mohammad Sadiq's case there have been no less than three Full Benches of this Court on the question of the extent of the applicability of Section 233 (k). The first two are Shambhu Singh v. Daljit Singh[34] and Kalka Prasad v. Man Mohan Lal[35], which were decided by the same Bench and on the same date. These were followed by another Full Bench in the case of Bijai Misra v. Kali Prasad Misra[36]. In this last-mentioned case (Banerji and Tudball, JJ., Richards, C. J. dissenting) held that a subsequent civil suit was barred. They applied the principle laid down in Mohammad Sadiq's case to a case under Section 233 (k). It may be noted that Tudball, J. was also a member of the previous Full Benches, and so was Richards, C. J. The latest Full Bench appears to have been consistently followed in a number of cases, vide Ganga Prasad v. Beni Prasad[37]. A contrary view appears to have been taken in the case of Data Din v. Nobra[38] but Bijai Misra's case does not appear to have been referred to by

[34] 38 All. 243

[35] 38 All. 302

[36] 39 All. 469

[37] [1930] A. L. J. 601

[38] [1930] A. L. J. 1846

counsel. In the case of Ram Sukh Pandey v. Prithi Singh[39], Ganga Prasad's case was distinguished. The position has been recently reviewed in the case of Ram Rikha Misra v. Lallu Misra[40] in which a contrary view has undoubtedly been expressed. The latest Full Bench case of Bijai Misra v. Kali Prasad Misra was referred to by one learned Judge and was presumably distinguished as it could not have been dissented from by a Division Bench. Of course, so long as a latest Full Bench case is not overruled it has to be followed, if it cannot be distinguished. In the present case however the question does not directly arise, and it is therefore unnecessary to consider the correctness of the decision in Bijai Misra's case.

It seems to me that we may assume in favour of the appellants that ordinarily a civil suit does not lie for the possession of property, which has been allotted to the opposite party by a revenue court at a partition. But it does not follow that the bar created by Section 233 (k) is so absolute as to prevent a party from going behind an order of the revenue court even on the ground of fraud, or collusion or on the ground of the negligence of the guardian of the minor. When an original decree of a civil court can be set aside by a minor on the ground of the gross negligence of his guardian, I can see no valid reason why a revenue court's order in a partition proceeding cannot be set aside on the same ground. No case has extended the scope of Section 233 (k) to such an extent.

The only other question that remains is as to the actual form which our decree should take. It has been contended by Mr. Khwaja, who has argued the whole case with ability, that the proceedings in the revenue court up to the time when it directed the plaintiffs' guardian to file a civil suit, should be restored inasmuch as there was no negligence of the guardian up to that time. He further contends that the mere filing of an application for partition in the revenue court ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court altogether, and while an application is pending and remains undisposed of, the civil court cannot go on with a suit relating to the possession of the same property.

It seems to me that the present case is not analogous to a civil suit brought against a minor in which there has been some irregularity in the appointment of a guardian for the minor which has prejudiced him and the claim against the minor would be barred by time if a fresh suit were instituted against him. In such a case a mere declaration may be granted and the former suit restored, or if the same question can be raised in the second suit and the merits gone into afresh, the court may itself determine them. As pointed out above, in the present case the revenue court has no power to review a judgment as no such power is conferred upon it by the U. P. Land Revenue Act, nor do the provisions of Section 114 and Order 47, C. P. C. apply to revenue court proceedings. The plaintiffs would therefore have no remedy whatsoever unless a civil court can grant them a substantial relief, viz., that of recovery of possession.

When the order of the revenue court for the final partition can be vacated, it would no longer stand as an obstacle in the way of the plaintiffs. When the order under Section 112 itself falls to the ground, Section 233 (k) would have no application. That section could be applied only when there is an order for partition passed by a revenue court which is binding on the plaintiffs. I see no force whatsoever in the contention that the original application for partition must be deemed to be still pending in the revenue court, nor do I see any force in the argument that the mere fact that such an application has been filed in a revenue court at once ousts the jurisdiction of the civil court to try the question of title.

[39] [1930] A. L. J. 1307

[40] [1931] A. L. J. 307

Sulaiman, J. In my opinion the decree passed by the lower appellate court was right, and the appeal should be dismissed.

Boys, J. BOYS, J.—This appeal came first before Mr. Justice Sen and myself on May 12, 1931, when we allowed the appeal, no body appearing on the other side. On the application of the respondent the appeal was subsequently restored and came up for hearing before the same Bench again on January 12, 1932, when we directed that the case be laid before the Hon'ble the Chief Justice for the appointment of a Full Bench. The case has now come before a Full Bench for disposal.

The appeal is a defendants' appeal arising out of a suit for declaration of the plaintiffs' title for possession, and for mesne profits. The facts are as follows:—

Afzal Ali married twice. By his first wife he had two daughters, Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima. His first wife died in his lifetime. Nisar Fatima's husband was Abid Ali. Nisar Fatima died on August 29, 1920, leaving a daughter Kaniz Fatima. Siraj Fatima is defendant No. 1. Abid Ali is defendant No. 2, his wife Nisar Fatima having died. Kaniz Fátima Nisar Fatima's daughter, is defendant No. 3.

Afzal Ali's second wife was Saghirunnissa and she had three sons, who were minors, and two daughters who were minors at the date of the partition proceedings which led to this suit. Afzal Ali died on March 29, 1918, and Saghirunnissa died on September 29, 1918.

Two annas of her husband's property descended to Saghirunnissa. It is only about this two annas and not about any of the rest of Afzal Ali's property that there is dispute in these proceedings.

On Saghirunnissa's death the two annas was recorded in the names of Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima, the children of the first wife, and also in the names of the three sons and two daughters of Saghirunnissa, the second wife. It is manifest that in the absence of any further explanation the names of the step-children Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima were wrongly recorded.

Siraj Fatima and Abid Ali, the husband of Nisar Fatima, now deceased, applied for partition of their share in this two annas against the sons and daughters of Musammat Saghirunnissa who were represented by a certificated guardian, Wajid Ali, who is described to us as being a retired tahsildar and grandfather of the wife of the eldest of Saghirunnissa's sons.

On behalf of the minors Wajid Ali objected that the representatives of the first wife could have no right in the personal property of the second wife. Wajid Ali as guardian was directed to file a suit. He failed to file any suit, and as a result a final order was passed for partition on October 18, 1922.

In 1923 Mahmud Ali, the eldest son of the second wife Saghirunnissa, became a major. On July 19, 1924, the present suit was filed by Mahmud

Ali and the other sons and daughters of Saghirunnissa under his guardianship.

The plaint alleged that Nisar Fatima assisted by her husband Abid Ali had filed the partition suit, had won over the plaintiffs's guardian Wajid Ali, and had colluded with him, and as a result thereof Wajid Ali did not properly look after the partition case. As an instance of the failure to look after the partition case properly the plaint specified not his failure to file a suit but his failure to put forward any objection with respect to the plaintiff's title.

The defendant set up an oral gift which has been found to be not proved; denied that there was any negligence on the part of Wajid Ali, the guardian; and relied upon Section 233 (k) as a bar to the suit.

Both the trial court and the lower appellate court have held (1) that there was an oral gift; (2) that Wajid Ali had been guilty of negligence in not filing the civil suit, and (3) that Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act was no bar to the suit, and the plaintiff has had his decree.

The defendants have appealed, and two questions have been pressed before us, firstly that while a decree may be treated as a nullity if proved to have been obtained by fraud or collusion, it cannot be set aside on the ground of negligence, whether gross or otherwise; and secondly, it has been contended that S. 233 (k) is in any case a bar to a suit in the civil court.

In regard to S. 233 (k) it was contended that it constituted a bar not only to any interference by a civil court with the distribution of mahals but to interference with the allotments to particular co-sharers. The question is very far from being free from difficulty, but it does not call for decision in the present case. There can be no question but that the decree of any court may be treated as a nullity if it can be shown to have been obtained by fraud or collusion. In such a case the reasoning would be as follows. A plaintiff has normally the right to come into court and ask for a declaration of his title for possession and for mesne profits. He is met at the outset by a judgment of the revenue court where, as in the present case, he has had an opportunity of contesting or getting contested the question of title has not contested it and it has been decided against him. The defendant will, of course, rely upon S. 11 C. P. C. The plaintiff will counter this by relying upon S. 44 of the Evidence Act. The judgment tendered by the defendant is of course relevant, and S. 44 of the Evidence Act declares that evidence is relevant which is directed to show that the judgment was obtained by fraud or collusion. So far whether Section 44 be regarded or not as engrafting an exception on S. 11 C. P. C., the decision is clear. It only remains to consider whether "gross negligence" is on the same footing as "fraud" or "collusion" for our present purpose.

It is not necessary to enter into what may be the distinction between "negligence" and "gross negligence". There is, as I said in one of the earlier orders in this case, no practical difference, but I would express it otherwise as it has been more happily expressed in other cases, that there is no definite line between the two. The question whether the negligence was sufficiently grave or gross is a question which would have to be decided in the particular circumstances of each case provided that it be first determined that negligence, whether gross or otherwise, is on the same footing as fraud or collusion, for the purposes of holding a decree to be a nullity.

I am not, however, able to arrive at a conclusion that they are on the same footing. By S. 11 C. P. C. the judgment, given that other necessary conditions exist, is conclusive. An exception as it were in favour of being allowed to plead that the judgment was obtained by fraud or collusion is made by S. 44 of the Evidence Act. Can any such exception be made in favour of negligence? Section 2 of the Evidence Act declares that on and from the first day of September 1872 all rules of evidence not contained in any Statute, Act or Regulation in force in any part of British India shall be repealed. Now, I cannot get beyond the fact that S. 44 embodies a rule of evidence. Nor can I get beyond the fact that there is no distinction between a rule of evidence permitting proof of fraud or collusion and a rule of evidence permitting evidence of negligence. This seems to me therefore conclusive that evidence cannot be given of negligence on the part of a guardian in order to arrive at a conclusion that a decree can be treated as a nullity. It has been suggested that a guardian who is negligent is in fact no guardian at all and that in that aspect of the matter it can be held that the minor was not properly represented. But this appears to me a straining of the words "not properly represented" which is not permissible.

It was also further pressed upon us that if we were to hold that a judgment cannot be treated as a nullity on the ground of the gross negligence of a guardian it might lead to the interests of minors very gravely suffering. This is manifestly so, but there are many cases in which a minor or a cestui qui trust may suffer at the hands of a trustee or a pardanashin lady, at the hands of her mukhtar or relatives without there being a remedy against an innocent third party. Again it is not possible to suppose that gross negligence was omitted from S. 44 otherwise than deliberately. In view of the state of the law in 1872 there cannot be any doubt that the idea of putting gross negligence by a guardian on the same footing as fraud and collusion must have been present to the minds of the Legislature.

Whatever weight, however, may be attached to these last considerations, I have considered and reconsidered S. 2 and S. 44 of the Evidence Act, and I cannot escape from the definite conclusion that to allow evidence of gross negligence on the part of a guardian as relevant for the purpose of destroying the effect of a decree or judgment would be to act upon a rule of evidence which is not embodied in the Evidence Act or in any statute or regulation and which I am therefore debarred by Section 2 from acting upon.

I would, therefore, hold on this single point that the plaintiff was debarred from setting up negligence as a ground for holding the decree of the revenue court to be a nullity. I would, therefore, allow the defendants' appeal with costs and dismiss the suit.

Sen, J.

SEN, J.—This is an appeal by the defendants. The facts which gave rise to this appeal may be briefly indicated.

One Afzal Ali owned zemindari property in four villages, viz:—(1)

CIVIL 1932
—
SIRAJ FATIMA
v.
MAHMOOD
ALI
—
Sen, J.

Narkhurd, (2) Mosinpore, mahal Afzal Ali, (3) Panka Bahadur Nagar, mahal Bahadur Singh and mahal Mathura Prasad and (4) Mirzapore, mahal Badal Singh, patti No. 3. Afzal Ali died on March 29, 1918 leaving a number of heirs. He left two adult daughters, viz., Siraj Fatima defendant No. 1 and Nisar Fatima by a predeceased wife. He also left a widow Mst. Saghirunnissa and by her three minors sons, Mahmud Ali, Masud Ali and Zahid Ali and two minor daughters, Wajibunnissa and Sahebunnissa. These persons are the plaintiffs in the action. Nisar Fatima was married to Abid Ali, defendant No. 2. She died on August 29, 1920, leaving a daughter Kaniz Fatima defendant No. 3.

Under the Mohammedan law of inheritance a one-eighth share in the estate of Afzal Ali devolved upon his widow, Mst. Saghirunnissa. The widow died in 1918 and her estate consisting of the one-eighth share in the property of Afzal Ali devolved upon her sons and daughters alone, Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima having no claim to the same. Mahmud Ali plaintiff was married to the grand-daughter of Wajid Ali, a retired Tehsildar. Wajid Ali has been impleaded as defendant No. 4. Upon the death of Saghirunnissa, Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima applied for mutation of names against the share of Saghirunnissa in the four villages jointly with the minor sons and daughters of Saghirunnissa and mutation was so effected. In 1922, Siraj Fatima and Abid Ali and Kaniz Fatima applied for partition of their shares in the revenue court. The application for partition is not before this Court but it is common ground that the application was made with reference to the property which formed part of the one-eighth share belonging to Mst. Saghirunnissa. The minor sons and daughters of Saghirunnissa were represented in the partition proceedings by Mir Wajid Ali who was their certificated guardian. Mir Wajid Ali contested the application for partition, denied that the applicants had any title to the property left by Saghirunnissa, and contended that under the Mohammedan Law, the property belonged exclusively to the sons and daughters of Saghirunnissa. A plea involving a question of proprietary title having been raised, the revenue court directed Mir Wajid Ali to institute a suit in the civil court for adjudication of title within three months. For some inscrutable reason, the guardian did not institute the civil suit. Thereupon the revenue court ordered a partition of property as claimed. This was on October 18, 1922.

Mahmud Ali the eldest son of Saghirunnissa emerged from minority in January 1923. The present action was commenced by him on July 9, 1924 in his own right and acting as the next friend of his minor brothers and sisters. The plaintiffs stated in Paragraph 8 of the plaint:—

> Mst. Nisar Fatima, assisted by her husband defendant No. 2, who was in police service in Cawnpore district and who is a very cunning man filed a partition suit in revenue court as a matter of precaution. She having won over the plaintiffs' guardian, colluded with him and made efforts to cause harm to the plaintiffs. Accordingly the plaintiffs' guardian did not properly look after the partition case on behalf of the plaintiffs nor did he put forth any objection with respect to the plaintiffs' right of ownership, while the plaintiffs being minors, were unable to take any proceedings. Thus defendants Nos. 1 to 3 came out successful in the partition case and wanted to deprive the plaintiffs of their right. It has legally no effect as against the plaintiffs.

The pleadings in the case have not been artistically drawn up. Before 1922, Nisar Fatima was already dead. But there can be no doubt that the plaintiffs intended to repudiate and ignore the order of the partition court upon the ground of fraud, collusion and culpable neglect on the part of their guardian in not initiating and carrying through proper proceedings for the protection of their rights. The plaintiffs did not ask for the avoidance of the order of the revenue court directing partition of the property. They chose to ignore the order altogether and sought the following reliefs:—

> (a) On the establishment of the plaintiffs' right of ownership, proprietary possession over the property given in list A may be awarded and the defendants may be dispossessed. (b) A decree for Rs.996-3-6 on account of mesne profits and interest may be passed in favour of the plaintiffs against the defendants.

The other defendants against whom the suit was directed were the transferees of the property under conveyances executed by Siraj Fatima. Mir Wajid Ali did not contest the claim.

Defendants 1 to 3 resisted the suit upon various grounds. They contended that Mst. Saghirunnissa, through natural love and affection, had made an oral gift of her one-eighth share in her husband's estate in favour of her own sons and daughters as also her step-daughters, Siraj Fatima and Nisar Fatima, that Mir Wajid Ali was not guilty of any neglect in not instituting a suit in the civil court in obedience to the direction of the revenue court, that his inaction was due to the fact that he knew and realised that his wards had no title to the property in controversy and that the suit was barred by Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act.

Neither the court of first instance nor the court of appeal has gone into the questions of fraud and collusion which were emphatically denied by the defendants. It must be taken that there were no material before the court to support these charges and that the pleas relating to fraud and collusion have failed. The issues formulated in the case were somewhat loosely worded but the issues were comprehensive enough. The parties fully understood what were the real points of difference in the case and adduced evidence accordingly. They were in no way taken by surprise and the defendants cannot be allowed to raise the plea as they verbally seek to raise before this Court at this late stage that they have been prejudiced by the loose wording of the issues.

The court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree for possession and for Rs.150 as mesne profits together with interest. The findings of the trial court are that the suit is not barred by Section 233 (k), that Mst. Saghirunnissa had made no oral gift as contended by the defendants and that Mir Wajid Ali was guilty of gross neglect in not carrying out the direction of the revenue court to institute a civil suit for adjudication of title and that this had seriously prejudiced the plaintiffs. On the last mentioned point, Mr. Swarup Narain observed as follows:—

> It does not appear if any allegation of an oral gift was ever made in the partition case or not. Most probably not. So the question is whether Wajid Ali's act in not filing the declaratory suit amounts to gross negli-

CIVIL 1932
SIRAJ FATIMA
v.
MAHMOOD ALI
Sen, J.

> gence or not. In my opinion, it does. The plaintiffs' right was so very clear that if the guardian had been mindful of his duties as guardian he would not have kept quiet. I therefore hold that the plaintiffs are not bound by the partition proceeding and that the present suit is not barred.

In Paragraph 5 of their memorandum of appeal in the lower appellate court, the defendants challenged the correctness of this finding. The lower appellate court overruled this contention. It agreed with the findings of the trial court that Section 233 (k) did not operate as a bar to the suit, that the oral gift was not proved and that the partition order was liable to be set aside as it was vitiated by gross negligence on the part of the plaintiffs' guardian. The court observed:—

> In my opinion, the partition proceedings also are not binding upon the plaintiffs. It is perfectly clear that there was gross negligence on the part of the guardian in that case. Objection as to the plaintiffs' right was made. The guardian was ordered to establish the claim in the civil court. He took no step. The plaintiffs' case was a perfectly clear one. They were clearly entitled to the property. There was culpable negligence on the part of the guardian which ended in loss to the plaintiff. In my opinion, the plaintiffs are not bound by those proceedings.

In the result the defendants' appeal was dismissed. The defendants appealed to this Court and the appeal came up before a Division Bench. Originally the respondents were unrepresented. In view of certain rulings cited, the appeal was decreed ex parte. Subsequently, the ex parte order was vacated and the appeal was reheard. It having appeared to the court that there were conflicting decisions on the point as to whether a decree or order passed by a competent tribunal could be set aside on a fresh suit instituted by the minors in the civil court on the ground that the decree had been passed against them because their guardian was guilty of gross neglect, this matter was referred to a larger Bench. The case has now been fully argued by both sides and a mass of authorities has been cited.

An attempt was made to challenge the findings on the two main issues of facts indicated above. The appellants cannot be allowed to do this. The findings are based upon evidence and are not vitiated by any misapplication of substantive law or of any rule of procedure affecting the merits.

It was next contended that the use of the expression "gross negligence" is vague and indefinite and that the degree of negligence ought to have been defined inasmuch as the plaintiffs cannot be clothed with a right of action for mere negligence in all cases. In my view, the amount of care which a guardian is under obligation to take may vary with the flexible posture of each case. The word "gross" qualifying negligence is not indicative of any standard of negligence. In judicial decisions, the word has been understood in different senses; sometimes signifying non-specialist negligence, sometimes signifying the amount either of specialist or of non-specialist negligence. Lord Craworth in a well-known case[41] before the Judicial Committee while allowing that the epithet 'gross' was not without its significance, stated in clear terms that "degrees of care are not definable". Famous in legal history is the dictum of Baron Rolfe in Wilson v. Brett[42]:—

[41] L. R. 2 P. C. 1868, 337

[42] 11 M and W (1843) 113

> I could see no difference between negligence and gross negligence; that it was the same thing with the addition of a vituperative epithet.

I understand the term to include inexcusable absence of such ordinary care which under the circumstances of the case a prudent man was bound to take to safeguard his interest or that of a person who was dependent upon him. Where the prudent man abandons his prudence without any excuse in the conduct of any affair affecting the interest of his wards he must be held to be guilty of negligence. Where negligence is established liability follows for all resultant consequences.

It has been contended that the bar raised by Section 233 (k) is absolute and that the said bar is not liable to be set aside even where the order of the revenue court is vitiated by fraud, collusion or negligence.

To clear the ground, it may be pointed out here that the bar can in no case extend to one of the villages in suit, viz., Narkhurd. This village was not partitioned by the revenue court. Mr. Khwaja for the appellant, who has argued the case with ingenuity, skill and conspicuous ability, has contended that in partition proceedings the question of title could only be raised within the limits indicated by Section 111 of the Land Revenue Act and that the remedy of the unsuccessful objector lies in an appeal under Section 112 and not by a separate suit. He has also contended that his remedy is by way of review. He takes his stand on Section 233 (k) which provides that no person shall institute any suit or other proceedings in civil court with respect to partition or union of mahals except as provided in Sections 111 and 112. He has called to his aid a decision of the Full Bench in re Mohammad Sadiq v. Laute Ram[48]. This decision turned upon an interpretation of Section 241*F* of Act XIX of 1873, the language of which is in many respects different from that of Section 233*K* of Act III of 1901. It is not permissible to construe the provisions of one statute in the light of any judicial decision on a provision of another statute unless the two are in pari materia and are identical in terms. Opinions vary, but in my judgment, the scope of Section 233*K* is narrower than that of 241*F*. The distribution of the land of a mahal by partition is not the same thing as the partition of union of mahals. In the latter case, each mahal is a consolidated unit and the section is not trenched upon by a decision of the civil court which does not affect the integrity of the mahal as a whole. The case-law as to the import and scope of Section 233*K*— and I include my own judgments—presents a hopeless tangle. There are three Full Bench decisions which are reported in 38 All. 243, 38 All. 302 and 39 All. 469. These have been followed by a large number of Division Bench rulings such as I. L. R. 53 All. 568, [1930], A. L. J. 601, [1930] A. L. J. 146 and 18 A. L. J. 110. It is not necessary to notice or discuss these authorities in detail. It will suffice to say that there is no consensus of judicial opinion in support of Mr. Khwaja's plea, that when once a partition proceeding has been initiated in a revenue court, no suit of whatever description relating to the subject-matter can be entertained by the civil court. Indeed there is a sharp cleavage of judicial opinion on the point.

---

[48] I. L. R. 23 All. 291

It may be conceded that in the normal state of things, the civil court cannot entertain a suit which may have the result of affecting the partition or union of mahals. But the material point which calls for determination in this case is whether it is open to the civil court to ignore any order as to partition made by the revenue court where the order has been passed affecting the interest of minors by reason of negligence on the part of the guardian. It is too late in the day to question that a decree or order in a civil suit may be ignored by the party aggrieved, where the order has been procured by fraud or collusion. In the Duchess of Kingston's case (decided in 1776) the proposition laid down was as follows:—

> Fraud is an extrinsic collateral Act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of the courts of justice. Lord Coke says, it avoids all judicial acts ecclesiastical or temporal.

Section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act is an enabling section and provides that any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree was obtained by fraud or collusion. This section enacts a rule of evidence and may be taken to graft an exception upon the rule of res judicata as enunciated in Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This section does not enact any rule relating to the substantive right possessed by a citizen nor does it enumerate and exhaust the grounds upon which a decree or order may be attacked. If fraud or collusion vitiates the order or decree passed by a civil court, there does not appear to be any ground for holding that it does not or cannot make inoperative or nugatory an order passed by the revenue court in a partition proceeding. If a minor plaintiff has a right either to ignore or to challenge the propriety of an order passed by the revenue court against him in partition proceedings, the said right is undoubtedly a substantive right. If the minor possesses a substantive right, the right should be capable of being enforced by a suit. A suit for enforcement of such right is clearly a suit of a civil nature within the purview of Section 9 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The jurisdiction of a civil court to entertain a suit of this description exists unless it has been taken away by clear legislative enactment. I have already set out the reliefs which the plaintiffs claim in this suit and have also indicated that the plaintiffs have treated the revenue court proceedings as a nullity on the ground of negligence on the part of their guardian. It has been contended by the appellant that having regard to the provisions of Sections 2 and 44 of the Indian Evidence Act, the plaintiffs are precluded from leading any evidence to prove that the order of the revenue court is vitiated by culpable negligence on the part of their guardian. The answer to the argument is that the right claimed by the plaintiffs is a substantive right and is not merely a rule of evidence; and in order to establish that right, they can always avail themselves of the provisions of the Evidence Act relating to the admissibility of relevant evidence. The plaintiffs are always entitled to prove their case by relevant and admissible evidence within the Act and not beyond it.

In many of the judicial decisions, which have been cited by the respondents the decree or order has been declared to be nugatory on the ground that negligence stands on the same footing as fraud or collusion. There can be no manner of doubt that the incidents of fraud or of collusion are in many respects different from those of negligence. Notwithstanding this difference, it is patently clear that their effect is much the same. A minor cannot act for himself. He has to depend upon his guardian whose position is fiduciary and as such ubberemei fidei. If the guardian does not fulfil his obligations to the ward, and wilfully, wantonly or inexcusably abandons his trust with the result that loss or injury accrues to the ward, the latter may have two remedies. He may bring an action against his guardian for tort. Cases however are conceivable where a decree for damages may not amount to a complete remedy or may be no remedy at all. The guardian may be a penniless pauper. The other remedy which, to my thinking, is justly available to the minor is to treat the order as a nullity and to press for such reliefs as he is lawfully entitled to as the owner of the property in dispute. In doing so, the minor cannot be successfully met by a plea of res judicata. Where in a suit or proceeding the minor is represented by a guardian-ad-litem but the latter does not function as such, and through inexcusable negligence fails to carry out the duties, which justice demands or necessity compels, the minor for all practical purposes is unrepresented in the suit. A decree or order obtained against a minor who is not properly represented in the action cannot be pleaded as a bar to a suit instituted by the minor relating to the same subject-matter.

There is a preponderance of authority in favour of the view that a minor can always sue for avoidance of a decree or order which could not have been passed against him but for the negligence of his guardian. Mr. Khwaja contends for the opposite view. He has referred to a number of authorities. I proceed to deal with them now.

Daulat Singh v. Raghubir Singh[44], decided by Edge, C. J. and Banerjee, J. contains no more that an obiter dictum that a specific fraud attributed must be alleged and proved, that such fraud must be fraud on both sides and that mere negligence on the part of the guardian in protecting the minor's interest would not be sufficient to prevent the decree being binding on the minor. It was further held that if the law were otherwise no person could be certain of the finality of any decree obtained against a minor, whether the minor had been a plaintiff or a defendant in the suit. No authorities have been cited in support of the observation qua negligence. In Sham Lal v. Ghasita[45] the point did not arise. A previous decree was repudiated on the ground that the minors were not properly represented as their guardian-ad-litem, Mst. Durga Dei, was a married woman. This case has no bearing except in so far that a reference was made to Raghubar Dayal v. Bhikya Lal[46] which was distinguished. I shall deal with the last-mentioned case presently.

In Chander Shekhar Tewari v. Balakdhar Dubey[47] the minor sought to repudiate the decree on the ground that it was vitiated by fraud. No fraud was proved. Banerjee, J. held that a minor who was represented in a suit by a duly-constituted guardian was as much bound by a decree passed in that suit as if he were of full age, when there was nothing on the record to show that there was any fraud on the part of the guardian. The decree was not attacked on the ground of negligence on the part of the guardian. The learned Judge however made the following observation in the case:

---

[44] A. W. N. 1894, 141

[45] I. L. R. 23 All. 459

[46] I. L. R. 12 Cal. 69

[47] 10 A. L. J. 149

> If the guardian neglected to support the case of the defendant, and there is nothing to show that he did so deliberately, that circumstance alone would not entitle the defendant to avoid the operation of the decree.

It was not considered in the case whether the minor is represented at all where the guardian practically abandons his trust and refuses to fulfil his duties to the minor. The observation quoted above suggests that if the guardian's neglect was deliberate, matters might wear a different complexion.

In Beni Prasad v. Lajja Ram[48] Richard, C. J. took the same view as Banerjee, J. and ruled that the decree obtained against a minor except upon proof of fraud or collusion on the part of the guardian was not liable to avoidance. The dictum of Field, J. in Raghubar Dayal v. Bikhya Lal has been relied upon in support of this view. But in an earlier part of the judgment, the learned Judge observes:

> No doubt it is possible for a minor where the guardian has conducted his case with gross negligence to come to the court and seek relief by way of review of judgment.

If a review of judgment is open to the minor why is not a suit permissible? How does an application for a review lie on the ground of negligence or misfeasance on the part of the guardian? With due respect, it is submitted that the case has not been approached from the proper angle. In Raghubar Dayal v. Bikhya Lal[49] the learned Judges delivered separate judgments. Field, J. ruled that where a decree had been passed against an infant duly represented by his guardian and the infant, on attaining majority, sought to avoid the decree by a separate suit, he could succeed only on proof of fraud or collusion on the part of the guardian. The decree impugned in the case was an ex parte decree. The learned Judge observes:

> If an infant desires to have a decree set aside on the ground that his next friend had neglected his interest and had not put forward on his behalf good grounds of defence, which were available, the proper mode would be to apply for a review.

The provisions of Section 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 (the corresponding provisions in the present Code of Civil Procedure is Order 47, Rule 1) allows a review upon the grounds of error apparent on the face of the record, the discovery of new evidence which was not available notwithstanding due diligence or for any other sufficient cause. In Chajju Ram v. Neki[50] their Lordships of the Judicial Committee laid down that "any other sufficient cause" meant a reason sufficient on grounds at least analogous to those specified immediately previously. A review on ground of negligence cannot be said to be ejusdem generis with discovery of new evidence or error apparent on the face of the record. Negligence on the part of the guardian therefore can be no ground for review under the Code of Civil Procedure.

En passent, it may be observed that the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code are not applicable to partition suits in a court of revenue except within the limits defined in Section 112 of the Land Revenue Act. Moreover, there is no provision for review of judgment of an inferior court of revenue. The only review permitted is, under Section 220, and its application is restricted to judgments of the Board of Revenue. It is manifestly clear that the plaintiffs could claim no remedy by way of review of judgment.

---

[48] I. L. R. 38 All. 452 [49] I. L. R. 12 Cal. 69 [50] 49 I. A. 144

The ruling in 12 Calcutta 69 has been dissented from the Madras High Court in I. L. R. 45 Madras 425 and 51 M. L. J. 369. I am in full accord with the view of the learned Judges of that Court and endorse their reasoning.

In Bachan Singh v. Bhikha Singh[51] Iqbal Ahmad, J. followed the decisions in 10 A. L. J. 149 and 38 All. 452. He ruled that where the defendant was represented by a duly constituted guardian in the execution proceedings, the mere failure of the guardian to diligently prosecute the case on behalf of the defendant could not have the effect of vitiating the order of the executing court. No reason for this is to be found in the judgment. It may be that the opposite party may not be under an obligation to see that the duly constituted guardian is alive to his duties for the protection of the minor, but where the guardian is undutiful to his trust in such a degree as would leave the minor without any protection whatsoever in a matter in which protection was most needed, the minor is really unrepresented. In Anjaneyulu v. Chinna Subbiah[52] the question now in issue did not arise. The point considered was whether a given set of circumstances constituted gross negligence on the part of the guardian. The question was decided in the negative. The decision in Nawab Singh v. Gur Bux Singh[53] does not assist the appellant. All that it lays down is that mere failure on the part of the guardian-ad-litem to defend a suit or to appeal from a decree was of itself not gross negligence, since it was possible that there might be a good case against the minor and the guardian-ad-litem might have thought fit not to incur additional expense in defending the suit. I am in agreement with this view. It would be most unwise and imprudent on the part of the guardian to incur expenses on behalf of the minor in defending a suit, where he had no defence. In such a case, a failure or omission on the part of the guardian does not amount to negligence. Indeed it is an act of common prudence.

I would now turn to the reverse side of the shield.

Under the English Law, negligence equally with fraud to be collusion vitiates a decree or order passed against a minor. Simpson on the Law on Infants, (2nd Edition page 512) says:

> A decree may also be impeached, where there has been great negligence by the next friend in the conduct of the infant's case,

The same rule should apply to the case of the guardian-ad-litem.

In Macpherson on Infants (page 386), there occurs the following passage:—

> An infant plaintiff, though thus favoured in the course of the suit is as much bound by a decree and by all the proceedings in a cause as a person of full age, and cannot, nor can his representative, open the proceedings, unless upon new matter, or on the ground of gross laches, or of fraud or collusion, which will annul the proceedings of the courts of justice as much as any other transaction.

---

[51] 106 I. C. 49=[1927] I. L. R. All. 601

[52] 82 I. C. 952=A. I. R. 1924 Mad. 860

[53] 82 I. C. 598=A. I. R. 1925 Lah. 116

In Halsbury's Laws of England (Vol. 17, Paragraph 316, page 138) the law has been summarised and expressed in the following terms:—

> An infant plaintiff is as much bound as an adult by a judgment or order in the cause, even though there may have been irregularities in the conduct of it, unless there has been fraud or gross negligence on the part of his next friend. But in special circumstances, he may be allowed on coming of age to amend his claim or to bring a fresh action.

It is clear that under the English law, a bill for review is not the only remedy.

In re Houghton v. Fiddey[54] Mallins, Vice Chancellor is reported to have said:—

> The question which I have to decide is whether this infant on whose behalf a decree was taken by consent in 1867, is to suffer by any negligence or want of knowledge on the part of her then friend. I am clearly of opinion, she cannot be called upon to endure such inconvenience The proposition that an infant of tender years may have her whole fortune wrecked by the neglect of her friend is so monstrous that I cannot pay attention to it.

The rules of law set out above are not founded upon any peculiarities of English Statutes. They are general principles broad-based upon rules of justice, equity and good conscience and as such form part of universal jurisprudence. It is on this ground that they have been followed in this country in numerous cases.

I do not think it necessary to deal in detail with the cae-law on the other side of the line. These cases are Sheo Charan Lal v. Ram Nandan[55] and Ram Swarup Lal v. Shah Latafat Hussain[56]. In this case, the former next friend of the minor, though guilty of no fraudulent misconduct, was grossly negligent of the minor's interest in withdrawing from the suit. Review of judgment was applied for on this ground and granted. The judgment of Lord Hardwick in Gregory v. Molesworth was followed, in which it had been laid down that the infant had such a remedy, when either gross laches or fraud or collusion appeared in the next friend. Parmeshwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Sheo Dut Rai[57]. This is an illuminating judgment of Mukerjee, J. in which many of the leading cases on the subject have been referred to. Bipin Chandra Das v. Mena Jaddi[58]. This case mainly turned upon the question whether the minor was properly represented by a duly constituted guardian and as to whether there was no proper representative, the appointment of the guardian having been obtained by contrivance. In Karsan Das Natha v. Dadkavabai[59], Farpan, J. ruled that it was open to the infant to impeach a decree by a suit, in cases where his guardian had been guilty of fraud or negligence, in allowing the decree to be passed against him. In Hanmantapa v. Jivibai[60], Parsons and Ranade, JJ. decided that where fraud or negligence was established against the guardian of a minor in the conduct of a previous suit, the minor or his administrator had the right to bring a suit to set aside the previous decision. In Gotepati Subbal v. Gotepati Narasamma[61], Sankaran Nair and Spencer, JJ. held that a minor was not bound by a decree passed against him, where

---

[54] L. R. 18 Equity 573 at 576

[55] I. L. R. 22 All. 8 at 12 and 13

[56] I. L. R. 29 Cal. 735

[57] 6 C. L. J. 448

[58] 46 C. L. J. 287

[59] I. L. R. 19 Bom. 571

[60] I. L. R. 24 Bom. 547 at 552

[61] 27 M. L. J. 486

CIVIL

1932

SIRAJ FATIMA v. MAHMOOD ALI

SEN, J.

it was established that his guardian was guilty of gross negligence. It was further held in this case that where the guardian had neglected to put forward the rights of the minor under a will of which he was aware, a decree obtained against the minor under such circumstances did not operate as res judicata against him. In Dada Saheb v. Gajraj Singh[62] Devadass, J. held that where the guardian-ad-litem absented himself at the hearing and the vakil was not able to explain why witnesses summoned were not present in court and consequently a decree was passed against the minor, the application for adjournment being refused, there was gross negligence on the part of the guardian and that the decree must be set aside. Subbiahpandaram v. Arunachala Pandaram[63] is not a case in point. All that was held in this case was that a bona fide suit instituted by a guardian without considering the legal aspect of the case did not amount to gross negligence. In Vadapilli Gajrao v. Kala Venkamma[64] Devadass, J. held that failure to set up proper defences to a suit against the minor is gross negligence and that the minor can, on that ground sue for the avoidance of the decree. I fully agree with this view. I would submit with respect that it would be going too far to say that the fact that the defences might have been very successfully met by the plaintiff in that suit did not make the guardian not negligent, would be going too far. The duties of the guardian in such a case have been discussed by their Lordships of the Privy Council in 14 Moore's Indian Appeals 393 at 399. The law on the subject of the minor's right to institute a suit for the avoidance of the decree passed against the minor on account of the negligence of the guardian has been discussed at great length by Wazir Hasan and Neave, A. I. Cs. in re Rameshwar Bux Singh v. Mst. Ridh Kunwar[65]. It has been held that a minor is as much bound by a judgment in his own action as if of full age, unless gross laches or fraud or collusion is established on the part of the guardian. I agree with the reasoning upon which the judgment proceeds. The case of Jammu v. Mahadeo Prasad[66] was not a case of a minor instituting a suit for the avoidance of a decree on the ground of his guardian's negligence. While holding that the revenue court had exclusive jurisdiction in matters relating to tenancy, it was held that where fraud intervened in the creation of the tenancy, the proper forum for the declaration of the title of the person who had been defrauded was the civil court.

The most exhaustive decision on the question in issue is that of Lindsay and Kanhaiya Lal, JJ. in Brijraj v. Ram Swarup[67]. Principles have been examined and important decisions on the question have been fully dealt with. I am entirely in agreement with the view of the learned Judges.

It would appear from the above that the balance of authorities is distinctly in favour of the view that a minor is entitled to bring a fresh suit to repudiate a decree passed against him on account of gross laches on the part of the guardian. I have not a particular liking of the adjective gross.

My conclusions may be briefly summarised:—

(1) Where a minor had a substantial claim or defence, but the decree was passed against him during his minority by reason of wanton, wilful

---

[62] A. I. R. 1925, Mad. 204

[63] A. I. R 1925, Mad. 379

[64] A. I. R. 1927, Mad. 497

[65] A. I. R. 1925, Oudh 633

[66] A. I. R. 1922, All. 294

[67] I. L. R. 48 All. 44

or inexcusable neglect on the part of his next friend or guardian-ad-litem in not duly prosecuting or defending the suit, the minor on attaining majority was competent to sue for the setting aside of the decree.

(2) The guardian is under no legal obligation to prosecute or defend every suit or proceeding in disregard of its merits. The prime factor in each case is the consideration of the fact as to how far it is in the interest of the minor to prosecute or defend.

(3) Whether or not the guardian is guilty of negligence in the prosecution or defence of a suit or proceeding is in each case a question of fact and does not admit of an inflexible answer but has to be determined with reference to time, place or other circumstances relating to each case.

(4) The standard of conduct which is required from the guardian is one which might be reasonably expected in view of all the circumstances of the case from a person in a fiduciary position who is required to protect the interest of persons committed to his care. He is to act like a reasonably prudent man.

(5) Where the guardian is required either to initiate or continue any proceedings in a court of law, which are necessary for protecting the interest of the minor, the failure of the guardian to act is undoubtedly negligence.

(6) The remedy of the minor may be against his guardian but that is not his exclusive remedy. He can institute a suit in the civil court for the avoidance of the decree or order which has been passed against him by reason of the laches or negligence on the part of the guardian. The minor may repudiate the decree on the ground of negligence quite as much as he can do so where the decree is vitiated by fraud or collusion.

(7) The order of the revenue court in the circumstances proved in this case cannot operate as a bar under Section 233 (k) of the Land Revenue Act or Section 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The granting of the reliefs claimed in the suit does not affect the integrity of the mahals. The order moreover of the revenue court cannot raise the bar of res judicata, as the minors must be taken not to have been duly represented by the guardian on the crucial occasions when they should have been represented.

In view of the findings arrived at by the lower appellate court, the decree passed in favour of the plaintiff-respondents is the right decree. I would therefore dismiss the appeal.

BY THE COURT—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 12

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

BRIJ GOPAL (Plaintiff)
versus
SURAJ KARAN (minor) THROUGH DHAPI KUNWAR AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Court Fees Act, Sch. II, Art. 17(iii) and Sec. 7(iv)(c)—Suit for declaration—'Family property belonged equally to plaintiff and defendant and certain documents did not affect jointness of family'—Court-fee payable—Actual relief asked for should be looked into.

For the purpose of determination of the court-fee the actual relief asked for should be looked into and it is entirely beside the consideration of the court whether the suit is likely or not to fail, because the plaint did not ask for a consequential relief. Radha Krishna v. Ram Narain, 1931 A. L. J. R. 235 followed. Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangasamy Pillai, I. L. R. 38 Mad. 922 referred to.

In his suit for a declaration that the entire family property in the hands of the plaintiff, as the head of a joint family, belonged equally to the plaintiff and the male defendant, and that certain documents executed by certain deceased members of the family did not affect the jointness of the family, plaintiff paid a court-fee of Rs.10 only. Held, that the plaint was sufficiently stamped.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU CHARU DEB BANERJI, Subordinate Judge of Azamgarh.

U. S. Bajpai, S. B. Johari, G. S. Pathak and Swarup Chandra for the appellant.

K. N. Katju, Shiva Prasad Sinha, Hazari Lal Kapoor and Govind Das for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is the plaintiff's appeal and is directed against an order rejecting his plaint.

The suit out of which this appeal has arisen, was instituted to obtain a declaration that the entire family property in the hands of the plaintiff, as the head of a joint family, belonged equally to the plaintiff and the male defendant, the defendant No. 1, and that certain documents executed by certain deceased members of the family did not affect the jointness of the family.

When the suit was filed, the Munsarim reported that the relief called for payment of an additional court-fee of Rs.10, as, in the opinion of the Munsarim, there were two declarations involved in the relief. Thereupon, the plaintiff got the relief amended*, and the court decided that the court-fee paid, namely, Rs.10, was sufficient.

The defendant No. 1 in his written statement, filed on July 17, 1928, took the plea that the court-fee paid was insufficient. He did not ask that the question of court-fee should be tried as a preliminary issue. Before any issues could be framed in the case, the Munsarim made a second report on September 4, 1929 and stated that in view of a decision contained in

---

*The amended relief did not materially differ from the original relief.

*F. A. 31 of 1930

Arunachalam Chetty v. Rangaswamy Pillai[1] he was of opinion that the plaintiff ought to pay an additional court-fee of Rs.1,415 being the ad valorem court-fee payable on the value of the suit fixed for the purposes of jurisdiction.

The plaintiff contended before the court below that the court-fee was sufficient, but this contention was rejected, and time was given to the plaintiff to make good the deficiency. As the plaintiff failed to make good the deficiency, the plaint was rejected, as already stated by us.

The learned counsel for the appellant argued that he never asked for any consequential relief either openly or impliedly, and that the Madras case quoted by the Munsarim was not applicable. He also relied on a decision of this Court, namely, Radha Krishna v. Ram Narain[2], where it was held that for the purpose of determination of the court-fee the actual relief asked for should be looked into, and it was entirely beside the consideration of the court whether the suit was likely or not to fail, because the plaint did not ask for a consequential relief.

We are entirely agreed with the decision of our Court, and we are further of opinion that the Madras decision has no application to the facts of this case. In that case an injunction had been asked for and that was certainly in the nature of a consequential relief.

Mr. S. P. Sinha, learned counsel appearing for the respondent No. 1, did not resist the appeal and said that the responsibility for the costs of the appeal should not be laid on his client. He further stated that the plea that there was a deficiency of court-fee had been taken only as a matter of form, but it was never pressed in the court below. In this, he seems to be right, but the pliantiff's costs cannot be entirely thrown away, and we think he ought to get them in case of his success in the suit, although not as a result of his success in this appeal.

Holding as we do that the plaint was sufficiently stamped, we set aside the order of the court below and send back the case to it for trial on the merits. Costs here and hitherto will abide the result.

[ED., A. L. J.—The amended relief ran as follows:—It may be declared that the document, known as agreement dated May 9, 1913, and the document known as will, dated November 7, 1925, are null and void and are not binding upon the plaintiff, and that zamindari property and houses, specified below, and the banking business carried on and the funds deposited in the firm styled Radha Krishn Gopi Krishn, and the outstanding debts have been jointly acquired and possessed by the parties and the plaintiff has a moiety share in them.]

Order set aside

[1] I. L. R. 38 Mad. 922

[2] 1931 A. L. J. R. 235

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 10

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

JATHALI BHUL (Plaintiff)
versus
NADIA (Defendant)*

Landlord and tenant—Occupancy holding—House built with zemindar's permission—Site not a holding within meaning of Kumaun Rules—Suit for possession of the house—Cognizable by civil court—Kumaun Tenancy Rules of 1918—Rules 3 and 9, read with Schedule (1) Serial No. 15.

Where plaintiff sued for possession of a house and a court-yard attached thereto standing on a plot of land alleged to be plaintiff's holding, and under the Kumaun Tenancy Rules of 1928 suits in respect of any matter relating to a holding were cognizable by a revenue court only; held, that the land-holder having allowed a building to be put upon the land, the nature and character of the holding was changed and it ceased to be land used or held for agricultural purposes; and in these circumstances the site was not a holding within the meaning of the Kumaun Rules, and the suit was cognizable by the civil court.

Jalesar Sahu v. Raj Mangal, I. L. R. 43 All. 607 applied.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of S. N. DUBE ESQ., District Judge of Kumaun.

B. L. Dave for the applicant.

L. M. Roy for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a plaintiff's application in revision from an order of the District Judge of Kumaun. A suit was filed by the plaintiff in the court of the Small Cause Court Judge, who had the jurisdiction of an additional Assistant Collector in revenue cases also. The suit was for possession of a house and a court-yard attached thereto standing on a plot of land which was alleged to be the plaintiff's holding. The plaintiff suggested that five years before the suit he was in joint possession with the defendant, but when a separation took place the defendant did not give him possession of the same. The defendant's case was that the house had been built by his ancestors and had been in the possession of his family for generations.

On the pleadings the first court framed an issue whether the suit was cognizable by the civil court or not. It came to the conclusion that it was cognisable by the civil court, and recorded a finding to that effect. The court imagined that the finding would be appealable, and accordingly stayed proceedings pending the filing of the appeal. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who entertained the appeal and came to the conclusion that the suit was not triable by the civil court, and sent the record back to the first court with directions to proceed according to law, which implied that the plaint should be returned for presentation to the proper court.

There is no doubt that the first court treated the suit as having been filed on the civil side, and the District Judge treated the appeal before him as an appeal from an order recording a finding on the question of jurisdiction.

---

*Civ. Rev. 189 of 1931

It cannot be doubted that in an ordinary civil suit no appeal, not even a revision, lies from a mere finding on the question of jurisdiction. The special rules and orders made by Government which relate to the Kumaun Division, however, provide an appeal from a finding on the question or issue to the effect whether the case is cognisable by a civil or by a revenue court. (Rule No. 4(a) under the Tenancy Rules of 1918). But the provisions in Rule 4(b) make it clear that the rule applies to revenue courts, and not to civil courts.

Under Rules 3 and 9, read with Schedule (1), Serial No. 15, suits in respect of any matter relating to a holding are cognisable by a revenue court only. It is, therefore, quite clear that unless the present claim can be regarded as one in respect of any matter relating to a holding, it would not be cognisable by the revenue court.

Admittedly the house in question, along with its court-yard, was more than five years old and appears to have been built long ago. The suit was confined to the house and the court-yard attached to it, and not to any other part of the plot used for agricultural purposes. The plaint does not suggest that the property claimed is being used for any such agricultural purposes. No doubt the plaintiff's allegation was that this was a part of his khaikari, that is, occupancy holding. But when the land-holder allowed a building to be put upon the land, the nature and character of the holding was changed and it ceased to be land used or held for agricultural purposes. In these circumstances, it is very difficult to hold that the site is still a holding within the meaning of the Kumaun Rules.

We may in this connection point out that in Jalesar Sahu v. Raj Mangal[1] it was laid down with regard to a grove which had been planted over an occupancy holding that the character of the land was changed and the site ceased to be a holding after the grove had come into existence. We think that the analogy of that case applies. It is now impossible to regard the site as a holding. The suit for possession of the house and the court-yard appertaining to it is, therefore, not in respect of any matter relating to a holding, but is a suit of a civil nature. We may also point out that a contrary interpretation put on the rule would compel a tenant who has been in occupation of a house for generation to sue within six months of his losing possession, whereas if the site has ceased to be a holding, he can sue the trespasser within 12 years in the civil court.

In our opinion, the view taken by the trial court was correct and the suit was cognisable by the civil court. The District Judge has erred in holding that this suit was not cognisable by the civil court. We accordingly allow this revision and set aside the order passed in appeal. The finding of the trial court is in reality, not an appealable order at all, but an expression of opinion on an issue in the case. Costs of this revision will abide the result.

Application allowed

---

[1] I. L. R. 43 All. 607

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 16

MUKERJI, J

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

SHEIKH MOHAMMAD (Applicant)
versus
SAGAR MAL (Opposite party)*

Municipalities Act (II of 1916), Sec. 319—Reference by District Magistrate—High Court's duty—Merely to express opinion on a point of law formulated by the District Magistrate and not to investigate facts.

Under Sec. 319 of the Municipalities Act (II of 1916) all that the High Court is required to do is to see a statement of facts made by the District Magistrate himself and to express its opinion on a point of law arising out of the statement. This point of law should also be formulated by the District Magistrate. It is no part of the duty of the High Court to investigate the facts.

ORDER on reference submitted by the District Officer, Azamgarh.

M. Waliullah for the applicant.

P. L. Banerji and Krishna Murari Lal for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is a reference under Section 319 of the Municipalities Act, 1916.

It appears that at Mau in the district of Azamgarh there is a Notified Area constituted under the last Chapter of the Municipalities Act. A certain gentleman, who was a member of the Notified Area, applied for permission to build on a certain land, and he got that permission in a certain way. The appellant before the District Magistrate took exception to the method in which the sanction had been obtained by the applicant, and he filed an appeal to the District Magistrate. This reference has arisen out of the said appeal.

As we read Section 319 of the Municipalities Act, the High Court is to express an opinion on a point of law on a set of facts to be stated by the District Magistrate, in the reference. It is no part of the duty of the High Court to investigate the facts. The District Magistrate is the appellate authority, and the High Court may be required to state its opinion on a point of law, for his benefit.

The learned Magistrate has stated some of the facts, but he has also referred us to the record and also has drawn our attention to a certain note, dated November 19, 1931, prepared by the President of the Mau Notified Area.

We are of opinion that we should not have been asked to look into the record or into the note of the President of the Notified Area. All we are required to do is to see a statement of facts made by the District Magistrate himself and to express our opinion on a point of law arising out of the statement. The point of law should also be formulated by the District Magistrate.

We find that the reference is defective, inasmuch as for facts we have been asked not to confine ourselves to the reference made by the District Magistrate but to certain other extraneous documents. Further, we find that the exact point of law, which in the opinion of the District Magistrate

---

*Mis. Case 841 of 1931

Civil
1932
Sheikh Mohammad v. Sagar Mal
Mukerji, J.

arises, has not been formulated in terms, though it is possible for us to guess what was passing in the mind of the learned District Magistrate.

In the circumstances, we direct that the file be returned to the District Magistrate. If he still feels it necessary to make a reference, he should comply with the instructions contained in this judgment and prepare a statement of facts which should be clear and precise as findings of fact, and he should also formulate the question of law on which he wants our opinion. We make no order as to costs.

We were told on behalf of the respondent in this reference to inform the District Magistrate, that before he submits a reference and a statement of facts, he should hear the parties. As to this, we have no doubt that the statement of facts will be drawn up after hearing the parties. We note that under Section 318, Sub-section (3) the Magistrate is not to pass any orders without hearing the parties. We also note that Mr. Banerji for the respondent wants to question the validity of reference and that we have not heard him on this point and we have not expressed any opinion as to his competency to question the reference.

FAQIR CHAND AND ANOTHER (Decree-holders)
versus
KUNDAN SINGH AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors)*

Civil
1932
Feb. 27
Mukerji, J.
Bennet, J.

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 48 and Limitation Act, Art. 182—Final decree—Amendment of—Application for execution of amended decree—Made more than 12 years after the date of final decree—Whether time-barred.

An application for execution of an amended decree made more than 12 years after the date of the final decree is barred by limitation under Sec. 48 C. P. C.

Narsingrao Konher Inamdar v. Bondo Krishna, I. L. R. 42 Bom. 309 relied on. Baldeo Shukul v. Syed Yusuf, 60 I. C. 318 dissented from.

On a correct reading of Art. 182 of the Limitation Act, it is obvious that where execution is barred by Sec. 48 of C. P. C., execution cannot be allowed under Art. 182 of the Limitation Act. In other words, Art. 182 is subject to the provisions of Sec. 48. An amendment of a decree therefore does not give a new date for starting a period of limitation, if the application for execution is beyond the period of 12 years allowed by Sec. 48, that is, that the period of 12 years under Sec. 48 is final and cannot be extended by any amendment of the decree whether that amendment is made before the expiry of the period of 12 years or after the expiry of 12 years.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL from the decision of BABU MAKHAN LAL, Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

G. S. Pathak for the appellants.

A. Sanyal for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is an appeal from an order in execution dismissing an application of the decree-holder for execution. The application has been dismissed by the lower court on two grounds, firstly that the execution was barred by time, being more than 12 years from the date of the decree, and secondly that the decree-holder was not entitled to execution against the property which is in the present application for execution. As regards the second point the facts are as follows:—Mauza Sua-wala was divided at some period not stated into four mahals of 5 biswas each. One of these mahals was called mahal Jahan Singh otherwise Mahal Safed. A person called Jahan Singh owned half that mahal, that is 10 biswas out of 20 biswas of that mahal, and as the mahal comprised 5 biswas of the village, Jahan Singh owned 2½ biswas of the entire Mauza Sua-wala. A mortgage was made by Rupchand, the son of Jahan Singh, on October 25, 1899 in favour of the predecessor of the decree-holder, the property mortgaged being expressed as 2½ biswas out of 20 biswas of Mauza Sua-wala. On March 15, 1913 a suit was brought on this mortgage, the plaint naming the property mortgaged as "2½ biswas of Sua-wala which has become 10 biswas." In August 1913 a preliminary decree was passed on a compromise granting instalments, the property being expressed as "Mahal Safed 2½ biswas which has become 10 biswas". There was a default in payment of instalments and a final decree was prepared on August 18, 1916. In the final decree there was an error, as it stated that the property was Sua-wala "2½ biswas jiske" tin "biswa ho gaya hain". The error was that instead of the word "(دس)" the " د " was omitted and only the letter " س" remained. The decree, therefore, was read with a single letter as if it was " س" that is three biswas. Now it was the duty of the decree-holder to see that his decree was in accordance with the judgment and negligence on the part of the decree-holder led to this error appearing in the final decree. It has not been shown to us that there was any negligence whatever on the part of the judgment-debtor which contributed to the error in the decree. This error was perpetuated in a sale certificate of October 20, 1924 by which the decree-holder bought the property at an auction-sale on this decree, and the error was further extended by expressing the property "2½ biswas minjumla 10 biswas khata khewat No. 1 mauza Sua-wala mahal Safed", that is 2½ biswas out of 10 biswas in khata khewat No. 1 Mauza Sua-wala mahal Safed. The decree-holder finding the error in the sale certificate made a further application for execution of sale of 7½ biswas out of 10 biswas in khata khewat No. 1 mahal Safed. The judgment-debtor made an objection that he was not entitled to do so by the terms of the final decree, and that objection was allowed on November 30, 1926. The decree-holder brought an appeal, and the High Court held on May 4, 1928 that the execution must take place in accordance with the final decree, that is, that the final decree was for 3 biswas and a further half biswa could be brought to execution sale. It is claimed by the memorandum of the present appeal that there was fraud on behalf of the judgment-debtor, and learned counsel stated that the fraud consisted in this objection, but we do not consider that the objection was fraudulent or frivolous, because it was upheld by this Court in appeal in regard to 7 biswas out of 7½ biswas. No other fraud was alleged to have been perpetrated by the judgment-debtor.

---

E. F. A. 517 of 1930

On July 31, 1928 the decree-holder applied for amendment of the final decree of August 18, 1916, that is, the application was made 18 days before the period of 12 years allowed by Sec. 48 C. P. C. expired. Notice was issued, and on September 15, 1928 after the period of 12 years had expired, the court ordered amendment of the final decree by the introduction of the letter " د " before the letter "س", that is, that the final decree read 10 biswas instead of 3 biswas. On April 8, 1929 the decree-holder applied for execution in accordance with the amended decree, and this is the present application. The lower court has made a series of errors in confusing the Mauza with the mahal, and the lower court is not correct in holding that the final decree does not entitle a decree-holder to proceed against the remaining 7½ biswas, mahal Safed, so far as the area goes. We now proceed to consider the merits of the question of limitation. There are two provisions of law dealing with limitation for applications for execution. One of these is contained in Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the other is contained in Article 182, First Schedule of the Limitation Act. Article 182 states that a period of three years is allowed, time beginning to run from the date of amendment of a decree where the decree has been amended. Learned counsel contends that his client should receive the benefit of this provision, but Article 182 states in the first column as follows, "For the execution of a decree or order of any civil court not provided for by Article 183 or by Sec. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure." Now the language used is somewhat peculiar, as it states "not provided for", an expression which applies very well to Article 183 which deals with decrees of High Courts or orders of His Majesty in Council. The words "provided for" do not apply so clearly to Section 48, as Section 48 does not deal with decrees of courts to which Art. 182 does not apply. But the meaning of the words "provided for", in our opinion, is that where execution is barred by Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, execution cannot be allowed under Art. 182 of the First Schedule of the Limitation Act. In other words Art. 182 is subject to the provisions of Sec. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The present Limitation Act is Act IX of 1908, and by that Act the provisions in question in regard to amendment of decree was introduced, and it did not exist in the previous Limitation Act of 1877. In the same year of 1908 the Code of Civil Procedure at present in force was enacted. Now no change was made in Sec. 48 C. P. C. providing for the extension of the period of 12 years in that Section from the date of the amendment of a decree. We consider that the legislature advisedly omitted that provision from Sec. 48, and that the omission was not accidental. In our opinion the effect of the omission is that an amendment of a decree does not give a new date for starting a period of limitation, if the application for execution is beyond the period of 12 years allowed by Sec. 48, that is, that the period of 12 years under Sec. 48 is final and cannot be extended by any amendment of the decree, whether that amendment is made before the expiry of the period of 12 years, or whether that amendment is made after the expiry of the period of 12 years. The reason why no amendment was made in Sec. 48 is that probably the greater period of 12 years is allowed by that Section, and it is probably the intention of the legislature that that period of 12 years should be final, and that within that period a decree-holder should amend his decree, and obtain all consequent remedies. If a decree-holder neglects to

Civil

1932

Faqir Chand v. Kundan Singh

Bennet, J

amend his decree within a sufficient period before the expiry of 12 years to allow him to obtain his remedy by execution, then he has only himself to blame. In Narsingrao Konher Inamdar v. Bondo Krishna[1] it has been laid down on page 323 as follows:—

> It is the duty of a successful plaintiff to see that the decree is drawn up correctly against the defendants. I fail to see how the defendants should be held to blame if the decree does not correctly represent the judgment unless he has been a party to inducing the error in the decree. The Subordinate Judge cannot repeat his judgment so as to give a fresh starting point for limitation. I therefore think that November 17, 1897 (the date of the unamended decree) must be taken as the date of the decree sought to be executed.

We also note that a decree bears the date of the original judgment, and an amendment does alter the date of the decree.

Learned counsel refers to a ruling of a single Judge of the Patna High Court in 1921, Baldeo Shukul v. Syed Yusuf[2]. In that ruling it was laid down that where a decree was amended, the date of amendment is the date of the decree within the meaning of Section 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. An application for execution in that case was made more than 12 years after the date of the original decree, but within 12 years of the date of an amended decree. The court held as follows:—

> But it has been argued before me that, in so far as Sec. 48 does not embody the provisions of Art. 182, time must begin to run from the date of the decree. I am unable to agree with this contention.

The learned Judge did not refer in his judgment to the fact that Art. 182 specially excludes cases provided for by Sec. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and apparently this fact was not brought to his notice. We therefore consider that the ruling in question is no authority for the issue in this case, because the ruling does not deal with the point which we consider is vital to the question.

Accordingly we hold that the present application in execution having been made more than 12 years after the date of the final decree is barred by limitation under Sec. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. We therefore dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] I. L. R. 42 Bom. 309

[2] 60 I. C. 318

Civil

1932

March 4

Mukerji, J.
Bennet, J.

ARJUN SINGH (Plaintiff)

versus

MAHESHA NAND AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), Sec. 91—Mortgage by sub-tenant—Death of tenant heirless—Right of tenant-in-chief to redeem—N. W. Tenancy Act (XII of 1881), Sec. 9—Grove land—Mortgage by sub-tenant—Not illegal.

The plaintiff's grandfather was sir-owner and zamindar of a portion of a plot and occupancy tenant of the remaining portion. He got a guava grove planted on the plot by his sub-tenant. In 1885 the sub-tenant (and his wife) executed a usufructuary mortgage of the said plot in favour of

*S. A. 1214 of 1930

Civil

1932

Arjun Singh v. Mahesha Nand

the father of defendants. The mortgagors died about 1903. In 1928 the plaintiff brought a suit for redemption of the usufructuary mortgage; held, (1) that on the extinction of the rights of the mortgagors as sub-tenants their rights reverted to the plaintiff in his capacity of sir-owner and zamindar in one part of the plot and in his capacity of tenant-in-chief in the other part of the plot, and he had an interest in the property in question and was therefore entitled to redeem. Tulsi Ram Sahu v. Gur Dayal, I. L. R. 33 All. 111 (F.B.) relied on; (2) that there is nothing in Act XII of 1881 which makes a mortgage of a grove by a tenant illegal, as the prohibitions refer to tenants of agricultural land.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU KRISHNA DAS, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, reversing a decree of BABU KANHAIYA LAL SRIVASTAVA, Munsif of Saidpur.

N. A. U. Siddiqi for the appellant.

Ram Nama Prasad and Kanhaiya Lal for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a second appeal by a plaintiff whose suit for possession of a certain plot has been dismissed by both the lower courts. As the second appeal raised some difficult questions of law it has been referred by a learned single Judge of this Court to a bench of two Judges. The facts which were set forth in the plaint were as follows. A portion of plot No. 561 was sir land of which the plaintiff himself is the owner and zamindar and the remaining portion of the said plot was in the zamindari of other persons and was held by the plaintiff as tenant. Entries to this effect were made in the settlement of 1883 for Chamru Singh, the grandfather of the plaintiff. Between the years 1883 and 1885 Chamru Singh, grandfather of the plaintiff, got a guava grove planted on the said plot by Ramsaran Khatik, his sub-tenant, with his consent and permission. Ram Saran and his wife Mst. Sochani made a usufructuary mortgage by a deed of March 7, 1885 for the sum of Rs.55 to Sheo Ram Lal, father of defendants. The written statement admitted that formerly guava trees stood on the land in question and that the mortgage deed in question had been executed as alleged. It has been proved that the plaintiff's grandfather was a zamindar. The mortgagors died about 25 years before the suit, and as the suit was brought in 1928 this would make the year of their death about 1903. In 1906 the mother of the present plaintiff mortgaged this and other plots to Sheo Ram Lal by a mortgage deed, and that deed recited the previous mortgage of 1885 and provided that the mortgagee would retain possession of plot No. 561 until the plaintiff should redeem the mortgage of 1885. The mortgage of 1906 was redeemed on June 26, 1922, and the endorsement on the mortgage deed of redemption stated that plot No. 561 was to remain in the possession of the mortgagee until redemption of the mortgage of 1885. The lower appellate court has dismissed the suit of plaintiff on the ground that the plaintiff is not entitled to redeem the mortgage of 1885, and that that mortgage came to an end with the death of the mortgagors about 1903. Before us learned counsel for the respondent has upheld the decision on three grounds, firstly that the mortgage of 1885 was illegal, as a transfer by a sub-tenant was not permitted by Sec. 9 of Act XII of 1881 (N. W. Tenancy Act); secondly that the defendant had adverse possession from 1903, if not from 1885; thirdly, that the plaintiff is not a person entitled to redemption as his grandfather was not a party to the mortgage deed, having merely attested it as a witness.

In regard to the alleged illegality of the mortgage of 1885 we note that paragraph 2 of the plaint sets forth that the land was planted with a guava grove between the years 1883 and 1885, and that the mortgage was made on March 7, 1885. This is a clear allegation that at the time of the mortgage in suit land was a guava grove. There was no specific denial of this allegation in the written statement, and on the contrary paragraph 2 of the written statement admitted that formerly guava trees stood on the land in question. There is nothing in Act XII of 1881 which makes a mortgage of a grove by a tenant illegal, as the prohibitions refer to tenants of agricultural land. Accordingly we consider that the mortgage of 1885 was a legal mortgage.

In regard to the argument that the defendants had adverse possession, we consider that it is not shown that the possession of the defendants became in any way adverse with the death of the mortgagors in 1903. In any case the defendants by accepting the mortgage of 1906 agreed to hold the land as mortgagees of the plaintiff both under that mortgage and under the mortgage of 1885, and again at redemption of the mortgage of 1906 in 1922 the defendants reiterated their position as mortgagees under the mortgage of 1885. Under the circumstances the defendants cannot succeed in any claim for title by adverse possession.

We now come to the question of the right of the plaintiff to redeem. We consider that this should be dealt with in two aspects. First of all we will deal with the case in the general aspect and the rights of the plaintiff as a zamindar and sir-owner of a portion of this plot and as tenant-in-chief of the remaining portion. It has been laid down in Tulshi Ram Sahu v. Gur Dayal[1], that where there was a usufructuary mortgage of 1870 executed by a fixed-rate tenant, who then disappeared and whose death was presumed, a suit for redemption after 1901 could be brought by the zamindar for the redemption of that usufructuary mortgage. The principle underlying this ruling was that on the extinction of the fixed-rate tenancy the land reverted to the zamindar and did not escheat to the Crown. This is the general feudal principle of English Law which records the rights of a succession of overlords in real property, and on the extinction of the rights of an owner the rights revert to his overlord. In the present case therefore on the extinction of the rights of the mortgagors as subtenants their rights reverted to the plaintiff in his capacity of sir-owner and zamindar in one part of the plot and in his capacity of occupancy tenant in the other part of the plot. We might refer to Sec. 91 of the Transfer of Property Act, which lays down that besides the mortgagor any person who has any interest in the property mortgaged may redeem. Now the plaintiff in the capacities mentioned has an interest in the property in question. Accordingly we consider that the plaintiff is entitled to redeem.

We also consider that it is not open to the defendants to contest the right of the plaintiff to redeem, because in 1906 and 1922 the defendants admitted in the documents in question the right of the plaintiff to redemption, and the defendants agreed to continue as the mortgagees of the plaintiff. It is not open therefore to the defendants having accepted the position of mortgagees of the plaintiff to set up a defence that the plaintiff is not entitled to redeem the mortgage in question. We allow this appeal with costs throughout and we grant the plaintiff a decree for redemption of the usufructuary mortgage on payment of the mortgage money Rs.94-9-8 within a period of six months from the date of this decree. A decree for redemption under Order 34, Rule 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure will be framed. Appeal allowed

---

[1] I. L. R. 33 All. 111 (F.B.)

PANCHANAN BANERJI AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)
versus
ANANT PRASAD PANDEY AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

CIVIL 1932
March 4
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926), Sec. 266(1)—Several co-sharers—Tenant let into possession by one co-sharer without consent of others—Co-sharers entitled to treat lease as nullity and to eject the tenant.

Where land belonging to three co-sharers was let to the defendant by the agent of only one of them without the consent of the other two co-sharers, held, (1) that Sec. 266(1) of the Tenancy Act of 1926 applied and the defendant, not having been admitted to tenancy by all the three co-sharers, did not acquire the rights of a statutory tenant and was not entitled to retain possession as such; (2) that there was nothing to prevent the co-sharer who had granted the lease to the defendant from joining the other co-sharers to eject him. Kunwar Singh v. Abdul Ali Khan, [1928] A. I. R. All. 525 followed. Bhola Nath v. Baskin, 1894 A. W. N. 127 and Amin Ullah v. Hajirah, 3 A. L. J. 767 distinguished.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU KRISHNA DAS, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, modifying a decree of MAULVI ZAMIRUDDIN, Munsif.

S. N. Gupta for the appellants.

A. P. Pandey for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an appeal by plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and arises out of a suit for recovery of possession of a number of plots specified in lists A and B annexed to the plaint and for damages, on the allegation that the principal defendant Anant Prasad has no right to them and that he entered into possession without any lawful title. It is common ground that the land in dispute is part of the zemindari of the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and Ishwar Dayal and formed the occupancy holding of one Ram Kishun, who died 3 years before the institution of the suit. Ishwar Dayal was originally impleaded as defendant 2nd party but subsequently transposed to the array of plaintiffs as plaintiff No. 3. It was alleged by the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 3 that Ram Kishun left no heirs and that in consequence his occupancy rights lapsed. They instituted a suit for ejectment of the sub-tenants Baldeo and Bholet Bhar. Anant Prasad, the present contesting defendant, intervened, claiming to be the lawful heir of Ram Kishun. The plaintiffs' suit was decreed on the finding that Ram Kishun left no heir entitled to succeed to his occupancy tenure. Delivery of possession was taken by the plaintiffs. Inspite of delivery of possession by the court, which passed the decree in the suit already referred to, they failed to obtain actual possession which remained with Anant Prasad, who claimed title as heir to Ram Kishun, and also put forward his right as a tenant put into possession by Ishwar Dayal, defendant 2nd party (now plaintiff No. 3). Accordingly, plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 brought the present suit in the civil court for recovery of possession and damages impleading Ishwar Dayal, as defendant 2nd party, on whose behalf Anant Prasad, the principal defendant, claimed to be a tenant. The suit was resisted by Anant Prasad on the ground that he was the heir of Ram Kishun and a tenant under a lease granted on behalf of Ishwar Dayal, defendant 2nd party, after the decision in the previous suit. He claimed to be a tenant in respect of the lands of all the co-sharers including plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 and Ishwar Dayal. The issue thus raised being one whether the relationship of landlord and tenant existed between the parties was referred to the revenue court which negatived Anant Prasad's right as an heir of Ram Kishun, but upheld his plea that he had been admitted into tenancy after the decision of the previous suit. The court of first instance dismissed the plaintiffs' suit on that finding. The lower appellate court found on appeal by the plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2, that the lands in dispute were let to Anant Prasad by one Balkaran Singh, who was a karinda on behalf of Ishwar Dayal, defendant 2nd party, but that he had no authority to act on behalf of plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2. Accordingly, it held that Anant Prasad is not a tenant of plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 but that he cannot be deemed to be a trespasser. The decree of the court of first instance was so far modified that joint possession was decreed to plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2. The latter have filed the present second appeal.

---

*S. A. 818 of 1930

It has not been argued before us that Anant Prasad is entitled to possession of the lands in dispute as heir of Ram Kishun, the deceased occupancy tenant. His defence rests solely on the plea that the lands in dispute were let to him after the decree in the previous suit. The finding of the lower appellate court so far as it held that Balkaran Singh, the karinda of Ishwar Dayal, let the land in dispute to Anant Prasad and had authority to do so on his behalf must be accepted in second appeal. It is likewise conclusive that Balkaran Singh has no authority to let it on behalf of plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2. The position then is that the land belonging to the three co-sharers was let by only one of them. The question is whether the tenant in whose favour the tenancy was created by one of the three co-sharers is entitled to retain possession in spite of the dissent of the other two. We are of opinion that Section 266 of the Agra Tenancy Act (Act III of 1926) governs the case and that the defendant Anant Prasad cannot be considered to be a tenant in respect of the lands in dispute. That section declares that

> Where there are two or more co-sharers in any right, title or interest all things required or permitted to be done by the possessor of the same shall be done by them conjointly, unless they have appointed an agent to act on behalf of them all.

It is only the possessor of proprietary right who can let land. The Sec-

CIVIL

1932

PANCHANAN BANERJI
v.
ANANT PRASAD PANDEY

Niamatullah, J.

tion is, therefore, clearly applicable and the tenancy could be created by all the co-sharers conjointly and any attempt by only one of them to create a tenancy must be declared to be ineffectual. The defendant Anant Prasad not having been admitted to tenancy by all the three did not acquire the rights of a statutory tenant. This being so, he is not entitled to retain possession as such. His learned advocate argues that he is entitled to retain possession of the undivided share of Ishwar Dayal at whose instance he was placed in possession. This position is however untenable inasmuch as Ishwar Dayal merely admitted Anant Prasad as a tenant and cannot be deemed to have assigned his proprietary or possessory right in the lands. The only ground on which Anant Prasad has defended the suit and the only right which he has claimed and could have claimed is that he is a tenant of the land in virtue of the lease granted by Balkaran Singh on behalf of Ishwar Dayal. If this defence cannot be sustained he must be considered to be in unlawful possession.

Another argument which has been put forward on behalf of the defendant Anant Prasad is that Ishwar Dayal who is not in the array of plaintiffs cannot succeed and obtain possession jointly with plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2, he having himself created a tenancy in favour of the defendant Anant Prasad. We are of opinion that this contention must be rejected. The lease in favour of Anant Prasad having been found to be one granted by an unauthorised person, it confers no right upon the defendant Anant Prasad. There is nothing to prevent Ishwar Dayal from joining the other co-sharers to eject one who is found to possess no right in respect of the land in dispute.

A learned single Judge of this Court has taken the same view as regards a tenant let into possession by one of several co-sharers. In Kunwar Singh v. Abdur Ali Khan[1] it was held that where one of the co-sharers granted a permanent lease of the joint holding without the consent of the other co-sharers, such co-sharers are entitled to treat the lease as a nullity and to eject the lessee. The view is based on the terms of Section 194 of the Old Tenancy Act (Act II of 1901) which is almost identical with the present Section 266. The lower appellate court has referred to the cases of Bhola Nath v. Baskin[2] and Amin Ullah v. Hajirah[3]. We have considered these cases and are clearly of opinion that the question arising before us did not arise and was not decided in them. The lower appellate court has also referred to a decision of the Board of Revenue reported in Vol. III of the Law Reporter, Allahabad, Section 165. That decision is also not in point. Besides, we find that in two other cases; 3 U. D. page 355 and 4 U. D. 697 the Board of Revenue took a contrary view which is in accord with our own.

The result is that this appeal succeeds. It is accordingly allowed. The decrees of the lower courts are set aside and the plaintiffs' suit for possession is decreed. Their claim to mesne profits shall be enquired into and if they are found entitled to any mesne profits a final decree shall be passed. The defendant Anant Prasad must pay the costs incurred by plaintiffs Nos. 1 and 2 in all the courts.

Appeal allowed

[1] S. A. 2196 of 1925, decided on April 18, 1928=[1928] A. I. R. All. 525

[2] [1894] A. W. N. 127

[3] 3 A. L. J. 767

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 18

NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

RAMA SHANKAR (Plaintiff)
versus
IQBAL HUSAIN (Defendant)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 9, R. 4—Suit dismissed in default of appearance—Plaintiff present but went to fetch vakil—Restoration—When should be granted.

The courts should not ignore the somewhat natural tendency among the litigants of hurrying to their pleaders, when their cases are called on, with the object of fetching them. Where a pleader is not forthcoming or is busy elsewhere and the case is dismissed in the meantime, the rule as to restoration should not be so rigorously enforced as to sacrifice the ends of justice which it is intended to subserve.

Applicant's suit having been dismissed in default of appearance, he immediately applied for restoration and his affidavit stated that he was present when his case was called on but he went to search his vakil who was busy in another court and that on his return he learnt that his suit had been dismissed. Prima facie the allegations in the affidavit were not open to suspicion nor was there any counter-affidavit. Held, that applicant's suit should be restored.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of MAULVI MUHAMMAD AHMAD ANSARI ESQ., Small Cause Court Judge of Aligarh.

Kartar Narain Agarwala for the applicant.

The opposite party was not represented.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision directed against an order passed by the judge of small cause court, Aligarh, rejecting the plaintiff's application for restoration of his suit which had been dismissed in default of appearance. The suit was fixed for July 17, 1931. The learned Judge says in his order rejecting the application for restoration that the applicant was called out twice but did not appear. This may be true; but there can be no denying the fact that, on the suit being dismissed for default, he made immediate preparation for an application for restoration being filed. He swore an affidavit on the same date between 12 and 1 o'clock, which stated that the applicant was present when the case was called on but went to search his vakil, who was subsequently found busy in another court and could not attend and that the applicant learnt on his return that the suit had been dismissed in default of his appearance. No counter affidavit was put in by the opposite party. Prima facie, the allegations contained in the plaintiff's affidavit are not open to any suspicion. The learned Judge, however, thought that the applicant had presented "a made up plea". He does not refer to any circumstances on which such conclusion is based. He has also remarked that he > told litigants and their lawyers so often that they are not to run away when they are called into court for their case. They do not seem to listen to it. In this case, however, as stated by the opposite party in his reply the applicant was not at all present when his case was called up for hearing.

I do not understand the significance of the first portion of the remark

---

*Civ. Rev. 507 of 1931

CIVIL

1932

RAMA SHANKAR
v.
IQBAL HUSAIN

Niamatullah, J.

quoted above. Unless the learned Judge accepted the affidavit filed by the applicant, he could not be one of those litigants who did not act according to the instructions which the learned Subordinate Judge had issued to the litigants and the lawyers. On the other hand, the learned Judge thinks that the applicant was not at all present when the case was called on more than once. This is apparently based on what the learned Judge calls "reply" of the opposite party. I find no counter-affidavit on the record, nor any reply in the proceedings of the court or otherwise. This is probably what the defendant verbally represented to the court. In the face of the applicant's affidavit, the learned Judge should not have acted on statements of the kind made by the defendant. I am satisfied that the circumstances in which the applicant's suit was dismissed in his absence are correctly stated in the affidavit. The question is whether they constitute sufficient cause for the plaintiff's non-appearance. While litigants would do well to act as the learned Judge says they should, we cannot ignore the somewhat natural tendency among the litigants of hurrying to their pleaders when their cases are called on. They expect to find their pleaders and take them in time for the hearing. In most cases, the litigant himself or his pleader appears in court shortly afterwards. In some cases the pleader is not forthcoming or is busy elsewhere and if the case is dismissed in the meantime, the rule as to restoration should not be so rigorously enforced as to sacrifice the ends of justice which it is intended to subserve. Award of reasonable costs to the opposite party will in general be found to be a sufficiently deterrent penalty on one side and compensation on the other. I should not be understood as laying down a rule of thumb applicable to all such cases. Each case has to be decided on its own facts, but the exercise of discretion should not be divorced from equitable considerations arising from those facts.

In view of all the circumstances of the case, I allow this revision and set aside the order of the lower court refusing to restore the applicant's suit dismissed in default. The learned advocate who appears for the applicant does not press for costs. No order is, therefore, needed in that respect. The applicant's suit shall be re-instated and disposed of on the merits.

Application allowed

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 22

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

CHAND REKHA (Plaintiff)
versus
JANKI PRASAD (Defendant)*

Oaths Act, Sec. 9—Application for an oath—To be without any condition.

An application for an oath under the Oaths Act must be an application without any condition. It is not open to a party to ask the court to adjudicate, and if the court adjudicates against them to then ask the court to start a separate proceeding under the Oaths Act.

Where plaintiff's application stated that "if the court does not hold the evidence to be sufficient, defendant should swear by the Ganges water in hand before the court and say "I may be ruined if I speak lie or falsely swear by the Ganges", held, that the offer did not conform to Sec. 9 of the Oaths Act.

---

*F. A. 3 of 1931

CIVIL

1932

CHAND REKHA v. JANKI PRASAD

Bennet, J.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of BABU ZORAWAR SINGH, Subordinate Judge of Aligarh.

U. S. Bajpai and N. U. A. Siddiqi for the appellant.

S. K. Dar and S. C. Das for the respondent.

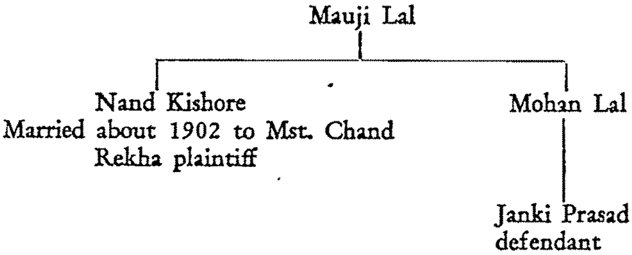
The judgment of the Court was delivered by

BENNET, J.—This is a first appeal by one Mst. Chand Rekha whose suit for Rs.32,000 has been dismissed by the learned Subordinate Judge of Aligarh. The sole defendant is B. Janki Prasad, who is an advocate of that court. The following pedigree is given in the plaint:—



The plaint was filed as a pauper, and it alleged that Nand Kishore and Mohan Lal worked jointly as contractors but learned counsel states that he does not claim that these two brothers formed a joint Hindu family. The plaint further sets forth that at the time of the marriage of the plaintiff to Nand Kishore the father of the plaintiff insisted on Nand Kishore executing a deed of gift to the extent of Rs.30,000 which was in deposit with Mohan Lal in favour of the petitioner. It was further set forth that at some later period two thousand rupees worth of ornaments had been deposited by the plaintiff with Mohan Lal for safe custody. The plaint stated that plaintiff was entitled to get her deposit money from the defendant. The cause of action was stated to arise on November 1, 1929 when the last demand was made from the defendant. The relief asked for was that a decree for Rs.32,000 might be passed in favour of the plaintiff against the defendant. Now the plaint did not set forth what the Rs.32,000 consisted of, and it is left for the court to infer that the suit is for the return of Rs.30,000 deposit and Rs.2,000 the value of the ornaments. The written statement of defendant denied that the plaintiff had ever been married to Nand Kishore, or that any deposit of ornaments or cash had been made with the defendant. Evidence was taken before the lower court, and the finding of the court was that the plaintiff had not proved that she was married to Nand Kishore, and that no ornaments or deposit or cash were proved to have been deposited. There was no deed of gift produced for the plaintiff or Parcha in favour of Mohan Lal. The plaintiff's case was singularly lacking in written evidence and in oral evidence, which consisted merely of the statement of herself and of Nand Kishore. An appeal was filed against a decree of the learned Subordinate Judge on five grounds of fact. When the appeal was presented for admission, an entirely different ground was taken by learned counsel to the effect that the plaintiff applied "to abide by the oath of the defendant before the lower court if taken on Ganges water in hand, and the defendant refused to do so", and therefore a presumption would arise under Sec-

CIVIL

1932

CHAND REKHA v. JANKI PRASAD

Bennet, J.

tion 8 of the Oaths Act. This is the only ground which learned counsel has argued in this appeal, and no argument has been made on any of the five grounds in the memorandum of appeal. Learned counsel bases his argument on an application of July 14, 1930, printed on page 5 of the record. In this application paragraph 3 is as follows:—

> If the Court does not hold the evidence to be sufficient, Babu Janki Prasad should swear by the Ganges before the court and say 'I may be ruined if I speak lie or falsely swear by the Ganges'.

Now it is to be noted that this paragraph, which is the only one dealing with the oath, does not say that the plaintiff offers to be bound by the statement on oath made by the defendant. Therefore, in our opinion, this offer would not come within the terms of Section 9 of the Oaths Act, and the Oaths Act would not apply. In fact in the proceeding the court did not refer to the Oaths Act, nor did it record any proceeding under Section 12 of the Oaths Act. All that happened was that the court stated in an order that the defendant was not willing to give an oath on Ganges water, and that he could not be compelled to do so. There was no proceeding before the lower court about the plaintiff applying under the Oaths Act and any presumption being drawn from the action of the defendant. We may also note that paragraph 3 of the application of the plaintiff does not, in our opinion, conform to Section 9 of the Oaths Act for another reason, because paragraph 3 states that if the court does not hold the evidence to be sufficient then defendant should take an oath on Ganges water. An application for an oath under the Oaths Act must be an application without any condition such as if the court does not hold the evidence to be sufficient. It is not open to a party to ask the court to adjudicate, and if the court adjudicates against them to then ask the court to start a separate proceeding under the Oaths Act. There is no further point in the appeal. Accordingly we dismiss this appeal with costs. The court-fee payable on this appeal must be paid by the appellant as if she had not been permitted to appeal as a pauper. The respondent's counsel has undertaken to pay the deficiency in printing within two weeks.

Appeal dismissed

CRIMINAL

1932

March 16

BOYS, J.
YOUNG, J.

KING-EMPEROR
versus
BAIJNATH*

Penal Code, Sec. 366—'Seduced to illicit intercourse'—Meaning of—Accused carrying on intrigue with a girl under sixteen (in the custody of her guardian)—He goes away with her—With intention of continuing illicit intercourse—Whether offence under Sec. 366 made out.

The phrase 'seduced to illicit intercourse' in Sec. 366 I. P. C. implies two distinct stages in the acts of the accused, the seduction and the illicit intercourse. These must be two distinct acts, though they may follow in immediate sequence. The words or actions of the accused which induced the girl to submit to the illicit intercourse must precede the actual act.

The term 'seduction' can only properly be held applicable to the first act of illicit intercourse, unless there be proof of a return to chastity on the part of the girl meanwhile, or unless possibly there is an intention on the

---

*Cr. Rev. 826 of 1931

CRIMINAL

1932

KING-EMPEROR v. BAIJNATH

accused's part that the girl should be seduced by some different man.

The act of seduction alleged must be subsequent to the kidnapping in order to make S. 366 Penal Code applicable.

Sec. 366 Penal Code cannot apply to a case where the accused is said to have been carrying on an intrigue with a girl under 16 while she is in the custody of her lawful guardian, and goes away with her because obstacles are thrown in the way of that intrigue, even though when he so goes away with her it is with the intention of carrying on that intrigue or in other words, with the intention of continuing illicit intercourse.

Prem Narain v. Emperor, 1929 A. L. J. 114 referred to.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of PANDIT TEJ NARAIN MULLA, Sessions Judge of Allahabad.

R. C. Ghatak for the applicant.

K. D. Malaviya for the opposite party.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—This is a case of some importance in reference to the application of S. 366 of the Indian Penal Code, and that is unfortunately a section which comes before the courts possibly more often than any other particular section in the Code, except those of riot and hurt. The question turns upon what is the meaning of "seduced to illicit intercourse" in S. 366 of the Code.

A young man of 25 has been found, subsequent to a course of intrigue with a girl of 14, to have taken her away out of the possession and control of her father, and he so took her away, or rather went away with her, because his intrigue was beginning to suffer interruption. We state the facts in ordinary language because it is the legal language which we have to interpret. The Magistrate convicted the accused under S. 363 I. P. C., that is to say, of simple kidnapping. The accused appealed, and the learned Judge, while he has expressed his views on some of the merits of the case, did not finally decide the appeal but "set aside the conviction and sentence" and sent the case back to the Magistrate with a direction to him to commit the accused for trial on a charge under S. 366 I. P. C. after giving the parties a further opportunity to produce additional evidence, if they so wished, on the question of the girl's age. We have had an application made to this Court on the revisional side by the father of the girl. We are not limited in this Court to motions made by any particular person, and in this case if anybody was to move the court on behalf of the girl, the father may be well considered to be the proper person. The father, then, asks us to hold that the order of the learned Judge, which was presumably passed under S. 423 (1) (b) (2) Cr. P. C. should be set aside and that the Judge should be directed to hear the appeal in the ordinary course under S. 423, and if he considered further evidence necessary he might be directed to act under S. 428 Cr. P. C. This application is supported by the Assistant Government advocate. On the other hand, we have also heard counsel for the accused, and he invites us to maintain the order of the learned Judge. For a clearer appreciation of the case we may briefly state the motives, though they do not of course affect the question of law. The father avowedly does not want further disturbance and scandal in the matter, at any rate more than is necessary. The accused naturally hopes for a further chance of getting a clean acquittal. We concern ourselves, of course, only with the question of law.

The learned Judge has held that the term "seduction" does not apply only to what leads to the first act of illicit intercourse but is applicable in regard to any subsequent acts of illicit intercourse, and on this basis he holds that S. 366 is applicable to a case where though the accused may have seduced the girl and been indulging in illicit intercourse before he went away with the girl, he has further the intention of continuing the illicit intercourse subsequent to going away with the girl. This is we understand from his judgment a fair statement of his views. We have only to say whether we agree with him. An examination of the section suggests the statement of three propositions. Before stating these we may note that we have had a number of cases cited to us.—Pessumal v. Valoo[1], King-Emperor v. Saran Krishna[2], Maharana v. Emperor[3], Prem Narain v. King-Emperor[4], Prafulla Kumar Bose v. Emperor[5] and Suppiah v. Emperor[6].

In the first place we note that the very phrase "seduced to illicit intercourse" implies two distinct stages in the acts of the accused, the seduction and the illicit intercourse. These must be two distinct acts, though they may follow in immediate sequence. The words or actions of the accused which induced the girl to submit to the illicit intercourse must precede the actual act. This does not appear to have been borne in mind in some of the cases which we have mentioned above. The reason for this is possibly that sometimes the word "seduction" is used by itself to include comprehensively the "seducing" and the "intercourse", but where both words are used "seduced to" can only refer to the preliminary act of persuasion.

The more important question is whether the term "seduced to" can properly be applied only to that which leads to the first act of illicit intercourse, or whether it can be properly applied to that which precedes each subsequent act of illicit intercourse. The Oxford dictionary defines "seduction" in this connection as "To induce a woman to surrender her chastity", which suggests at the outset that the term "seduction" can only apply properly to the first act of illicit intercourse, for once that act has been completed, the girl has surrendered her chastity. We would, therefore, hold that the term "seduction" can only properly be held applicable to the first act of illicit intercourse, unless there be proof of a return to chastity on the part of the girl meanwhile, or unless possibly there is an intention on the accused's part that the girl should be seduced by some different man. Neither of these conditions apply to the present case. We have the simple case of a man carrying on an intrigue with a girl, finding his intrigue meeting with obstacles, and deciding in conjunction with the girl that they would go away together, the girl of course being under 16. Next we note that the act of seduction alleged must be subsequent to the kidnapping in order to make S. 366 applicable. The section says "kidnaps any woman in order that she may be seduced to illicit intercourse." This is manifestly wholly different from "kidnaps any woman whom he has seduced to illicit intercourse."

It follows from the views we have expressed above that S. 366 can-

[1] [1927] A. I. R. (Sind) 197
[2] [1927] A. I. R. (Sind) 104
[3] [1929] A. I. R. (Pat.) 651
[4] [1929] A. L. J. 114
[5] [1930] A. I. R. (Cal.) 209
[6] [1930] A. I. R. (Mad.) 980

CRIMINAL
1932
KING-EMPEROR
v.
BAIJNATH
Boys, J.

not be applied to a case where the accused is said to have been carrying on an intrigue with a girl under 16 while she is in the custody of her lawful guardian, and goes away with her because obstacles are thrown in the way of that intrigue, even though when he so goes away with her it is with the intention of carrying on that intrigue or in other words, with the intention of continuing illicit intercourse. We do not think it necessary to examine in detail the cases to which we have referred, for, if we may say so with respect, they do not appear to have approached S. 366 from the points of view that we have expressed.

For the accused it has been contended that he has been "acquitted" of the charge under S. 363 I. P. C. That is not so. The Judge set aside the order of the Magistrate and that he had to do before he could order a commitment but he did not "acquit". Even had he used the word, we should have been prepared to hold that it was merely an error and did not in law amount to an "acquittal."

The result is that we hold that the order of the learned Sessions Judge should be set aside, and it is set aside. The case will be restored as an appeal pending in the Sessions Court for disposal in the ordinary course. In view, however, of the fact that the learned Sessions Judge has expressed views adverse to what we may describe as the complainant's side of the case, we think it desirable that upon the appeal being reheard it should be reheard by another Judge. We therefore send the case to the Additional Sessions Judge of Allahabad. If he in the exercise of his own independent discretion considers further evidence necessary, the provisions of S. 428 are of course open to him. Order set aside

CIVIL
1932
March 17
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

POSTI MAL THROUGH CHAMPA LAL (Applicant)
versus
RADHA KISHAN LAL CHAND THROUGH LAL CHAND (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 34, R. 14—Suit on promissory note—Compromise—Payment by instalments—Property hypothecated—Decree in terms of compromise—Whether hypothecated property could be sold in execution.

In a suit on foot of a promissory note, a compromise was entered into between the parties which provided that an instalment decree be passed in favour of the respondent and that in default of payment of two consecutive instalments, the decree-holder could obtain execution of his decree in respect of the entire decretal amount remaining unpaid. The appellant further hypothecated certain property which was specified in the compromise; but the compromise was silent as regards the manner in which the sale of such property was to be obtained. A decree was passed on foot of the compromise. Default having been made in payment of all instalments, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree by sale of the property hypothecated under the compromise. Held: (1) that the compromise in which the liability under the promissory note became merged, created a mortgage or charge and the decree which followed it related to the payment of money in satisfaction of the claim arising under the mortgage or charge previously created by the compromise, and Or. 34, R. 14 was applicable even if it be assumed that the mortgage or charge must precede the decree; (2) that the hypothecated property could not be sold

---

*E. S. A. 1077 of 1930

CIVIL
1932
POSTI MAL
v.
RADHA KISHAN
LAL
CHAND

in execution of the decree passed on the compromise, and if the decree-holder desired to have the hypothecated property sold, he must institute a suit under Or. 34, R. 4 C. P. C.

Rameshar Upadhya v. Subhkaran Upadhya, 8 A. L. J. 418 relied on. Mukta Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad, I. L. R. 38 All. 327=14 A. L. J. 385 distinguished.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RAGHUNATH PRASAD, District Judge of Bulandshahr, reversing a decree of BABU SHANKAR LAL, Subordinate Judge.

Panna Lal for the appellant.

Shiva Prasad Sinha and Nanak Chand for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The decree-holder-respondent instituted a suit against the appellant on foot of a promissory note for recovery of a certain sum of money.

The suit was contested on the ground which it is not necessary to mention for the purposes of this appeal. Eventually the parties entered into a compromise which provided that an instalment decree for Rs.3,100 be passed in favour of the respondent. Rs.500 was made payable every half year, on non-payment of the first instalment, interest at the rate of 9 per cent per annum was made payable. In default of payment of two consecutive instalments, the decree-holder was declared entitled to obtain execution of his decree in respect of the entire decretal amount remaining unpaid. The defendant (the appellant in this Court) further hypothecated certain properties which were detailed in the compromise. A decree was passed on foot of the compromise and embodied all its terms. Default was made in payment of the first and all subsequent instalments. Thereupon the decree-holder applied for execution of his decree by sale of the property hypothecated under the compromise. The defendant-judgment-debtors objected, inter alia, on the ground that the hypothecated property could not be sold in execution of the decree passed on the compromise and that unless the decree-holder instituted a suit under O. 34, R. 4 C. P. C. he was not entitled to have the hypothecated properties sold. The court of first instance upheld the objection but the lower appellate court overruled it. Hence this appeal.

The only question which has been argued before us is whether it is open to the decree-holder to obtain satisfaction of his decree by sale of the hypothecated property otherwise than by instituting a suit under O. 34, R. 4 C. P. C. It is argued on behalf of the appellant that Or. 34, R. 14 C. P. C. is a bar to the decree-holder obtaining sale of the hypothecated property in execution of the consent decree. That rule provides that where a mortgagee has obtained a decree for the payment of money in satisfaction of a claim arising under the mortgage he shall not be entitled to bring the mortgaged property to sale otherwise than by instituting a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage. Rule 15 extends the operation of Rule 14 to cases of charge. Whether the compromise be regarded as creating a mortgage or merely a charge, a question which it is not necessary to decide, O. 34, Rule 14 read with Rule 15 would stand in the way of the decree-holder obtaining satisfaction of the decree by sale of the hypothecated property otherwise than by instituting a suit under O. 34, R. 4, if other requirements of Rule 14 have been made out in the present case. The learned advocate for the respondent has strenuously argued that it is open to the parties to contract themselves out of the provisions of O. 34, R. 14 C. P. C. and that on a proper reading of the compromise the parties must be deemed to have contracted that the decree-holder can have the hypothecated property sold in execution of the consent decree. We have carefully read the compromise and are of opinion that it does not contain any provision which entitles the decree-holder to have the hypothecated property sold straight away without obtaining a decree under O. 34, R. 4 C. P. C. It merely declares the right of the decree-holder to obtain satisfaction of his decree by sale of the hypothecated property and is silent as regards the manner in which the sale of such property is to.be obtained. It does not contain any words to signify that the decree-holder can have the hypothecated property sold in execution of the consent decree itself nor does it lay down that the decree-holder must institute a suit under O. 34, R. 4. In other words, the compromise is silent in that respect. This being so, the manner in which the hypothecated property is to be sold must be determined in accordance with the provisions of the law on the subject. In our opinion Order 34, Rules 14 and 15 apply to the case. It follows that the decree-holder can proceed against the person and other property of the judgment-debtors in execution of the consent decree, but that if he desires to have the hypothecated property sold, he must institute a suit under O. 34, Rule 4 C. P. C. and give to the judgment-debtors the usual period of grace for payment of the amount charged. on the property sought to be sold.

Another contention put forward on behalf of the respondent is that O. 34, R. 14 C. P. C. contemplates cases in which the mortgage or charge existed anterior to the decree and cannot apply to a case in which the mortgage or charge is embodied in the decree itself. It is not necessary for us to pronounce an opinion on the comprehensive proposition of law involved in this contention. It is perfectly clear that the compromise in which the liability under the promissory note became merged, created a mortgage or charge and that the decree which followed it related to the payment of money in satisfaction of the claim arising under the mortgage or charge previously created by the compromise. In this view, Order 34, Rule 14 is applicable to the case even if it be assumed that the mortgage or charge must precede the decree. Our view is in accord with Rameshar Upadhya v. Subhkaran Upadhya[1]. Reliance has been placed by the learned advocate for the respondent on Mukta Prasad v. Mahadeo Prasad[2] which is however clearly distinguishable from the case before us. There was an express provision in the compromise in that case that the decree-holder was entitled to obtain the sale of the hypothecated property in execution of the consent decree.

In the view of the case we have taken, the order of the lower appellate court must be set aside. Accordingly, we allow this appeal with costs throughout, set aside the order of the lower appellate court and restore that of the court of first instance.

Appeal allowed

---

[1] 8 A. L. J. 418

[2] I. L. R. 38 All. 327=14 A. L. J. 385

Civil

1932

Jan. 25

Sulaiman, J.
Young, J.

BHAJJA (Applicant)
versus
MOHAMMAD SAID KHAN (Opposite party)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 33, R. 5(d)—Application under—Not to be rejected merely on the ground of limitation—When applicant found to be a pauper—Or. 7, R. 11—'Cause of action'—Meaning of.

When the court finds that the plaintiff is a pauper and is unable to pay the court-fees, it ought not to reject the plaint on the mere ground that, in its opinion, the claim, if entertained, would be barred by time. That is a question which can properly be decided after the plaint has been admitted.

The cause of action as used in Or. 7, R. 11 C. P. C. does not mean a claim which is still enforceable under the law of limitation.

Chattarpal Singh v. Raja Ram, I. L. R. 7 All. 661, Govindasami Pillay v. The Municipal Council, I. L. R. 41 Mad. 620, Dulari v. Vallabhdas Pragji I. L. R. 13 Bom. 126 and Allah Wasai v. Ramzan, 1929 A. I. R. Lah. 498 and Haur Kuar v. Munni Lal, 53 I. C. 441 referred to.

A right to sue accrues when a right has been infringed and there is a remedy recognized by law.

Read v. Brown, 22 Q. B. D. 128 referred to.

Civil Revision from an order of Maulvi Farid-ud-din Ahmad Khan, Subordinate Judge of Shahjahanpur.

N. C. Sen for the applicant.

A. Sanyal for the opposite-party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

Sulaiman, J.—This is an application in revision from an order rejecting an application to sue in forma pauperis. The plaint has been drawn up in a most inartistic way, and it is open to many serious objections. The learned Subordinate Judge, however, has not rejected the plaint on the ground that the facts mentioned therein do not show that any right of the plaintiff has been infringed for which there is a remedy in law, but has rejected it on the ground that the suit is barred by limitation. On the question of the applicant's pauperism the finding is in his favour.

The learned advocate for the applicant contends before us that it was not open to the court below to enquire into the question whether the claim, as put forward in the plaint, was or was not barred by the law of limitation. The court below has proceeded under O. 33, R. 5, which makes it obligatory on the court to reject an application for permission to sue as a pauper where, inter alia, the allegations of the plaintiff do not show a cause of action. The question for consideration is whether these words include the case where the claim is time-barred.

Section 407(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1882 had the following words: "His allegations do not show a right to sue in such court". On those words it was held by a Full Bench of this Court in the case of Chattarpal Singh v. Raja Ram[1] that the words must not be read as limiting the court's discretion to merely ascertaining whether the "right to sue"

---

*Civ. Rev. 204 of 1931

[1] I. L. R. 7 All. 661

CIVIL
1932
BHAJJA
v.
MOHAMMAD SAID
KHAN
Sulaiman, J.

arose within its jurisdiction, but had a more extended meaning, namely, that an applicant must make out that he has a good subsisting cause of action, capable of enforcement in court, and calling for an answer, and not barred by the law of limitation or any other law. This ruling was, of course, accepted by a Division Bench of this Court in the case of Kamrakh Nath v. Sunder Nath[2] and also by the Madras High Court in Govindasami Pillay v. The Municipal Council[3], the Bombay High Court in Dulari v. Vallabdas Pragji[4] and the Lahore High Court in Allah Wasai v. Ramzan[5], as well as some other courts.

The legislature has altered the words of the old section and now they read as "where his allegations do not show a cause of action". It has been suggested by a commentator that the alteration shows the intention of the legislature to affirm the decisions under the old section. On the other hand, it may equally well be suggested that the alteration is intended to make it clear that the court's discretion was not limited to merely ascertaining whether the right to sue arose within its own jurisdiction.

The only case under the new Code in which the Full Bench decision has been directly followed, and which has been brought to our notice, is a single Judge case of the Lahore High Court, Haur Kuar v. Munni Lal[6]. But the judgment in that case does not consider the effect of the alteration in the law.

The Madras and Lahore High Courts, which have followed the Full Bench decision of this Court, have felt constrained to lay down that the section does not mean that the court should enter into an elaborate examination of the question of limitation, but should throw out the plaint only where the matter is simple. It is very difficult to agree to this partial application of the principle laid down in the old Full Bench case. One does not see where to draw the line. One court may consider the question of limitation simple, while another court may consider it a complicated one. If it is the duty of the court to reject an application where it is barred by time, it would be immaterial whether the conclusion is arrived at summarily or after examining the question in some elaborate detail. A question of limitation is often a substantial question of law, and if decided against the applicant it would deprive him of a right to go to an appellate court and have the matter re-examined. In revision an error of law on a question of limitation cannot be entertained as there would be neither want of jurisdiction, nor illegality nor irregularity.

A plaintiff whose right has been infringed may well have a cause of action against the defendant, and yet his right to sue in a court of law after a fixed period, may have become barred by time. The law of limitation bars the remedy and does not in all cases extinguish the right, for instance, a claim to recover a debt may not be enforceable after a certain period of time, and yet the debt may exist and may furnish sufficient consideration, if the amount is paid. Where, as in Section 28 of the Limitation Act, the right itself is extinguished, the position would be different. There is nothing in the explanation to Section 3 of the said Act, which enjoins upon the court a duty to dismiss the application to sue as a pauper

[2] I. L. R. 20 All. 299

[3] I. L. R. 41 Mad. 620

[4] I. L. R. 13 Bom. 126

[5] 1929 A. I. R. Lah. 498

[6] 53 I. C. 441

merely because in its opinion the suit itself would be barred by time. It merely lays down the date on which the suit is to be deemed to have been instituted.

Their Lordships of the Privy Council, in the case of Hari Nath Chatterjee v. Mothurmohun Goswami[7] clearly emphasised that "the intention of the law of limitation is, not to give a right where there is not one, but to interpose a bar after a certain period to a suit to enforce an existing right." The bar is created by the law of limitation against a suit to enforce an existing right. It is clear that the bar of limitation does not necessarily extinguish the right, but the right, though existing, becomes unenforceable in a court of law. Section 1, Clause (12) of Act XXIV of 1859 laid down that no suit shall be brought to enforce the right after the lapse of 12 years from the time the cause of action arose. Their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Khunni Lal v. Gobind Krishna Narain[8] referred to Section 1, Clause (12) of Act XXIV of 1859, which provided that no suit could be brought after the lapse of 12 years from the time the cause of action arose. Obviously the legislature in that enactment had in mind the distinction between the lapse of the period of limitation and the date when the cause of action arose. The two were not identical. A similar observation might be made with regard to Article 120 of the new Limitation Act, under which the right to sue becomes barred after the expiry of 12 years from the date when the right to sue accrues.

If the court were bound to go into the question whether the suit itself was barred by time, it may decide that it was not so barred. There would be no case decided and no revision would lie B. B. & C. I. Railway Co. v. Mitthu[9]. Would such an order be binding in the suit or the appeal? Certainly, it would not. It may also be noted that the Court Fees Act is a fiscal measure, and it is the Government which is principally concerned in the matter, the defendant not being directly affected by the grant of a permission to the plaintiff to sue as a pauper.

Unfortunately the term "cause of action" has not been defined anywhere in the Code of Civil Procedure or in any other statutory enactment. In Read v. Brown[10] Lord Esher, M. R. quoted the definition of "cause of action", as given in L. R. 8 C. P. 107, with approval, and laid down that "cause of action" means:

> every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the court. It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove each fact, but every fact which is necessary to prove.

Literally, of course, "cause of action" means cause which can give rise to an action. A right to sue accrues when a right has been infringed and there is a remedy recognised by law.

An examination of some of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure would show that the legislature had this distinction clearly in mind. Section 20 prescribes that every suit shall be instituted in a court within the local limits of whose jurisdiction the cause of action, wholly or in part, arises. Here the law of limitation is obviously not in contemplation. Order 2, Rules 3, 6 and 7, which deal with joinder of several causes of

---

[7] I. L. R. 21 Cal. 8 at 18

[8] I. L. R. 33 All. 356 at 366

[9] 1931 A. L. J. 727

[10] 22 Q. B. D. 128

CIVIL
1932
BHAJJA
v.
MOHAMMAD SAID KHAN
Sulaiman, J.

action, do not also contemplate any rule of limitation barring the claim.

Order 7, Rule 11 also enjoins upon the court the duty to reject the plaint in every case where it does not disclose a cause of action. It is not confined to suits in forma pauperis. Rule 13 of that Order allows the plaintiff to present a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action. It may be doubted whether the legislature has intended that where a plaint has been rejected on the ground that the claim is barred by limitation the plaintiff would be at liberty to file a fresh plaint either without any new allegations or with new allegations showing an exemption from the law of limitation.

Order 7, Rule 1 (e) requires that the plaint shall contain the particulars as to the facts constituting the cause of action and when it arose. This obviously requires that the date of the cause of action should be given in the plaint. This date is not identical with the date of the institution of the suit. The question whether the prescribed period of limitation from the date of the cause of action has or has not expired is obviously not a part of the cause of action of the plaintiff. When the suit is barred by time, it cannot be said that the plaint does not disclose a cause of action, but it rather appears that the claim based on the cause of action disclosed by the plaint is barred by the law of limitation.

Where the claim is barred by limitation, Section 3 of the Limitation Act enjoins upon the court the duty to "dismiss the suit". On the other hand, O. 7, R. 11 enjoins a duty to "reject" the plaint when it does not disclose a cause of action. The dismissal of the suit and the rejection of the plaint are not identical terms. In one case a decree is passed, in the other case it is merely an appealable order.

We, therefore, think that the cause of action as used in O. 7, R. 11 does not mean a claim which is still enforceable under the law of limitation. Had such been the intention of the legislature, it could very easily have said: "a right to sue capable of enforcement", the words which were used in the old Full Bench case of this Court.

No difficulty is created by the postponement of the question whether the suit is barred by time, for after the palint has been admitted, the defendant can move the court, or the court may act suo motu under Order VII, Rule 11 (d), and reject the plaint on the ground that the suit "appears from the statement in the plaint to be barred" by the law of limitation.

In the present case the court below has not only gone into the question of limitation and considered several reported cases, which question in our opinion is wholly unnecessary at this stage, but has also assumed that it was admitted by the applicant that more than three years before the filing of the application he came to know that the opposite party had not entered the items in question in the second sarkhat, which as alleged in the plaint were fraudulently left out. The learned advocate for the respondent is unable to draw our attention to anything on the record which would support this, except the allegation in para 12 of the plaint. But that allegation merely was that "during the course of" suit No. 38 of 1925, etc., the sarkhat was called for, and it was at that time that the plaintiff came to know of the dishonesty and fraud of the defendant. The admission did not amount to saying that the sarkhat was summoned in the year 1925 or that the knowledge came to the plaintiff in that year.

Civil

1932

Bhajja v. Mohammad Said Khan

Sulaiman, J.

We think that when the court found that the plaintiff was a pauper and was unable to pay the court fees, it ought not to have rejected the plaint on the mere ground that in its opinion the claim, if entertained, would be barred by time. That is a question which can be properly decided after the plaint has been admitted. We accordingly allow this revision, and setting aside the order of the court below, send the case back to that court with directions to restore it and dispose of it according to law.

Application allowed

DURGA SHANKER AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
GANGA SAHAI (Plaintiff)*

Civil

1932

March 2

Mukerji, J.
Bennet, J.

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 76(e)—Mortgagee in possession—Entitled to appropriate wood of fallen tree.

> Under Sec. 76(e) Transfer of Property Act, a mortgagee in possession must not commit any act which is destructive or permanently injurious to the property. That means that he must not commit waste, such as felling unripe timber. But there is no prohibition in this clause against taking wood of a fallen tree which fell from natural causes. Such wood is part of the profits of the property and a mortgagee in possession is entitled to take the profits.

Second Appeal from a decree of Babu Raj Behari Lal, Additional District Judge of Aligarh, modifying a decree of Maulvi Mazhar Husain, Additional Munsif.

Panna Lal and Hari Pal Varshni for the appellants.

S. B. L. Gaur for the respondents.

This was an appeal by the defendants against a decree for redemption passed by the lower appellate court. The defendants-appellants resisted the suit on the ground that various further sums were due to them. The High Court dismissed the appeal. The portion of the judgment dealing with the right of the mortgagee to appropriate the wood of a fallen tree is reproduced below.

Bennet, J.

Bennet, J.—The cross-objection further dealt with a claim of the plaintiff in regard to a Nim tree alleged to have been appropriated by the defendants. The defendants in their written statement had alleged that they had not appropriated this Nim tree at all and the lower appellate court has disposed of the point by stating

> The mortgagee has purchased the land and I think he was entitled to take the wood of the tree which it appears had fallen on account of wind.

Under Section 76(e) a mortgagee in possession must not commit any act which is destructive or permanently injurious to the property. That means that he must not commit waste, such as felling unripe timber. But there is no prohibition in this clause against taking the wood of a fallen tree which fell from natural causes. Such wood is part of the profits of the property and a mortgagee in possession is entitled to take the profits. When the mortgage provides that profits shall be taken in lieu of interest, as in the present case, Section 77 provides that Section 76(b) shall not apply and therefore that there shall be no accounting of the profits.

---

*S. A. 948 of 1930

Section 63 does not apply to the case, as the fall of a tree does not make the tree an accession to the mortgaged property, as there is no addition to the property. The fall of the tree is like the maturing of a crop, as the tree has become ripe for harvest. Its fall makes it come into the position of the profit, and the person in possession of the property is the person who takes that profit.

In other words the mortgagee in possession is entitled to take the produce of the property, and a tree which falls by natural causes becomes part of the produce. We may note that in English law the rights are more extensive. Halsbury Laws of England, 1912 edition, Volume 21, page 203 says:

> A mortgagee in possession has statutory power to cut and sell timber and other trees ripe for cutting, and not planted or left standing for shelter or ornament.

We hold therefore that the defendants considered as mortgagees cannot be held liable for the value of the Nim tree. We also note that at the time of appropriation the defendants had acquired the zemindari rights in the site of the shops, and the plaintiffs merely claim to redeem the shops, and this is a further reason why the defendants cannot be held liable for the value of the Nim tree.

On the cross-objection a further argument was made in regard to a stable. The order of the court of first instance was that the possession of the stable should be delivered to the plaintiff on payment of Rs.185 in case defendants do not remove its materials. Defendants did remove the materials and the lower appellate court found:

> The stable has already been removed and I am not satisfied that the breaking of the stable has injuriously affected the other property.

The case therefore comes under Section 63 where separate possession or enjoyment is possible. It is only in case separate enjoyment or possession is not possible that the accession should be delivered with the property. Accordingly there is no merit in the cross-objection that the stable could not be legally removed.

We therefore allow the cross-objection with proportionate costs to the extent indicated in regard to the total Takina amount decreed and the interest on that amount.

Cross-objection allowed

JUTHI UPADHYA AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
KESHO PRASAD SINGH (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL

1932

March 8

BANERJI, J.
KING, J.

Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926), Sec. 72, Sub-sections (6) and (1)—Remission claimed under alleged local custom—Failure to prove custom—Whether court can grant remission under Sec. 72(1)—Sub-sec. (6)—"Local custom"—Meaning of.

The local custom referred to in Sec. 72(6) of the Tenancy Act of 1926 means an existing local custom. In other words, if there is a local custom under which remission of rent can be claimed in alluvial tracts by reason of diluvion and similar calamities and if a claim for remission is made under such local custom, then the provisions of Sec. 72(1) will not apply. Accordingly, the mere fact that a tenant has claimed a remission under an alleged local custom which he has failed to prove does not prohibit the court from granting a remission under Sec. 72(1).

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU KAMESHWAR NATH, District Judge of Ghazipur, confirming a decree of MAULVI MUHAMMAD WASI, Assistant Collector, first class of Ballia.

M. L. Agarwala and Jwala Prasad Bhargava for the appellants.

Haribans Sahai for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

King, J.

KING, J.—This was a suit for arrears of rent payable by an agricultural tenant. The main defence was that the area of the holding had been decreased by diluvion and that the defendant was entitled to remission of rent under a local custom.

The trial court found that the alleged custom, which is described as the custom of Balpanchat and Bijmar, did not prevail in the village. So the defendant was not entitled to any remission by virtue of the alleged custom. The question then arose whether the court should not grant a remission under S. 72 of the Agra Tenancy Act, 1926. The court found that over 33 bighas out of the holding of about 38 bighas had been removed by diluvion and that a further area of the holding was unculturable. The court took the view however that no remission could be granted under S. 72, since that Section does not apply to alluvial tracts and accordingly decreed the plaintiff's claim in full.

The lower appellate court concurred in finding that the alleged custom under which the defendant claimed remission of rent was not proved and held that S. 72 does not apply to this case because remission had been claimed under a particular custom of Balpanchat and Bijmar.

The only question for our decision in this second appeal is whether the courts below have correctly held that in the circumstances of this case, no remission can be given under S. 72 of the Tenancy Act. Although S. 72 reproduces the provisions of S. 50 of the Tenancy Act of 1901 almost word for word, the provisions of the Section do not seem to have been the subject of judicial interpretation. No previous decisions have been cited by either party.

---

*S. A. 1986 of 1928

CIVIL

1932

JUTHI UPADHYA v. KESHO PRASAD SINGH

King, J.

Under S. 72 of the present Tenancy Act, the court when making a decree for arrears of rent, can allow whatever remission appears to be equitable on the ground that the area of the holding was decreased by diluvion or otherwise, or that the produce thereof was diminished by drought, hail, deposit of sand or other like calamity during the period for which the arrear is claimed. Sub-section (6) lays down:

> The provisions of this section shall not apply to remissions of rent claimed in alluvial tracts under any local custom providing for such remissions in holdings, the culturable area of which has been decreased by diluvion, deposit of sand or the like causes.

The trial court took this to mean that the provisions of S. 72 are not applicable to alluvial tracts in any circumstances. We think this is clearly wrong, as Sub-section (6) only says that the section shall not apply to remissions of rent claimed in alluvial tracts under any local custom.

The view taken by the lower appellate court appears to be that if the tenant makes a claim for remission under an alleged local custom, but is unable to prove the existence of such custom, then no remission can be granted under Sub-section (1). It is possible to read Sub-section (6) in this sense and to hold that if the tenant claims a remission under a local custom, then no remission can be made under S. 72 whether the alleged custom does or does not exist. We think that this a narrow interpretation of the Sub-section and that it does not carry out the intentions of the legislature. In the present case, the lower appellate court has upheld the finding of the trial court that the alleged local custom does not prevail in this village. This is a finding of fact which is binding upon us in second appeal. But, in our opinion, the mere fact that the tenant has claimed a remission under an alleged local custom which he has failed to prove does not prohibit the court from granting a remission under S. 72. We think that the local custom referred to in Sub-section (6) means an existing local custom and does not apply to a local custom which is merely alleged to exist but in fact does not exist. We take Sub-section (6) to mean that if there is a local custom under which remission of rent can be claimed in alluvial tracts by reason of diluvion and similar calamities and if a claim for remission is made under such local custom, then the provisions of this section will not apply. This is a more liberal interpretation of the sub-section and we consider it more likely to give effect to the true intention of the legislature than the narrow construction which has been put upon it by the courts below.

We accordingly allow the appeal and set aside the decree of the court below. The case will be returned to the trial court for taking action under S. 72 if the court, in its discretion considers that the full amount of rent cannot be equitably decreed. The appellant will get his costs in this court and the court below. Costs in the trial court will abide the result.

Appeal allowed

Civil

1932

March 10

Pullan, J.
Niamat-ullah, J.

BASHARAT BEG (Defendant)
versus
HIRA LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Tort—Suit for damages—Against joint tort-feasors—Some entered into compromise with plaintiffs by which they agreed to accept a certain sum—Whether compromise operated as a bar to a decree against the other tort-feasors.

In a suit for damages for injuries caused to the persons of the plaintiffs as a result of missiles being thrown at them by the defendants who were acting as a body in pursuance of the common object of stopping the Hindu procession, of which the plaintiffs formed a part, which was passing the mosque, some of the defendants, who were joint-tort-feasors, entered into a compromise with the plaintiffs by which they agreed to accept a certain sum; held, (1) that a compromise of this nature was no bar to a decree against the other defendants Ram Kumar Singh v. Ali Husain, I. L. R. 31 All. 173=6 A. L. J. 135 followed; (2) that the plaintiffs were entitled to bring a joint suit for damages against all the defendants (Or. 1, R. 1 C. P. C.).

A release granted to one joint tort-feasor operates as a discharge of the other tort-feasors where the cause of action, which is one and indivisible, has itself been released. Duck v. Mayeu, 2 Q. B. D. 1892, 511 referred to.

First Appeal from a decree of Pandit Kanhaiya Lal Nagar, Additional Subordinate Judge of Banda.

Ram Nama Prasad for the appellant.

Damodar Das for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

Pullan, J.—The appellant, Basharat Beg, was one of several defendants in a suit brought by thirteen plaintiffs for damages for injuries caused to the persons of these plaintiffs on August 31, 1925. On that day a Hindu procession passed by the door of a Mohammedan mosque in the town of Rath. It is now not in dispute that bricks were thrown at the procession from the mosque and that numerous Hindus, who are represented by the plaintiffs in this case, received injuries which required medical treatment. First of all a criminal complaint was filed which resulted in a compromise; but subsequently a civil action also was commenced by the plaintiffs against 33 Mohammedans. The plaintiffs asked for a sum of Rs.5,100 by way of damages; but they entered into a compromise, on February 29, 1928, with all the defendants except six. In this compromise they agreed to accept a decree of Rs.1,300, representing the total amount of damages due to all the plaintiffs. Clearly the assessment represents a sum of Rs.100 to each of the thirteen plaintiffs. In the compromise we find that the 27 defendants who signed the compromise agreed also to an apportionment of the damages among themselves, some paying as much as Rs.135 and others as little as Rs.5. One of the defendants appears to have been absent and unsummoned, and he was exempted from the decree. Four of the others were absent, and allowed judgment against them to go by default. The court decreed the balance of the sum of Rs.1,300, after taking into account the amount due from the remaining 27 defendants, against the remaining five defendants. Against the four absentees he decreed the sum altogether of Rs.45; and against the remaining defendant, who is the only appellant before us, he decreed the balance of Rs.130.

---

*F. A. 211 of 1928

The main ground of appeal is that no decree should have been passed against the appellant, because the cause of action should have been held to be extinguished as against him together with the other joint-feasors, if not on account of the compromise, at least on account of the fact that one of the defendants was exempted by the plaintiffs from the suit. As far as the compromise is concerned, there is clear authority of this Court in the case of Ram Kumar Singh v. Ali Husain[1], to the effect that a compromise of this nature is no bar to a decree against the other defendants. That decision is based upon the English law as to torts, and reference may be made in this connection to the case of Duck v. Mayeu[2]. The principle underlying the English decision is that a release granted to one joint tort-feasor operates as a discharge of the other tort-feasors where the cause of action, which is one and indivisible, has itself been released. In the case cited, the acceptance of a sum of money from one of the two joint tort-feasors in full discharge of his own personal liability was not held to operate as a release as far as the other joint tort-feasor was concerned. It was held that such an acceptance amounted merely to a covenant not to sue; and in the present case, we, on the authority of the decision of this High Court to which we have referred, consider that such a compromise as was effected in this case does not, in any way, discharge the liability of the present appellant. We cannot see that the exemption of another defendant in any way affects the question. That exemption does not bring to an end the joint cause of action against the joint tort-feasors. It does not amount to a decision of any kind. Consequently, we do not consider that there is any legal defect in the present suit on this ground.

An objection was taken that the suit was bad for multifariousness; but we consider that it is covered by the terms of O. 1, R. 1 of the Civil Procedure Code. Each of the plaintiffs received hurts from a body of persons, and each of them could have brought a suit for damages against all those persons. They were acting strictly in accordance with the law in bringing a joint suit against all the defendants.

The appellant himself pleads further that it is not proved that he individually caused any damage to any one; but there is ample evidence in our opinion to show that he was one of the persons who took part in throwing missiles at the Hindus. It is impossible, in a case of this kind, to say that the missiles thrown by one particular person struck any other particular person; and we consider that it is sufficient in such a case to prove that the injuries were caused as the result of throwing missiles and that the person against whom damage is claimed was one of those who threw the missiles, where it is also shown, as in this case, that the defendants as a body were acting in pursuance of a common object. The common object is clear; it was to stop the Hindu procession, which was passing the mosque at approximately the time of the evening prayer. The plaintiffs, therefore, have, in our opinion, made out a case for damages against the appellant, and it remains only to consider what damages should be awarded. The principle adopted by the learned Judge, which we have indicated above, is no doubt a rough and ready one, and prima facie there seems no reason why the present appellant should have to pay Rs.130 whereas some of the co-defendants had paid as little as Rs.5; but in this case 13 persons received injuries, and we cannot hold that the liability of any of the assailants is over-assessed in the sum of Rs.130. Consequently, although we might not ourselves have accepted the principle on which these damages have been awarded, we do not see our way, as a court of appeal, to object to the amount decreed.

---

[1] I. L. R. 31 All. 173=6 A. L. J. 135

[2] 2 Q. B. D., 1892, 511

We accordingly uphold the decision of the court below and dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

SAMPAT AND OTHERS (Judgment-debtors)
versus
RAM PRASAD (Decree-holder)*

CIVIL
1932
March 17
PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT ULLAH, J

Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), Sec. 60(c)—Judgment-debtors belonging to agriculturist caste and doing cultivation—Permission obtained to build houses on a portion of the leased land—Whether ceased to be agriculturists.

Where the judgment-debtors came of an agriculturist caste and cultivated the soil and had no other occupation, the mere fact that they had obtained permission to build houses on a portion of the land which was formerly their occupancy tenancy did not necessarily imply that they had themselves ceased to be agriculturists or that they no longer occupied the house (sought to be attached and sold in execution of the decree against them) in the capacity of agriculturists; and consequently the house was exempt from attachment and sale under Sec. 60(c) C. P. C. Jamna Prasad Raut v. Raghunath Prasad, I. L. R. 35 All. 307 referred to.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL from a decree of V. MEHTA ESQ., Subordinate Judge of Benares, reversing a decree of BABU BIND BASNI PRASAD, Munsif of Havali.

A. Sanyal for the appellants.

A. P. Pandey for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—This is a judgment-debtors' appeal from the decision of the Subordinate Judge of Benares, who allowed the appeal by the decree-holder against the order of the Munsif holding that a house belonging to the judgment-debtors could not be attached and sold in execution of the decree. The plea put up by the judgment-debtors was that this house was held by them as agriculturists and is, therefore, exempt from attachment and sale under Section 60(c) of the Civil Procedure Code.

The Munsif held that this was a house occupied by the judgment-debtors as agriculturists; but the Subordinate Judge held that it was not. The view taken by him is that the judgment-debtors are only shown to

---

*E. S. A. 1221 of 1929

CIVIL
1932
SAMPAT
v.
RAM
PRASAD
Pullan, J.

have one holding containing a number of plots, which has already been held to be no longer an agricultural holding but to be a holding let mainly for building purposes. He argues from this that the judgment-debtors have ceased to be agriculturists and they cannot therefore, claim that they hold the house as agriculturists. It does not appear to us that this is a strictly logical conclusion. It may be that the holding is no longer an occupancy holding and it is no longer a holding falling under the strict provisions of the Tenancy Act, because it has been leased to the judgment-debtors under a lease which is not in accordance with the agricultural leases prescribed by that Act. But the mere fact that these persons have obtained permission to build houses on a portion of the land which was formerly their occupancy tenancy does not necessarily imply that they have themselves ceased to be agriculturists or that they no longer occupy this house in the capacity of agriculturists. The Judge himself has found in the connected case, which we have decided today, that vegetables and fodder are grown on the plots which are the subject-matter of the lease; and the Munsif pointed out in his judgment that there were a large number of rent receipts showing that the judgment-debtors did cultivation, in addition to the evidence of the Patwari and other witnesses. We have been referred to a decision of a Bench of this Court in the case of Jamna Prasad Raut v. Raghunath Prasad[1]. In that particular case, it was held that a judgment-debtor who was both a zamindar and a cultivator had been unable to prove that his main source of income was agriculture, and his decree-holder was permitted to sell a house which was not situated in the village in which the judgment-debtor resided. The only point on which that judgment has any bearing on the present case is the ruling that the burden of proof lay on the judgment-debtor to show that he was in the strict sense of the term an agriculturist. We consider that the judgment-debtors in the present case have been able to show that they are agriculturists in the sense that they come of an agriculturist caste and cultivate the soil, and it is not proved that they have any other occupation, except possibly the letting out of certain land for building purposes. The Judge himself does not ascribe to them any other profession. In the circumstances of this case, we are satisfied that these persons are agriculturists and they occupy this house in that capacity.

We allow the appeal with costs, set aside the decree of the Judge and restore that of the Munsif.

Appeal allowed

---

[1] I. L. R. 35 All. 307=11 A. L. J. 437

CHITAR SINGH (Judgment-debtor)
versus
LACHMI NARAIN (Decree-holder)*

Civil

1932

March 18

Pullan, J

Niamatullah, J.

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 21, R. 86—Decree-holder himself declared purchaser for a sum exceeding decretal amount—Amount due not paid into court within time—Court to resell property—Any interested person can move the court to do its duty.

Once the initial step has been taken by the decree-holder and an application for execution of decree has been made and a sale in pursuance thereof has taken place but the sale becomes abortive in consequence of the decree-holder not fulfilling his obligation as an auction-purchaser, the law casts an imperative duty on the court to have the property re-sold and to recover the balance from him as a defaulting auction-purchaser. There is nothing in law to justify the view that re-sale should not take place unless the court is moved by the decree-holder. Anyone who is interested in having the property re-sold can move the court to do what is its duty.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL from a decree of G. O. ALLEN ESQ., District Judge of Agra, confirming a decree of MAULVI MUHAMMAD JUNAID NOMANI, Subordinate Judge.

M. L. Chaturvedi for the appellant.

N. P. Asthana and B. N. Sahai for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is a judgment-debtor's appeal and arises in the following circumstances:—

The respondent, Lachmi Narain, obtained a simple money decree on May 18, 1927 against the appellant Chitar Singh. Certain house property was attached in execution of the aforesaid decree, and was sold on October 29, 1927, when the decree-holder himself was declared to be the purchaser for a sum exceeding the decretal amount, so that he was bound to pay the balance in cash within 14 days after the date of sale. The decree-holder found that he had made a bad bargain, and attempted to have the sale set saide. He applied, under O. 21, R. 90, C. P. C., for the sale being set aside on the ground of fraud and material irregularity. The court set aside sale, not on any of those grounds, but on the ground that the auction-purchaser (decree-holder) had not paid the entire purchase money within the time allowed by law. As part of the same order, the court directed resale of the property under O. 21, R. 86, C. P. C. The judgment-debtor was dissatisfied with this order, as he maintained that the sale should have been confirmed and the auction-purchaser made to pay the difference between the decretal amount and the amount of his bid. Accordingly he appealed to the learned District Judge, who held on March 10, 1928 that the sale should be confirmed and the decree-holder directed to pay the difference between the decretal amount and the price. The decree-holder preferred a second appeal to this Court (No. 1393 of 1928) impugning the correctness of the order dated March 10, 1928. This Court ruled that the order confirming the sale was not justified by law and that the order of the court of first instance directing re-sale of the property was the proper order. It was pointed out that the provisions of O. 21, R. 86, C. P. C., are mandatory and that, on the failure of the auction-purchaser to deposit the entire purchase money within the time allowed by law, it is imperative on the court to have the property resold. Sometime after the receipt of a copy of this Court's judgment, the Subordinate Judge recorded an order to the effect that as nothing had been done by the decree-holder for the further progress of proceedings for re-sale, they should be struck off. The decree-holder was unwilling to have the property resold and had, in fact, applied to the court that his application for execution be dismissed. The judgment-debtor appealed to the District Judge from the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing to have the property re-sold. The learned District Judge dismissed the appeal, holding that two previous orders passed by the Subordinate Judge, one dated March 28, 1928 and the other dated March 31, 1928, operated to bar the judgment-debtor's prayer for re-sale of the property. The present appeal is from the order of the District Judge mentioned above.

---

* E. S. A. 834 of 1930

It is contended on behalf of the decree-holder that no property can be sold in execution of a decree except on motion made by or on behalf of the decree-holder. We think that this contention is unsound. It is true that an application for execution of a decree should be made, and is generally made, by the decree-holder, who alone is interested in obtaining satisfaction of the decree; but once the initial step has been taken by the decree-holder and an application for execution of decree has been made and a sale in pursuance thereof has taken place but the sale becomes abortive in consequence of the decree-holder not fulfilling his obligation as an auction-purchaser, the law casts an imperative duty on the court to have the property re-sold and to recover the balance from him as a defaulting auction-purchaser. There is nothing in law to justify the view that re-sale should not take place unless the court is moved by the decree-holder. Indeed in a case like this the decree-holder is interested in avoiding the re-sale of the property. If no further proceedings take place, there will be no occasion for the deficiency in the price being made good by him. On the other hand, there will be nothing to prevent the decree-holder from making a second application for execution by attachment and sale of the same property. If the view contended for by the decree-holder is correct, the provisions of O. 21, R. 86, C. P. C., can be easily circumvented where the decree-holder is the purchaser. We have no doubt that such a reading of O. 21, R. 86, C. P. C., is wholly unwarranted. As already stated, the law has laid a duty on the court to resell the property, and anyone who is interested in having the property resold can move the court to do what is its duty. For these reasons, we hold that the learned District Judge was wrong in upholding the order of the Subordinate Judge, who refused to re-sell the property in the absence of a prayer by the decree-holder in that behalf.

The orders, dated March 28 and 31, 1928 do not, as the learned District Judge is inclined to think, operate as a bar to the judgment-debtor applying to the court to re-sell the property. These orders were passed shortly after the order of the Subordinate Judge dated March 10, 1928,

CIVIL
1932
CHITAR SINGH
v.
LACHMI NARAIN
Niamatullah, J

which had been challenged by the judgment-debtor in appeal to the District Judge. His position then was that no re-sale should take place but that the sale already held should be confirmed. Accordingly he could not appeal from those orders consistently with his appeal from the order dated March 10, 1928. These orders were passed on miscellaneous applications, one presented by the judgment-debtor, who complained that the decree-holder was not willing to deposit the expenses of re-sale and that he should be permitted to pay such expenses, and the other made by the decree-holder praying for execution proceedings to be shelved. The order dated March 28, 1928 refused to allow the judgment-debtor to pay the expenses of re-sale and incidentally remarked that it is the decree-holder who, if he desires to have the property re-sold, should deposit the expenses of the sale. The order, dated March 31, 1928, allowed the application of the decree-holder praying for execution proceedings being struck off. The order of this Court, passed in second appeal on April 13, 1929, must be deemed to have abrogated all interlocutory orders passed since the order dated March 10, 1928. Moreover such interlocutory orders can be challenged in the appeal from the final order refusing to resell the property. We are of opinion that the orders of March 28, 1928 and March 31, 1928 did not, in any way, bar the judgment-debtor's application asking the court to act in accordance with the mandatory provisions of O. 21, R. 86, C. P. C.

The result is that this appeal succeeds. It is accordingly allowed with costs throughout. The orders of the courts below, refusing to have the property re-sold, are set aside. The court of first instance shall proceed with proceedings for re-sale according to law.

Appeal allowed

CRIMINAL
1932
March 29
BOYS, J.

MADAN MOHAN LAL
versus
SHEORAJ KUNWAR*

Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), Sec. 145 (1)—Not mandatory—Order under Sec. 145—Not to be set aside unless one of the parties prejudiced by absence of formal order—No question of jurisdiction arises—Court of competent jurisdiction—Characteristics of.

Sec. 145 (1) Cr. P. C. is not mandatory except in this sense that the court will set aside an order passed under the latter clauses of Sec. 145, if there is any reason to believe that the omission of an order or the passing of an order not strictly in the terms of Sec. 145 (1) led to some prejudice to one or other of the parties.

It would be quite unjustifiable and unreasonable to set aside lengthy proceedings under Sec. 145, when the facts indicate that the parties could not conceivably have been prejudiced by the absence of a formal order, where it is manifest that they knew well all the facts and contested the matter with the advantage of the knowledge of the whole of the facts.

The omission to draw up an order under Sec. 145 (1) has nothing to do with the question of jurisdiction.

*Cr. Ref. 6 of 1932

CRIMINAL

1932

MADAN MOHAN LAL
v.
SHEORAJ KUNWAR

Dan Prasad v. Ganeshi, 11 A. L. J. 696, Nathu Ram v. Emperor, 15 A. L. J. 270 and Banke Singh v. Gokul, 25 A. L. J. 246 referred to.

The characteristics of a court of competent jurisdiction are:

(a) power conferred to deal with offences or matters of the class in question.

(b) power conferred to deal with the offences or persons of the class in question.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by the Sessions Judge of Agra.

Krishna Murari Lal for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—In my view there should be absolutely no difficulty in administering the provisions of Section 145 nor in dealing on the revisional side of this High Court with any orders that may have been passed under Chapter XII. The difficulty only arises in the courts of Magistrates because possibly owing to pressure of work they do not read Section 145 carefully. In the present case though I propose to pass an order under Section 145 I shall have to vary the order passed by the Magistrate, because he did not read the section and pass his order in accordance with its terms. On the other hand, in my opinion difficulty has been created even in this Court, if I may say so with respect to other learned Judges, by a failure to appreciate the difference between jurisdiction to entertain a matter and the power to pass particular orders in that matter. I may illustrate this immediately. The present case has been referred by the learned Sessions Judge to this Court because no order was passed by the Magistrate strictly conforming to the terms of Section 145 (1). The learned Judge has considered that he has been directed by certain decisions of this Court to hold that where an order has not been passed precisely in the terms of Section 145 (1), the Magistrate had no "jurisdiction" to proceed. I have been referred to the cases of Dan Prasad v. Ganesh[1]; Nathu Ram v. Emperor[2] and Banke Singh v. Gokul[3]. In the first two of these cases the word "jurisdiction" was specifically used. In the third case the word "jurisdiction" was not used. In my view the omission to draw up an order under Section 145 (1) has nothing whatever to do with the question of "jurisdiction" at all. I had the occasion in another place* to make a careful study of the scope of this word and I came to the conclusion and I have had no reason to depart from that conclusion, that the characteristics of a court of competent jurisdiction were:

(a) power conferred to deal with offences or matters of the class in question

(b) power conferred to deal with the offenders or persons of the class in question.

In some cases it has been suggested that the question of venue is also a determining factor of jurisdiction but the better opinion is to the contrary. That question does not arise at any rate in the present case.

In the present case there can be no question whatever that the Magistrate had power to deal with the matter in question and with the persons in question, and he had therefore jurisdiction in the case.

---

[1] 11 A. L. J. 696

[2] 15 A. L. J. 270

[3] 25 A. L. J. 246

*Criminal Procedure Code by G. P. Boys.

This, however, does not conclude the matter. I note that in the case referred to me, the word "jurisdiction" was only as it were casually used and it may be that the learned Judges really meant no more than that the provisions of Section 145 (1) are mandatory or, in other words, that prejudice must be assumed. I am not prepared to go so far as that. It appears to me that if an order has not been formally drawn up exactly in the terms of Section 145 (1) there may or may not be according to the circumstances of the case great prejudice to the parties. But it appears to me that it would be quite unjustifiable and unreasonable to set aside lengthy proceedings under Section 145, when the facts indicate that the parties could not conceivably have been prejudiced by the absence of a formal order, where it is manifest that they knew well all the facts and contested the matter with the advantage of the knowledge of the whole of the facts. Now to deal with the first objection in the present case, it appears that disputes have arisen between the wife on one side and her husband and her two sons on the other. There was a house which was purchased in the name of the wife and which was registered in the Municipality in name of the wife. On March 18, 1931, the wife filed a complaint against her husband and sons saying that she had been turned out of the house, property misappropriated, and that she herself had been beaten and she asked for an order for maintenance against her husband. The application was clearly a complaint within the terms of Section 4 (1) (h) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The lady clearly wanted action to be taken in regard to the offences committed against her though no section of the Penal Code was specified and she clearly wanted action under Section 488 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Magistrate on March 23, 1931 referred the matter to the Police and they reported on March 29, 1931. I have not the report before me nor is it necessary. It is manifest that the Magistrate had information that there was likely to be a breach of the peace in regard to this house and thought it desirable to take proceedings under Section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is here that it would have been well for him to look again at the section. No Judge of this Court has any hesitation in refreshing his memory from the law, and it would save in the end a great deal of the time of the magistracy if they would glance at a section before passing an order under it. The only order passed by the Magistrate was to direct the issue of a notice fixing a date for the parties to file their written statements and documents and the parties did proceed to file their written statements and to lead a lot of evidence and there is not a hint that either of them did not know what the trouble was about, nor is there a hint of any request by them for further information as to what charges they were to answer to nor is there a hint when they pleaded that there was no likelihood of a breach of the peace. In other words, they fought the whole matter out knowing perfectly well what they were asked to meet. I am of opinion that Section 145 (1) is not mandatory at all, except in this sense that the Court will set aside an order passed under the latter clauses of Section 145, if there is any reason to believe that the omission of an order or the passing of an order not strictly in the terms of Section 145 (1) led to some prejudice to one or other of the parties. Still less is there any question of jurisdiction in the matter. I would therefore decline to accept the reference on this ground and it is the only ground which has been the basis of the reference, and the only ground which has been urged before me by the counsel for the husband in whose interests the reference was made upon his application in revision to the Sessions Judge.

There is however a point which I have to notice for myself and that is the form of the final order which has been passed. That order reads as follows:—

> B. Madan Mohan Lal (the husband) will therefore give joint possession to Musammat Sheoraj Kunwar (the wife) or file a suit in the civil court and inform this court that he has done so within a fortnight. If it is not possible for both parties to keep possession, then possession to stay as at present till the decision of the civil suit?

That order is neither intelligible nor workable as it stands nor is it in accordance with Section 145. After referring to the fact that the house stood in the name of the woman the Magistrate says that she had at least as much right as her husband and refers to the fact that whatever rights the husband might have had he was failing to give effect to them, because he was so frequently away at Agra, and in one place the Magistrate finds definitely:—

> I find the fact of her possession at the time alleged about the middle of March established.

His judgment might have been perhaps more clear but it is clear that at any rate the weight of evidence was in his opinion in favour of the woman. He should then have proceeded to declare her possession by forbidding the other parties to disturb her until they had established their rights, if they had any, in their civil court. I notice that the Magistrate in his explanation admits his technical mistake in omitting to pass a complete order in the terms of Section 145 (1) and he adds "This is an unfortunate case. I hope it will be finally settled satisfactorily by the appropriate party." I am satisfied that the magistrate did his best and did justice in the matter as far as he could, and that he was in substance right with the exception that it is necessary to vary his final order to bring it within the terms of the Code. Setting aside his order, I declare Musammat Sheoraj Kunwar to be entitled to exclusive possession of the house until evicted therefrom in due course of law and I forbid all disturbance of such possession, and if she is not now in possession, I direct that whoever of the parties may be in possession do restore to her exclusive possession of the house. I reject the reference acting under Section 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of my own motion.

Reference rejected

SUNDER LAL (Plaintiff)
versus
SUBEDAR SINGH (Defendant)*

Civil

1932

April 1

Pullan, J.
Niamatullah, J.

Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Sec. 265(1)—Lambardar of a mahal—Mahal sub-divided into pattis—Suit for arrears of rent—Land situated in a patti in which lambardar was not a co-sharer—Whether lambardar empowered to collect rent—Part of arrears in respect of a period prior to passing of Act III of 1926.

The lambardar of a mahal, which was sub-divided by an imperfect partition into a number of pattis, brought a suit for arrears of rent against the defendant. The land for which rent was claimed was situated in a patti in which the lambardar himself was no co-sharer and had no proprietary interest. Held, that the lambardar was not empowered to collect rent in respect of such land, as he had no proprietary interest in such land. Khan Ali Khan v. Masihulzaman Khan, 1931 A. L. J. 1068 relied on.

In view of the procedure laid down by Act III of 1926 in Ss. 265 and 266 for the collection of rent, decisions under the previous enactment cannot operate as res judicata.

Any authority which a lambardar might have had before the passing of the Act of 1926 became subject to the limitations imposed by Ss. 265 and 266, regardless of the fact whether arrears were in respect of a period subsequent to the passing of that Act or prior to it.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of L. V. ARDAGH ESQ., District Judge of Shahjahanpur, confirming a decree of ALI SAJJAD HUSAIN, Assistant Collector, first class.

Haribans Sahai for the appellant.

Shiva Prasad Sinha for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for arrears of rent brought by the appellant, professing to act as 'lambardar' of 'mahal' No. 3 in village Chaurihanpur, District Shahjahanpur. It is not disputed that this 'mahal' stands sub-divided by an imperfect partition into a number of 'pattis' one of which is patti Pem Singh. It is also not in dispute that the plaintiff-appellant has no proprietory interest in Patti Pem Singh. The land for which rent is claimed from the defendant-respondent, Subedar Singh, who is alleged to be the tenant, is in its entirety situate in Patti Pem Singh. The suit was contested inter alia on the ground that the plaintiff-appellant is not empowered to collect rent in Patti Pem Singh. Both the lower courts have dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff-appellant is not entitled to sue the defendant-respondent for rent, assuming it is payable by him, in respect of the holding in dispute which is also in controversy.

In second appeal by the plaintiff-appellant, it is contended on his behalf that the 'lambardar' of a 'mahal' is the only person authorised to collect rent in respect of land within that 'mahal' though it may be situated in a 'patti' in which the 'lambardar' himself is no co-sharer and has no proprietory interest. We are clearly of opinion that this contention is

---

*S. A. 994 of 1929

CIVIL

1932

SUNDER LAL
v.
SUBEDAR SINGH

Niamat-ullah, J.

not warranted by the language of Section 265 of the Agra Tenancy Act on which the contention is based. Sub-section 1 of that Section runs as follows:—

> The lambardar in an undivided mahal or in the common land of the mahal, thok or patti of which he is the lambardar is entitled in the absence of any contract or usage to the contrary to collect rents and other dues.

The plaintiff-appellant is not a lambardar in an undivided mahal. It is argued that he is entitled to collect the rent payable in respect of land in Patti Pem Singh, which is 'common land' so far as co-sharers of that patti are concerned, and that it is not necessary that the lambardar should be one of the co-sharers qua such land. In our opinion, a lambardar is not entitled to collect rent, unless the land for which rent is claimed belongs to all the co-sharers of the mahal, if he is the lambardar of the mahal, or to all the co-sharers of the patti, if he is the lambardar of the patti. In every case it is necessary that the lambardar should have a community of interest with other co-sharers in the land for which rent is claimed. If the lambardar has no proprietory interest in such land, as is the case before us, he is not empowered, by S. 265 (1) of the Agra Tenancy Act, to collect rent in respect of such land. Another Division Bench of this Court has taken the same view of S. 265 in Khan Ali Khan v. Masihul-zaman[1]. Accordingly we uphold the view on which the decree of the lower appellate court proceeds.

Reliance is also placed on S. 132 of Act III of 1926. That Section, however, merely provides that arrears of rent shall be recovered "by suit, or by distraint, or by notice through the tahsildar, in accordance with the provisions of this Act, or in any one or more of such ways." It does not enable the lambardar to free himself from the trammels of S. 265, already referred to.

The plaintiff-appellant claimed rent for years 1332 to 1334 Fasli. The present Tenancy Act (No. III of 1926) was passed in September 1926, that is to say, after the commencement of the Fasli year 1334. The learned advocate for the plaintiff-appellant argues that he is at any rate entitled to collect rent for the period preceding the passing of Act III of 1926 inasmuch as under the law as it existed before that enactment a lambardar was entitled to sue in the circumstances like those of the present case. The plaintiff-appellant obtained decrees against the defendant-respondent for arrears of rent in respect of past years before Act III of 1926 was passed. These decrees are relied on as concluding all questions in respect of the plaintiff-appellant's right to sue for arrears of rent. In view, however, of the procedure laid down by Act III of 1926 in Ss. 265 and 266 for the collection of rent, decisions under the previous enactment cannot operate as res judicata. The suit, which has given rise to this appeal, was instituted on October 31, 1927, long after the passing of Act III of 1926. Any authority which the lambardar might have had before the passing of this Act became subject to the limitations imposed by Ss. 265 and 266, Agra Tenancy Act, regardless of the fact whether arrears were in respect of a period subsequent to the passing of that Act or prior to it. We are concerned with the extent of his authority when he attempts to collect rent and not when he could have exercised it but failed to do so. In this view, the plaintiff-appellant was not empowered to institute the present suit for recovery of rent for the years 1332 to 1334 F.

---

[1] [1931] A. L. J. 1068

The result is that the appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1932
SUNDER LAL
v.
SUBEDAR SINGH
Niamat-ullah, J.

LARAITI (Applicant)

versus

SHIAM SUNDER LAL AND ANOTHER (Opposite party)*

CIVIL 1932
April 5
PULLAN, J
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 23, R. 3—'Lawful compromise'—Meaning of—Compromise as between parties that suit be dismissed—Purchaser of plaintiff's rights thereupon asks court not to record compromise, and make him a party—Whether he can object to passing of a compromise decree.

In a contested suit the parties filed a compromise (after the arguments were concluded) that the suit be dismissed. The present respondent, who had purchased the rights of the plaintiff during the pendency of the suit, thereupon presented an application asking that he should be made a party to the suit and that the compromise should not be accepted. The court took evidence as to the execution of the sale deed in favour of the respondent, made him a party, refused to accept the compromise and decided the suit on its merits in favour of the respondent; held, that the compromise was not in its terms or nature 'unlawful', and a compromise is not unlawful because it is alleged by some third person that his rights were infringed by the compromise, and a decree must be passed in accordance with the compromise, and the application of the respondent should have been rejected by the court in limine. Qadri v. Fazal, I. L. R. 50 All. 748 relied on.

FIRST APPEAL from an order of PANDIT PRAN NATH AGHA, Additional Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

K. N. Katju and K. C. Mital for the appellant.

Iqbal Ahmad, S. N. Seth and Shyam Kumari Nehru for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—This appeal challenges an order passed by the Subordinate Judge in two particulars. The Subordinate Judge has refused to accept a compromise filed by the parties in a civil suit and he has also ordered a third party, Shiam Sunder, to be made a co-plaintiff in the suit after the original parties had filed the compromise.

A man named Basant Rai died in the month of August 1922 and his widow Mst. Laraiti applied for a succession certificate. Her application was opposed by one Kishun Sarup who pleaded, first, that he and Basant Rai were members of a joint Hindu family, and, secondly, that Basant Rai had executed an unregistered will in his favour on August 8, 1922. Kishun Sarup was unsuccessful in these proceedings and the District Judge called upon him to show cause why he should not be prosecuted in a criminal court. Criminal proceedings were dropped because Kishun Sarup, who

---

*F. A. F. O. 49 of 1930

CIVIL
1932
LARAITI
v.
SHIAM
SUNDER
LAL
Pullan, J.

was at the time, little more than a youth, threw himself on the mercy of the court. These proceedings terminated on March 23, 1929 and on July 10, 1929 Kishan Sarup filed a suit against Mst. Laraiti based on the same allegations as he had made before the District Judge on Mst. Laraiti's application for a succession certificate. Three days later on July 13, 1929 Kishun Sarup executed a document purporting to transfer his rights for a sum of Rs.7,000 in cash to one Shiam Sunder. This Shiam Sunder did not become a party to the suit. The suit was contested, evidence was recorded and arguments heard in the month of February 1930. On February 8 at the close of the arguments, the court reserved judgment. On February 10 Kishun Sarup and Musammat Laraiti who were the only contesting parties in the suit filed a compromise that the suit should be dismissed. The court directed that Kishun Sarup should verify the compromise in its presence on the following day and on that day, namely, February 11, 1930, Shiam Sunder presented an application asking that he should be made a party to the suit and that the compromise should not be accepted. The court took evidence as to the execution of the sale deed in Shiam Sunder's favour, made Shiam Sunder a party, refused to accept the compromise and decided the suit on its merits in favour of Shiam Sunder.

Order 23, Rule 3 of the Civil Procedure Code runs as follows:—

> Where it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that a suit has been adjusted wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise, or where the defendant satisfies the plaintiff in respect of the whole or any part of the subject-matter of the suit, the court shall order such agreement, compromise or satisfaction to be recorded and shall pass a decree in accordance therewith so far as it relates to the suit.

From the wording of the section it appears that as long as a court is satisfied that the suit has been adjusted between the parties wholly or in part and that the compromise is a lawful compromise, a decree must be passed in accordance with the compromise. It has been argued before us that this compromise was not a lawful compromise because it was entered into in fraud of Shiam Sunder, the purchaser of the plaintiff's rights. Now, when this compromise was filed there was nothing to indicate that Shiam Sunder claimed to be the purchaser of the plaintiff's right and he himself had abstained from being made a party in the suit. It appears to us to be most improper to hold a compromise to be unlawful because it is alleged by some third person that his rights are infringed by the compromise. This High Court has never accepted such an argument. On the contrary, it was held in the case of Qadri Jahan Begam v. Fazal Ahmad[1] that the word "lawful" in Rule 3 of Order 23 refers to agreements which in their very terms or nature were not "unlawful" and might therefore include agreements which were voidable at the option of one of the parties on the ground of undue influence, coercion or fraud. A fortiori a compromise will be lawful if the only charge brought against it is that it is voidable at the instance of a third party on the ground of fraud. We need not concern ourselves with the rulings of other High Courts where persons who were already parties to the suit have successfully objected to the acceptance, by the court, of a compromise. In this case clearly,

---

[1] I. L. R. 50 All. 748

Civil
1932
Laraiti v. Shiam Sunder Lal
Pullan, J.

when the compromise was filed, Shiam Sunder was no party to the suit and his right to be made a party to the suit was open to question. In our opinion therefore the application of Shiam Sunder that the compromise should not be accepted should have been rejected by the court in limine. This being so the compromise was bound under the law to be accepted by the court for there is no question that as between Kishun Sarup and Mst. Laraiti it is a lawful compromise. This being so the case was at an end and the court should not and could not have made Shiam Sunder a party to the suit. In so doing the court acted wrongly, and the order of the court is one which can be set aside in appeal. It was represented to us by the learned counsel for the respondents that in view of certain judicial decisions notably the case of Basappa Budappa Halavalad v. Bhimangowda Shiddangowda Patil and another[2] the fact that a decree will be passed in the terms of this compromise may debar the respondent as a purchaser pendente lite from any future suit. This may or may not be so but if the respondent suffers this disability it will only be because in his excess of caution he failed to become a party to the suit before the compromise was filed. We note that the learned Subordinate Judge has not come to any conclusion that the respondent actually paid any money for the sale deed executed in his favour and we cannot help observing that the respondent when he purchased this litigation was on somewhat delicate ground. His vendor was a man who had previously set-up this will and had only escaped a prosecution for perjury by throwing himself on the mercy of the court and it may well be that having regard both to the character of his vendor and to the nature of the suit, the respondent thought it advisable to keep his name out of it as long as possible. Over caution is often fatal to gamblers. In our opinion his appeal must be decreed. We therefore set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge and direct that a decree be passed as between Kishun Sarup and Mst. Laraiti in the terms of the compromise. The appellant will receive her costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

[2] I. L. R. 52 Bom. 208

SARJU PRASAD SONAR (Plaintiff)
versus
MAHADEO PRASAD PANDEY AND ANOTHER (Defendants)

Civil 1932
April 8
Boys, J.
Young, J.

Civil Procedure Code, Sec. 11 and Tenancy Act (II of 1901), Sec. 199—Suit for money on a mortgage—In a former ejectment suit it was decided by the revenue Court that plaintiff was not a mortgagee—Whether decision operated as res judicata.

Before a matter can be held to be res judicata, it must be found, among other things, that the first court was competent to try the subsequent suit and not merely a subsequent issue.

Kuh Lal v. Gulzari Lal, [1927] 25 A. L. J. 564 and Baru Mal v. Sunder Lal, 21 A. L. J. 330 referred to.

There is nothing in Sec. 199 of Act II of 1901 to justify the suggestion that the revenue court deciding a question of title "must be deemed to be a civil court". Even if the revenue court might for the immediate purpose

*S. A. 228 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

SARJU PRASAD SONAR v. MAHADEO PRASAD PANDEY

be deemed to be a civil court, it does not become a civil court competent to try a particular whole suit.

The plaintiff having lost possession as a usufructuary mortgagee, brought a suit for money on the mortgage. Previous to this suit the mortgagor had brought a suit against the present plaintiff in the revenue court to eject him from a plot. The present plaintiff pleaded that he was a mortgagee, and his plea was rejected and the suit decreed. It was contended in the present suit that this question of whether the present plaintiff was a mortgagee or not having been decided against him by the revenue court, the matter was res judicata. Held, that while the revenue court was competent to try the issue as to whether the present plaintiff was a mortgagee or not (Act II of 1901, Section 199), it was not competent to try the subsequent suit, and therefore the terms of Section 11 C. P. C. were not satisfied, and the decision of the revenue court did not operate as res judicata.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RAM UGRAH LAL SRIVASTAVA, Subordinate Judge of Basti, confirming a decree of BABU MOHAN SHANKAR SAXENA, Additional Munsif.

N. Upadhiya for the appellant.

P. L. Banerji for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—This is a plaintiff's appeal arising out of a suit for money on a mortgage. It would appear that Mahadeo Prasad executed a usufructuary mortgage on June 10, 1899 in favour of Sarju Prasad, who lost possession and has brought the present suit. No question is really material in the matter, except the single question of whether the suit is barred as res judicata. There were two previous decisions which were said to bar the present suit; but in this appeal we are concerned with only one of them—that of a revenue court. Mahadeo Prasad had brought a suit against Sarju Prasad in the reveune court to eject him from a plot. Sarju Prasad pleaded that he was a mortgagee, and his plea was rejected and Mahadeo's suit decreed. It was contended in the present suit that this question of whether Sarju Prasad was a mortgagee or not having been decided against him by the revenue court, the matter was res judicata. Both courts have held that the suit was barred.

We are of opinion that the answer is to be found in the plain terms of Section 11, and whether or no in some special types of cases a suit may be held to be barred, as it is put sometimes, by an extension of the principle to be found in Section 11, we can see no possible ground for going beyond the section in the present case. A careful reading of Section 11 makes it, in our view, perfectly plain that before a matter can be held to be res judicata it must be found, among other things, that the first court was competent to try the subsequent suit. Whether we take the words "competent to try such subsequent suit," or the words "competent to try the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised," it must be found that the first court was competent to try, not merely a subsequent issue, but the subsequent "suit."

Now it is manifest that in the present case while the revenue court was competent to try the issue as to whether Sarju Prasad was a mortgagee or not, it was not competent to try the subsequent suit. One of us, sitting

CIVIL

1932

SARJU PRASAD SONAR v. MAHADEO PRASAD PANDEY

Boys, J.

with another Judge, considered this point in Kub Lal v. Gulzari Lal[1]. We have been referred by counsel for the respondents to the decision in Baru Mal v. Sunder Lal[2]. We do not consider, however, that this question was there directly considered. In that case in a previous suit in the revenue court the defendant had sued to eject the plaintiff, and the question of proprietary title arose, based upon the sale deed which was the basis of the second suit. It was pointed out that the revenue court could in the first case have adopted one of two courses; that "it might have referred the parties to the civil court or it might have constituted itself a civil court and tried the question itself." In fact the revenue court did not refer the parties to the civil court, but tried the question of title itself. The learned Judge remarked:

> The decision in that suit must be deemed to be the decision of a civil court . The question of the plaintiff's title must be deemed to have been decided in that suit As we have stated above, the court, in the previous suit, was, by reason of the action taken by it, equivalent to a civil court which could have tried the subsequent suit.

We are unable to find in the terms of Section 199 of Act II of 1901 anything to justify the suggestion that the revenue court deciding a question of title "must be deemed to be a civil court." Section 199(3) merely says that the revenue court, if it decides to determine the question of title itself, "shall follow the procedure laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure for the trial of suit, and, notwithstanding anything contained in Section 193 of this Act, all the provisions of the said Code shall apply to the trial of such question of title."

There is nothing in this more than a statement of the procedure to be followed.

But even if it be conceded that the revenue court might for the immediate purpose be deemed to be a civil court, there does not appear to be any basis for the suggestion that it becomes a civil court competent to try any particular whole suit, or anything more than, at most, a civil court competent to try a particular issue of title.

If we were fully satisfied that the learned Judges had had in view the point to which we have referred earlier in this judgment, we should perhaps have deemed it advisable to send this case for consideration by a larger bench. But in fact there is throughout the judgment nothing to indicate that the learned Judges' attention was particularly directed to the words "competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit etc." It is true that they used the phrase "could have tried the subsequent suit," but there is nothing to show that their attention was particularly directed to the difference between "competent to try the subsequent suit," and "competent to try the subsequent issue." We have been referred to certain other cases, but the two that we have mentioned are the only two which may be considered to be more or less directly in point. The trial court having decided the whole case, we set aside the decree of the lower appellate court and direct it to readmit the appeal under its original number and to dispose of it according to law. The appellant will have the costs of this appeal.

Case remanded

[1] [1927] 25 A. L. J. 564

[2] 21 A. L. J. 330

CIVIL

1932

March 18

SULAIMAN, C. J.
MUKERJI, J.

BIKRAM SINGH (Defendant)
versus
DIP SINGH (Plaintiff)*

Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926), Sections 264 and 247, and Civil Procedure Code, Order 21, Rule 63—Order of Assistant Collector, second class under Order 21, Rule 58—Appeal to Collector under Section 247 of Tenancy Act—Appellate order against claimant—Whether claimant has a right to institute a suit under Order 21, Rule 63.

In execution of a decree for arrears of rent (passed by the Assistant Collector, second class) the decree-holder attached certain property as belonging to the judgment-debtor. The present plaintiff intervened with the claim that the property belonged to him. His claim was allowed by the Assistant Collector, second class, but on appeal to the Collector under Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the appellate court held that the property belonged to the judgment-debtor. Thereupon the present plaintiff instituted the present civil suit under Order 21, Rule 63 C. P. C. Held, that there was no inconsistency between the right to file a civil suit and a right to appeal under the Tenancy Act, and the present suit was, therefore, maintainable.

LETTERS PATENT APPEAL against the decision of the HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE SEN.

The following judgment was delivered by

SEN, J.—This and the connected appeal arise out of two suits instituted by Thakur Dip Singh in the court of the Munsif of Moradabad against Bikram Singh, Raghubir Singh and others and against Kallu Singh and others for a declaration that certain she-buffaloes and a calf were not liable to attachment and sale in execution of decrees Nos. 512 and 515 of 1927 obtained by Bikram Singh against Raghubir Singh and others for arrears of rent from the court of an Assistant Collector, Second Class. Bikram Singh in execution of his decrees attached these buffaloes as the property of his judgment-debtors. Dip Singh, plaintiff intervened with the objection that the buffaloes in question belonged to him and did not belong to the judgment-debtors. His objections were allowed by the Assistant Collector, second class. Bikram Singh appealed to the Collector under Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act (Act III of 1926). His appeals were allowed and the appellate court held that the buffaloes were the property of the judgment-debtors. This led to the institution of the present suits. The court of first instance decreed both the suits. The defendant appealed and the lower appellate court has affirmed both the decisions. The finding of the lower appellate court in concurrence with the trial court is that the buffaloes are the property of Thakur Dip Singh, plaintiff-respondent.

Bikram Singh appeals and the sole point urged is that having regard to the provisions of Section 264 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the suit in the civil court is misconceived and that no suit lies. It has been argued that an order under Order 21, Rule 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure passed by an Assistant Collector of the second class was open to appeal to the Collector under Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act and that in such a case the appellate order of the Collector is final and that it is not within the competence of the civil court to entertain a suit under Order 21, Rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure with a view to overset the appellate order of the Collector. Reliance has been placed upon Section

---

*L. P. A. 48 of 1931

CIVIL
1932
—
BIKRAM SINGH
v.
DIP SINGH

264 of the Agra Tenancy Act in support of this contention. Section 264 provides that "the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, except (a) provisions inconsistent with anything in this Act so far as the inconsistency extends . . . . shall apply to all suits and other proceedings under this Act, subject to the modifications contained in list II of the Second Schedule." The suits instituted by Thakur Dip Singh for a declaration of title to the buffaloes in controversy are not suits or proceedings under Act III of 1926 (Local) but are suits instituted under Order 21, Rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Section 264 of the Agra Tenancy Act does not provide that the right of suit which a party has under Order 21, Rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not exercisable in cases where the orders of the Assistant Collector, second class, in proceedings under Order 21, Rule 58 are appealable to the Collector and have been taken in appeal before that officer and disposed of by him. The policy of the Legislature was not to give conclusiveness to orders passed in summary proceedings under Order 21, Rule 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure. There is nothing in the texture of Act III of 1926 to indicate that the Legislature intended to invest the appellate order of the Collector with finality. Moreover, the right of suit given under Order 21, Rule 63 of the Civil Procedure Code is in no way inconsistent with Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act or any other section of that Act. Where, therefore, on an objection raised by a party in a suit or proceeding cognizable by the revenue court, the Assistant Collector, second class, has decided the objections in a particular way and his order has been affirmed or reversed by the Collector under Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act, the appellate order of the Collector is not final and the party aggrieved thereby has a right of suit under Order 21, Rule 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure. I therefore overrule the contention of the appellant and hold that the suit which has given rise to the present appeal was maintainable. I accordingly dismiss this appeal with costs on the higher scale.

Janki Prasad for the appellant.

N. P. Asthana and B. N. Sahai for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, C. J.

SULAIMAN, C. J.—The facts of the case and the reasons for holding that a civil suit lies are fully set forth in the order of the learned single judge of this Court, with whose view we agree.

By virtue of Section 104(1) and Order 43 C. P. C. no appeal would have originally lain from an order made under Order 21, Rule 58 C. P. C. dismissing the objection of a party to the execution proceedings. Section 247 of the Agra Tenancy Act, however, allows an appeal from every order of an Assistant Collector of the second class. In this way an appeal has been provided for where there will be no appeal under the C. P. C.

Order 21, Rule 63 lays down that > where a claim or an objection is preferred, the party against whom an order is made may institute a suit to establish the right which he claims to the property in dispute, but subject to the result of such suit, if any, the order shall be conclusive.

Even if it be assumed that the provision of a right to appeal from an order of an Assistant Collector second class is somewhat inconsistent with the provisions of Rule 63, that rule will be inapplicable only so far as the inconsistency extends. That is to say, an appeal would be entertained where no appeal would otherwise have lain. But there is no inconsistency between the right to file a civil suit and a right to appeal under the Tenancy

CIVIL

1932

BIKRAM SINGH v. DIP SINGH

Sulaiman, C. J.

Act. It is to be noted that Order 21 C. P. C. has been made applicable with two exceptions to execution proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act (Schedule II, List 2, Serial Nos. 12 and 13).

It is obvious that a very large property may well be attached in execution of a very small amount. The policy of the Legislature could not have been to make an order passed by an Assistant Collector or by a Collector in appeal final in such matters. Agreeing with the view explained by the learned single Judge of this Court, we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1931

July 6

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.
SEN, J.

LACHHMI NARAIN (Objector)

versus

PIAREY LAL AND ANOTHER (Decree-holder)*

Civil Procedure Code, Order 21, Rule 49—Partner—Judgment-debtor—Interest charged—Receiver appointed—Whether receiver can be appointed manager of entire partnership.

While charging the interest of a partner who is a judgment-debtor and vesting it in the receiver under Order 21, Rule 49 C. P. C., the court cannot appoint the receiver as the manager of the entire partnership as this will involve the dispossessing of the other partners.

CIVIL REVISION against the order of the Munsif of Hathras.

M. A. Aziz for the applicant.

S. K. Dar, Panna Lal, S. N. Gupta and H. P. Varshni for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, A. C. J.

SULAIMAN, A. C. J.—This is an application in revision from an order dated, November 8, 1930, passed by the Munsif of Hathras in the execution department.

Kedar Nath is a partner of a firm of which Lachhmi Narain is the other partner. The interest of Kedar Nath in this firm was attached by the decree-holder and the court passed an order under Order 21, Rule 49 charging the interest of the judgment-debtor partner in the partnership property and appointing a receiver of his share. It has to be admitted that no previous notice of the application as required by Sub-rule (4) was issued to the other partner. This was undoubtedly irregular. The learned Munsif seems to suggest that this was cured by a subsequent notice dated, June 24, 1930. But that notice related to the question whether the partners should not be prohibited from realising any debts in future. The irregularity, however, is not now of any significance because the applicant does not object to the appointment of the receiver, nor wants that he should be removed.

The court did not make any express order directing accounts and enquiries, but it was understood that this followed from the appointment of the receiver. The court did order that the receiver should take over the books of the firm. As the applicant was the manager of the firm and he was no party to the execution proceedings, there was an irregularity in directing the receiver to take possession of the books, for it was intended that he should do so even against the will of the managing partner. The books were filed in court by the receiver and were ultimately taken away by the managing partner. Later on at the instance of the decree-holder the books were ordered to be produced in court and they were produced at one time. They were taken back by the manager but were again filed in court. They have accordingly been brought into court under its order. They had not been seized by the receiver. In this there was no irregularity. It is open to the learned Munsif not to allow these books to be returned to the managing partner if he has any reasonable ground for suspecting that they have in any way been tampered with.

---

*Civ. Rev. 471 of 1930

The order of November 8, 1930 contains an expression of opinion that the court has wide powers and the only proper course open to an execution court is 'to vest all management of the partnership in the receiver.' That this was the intention of the learned Munsif appears from the subsequent order passed by him on November 8, 1930 under which he directed that in future none of the partners should realise any of the outstanding debts.

We find no justification for holding that under Order 21, Rule 49 while charging the interest of a partner who is a judgment-debtor and vesting it in the receiver the court can appoint the receiver as the manager of the entire partnership which will involve the consequence of the dispossessing of all the other partners. It is only the interest of the partner in the partnership property which vests in the receiver and which can be dealt with by the court, and not the entire partnership itself. This part of the order is wholly unauthorised and is without jurisdiction.

The order sought to be revised by this application is one disallowing the applicant's objection and holding that all the management of the partnership should vest in the receiver. We allow this revision in part and set aside this portion of the order. The result is that although the receiver will continue and the court will be at liberty to retain the account books, the applicant will not be prevented from realising, if he so chooses, the debts of the firm, nor will the receiver be authorised to manage the whole partnership firm. The parties will bear their own costs.

Application allowed in part

DAN SAHAI (Defendant)
versus
JAI RAM SINGH (Plaintiff)*

CIVIL 1932
March 21
PULLAN, J.
NIAMATULLAH, J.

Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926), Section 44—Decree for ejectment of tenant—'Dakhalnama' obtained but defendant still in physical possession—Suit for possession in Civil Court treating defendant as trespasser—Whether maintainable.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for ejectment against defendant, who was then his tenant, on May 26, 1927, but failed to take possession prior to June 30, 1927 as required by Section 94 of the Tenancy Act. He, however, obtained a 'dakhalnama' giving formal possession on July 14, 1927 but defendant was still in physical possession in July 1928. On September 1, 1928 plaintiff brought the present suit for possession in the civil

*S. A. 954 of 1930

CIVIL

1932

DAN SAHAI
v.
JAI RAM SINGH

court describing the defendant as a trespasser. Held, that the 'dakhalnamah' either operates as a break in the tenancy of the defendant or it does not. If it does not, the defendant is still a tenant and there is no question that proceedings against him must be taken in the revenue court. If, on the other hand, the 'dakhalnamah' does operate as a break in the tenancy and determines the tenancy, then the defendant is a person who has taken possession of the plot without the consent of the landholder and in contravention of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, and he is liable to ejectment on a suit by the landholder in the revenue court. In either case, the civil court has no jurisdiction to determine the dispute between these parties.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU KASHI NATH, Subordinate Judge of Bulandshahr, modifying a decree of BABU YUDHISHTIR SINGH GAHLAUT, Munsif of Khurja.

Panna Lal for the appellant.

Nanak Chand for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—This appeal arises from a suit brought by a 'zamindar' for possession of an agricultural plot occupied by a person who is described by him as a trespasser and who was formerly his tenant. The suit was brought in the court of the Munsif of Khurja, who acting under Section 271 of the Agra Tenancy Act (No. III of 1926) remanded an issue to the Assistant Collector for the determination of the question whether the defendant was or was not a tenant of the plaintiff. The Assistant Collector returned a finding that the defendant was a trespasser, and the Munsif decreed the suit in favour of the plaintiff. This finding was affirmed in appeal by the Sessions and Subordinate Judge of Bulandshahr.

Neither of the courts below appear to have considered the question as to whether this was a suit which under the New Tenancy Act can be tried in a civil court. The facts were as follows:—The plaintiff obtained a decree for ejectment against the defendant, who was then his tenant, on May 26, 1927. Under Section 94 of the Agra Tenancy Act, delivery of possession in execution of that decree had to be obtained prior to June 30, 1927. The plaintiff failed to obtain delivery of possession by that date, but he obtained a 'dakhalnamah' giving formal possession on July 14, 1927. It does not appear that the defendant actually vacated possession. During that succeeding year other litigation was engaged in by the parties, and the upshot was that even after the commencement of the following agricultural year, that is, in July 1928, the defendant was still in physical possession of this plot, and it was on September 1, 1928 that the plaintiff brought the present suit.

It appears to us that the 'dakhalnamah' of July 14, 1927 either operates as a break in the tenancy of the defendant or it does not. If it does not, the defendant is still a tenant and there is no question that proceedings against him must be taken in the revenue court. If, on the other hand, the 'dakhalnamah' does operate as a break in the tenancy and determines the tenancy, then the defendant is a person who has taken possession of the plot without the consent of the landholder and in contravention of the provisions of the Tenancy Act, and he is liable to ejectment on a suit by the landholder in the revenue court. In either case, the civil court has, in our opinion, no jurisdiction to determine the dispute between these parties. It is a matter for regret that a dispute of this nature should have been hanging on for no less than five years; but we find ourselves unable to remedy this grievance. All that we can do is to return this plaint for presentation in the revenue court. We do not consider that this is a case in which either party should be made to pay the costs of the other. We allow the appeal, set aside the orders of the courts below and direct the plaint to be returned for presentation in the revenue court. The parties to bear their own costs throughout.

Appeal allowed

JIWA RAM (Applicant)
versus
KING-EMPEROR THROUGH LT.-COL. PENGELLEY (Opposite party)*

Criminal
1931
Aug. 11
Sulaiman, J.

Penal Code, Sec. 279 and Motor Vehicles Act, Section 16—Accused's negligence and failure to observe the rule of the road—Collision—Conviction under Section 279 I. P. C.—When conviction under special Act more appropriate.

Where the offence falls strictly within the provisions of a section of a special Act and does not go beyond it, it would be more appropriate to prosecute the offender and convict him under that special Act, rather than fall back upon a more general law which prescribes a heavier penalty. In such a case it may be assumed that the legislature in prescribing the smaller penalty has considered recourse to the special law as the proper course.

Where the fault of the accused did not lie merely in not observing the rule of the road by driving the lorry on the right side of it, but he was negligent in continuing to drive on the wrong side of the road in spite of due warning and in going fast, held, that when the ingredient of negligence entered into the offence, the conviction under Section 279 I. P. C. was not only proper but more appropriate. Rule 27 of the Motor Vehicles Act Rules merely lays down the rule of the road, and a breach of it need not necessarily involve rashness or negligence.

Criminal Reference made by Babu Kashi Prasad, Additional Sessions Judge of Aligarh.

S. B. L. Gaur for the applicant.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.—This is a Criminal Reference by the Sessions Judge of Aligarh recommending that the conviction of the accused under Section 279 I. P. C. be altered into one under Section 16 of the Motor Vehicles Act, and the fine be reduced from Rs.200 to Rs.100. Sulaiman, J.

The applicant was driving his motor lorry in a wrong direction keeping to the right side of the road. From the opposite direction Lt.-Col. Pengelley was coming in his car and he very properly kept to the left side of the road. He blew his horn when at a distance of 50 yards, but the accused Jewa Ram did not turn back to the left side of the road but moved

---

*Cr. Ref. 247 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
JIWA RAM
v.
KING-EMPEROR
Sulaiman, J.

on compelling the complainant to leave the road and move on to its left side. Even then he did not escape safely but his car was hit at right angles and was dashed against a tree and was smashed. The complainant received a few bruises also. The Magistrate found that although the accused applied his brakes he could not, in spite of his efforts, avoid the accident. This implied that he was going at a fast speed and through a dusty atmosphere when the visibility was not good. He distinctly found that Jewa Ram's negligence and failure to observe the rule of the road were responsible for the collision.

As the case was tried summarily there was no appeal, but the accused filed a revision before the Sessions Judge. The learned Sessions Judge did not of course overrule these findings, but considered that the conviction under Section 279 I. P. C. was illegal. He relied on the case of In re Mohanlal Saxena v. King-Emperor[1] and concluded that where there is a special law making a particular act an offence and proving penalties, the general law is inapplicable. He has accordingly referred this case to the High Court because he considers that the conviction under the general law is illegal.

It is not necessary for me to express any opinion on the decision in the Oudh case because in that case the question considered was whether a person could be convicted of abetment under Section 117 I. P. C. when the offence also fell under Section 9 of the Salt Act of 1882. I may, however, remark that that case has not been followed by a bench of this Court in Joti Prashad v. King-Emperor[2] and has also been doubted by the Bombay High Court in Emperor v. Ganesh Vaman Joshi[3].

I am only concerned with the observation made by the learned Judges of the Oudh Chief Court on which reliance has been placed by the learned Sessions Judge. With great respect, I am unable to hold that it can be laid down as a general rule of law that where there is a special law making a particular act an offence and providing penalties for such an offence, the general law must be held to be inapplicable. It is possible that the same act may be an offence under two different Acts, and both may be applicable simultaneously, and the offender may be prosecuted and convicted under either Act. It may, however, be conceded that where the offence falls strictly within the provisions of a section of a special Act and does not go beyond it it would be more appropriate to prosecute the offender and convict him under that special Act, rather than fall back upon a more general law which prescribes a heavier penalty. In such a case it may be assumed that the legislature in prescribing the smaller penalty has considered recourse to the special law as the proper course.

The fault of the accused in the present case did not lie merely in not observing the rule of the road by driving the lorry on the right side of it. If he had done nothing worse than that, I would have felt inclined to alter his conviction as recommended by the Sessions Judge. But on the finding of the Magistrate he was negligent in continuing to drive on the wrong side of the road in spite of due warning and in going fast. The case undoubtedly fell within the scope of Section 279 I. P. C.

---

[1] 1930 A. I. R. (Oudh) 497

[2] 1931 A. L. J. 986

[3] 1931 A. I. R. (Bom.) 140

Section 16 of the Motor Vehicles Act, has not any necessary ingredient of rashness or negligence in it. Rule 27 of the Motor Vehicles Act Rules merely lays down the rule of the road, and a breach of it need not necessarily involve rashness or negligence. When the ingredient of negligence entered into the offence, the conviction under Section 279 I. P. C. was not only proper but more appropriate.

I accordingly decline to interfere. Let the papers be returned.

Reference rejected

CIVIL 1932
March 17
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

DUIJI KUNWAR (Plaintiff)

versus

BAILA KUNWAR AND OTHERS (Defendants)*

Tenancy Act (Local Act III of 1926), Section 230—Civil suit—Revenue court could substantially grant the relief for which plaintiff asked under Sections 121 and 44 of the Tenancy Act—Suit not maintainable.

The allegations in the plaint were that plaintiff and defendant No. 1 were joint occupancy tenants, that the defendant No. 1 had made without plaintiff's consent a perpetual lease to defendants 2 and 3 and that plaintiff was still in possession. The relief sought was that on establishment of plaintiff's right a decree invalidating the lease may be passed in plaintiff's favour, and her possession may be maintained and in case of proof of dispossession, a decree for possession may be passed. Held, that the civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain this suit as the revenue court could substantially grant the relief for which plaintiff asked under Sections 121 and 44 of the Tenancy Act.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU KRISHNA DAS, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, confirming a decree of BABU MATHURA PRASAD, Munsif of Muhammadabad.

U. S. Bajpai and G. S. Pathak for the appellant

M. L. Agarwala for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a second appeal by the plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed by the lower appellate court on the ground of want of jurisdiction. The plaint set forth that the plaintiff was the daughter of one Ram Shukul who died some 13 years ago and his brother Deo Saran had previously died. The plaintiff claimed that she had entered into possession of certain occupancy plots which had originally belonged to the two brothers. The plaintiff stated that defendant No. 1, Mst. Baila Kunwar, widow of Deo Saran, had been entered for the occupancy holding. Further that on September 18, 1918 zemindars of the mahal admitted the rights of the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 as occupancy tenants. Paragraph 5 set forth that on August 3, 1927 defendants second party Nand Kishor and Ram Adhar instigated Mst. Baila Kunwar to give them a perpetual lease which she did in respect of the plots mentioned in the plaint, and that the plaintiff had not consented to that lease. The plaint further set forth that the defendants 2 and 3 had not obtained possession of any of the plots and that the plaintiff was still in possession. The relief asked for was that

---

*S. A. 269 of 1929

CIVIL

1932

DULJI KUNWAR
v.
BAILA KUNWAR

Bennet, J.

on establishment of the plaintiff's rights a decree invalidating the perpetual lease, dated August 3, 1927, registered on September 7, 1927, may be passed in favour of plaintiff, and her possession over the plots specified below may be maintained and in case of proof of dispossession, a decree for possession may be passed.

The principal question before us is whether the suit of the plaintiff should be brought in the revenue court or in the civil court. It was filed in the court of the Munsif who decreed the suit in part. Both parties appealed and on first appeal the lower court adopting the plea of the defendant in appeal held that the revenue court alone had jurisdiction. Under Section 230 U. P. Act III of 1926 if the cause of action is one in respect of which adequate relief might be granted by the revenue court, it is immaterial that the relief asked from the civil courts may not be identical with that which the revenue court could have granted. We, therefore, have to see whether the revenue court could substantially grant the relief for which the plaintiff asks. To ascertain jurisdiction, as has been frequently held, we should regard allegations in the plaint. The allegations are that the plaintiff and defendant No. 1 are joint occupancy tenants and that the defendant No. 1 has made without the consent of the plaintiff a perpetual lease to defendants 2 and 3. We consider that under Section 121 of the Agra Tenancy Act it is open to the plaintiff to sue defendant for a declaration in regard to plaintiff's rights in this tenancy. It is further open to the plaintiff to sue under Section 44 of that Act for the ejectment of persons such as defendants 2 and 3 whom she alleges to be occupying the plots of land without her consent. As the plaintiff does not definitely say that the defendants 2 and 3 are in possession through a lease, the plaint could allege, as the present plaint does, that the relief of ejectment of defendants 2 and 3 should be granted if they are found to be in possession. We consider that this would substantially cover all the reliefs for which the plaintiff asks. Under Order 1, Rule 3, C. P. C., which applies to revenue suits under general provisions in the Tenancy Act (Section 264), all persons might be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same act or transaction is alleged to exist. In the present case the cause of action is the perpetual lease and the remedies against all the defendants arise out of that one transaction. We consider, therefore, that on the allegations in the plaint adequate remedy can be granted by the revenue court. We, therefore, hold that the civil court has no jurisdiction to entertain this suit, and we direct that the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff to file in the proper court if so advised. As the appeal has substantially failed, we allow costs.

Appeal allowed

CRIMINAL

1931

Sep. 30

NIAMATULLAH, J.

SARJU AND OTHERS
versus
EMPEROR*

Criminal Procedure Code, Sections 539B and 537—Accused alleged to have cut and stolen gram crop—Magistrate visits the field—But omits to make a memorandum of what he observed on the spot—Whether omission amounts to irregularity.

The accused who were alleged to have cut and stolen gram crop, were charged under Section 379 I. P. C. They examined the village patwari in defence to establish that there had been no gram crop in the field in question in that year and that wheat had been sown. This surprise was sprung on the prosecution at a late stage of the case. No suggestion of the kind was made when the complainant was examined, nor did the accused state in their defence that the field had not been sown with gram at all. The Magistrate made an inspection of the field and discovered stumps of dried gram plants. He however did not give any previous intimation of his intention to visit the field and he did not record the result of his inspection in a note which, as required by Section 539B Cr. P. C., should have been made part of the record. Held, that the 'omission' of the Magistrate to act in accordance with Section 539B Cr. P. C. was an irregularity, and did not in fact occasion a failure of justice. Forbes v. Ali Haider Khan, I. L. R. 53 Cal. 46; Khushal Jeram v. Emperor, I. L. R. 50 Bom. 680 followed.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of BABU KRISHNA DAS, Sessions Judge of Ghazipur.

A. P. Pandey for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—The applicants Sarju, Manki and Baram with two others Dhari and Chandrajit, were convicted by a Magistrate first class, Ghazipur, of an offence under Section 379 I. P. C. in that they cut the gram crop belonging to one Ramdeo in village Sarauli. Chandrajit, aged 16, was released on his executing a bond under Section 562 Cr. P. C. On appeal by the remaining four accused the learned Sessions Judge acquitted Dhari.

The complainant found on several occasions that his gram crop in a certain field was partly removed over night. On the night between March 3 and 4, 1931 he in company of one Hardeo kept a secret watch on the field. After midnight according to the case for the prosecution, the five accused entered his field and began to cut the crop standing thereon. The complainant and Hardeo quietly advanced towards the field, and when they were sufficiently near the spot, the complainant made a rush towards the thieves. Basram was caught on the spot but the others made good their escape. A report was made at the thana next morning. The investigation resulted in the prosecution of all the five accused.

The evidence in the case was direct. There was no question of identification the accused being all known to the complainant and Hardeo. The accused examined the village patwari in defence to establish the fact that

---

*Cr. Rev. 447 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1931
SARJU
v.
EMPEROR
Niamat-ullah, J.

there had been no gram crop in the field in question in that year. The field in which theft is alleged to have been committed is No. 415-1. The patwari showed from the records in his possession that wheat had been sown and not gram. This surprise was sprung on the prosecution at a late stage of the case. No suggestion of this kind was made so far as the record shows, when the complainant was examined, nor did the accused state in their defence that the field had not been sown with gram at all. The learned Magistrate made an inspection of the field and discovered stumps of dried gram plants. A grievance is made of the fact that the learned Magistrate did not give any previous intimation of his intention to visit the field and that he did not record the result of his inspection in a note which as required by Section 239-B, Cr. P. C. should have been made part of the record.

The learned advocate for the applicants has argued before me that the omission on the part of the learned Magistrate to make a record of what he saw on the spot and to file it as required by Section 539-B, Cr. P. C. is not a mere irregularity but an illegality which vitiates the trial, apart from any prejudice to the accused resulting from the non-observance of the aforesaid provision. He argues in the alternative that even if it was no more than an irregularity, in its very nature it is calculated to prejudice the accused in so far that he was deprived of an opportunity of satisfying the Magistrate that what he found on the spot were not the stumps of gram crop since gathered but of wheat crop. He has referred to a number of authorities in support of his contention. It is true that a Bench of the Calcutta High Court held in Hriday Govinda Sur v. Emperor[1] that non-observance of the provisions of Section 539-B amounts to an illegality which vitiates the trial. This case was, however, not followed in the subsequent case of Forbes v. Ali Haidar Khan[2] in which it was observed by one of the learned Judges who formed the Bench that "there is no universal rule that disobedience of a mandatory provision of a statute results in nullification of all proceedings irrespective of any question of prejudice."

In Khushal Jeram v. Emperor[3] it was held that an omission to record any relevant facts that may be observed by a Magistrate at an inspection made under Section 539-B, Cr. P. C. 1898, is not an illegality vitiating the whole trial, but is an irregularity which can be remedied under Section 537 of the Code. The case of Hirday Govind Sur v. Emperor was expressly dissented from, and the later case above referred to was followed.

In many cases it may be difficult to distinguish between an illegality and irregularity, but it may be safely said that a mere error of procedure arising out of inadvertence will amount to no more than an irregularity. In the case before me I have no doubt that if the attention of the learned Magistrate had been drawn to the necessity of making memorandum of his observations on the spot and making it a part of the record, he would have done so. The safest guide is the language of Section 537 Cr. P. C. which provides that no finding, sentence or order passed by a court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed on account of any error, omission or irregularity in any proceeding unless such error, omission or irregularity

---

[1] I. L. R. 52 Cal. 148

[2] I. L. R. 53 Cal. 46

[3] I. L. R. 50 Bom. 680

has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. In the case before me there was an 'omission' on the part of the Magistrate trying the case to make a note of his observation and to place it on the record. If such 'omission' has in fact occasioned a failure of justice, the trial is vitiated, otherwise the 'omission' is condoned. I am unable to say, having regard to the circumstances of this case, that a failure of justice was occasioned in consequence of the omission of the kind referred to. I asked the learned advocate for the applicants to mention definitely how his clients were prejudiced and to illustrate the action they would have taken in their defence if such an omission had not occurred. He gave the only possible reply, viz., that the accused would have made an attempt to establish that what the Magistrate found in the field were not the stumps of gram plants. It appears from the evidence of the Patwari that according to him wheat had been sown in field No. 415-1. It is impossible to make a mistake as regards the stumps where the question is whether they are of wheat plants or gram plants. The learned Magistrate has largely relied in support of his finding on certain circumstances mentioned in his judgment and has used his own observation merely to disprove the patwari's evidence. He has pointed out that the accused never hinted before the patwari who was examined that the field had not been sown with gram crop at all. He also emphasised the fact that if wheat had been sown in the field the complainant could not possibly have alleged that the accused stole gram crop. His purpose could have been equally served, if he desired to falsely implicate the accused, to allege that they were out to steal his wheat crop. In view of all these circumstances I am satisfied that the omission on the part of the learned Magistrate to make a memorandum of what he observed on the spot and to make it a part of the record did not in fact occasion a failure of justice.

The finding of the learned Magistrate as to whether the applicants had stolen the complainant's crops on the night in question is based on good evidence and has not been seriously challenged, apart from the question of law discussed above. The learned advocate for the applicants strenuously contended that in view of the value of the crop, viz., Rs.2-8-0 the sentences of three months' R. I. and a fine of Rs.50 in case of Basram, and 1½ months and a fine of Rs.25 in case of the other applicants are unduly severe. Basram is a previous convict, and in his case, at any rate, the sentence is not severe. As regards the other accused the sentences should not be judged solely with reference to the value of the crop stolen on that occasion. But for the complainant and Hardeo interrupting their operations, the major part of their gram crop might have disappeared in course of the night. I do not think any interference in the sentence is called for. The revision is dismissed. The accused shall surrender to their bail bonds to undergo the sentence.

Revision dismissed

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 15

SULAIMAN, J.
YOUNG, J.

CHHOTEY LAL PANNA LAL THROUGH PREM DIAL MODI (Plaintiff)

versus

R. K. RAILWAY THROUGH THE AGENT R. K. R., BAREILLY AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Railway—Consignment of 'wrought timber' despatched at owner's risk—Rate charged by Booking Clerk—Lower than Tariff rate (company's risk)—No rate for carriage at owner's risk—Whether Company entitled to freight at Tariff rate—Mistake in classification—Conditions of contract noted on back of Railway Receipt did not provide for right of re-classification—Whether Company protected.

In the Goods Tariff of the Railway Company there was only one class of rate fixed for 'Wrought timber', viz., those at the Company's risk, and none at the owner's risk. The plaintiff handed over planks ('Wrought timber') to the Company to be despatched from Shahjahanpur to Agra. Owing to the mistake of the booking clerk the consignment was despatched at the owner's risk, and the consignor was charged at a rate lower than that notified in the Tariff for 'Wrought timber.' Held, (1) that the rate actually charged was within the limits fixed by the Railway Board and the Company could without any previous sanction of the Railway Board have fixed that rate as the rate of 'Wrought timber' and notified the same in the Tariff which they issued, and it could not therefore be said that the charging at the lower rate was contrary to any rule or regulations issued by the Railway Board which had the force of law; (2) that so far as the rules and noifications of Railway Companies issued under the authority of the Railwav Board are concerned, it might possibly be assumed that there was constructive notice to the public, but the same assumption cannot be made as regards the rate entered in Tariff issued by the Railway Company without reference to the Railway Board; (3) that the consignor was not responsible for the mistake made by the clerk in not charging at the Tariff rate, because private instructions issued by a principal to an agent are not binding on a third party unless the latter has notice, and the Company must be deemed to be bound by the rate of contract entered into on their behalf by their agent, viz., the Booking Clerk, and it could not charge a higher rate; (4) that as there was no separate rate for 'unwrought timber' there could have been no mistake in classification.

Under the rules issued by the Railway Board the Company can seek protection if there was a mistake in classification (Rule 15, General Rules, 1926). The conditions of the contract noted on the back of the Railway Receipt stated that the Company had the right of re-measurement, reweighment and recalculation of charges at the place of destination, but the paragraph did not contain the word 're-classification' which occurred in Rule 15; held, that the term of the written contract as notified to the consignor did not protect the Company from a mistake made in classification of goods.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of MAULVI MUHAMMAD JUNAID NOMANI, Subordinate Judge of Agra.

---

*Civ. Rev. 100 of 1931

CIVIL

1932

CHHOTEY LAL
v.
R. K. RAILWAY

Sulaiman, J.

B. Malik for the applicant.

R. N. Gurtu (with him L. P. Zutshi) for the opposite parties.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

SULAIMAN, J.—This is a civil revision from a decree of the court of small causes dismissing the plaintiff's claim for refund of an excess amount charged by the Railway Company. A consignment of planks was despatched from Shahjahanpur which is on the R. K. R. Line to Agra on the B. B. & C. I. Railway Line under several receipts. For the sake of convenience we may take up one receipt, No. 74156, by way of illustration. The weight charged was 272 maunds, which was obviously the carrying capacity of the whole wagon and the rate at which the freight was charged was 0-2-9. Apparently the consignment was not weighed at the receiving station but was weighed at Pilibhit and again at Agra and the actual weight was noted at one of these two stations. The Railway authority at Agra demanded freight at the rate of 0-4-8 per maund on the ground that there had been an undercharge. The plaintiff paid the amount under protest. Subsequently he was given a refund of a small amount, but not the whole of the excess amount charged. Accordingly he brought the suit to recover Rs.470 which he was compelled to pay in addition to what had been charged at Shahjahanpur. It may also be noted that the receipt granted to the consignor was on Risk Note Form B and the consignment was despatched at the owner's risk.

Part of the journey was across the B. B. & C. I. Railway on which planks can be carried both at the owner's risk and at the Railway company's. There was no demand made by the Railway for any excess amount as regards the part of the journey on the B. B. & C. I. Railway. There is therefore no dispute about it before us.

According to the Goods Tariff for the R. K. R. Railway, planks are included under the classification 'Wrought timber' and not 'Un-wrought timber'. There is also no doubt that for Wrought timber there is only one class of rate fixed, namely, those at the Company's risk, and none at the owner's risk. There is also no doubt that the Booking Clerk at Shahjahanpur charged the plaintiff at the rate of 0-2-9 which was not the rate notified in the Tariff for Wrought timber, and the consignor handed over the goods to the Company at the owner's risk.

The contention on behalf of the Railway Company is that there being only one rate for Wrought timber and no separate rate for unwrought-timber, the clerk had no authority to charge at a rate lower than 0-4-8 fixed for wrought timber, and he had no right to accept goods at the lower rate merely on the ground that they were understood to be carried at the owner's risk, and that as a mistake was made by the clerk concerned, the Company is entitled to recover the full amount authorised.

On the other hand the learned advocate for the applicant contends that the Company had originally charged a lower rate at the owner's risk and is therefore not entitled to alter the basis of that rate and charge on the supposition that the goods were to be carried at the risk of the Company and therefore the amount charged was at the wagon rate and the

Civil

1932

Chhotey Lal
v.
R. K. Railway

Sulaiman, J.

Company cannot alter the basis of the contract by demanding freight at the maund rate.

It was laid down by the Full Bench in the case of Chunni Lal v. The Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway Company Ltd.[1] that a Railway Company 'is not entitled to alter the basis of the contract by demanding freight calculated per maund when the goods had been accepted for carriage at the wagon rate for the whole distance.' Apparently in that case the rate originally charged was Rs.270 per wagon load for the whole distance. This case has naturally been followed by this Court in subsequent cases of Alla-uddin v. The G. I. P. Railway Company[2] and Gulab Dei v. G. I. P. Railway[3].

On behalf of the Railway Company it is however pointed out that in the present case the clerk had not charged at the wagon rate, i.e., so much per wagon for the entire distance, but that the charge was so much per maund per mile. Our attention has been drawn to the Rule 16 (General Rules, 1926) under which the Company is entitled to have the goods reweighed and to charge for the actual weight even though it be different from the computed rate. It is also pointed out that if there had been goods of mixed quality, namely, both Wrought and Un-wrought timber, the Company was entitled to charge at the highest class of rate for the entire weight under Rule 77 (General Rules, 1926). It is therefore argued that the mistake was due to a wrong classification of the goods on the part of the clerk concerned. It is suggested that the goods being planks were admittedly wrought timber, but the clerk committed a mistake in supposing that they were not wrought timber and did not charge at 0-4-8 the rate for Wrought Timber. But it has to be conceded that there was no rate like 0-2-9 for Un-wrought timber at all.

In our opinion the mistake was not merely one of a wrong classification, and even if it had been such a mistake it would not have helped the Company in this particular case.

Under Rule 59 (General Rules, 1926) the Railway Board have fixed certain maxima and minima for various class of goods beyond which limits the Railway Companies cannot be allowed to go without the previous sanction of the Railway Board. Within these limits the Railway can fix their own rates which are notified in the form of Railway Tariffs. For class I the maximum rate is .39 pie per maund per mile and minimum rate is .10 pie per maund per mile. Between these limits the Railway Company can fix any rate it considers competent, having regard to the extent of the traffic. It cannot be denied that from time to time the Railway Company alters the rates within these limits, but all such alterations are entered in the Tariff which is notified. The rate charged at Shahjahanpur, namely, 0-2-9 was more than the minimum rate of .10. The rate demanded at Agra, namely, 0-4-8 per maund was the maximum amount, namely, .38. It is therefore obvious that the R. K. R. Company could without any previous sanction of the Railway Board have fixed 0-2-9 as the rate of Wrought timber and notified the same in the Tariff which they issued. But it is a fact that no such rate had been notified and the actual rate notified was that of 0-4-8 for Wrought timber.

---

[1] I. L. R. 29 All. 228

[2] 14 A. L. J. 494

[3] 24 A. L. J. 129

The mistake made by the clerk therefore was not that he mistook the planks to be Un-wrought timber (as there was no separate rate for Un-wrought timber) but the mistake was that he charged at a rate lower than that mentioned in the Tarrif.

So far as the rule and notifications of Railway Companies issued under a authority of the Railway Board are concerned, one might possibly have assumed that there was constructive notice to the public. The same assumption can not be made as regard the rate entered in Tariffs issued by the Railway Company without reference to the Railway Board. In order to fix knowledge of the rate mentioned therein, it must be shown that the attention of the other contracting party was specifically drawn to it, inasmuch as the question of notice is a question of fact and not of law.

As pointed out above it would have been open to the Railway Company without previous sanction of the Board to charge at the rate of 0-2-9 for Wrought timber. In some cases, e.g., The Secretary of State for India in Council v. Harbans Prasad Viash[4] the Railway Companies have allowed concession rates to individual traders within the prescribed limits. It therefore cannot be said that the charging at the rate of 0-2-9 was contrary to any rule or regulation issued by the Railway Board which had the force of law. The breach committed by the clerk was of a provision in the Tariff issued by the Railway Company itself, of which the consignor cannot be deemed to have constructive notice.

It seems to us that in these circumstances the Railway Company must be deemed to be bound by the rate of contract entered into on their behalf by their agent, viz., the Booking Clerk. The consignor believed that he was sending the goods at his own risk at the rate of 0-2-9. There was another route by which the goods might well have been consigned, and the Company therefore should not be allowed to go back upon its own contract and charge a higher rate. The consignor was not responsible for the mistake made by the clerk in not charging at the Tariff rate, because private instructions issued by a principal to an agent are not binding on a third party unless the latter has notice. We are therefore of opinion that the Railway Company was not entitled to demand any freight in excess of what had already been charged. It is not necessary for us to suggest how the claims between the two Companies on whose lines the goods were carried are to be adjusted.

We have remarked above that even if there had been a mistake in the classification of goods the Company would not be entitled to demand a higher freight in this particular case. Under the rules issued by the Railway Board the Company can seek protection if there was a mistake in classification. This was also the case before the Full Bench—Chunni Lal v. The Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway Company Ld.[5]. But unfortunately for the Company the conditions of the contract noted on the back of the Receipt left out the word 're-classification'. It was stated therein that the Railway Company had the right of re-measurement, reweighment and recalculation of charges at the place of destination. That paragraph does not contain the word 're-classification' which occurs in

[4] 28 A. L. J. 206

[5] I. L. R. 29 All. 228

Rule 15. On behalf of the Railway Company it is suggested that that word had been left out owing to a mis-print. The fact remains that the term of the written contract as notified to the consignor did not protect the Company from a mistake made in classification of goods. We therefore doubt very much whether the Company would be justified in adding to the terms of this particular contract by interpolating the word 're-classification' in paragraph 6, simply because it occurs in the Rule though it does not find any place in the written contract relied upon.

It may be noted that in two receipts the plaintiff was charged at the right rate at Shahjahanpur. The counsel for the parties are agreed that on the basis of our finding the plaintiff is entitled to a decree for Rs.320. We think that the plaintiff is entitled to interest at the court rate of 6 per cent per annum, from the date of institution of the suit till realisation. We direct that the parties should receive and pay costs in proportion to success and failure.

Appeal allowed

CRIMINAL
1931
Sep. 29
NIAMATULLAH, J.

BHIKUGIR AND ANOTHER (Applicants)
versus
KING-EMPEROR (Opposite party)*

Penal Code, Section 332, and Criminal Procedure Code, Section 103—Search of applicant's house—Police constables prevented applicants from entering into house at the time of search—Scuffle—Constables hurt—Whether Section 332 applicable.

On receiving information that the applicants were in possession of illicit liquor, the Excise Inspector with the assistance of the police, searched the house of the applicants. Two constables who had been posted near the house prevented the applicants from entering into the house saying that they should enter it after the search was over. On a scuffle which ensued there was an exchange of blows between the applicants and the constables, with the result that the applicants and the constables received injuries. The applicants were subsequently convicted under Section 332 I. P. C. Held, that the constables acted not in the discharge of their duty, which was to allow the applicants to enter into the house and be present at the time of the search, but in contravention of the mandatory provisions of Section 103 Cr. P. C., and were not justified in offering physical resistance when the applicants attempted to go into their house and therefore Section 332 I. P. C. did not apply.

CRIMINAL REVISION from an order of I. B. MUNDLE ESQ., Sessions Judge of Saharanpur.

Akhtar Husain Khan for the applicants.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The following judgment was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision by Bhiku Gir and Narottam Gir from an order of the learned Sessions Judge, Saharanpur, who dismissed their appeal from an order of conviction passed by a Magistrate first class of that District, sentencing the applicants to six months' R. I. for an offence under Section 332 I. P. C. The sentence was reduced to three months' R. I. on appeal by the learned Sessions Judge.

---

*Cr. Rev. 505 of 1931

It appears that on March 24, 1931, B. Munshi Lal, the Excise Inspector, received information that the applicants were in possession of illicit liquor. He obtained the assistance of the police inspector, the sub-inspector and two constables for the purpose of raiding the house of the applicants and searching it. They sent for four witnesses who, it should be noted, were not men from the locality but from different villages. This was a contravention of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but it is explained that the witnesses from the locality were considered liable to be won over by the applicants. At this stage, however, this aspect of the matter is not material.

It is in the evidence of the excise inspector that the police officers, the excise inspector and the four search witnesses formed themselves into two parties and proceeded to enter the house through two different entrances. The police constables Tafazzul Husain and Lokram had been posted near the house to prevent anyone entering into the house. The applicants, who had been previously made to search the persons of the witnesses, the police officers and the excise inspector and were sitting at their baithak a short distance away, proceeded to enter into their own house, which was about to be searched by the party. The constables prevented them from entering into the house saying that they should enter it after the search was over. This conversation was heard by the police officers present, as is apparent from the evidence of the excise inspector, but none of them declared that the applicants were entitled to be present inside the house at the time of the search though not before it. On the other hand they tacitly endorsed the insistence of the constables that the applicants should not enter the house before the search was over. On a scuffle which ensued there was an exchange of blows between the applicants and the constables, with the result that the applicants received no less than 12 injuries and the two constables received two "slight but definite injuries." (This is the description of the injuries given by the learned Magistrate). The applicants were overpowered by the police party. They were held in custody outside the house during the time search was made inside their house. Subsequently the applicants were prosecuted for an offence under Section 332 I. P. C.

The learned counsel for the applicants contends that an offence under Section 332 I. P. C. is not made out in view of the evidence led on behalf of the prosecution. He points out that the learned Sessions Judge, who reduced the sentence, was inclined to the view that the action of the police was somewhat highhanded. He remarked:—

> It is easy to understand that appellants did not like the idea of the house being searched in their absence, especially when they had some money buried under the floor. The police were perhaps not quite justified in keeping the appellants out of their house, but they did so before the search began when they wanted to keep out all strangers and even the inmates of the house from rushing inside and destroying all traces of excisable articles.

CRIMINAL

1931

BHIKUGIR
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Niamat-ullah, J.

I have been through the evidence of the excise inspector and of the sub-inspector, and think that the learned Sessions Judge has not quite accurately represented what happened when the scuffle ensued. It is not, and this fact is to be emphasised, that the applicants were directed not to enter the house before the search and that they were permitted to be present at the time of the search. If this had been the position and the applicants had intended to forestall the search party with the intention of removing excisable articles, the case would have been different. The view of the police, obviously based on the ignorance of the provisions of Section 103 Cr. P. C. was that they were entitled to keep out every one including the owner or occupier of the house before and at the time of the search. They persisted in this view and attempted to debar the applicants absolutely from entering into the house till after the search was over. This was in the teeth of the provisions of Section 103 Cr. P. C. which lays down that > the occupant of the place searched, or some person in his behalf, shall, in every instance, be permitted to attend during the search, and a copy of the list prepared under this section, signed by the said witnesses, shall be delivered to such occupant or person at his request.

The question at which the applicants on the one side and the police constables supported by the police officers and possibly the excise inspector, on the other, were at variance was whether the applicants had a right to go inside the house at the time of the search. The question, of course, arose before the search party entered into the house. The applicants maintained that they had; the search party, on the other, held otherwise. The result was an exchange of blows between the constables and the applicants who had the worst of it, having received many more injuries than the constables did.

The facts being as stated above, the next question is whether the applicants should be considered to be guilty of an offence under Section 332 I. P. C. which makes causing > hurt to any person being a public servant in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, or with intent to prevent or deter that person or any other public servant from discharging his duty as such public servant, punishable. If public servants, in this case the constables, acted not in the discharge of their duty, which was to allow the applicants to enter into the house and be present at the time of the search, but in contravention of the mandatory provisions of Section 103 Cr. P. C. and were obstructed, Section 332 I. P. C. cannot apply. The applicants were justified in insisting on their right to go inside the house and be present throughout the search. Their anxiety, as pointed out by the learned Sessions Judge, was natural, in view of their money being buried underground in many parts of the house which was to be searched. If, therefore, they caused hurt in attempting to go into their own house on physical resistance being offered by the constables, who were not justified in doing so, they cannot be held guilty of any offence under the Indian Penal Code. I am fortified in the view I have taken by the case of Nirmal Singh v. Emperor[1].

The applicants have already served about 2½ months out of three months' R. I. awarded by the learned Sessions Judge,

---

[1] 17 A. L. J. 1047

In the view of the case I have taken this revision is allowed. The conviction and sentence passed on the applicants are set aside. They shall be forthwith set at liberty.

Revision allowed

CRIMINAL

1931

BHIKUGIR
v.
KING-EMPEROR

Niamat-ullah, J.

CIVIL

1932

Feb. 29

SULAIMAN, J.
MUKERJI, J
YOUNG, J.

GAJADHAR PRASAD AND OTHERS (Defendants)
versus
GAURI SHANKAR AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)*

Hindu Law—Inheritance—Mitakshara—'Heritable bandhus'—Rules for determining—Last male owner's father's father's daughter's son's daughter's son—Whether his heritable bandhu.

The last male owner's father's father's daughter's son's daughter's sons are not his heritable bandhus.

Per SULAIMAN, J.—Rules laid down by Sarvadhikari in his Tagore Law Lectures for determining heritable bandhus re-stated as follows:—

(I) Heritable bandhus can belong only to three classes mentioned in the Mitakshara (and cannot be added to). The Atma bandhus are now well known to be included (1) within the circle of grand-parents in the ascending line, and their descendants under certain limitations including certain descendants of the owner himself. For Pitri or Matri bandhus we go outside the circle and higher, but in accordance with the ordinary conception we must travel upwards along agnatic lines, that is (2) the father's father's agnatic ascendants (Pitri, ex parte paterna), (3) the father's mother's agnatic ascendants (Pitri, ex parte materna), (4) mother's father's agnatic ascendants (Matri, ex parte paterna) and (5) mother's mother's agnatic ascendants (Matri, ex parte materna), and not in the agnatic ascendants of the mothers of these ancestors.

(II) There must be at least one female between the given person and the deceased, and there cannot be more than two females between the propositus and the common ancestors on the one side, and not more than two females between the common ancestor and the claimant on the other side, and if two females exist on either side they must be related as mother and daughter to each other. This holds good in the case of Pitri and Matri bandhus, whether ex parte paterna or ex parte materna and also in the case of Atma bandhus whether in the ascending line or in the descending line.

Per MUKERJI, J.—A bandhu who has a right to inherit to a propositus, otherwise known as heritable bandhu, must possess the following qualifications:—

(I) He may be one (1) in the propositus's father's line which would include his own line, either ascending or descending because descending line also would be his father's line through the propositus himself, (2) in the propositus's maternal grandfather's line, (3) in the propositus's father's maternal grandfather's line, (4) in the propositus's mother's maternal grandfather's line.

(II) Both the claimant and the deceased must be related to each other as sapindas.

Keshar Singh v. Secretary of Estate, I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652 dissented from; Ram Chandra v. Vinayek, I. L. R. 42 Cal. 384 explained; Sheo Nandan v.

---

*F. A. 96 of 1927

Manni, 21 A. L. J. 288, Ram Sia v. Bua, I. L. R. 47 All. 10 approved. Texts of Mitakshara examined.

FIRST APPEAL from the decision of BABU GOVIND SARUP MATHUR, Subordinate Judge of Mirzapur.

The following Referring Order was made by SULAIMAN and YOUNG, JJ.—One important question raised in this appeal is that even if the dedication made by Mst. Rajwanti, a Hindu widow, was without the oral authority of her deceased husband, the alienation was only voidable at the option of the next reversioner, and therefore the defendants have no locus standi to challenge the alienation. This is based on the contention that according to the pedigree, as printed on page 3 of the paper book, the defendants Nos. 4 and 5 are not the heritable bandhus of the last male owner Suraj Prasad. The latter question is undoubtedly a substantial and important question of Hindu law which requires an authoritative pronouncement. The learned advocate for the plaintiffs strongly relies on the statement of the law as contained in Dr. Sarvadhikari's book on the Principles of the Hindu Law of Inheritance, 2nd Edition, p. 571-72, where he emphasised that if there are two females (on the father's side, these two again must be related as mother and daughter. He also strongly relies on the classification of the cognate sapindas who can be heritable bandhus given by the same learned author on p. 591-92. Further reliance is placed on the case of Sheo Nandan v. Munni, 21 A. L. J. 288, decided by a Bench of this Court. In that case the plaintiff was the great grandson of the sister of the father of the propositus. The learned Judges relying on the passage in Dr. Sarvadhikari's Principles of Hindu Law of Inheritance, held that he was not an heir. With great respect we would say that we have some doubts as to the correctness of this decision. It is, however, pointed out that the test laid down by Dr. Sarvadhikari, and the rule of law in Sheo Nandan's case were approved of by another Bench of this Court in Ram Sia v. Bua, I. L. R. 47 All. 10 where the previous decision of this Court in Shib Sahai v. Saraswati, I. L. R. 37 All. 583 was also explained.

On the other hand, there can be no doubt that a Bench of the Madras High Court in Kesar Singh v. The Secretary of State for India, I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652 has expressly dissented from Dr. Sarvadhikari's view. The judgment of their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Ramchandra Martand Waikar v. Vinayak Venkatesh Kothekar, 41 I. A. 290, which was incorrectly reported in 12 A. L. J. 1281, does not reproduce the tests laid down by Dr. Sarvadhikari.

As the case is of a high valuation, we think that the following question of law should be decided by a larger Bench:—

"On the pedigree as given on page 3 of the paper-book, are the defendants Nos. 4 and 5 heritable bandhus of Suraj Prasad in the absence of any nearer heir?"

We direct that the record be placed before the Hon'ble the Chief Justice for the constitution of a larger Bench.

K. N. Katju, Iqbal Ahmad, Ambika Prasad, A. P. Bagchi, Jagdamba Prasad and Mahadeo Prasad Verma for the appellants.

B. E. O'Conor, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, P. L. Banerji, U. S. Bajpai, N. Upadhiya, Ram Nama Prasad and K. L. Misra for the respondents.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—The question for consideration in this reference is whether the last male owner's father's father's daughter's son's daughter's sons are his heritable bandhus. The admitted pedigree is as follows:—

CIVIL 1932
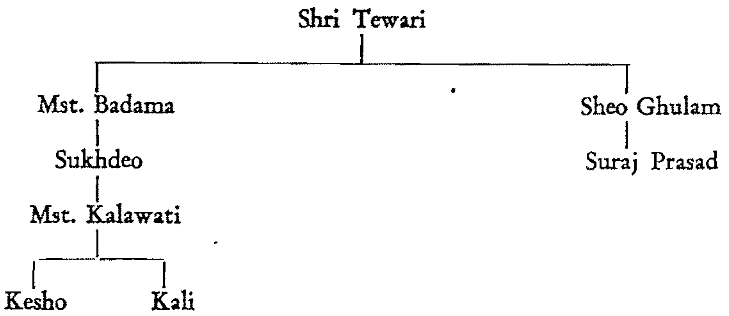
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Sulaiman, J.



The learned advocate for the claimants contends that inasmuch as Kesho and Kali are within five degrees of the common ancestor Shri Tewari, (when the claimants, their female ancestor and the common ancestor are all included in counting), and Suraj Prasad was within only three degrees of the common ancestor, the case is covered by the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ramchandra v. Vinayek[1]. He has to concede that their Lordships laid down the further condition as to the mutuality of sapinda relationship. But he contends that no other restrictions should be placed on heritable bandhus. He relies strongly on the case of Keshar Singh v. The Secretary of State[2], in which the pedigree was exactly the same as is before us, and the learned Judges of the Madras High Court dissenting from certain conclusions of Prof. Sarvadhikari held that the claimant was a heritable bandhu. He also adopts the line of reasoning followed by a writer in Volume IX of the Madras Law Journal (1899) page 54 onwards. On the other hand, the learned advocate for the respondents places his strong reliance on the conclusions arrived at by Prof. Sarvadhikari in his Tagore Law Lectures (1880) dealing with the principles of the Hindu Law of Inheritance, pp. 591-92 and pp. 517-72 (Second Edition). His conclusions were:—

(1) that the heritable bandhus can belong only to three classes mentioned in the Mitakshara and they fall within five groups, namely (i) the owner's descending line, (ii) owner's father's family, (iii) owner's maternal grandfather's line, (iv) father's maternal grandfather's line and (v) mother's maternal grandfather's line; and

(2) that there must be at least one female between the given person and the deceased; and that (in the case of bandhus ex parte paterna) there could not be more than two females between them; and if there are two females (on the father's side) these two again must be related as mother and daughter to each other.

A bandhu is a cognate relation, i.e., one related through a female. The institutes of Manu do not refer to bandhus at all. The claim of bandhus as heirs was apparently first recognised by Yajnavalkya, who lived about the second century A.D. The Mitakshara by Vijnaneswara, who flourished about the 12th century, is a commentary on Yajnavalkya's text. The Viramitrodaya is a commentary by Mitra Misra on the Mitakshara. These commentaries are of high authority in the Benares School.

The relevent texts of the Mitakshara as translated by Colebrooke are as follows:—

---

[1] 41 I. A. 290=42 Cal. 384

[2] I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652

CIVIL

1932

GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR

Sulaiman, J

Chapter II, Section vi, p. 1:—

> (1) On failure of gentiles, the cognates are heirs. Cognates are of three kinds; related to the person himself, to his father, or to his mother: as is declared by the following text. 'The sons of his own father's sister, the sons of his own mother's sister, and the sons of his own aunt, and the sons of his mother's maternal uncle must be considered as his own cognate kindred. The sons of his father's paternal aunt, the sons of his father's maternal aunt, and the sons of his father's maternal uncle, must be deemed his father's cognate kindred. The sons of his mother's maternal uncles, must be reckoned his mother's cognate kindred'.
>
> (2) Here, by reason of near affinity, the kindred of the deceased himself, are his successors in the first instance; on failure of them, his father's cognate kindred or, if there be none his mother's cognate kindred. This must be understood to be the order of succession here intended.

The original words in the texts indicating the three classes are (1) Atma bandhus, i.e., own bandhus (2) Pitri bandhus, i.e., bandhus on the father's side or as they are sometimes called the father's bandhus and (3) Matri bandhus, i.e., bandhus on the mother's side or as sometimes called the mother's bandhus. It was laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Greedharee Lall Roy v. Bengal Government[3], that the enumeration of bandhus in the Mitakshara is illustrative and not exhaustive. It has been further laid down by their Lordships in Muthusami v. Simambedu[4], and in Aditnarayan v. Mahabir Prasad[5] that among the three classes, the Atma bandhus succeed before Pitri bandhus who succeed before Matri bandhus.

Again, it is now also well-settled that the bandhu relationship under the Mitakshara is based on propinquity or affinity, i.e., community of blood, or, to be more accurate, of particles of the same pinda or body. (Community of blood is not a Hindu conception, as a child is supposed to inherit some materials from his father and some from his mother; and he inherits blood from his mother only. Ghosh's Hindu Law, Vol. I, 190 3rd edition). In contrast with this, under the Dayabhaga the principle underlying succession is one of spiritual efficacy, based on community in the offering of pinda or funeral cake. It may be noted here that the word 'pinda' means both body and also cake or ball.

The leading case on this point is that of Ramchandra v. Vinayek[6]. It is necessary to give a brief summary of the judgment in this case, as counsel for both the parties rely upon it strongly. Their Lordships quoted the text of Manu that "the property of a near sapinda shall be that of a near sapinda" and pointed out that this refers only to the succession of one male to another, for females inherit by express rules. The right of collaterals is dependent on the existence of sapinda-relationship between the propositus and the claimant. The author of the Dayabhaga considers that sapinda means 'community in the offering of funeral oblations, a sapinda literally signifies a ball of rice offered at the performance of obsequial rites'. The author of the Mitakshara abandoned the ancient doctrine and construed sapinda-relationship to arise from community of blood, i.e., of particles of the same body. The bandhus are distant kinsmen related to the deceased through females. They make their appearance as heirs first in the

---

[3] 12 Moore's I. A. 448 (1868)

[4] 23 I. A. 83

[5] 48 I. A. 86

[6] 41 I. A. 290

Yajnavalkya's enunciations. Their Lordships quoted from the third chapter of the Achara Kanda, the first book of the Mitakshara on Established Rules of Conduct. In laying down that a man should marry a girl who is his non-sapinda it is stated that she is called his sapinda who has particles of body of some ancestor in common with him. Their Lordships then quoted "verse 53: 'after the fifth ancestor on the mother's and after the seventh on the father's side.'. 'On the mother's side' in the mother's line, after the fifth, 'on the father's side' in the father's line after the seventh (ancestor) the sapinda-relationship ceases etcetera." (I have put the words 'on the mother's side' and 'on the father's side' within quotation marks to indicate that they are mere reproduction from the original text quoted first, the comments upon them being in mother's line and in the father's line respectively. This is made clear in Prof. Sarvadhikari's translation of the text, as well as in a Poona translation of the original).

Their Lordships had no manner of doubt that in this quotation Vijnaneswara was laying down rules for the limitation of sapinda-relationship generally, and not with regard to marriage only. Their Lordships closely examined the doctrine of the Mitakshara, and pointed out that the word 'bandhu' in its system has a distinctive technical meaning signifying the Bhinna-gotra sapindas. Their Lordships then quoted the relevant texts of the Mitakshara. Referring to the earlier case of Greedharee Lall, their Lordships remarked that:

> the remark of the Board that the text did not purport to be exhaustive enumeration of all bandhus capable of inheriting and was not cited for that purpose by the author but simply as a proof or illustration of his proposition that there are three kinds or classes of bandhus, hardly warranted the contention that the classes specified by Vijnaneswara can be added to.

But in that case it did not seem necessary to their Lordships to enter upon the determination of the question whether the classes can be extended. They held that, 'the limitation of five degrees clearly applies and can only apply to the 'Bhinna-gotra sapindas, and that the limitation is not restricted to matrimonial affinity only'. Their Lordships rejected the opinion expressed by Shastri Golap Chandra Sarkar in his work on Hindu Law that the word 'bandhu' in the Mitakshara means and includes either all cognate relations without any restriction, or at any rate, all cognates within seven degrees on both the father's as well as on the mother's side. Their Lordships concluded that the right of inheritance is founded on sapinda-relationship which, under the Mitakshara, means consanguinity; but this bond comes to an end with the fifth degree when the descent is through a female, as the right to inherit could not continue after the relationship on which it is founded has come to an end.

The next proposition which their Lordships considered was the doctrine of the mutuality of sapinda-relationship, based on the rule enunciated by Manu. They referred to Prof. Sarvadhikari's Lectures and to Bhattacharyya's Hindu Law with approval for the proposition that in order to determine whether any persons are heritable cognates of the propositus it is necessary to see whether they are sapindas to each other. This had been laid down in Umaid Bahadur v. Udoichand[7]. Their Lordships also referred to Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram[8] where it had been held that a man in order to be a heritable sapinda of the propositus must be so related to him that they are sapindas of each other.

The general conclusions to which their Lordships came were in the following terms: (1) that the sapinda relationship on which heritable right of collaterals is founded ceases in the case of Bhinna-gotra sapinda with the fifth degree from the common ancestor, and (2) that in order to entitle a man to succeed to the inheritance of another he must be so related to the latter that they are sapindas of each other.

In the case before their Lordships the claimants were the deceased's paternal grandfather's son's son's daughter's daughter's sons. They were Bhinna-gotra beyond the fifth degree, and the element of mutuality was wanting. Their claim was accordingly rejected.

The learned advocate for the appellants contends that the two tests laid down by their Lordships in Ramchandra's case are exhaustive. Their Lordships no doubt laid down that no Bhinna-gotra sapinda beyond the fifth degree from the common ancestor can be a heritable bandhu on the ground of sapinda-relationship. The learned advocate for the appellants urges that it was necessarily held that all persons within five degrees are heritable bandhus. The converse proposition does not follow. There are two circumstances which conclusively show that no exhaustive definition of bandhu was intended to be laid down, and the other restrictions also are possible. First on page 298 it was pointed out that females inherit by express rules only. They must therefore be excluded as heirs. Secondly, their Lordships left the question open whether the three classes of bandhus could be added to.

It seems convenient now to examine the analysis put forward by Prof. Sarvadhikari. It must be noted that the Lectures were delivered in 1880, and although in the second edition they have been revised and brought up to date by incorporating the various rulings, the main body of the text could not be substantially altered. There are certain points which compel one to hold that the propositions laid down by Prof. Sarvadhikari should not be accepted off-hand without a close investigation. At page 594 the first conclusion arrived at in Ramchandra v. Vinayek is quoted wrongly and it is stated that the sapinda-relationship ceases in the case of Bhinn-gotra sapindas with the fifth degree from the propositus. The report of the judgment as originally received had misprints which were corrected subsequently. The conclusion is obviously quoted from the incorrect copy of the judgment. The Editor thought that it fitted in very well with the general scheme put forward by Prof. Sarvadhikari. The conclusion as quoted in the report of the full judgment in the foot-note is however correct. On page 610 he thought that, if instead of applying the rule of affinity in regulating the order of succession, he had applied the principles of religious benefit, the results would have been exactly the same and that this was an additional proof that the doctrine of religious benefit and the doctrine of affinity are not really different from each other; but they are inseparably connected with each other and when properly applied

---

[7] I. L. R. 6 Cal. 119

[8] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 339

CIVIL
1932
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Sulaiman, J.

they yield the same results. This proposition can no longer be said to be quite correct when the order of preference among bandhus has to be determined. Their Lordships of the Privy Council have distinctly laid down in Vedachela v. Subramania[9] that in each class propinquity is the governing factor and the nearness in blood determines the right to succeed, though as between the bandhus in the same class and in the same degree of nearness, the spiritual benefit conferred upon the propositus may be a ground of preference. Prof. Sarvadhikari's classification of Atma bandhus apparently follows the line adopted under the Dayabhaga Law, where the capacity for conferring spiritual benefit is the governing test. The pinda is offered to the three immediate paternal ancestors, and the three immediate maternal ancestors, the pinda-lepas are offered to the three paternal ancestors above them. The ascent both through the father and the mother are exclusively in the agnatic lines. He takes the father's agnatic ascendants as well as the mother's agnatic ascendants as the owner's Atma bandhus. These he divides into ex parte paterna and ex parte materna, according as they are on the father's or the mother's side. He then takes up the father's own bandhus. He naturally identifies the father's father's agnatic ascendants with the line of the owner's father's agnatic ascendants, and takes the father's mother's agnatic ascendants as the second class, namely, Pitri bandhus. Similarly he identifies the mother's father's agnatic ascendants with the line of the owner's mother's agnatic ascendants, and takes the mother's mother's agnatic ascendants as the Matri bandhus. The descendants of the ancestors in each class are of course included in that class. In Table 1 (a) showing the Atma bandhus (ex parte paterna), page 606A he shows the owner's great grandfather's daughter's son as an Atma bandhu (ex parte paterna). In the same way in Table 1 (b), page 607B he shows the owner's mother's grandfather's daughter's son as an Atma bandhu (ex parte materna). But this classification is inconsistent with the Mitakshara and cannot be accepted. In the text of the Mitakshara quoted above the sons of the father's paternal aunt, are described as Patri bandhus, and the sons of his mother's paternal aunt are described as Matri bandhus. These are the identical relations given in the two Tables.

The extension of the Atma bandhus in the father's and the mother's lines above the grand-parents would make a considerable difference when the order of preference is to be considered, as all Atma bandhus come before the Pitri bandhus. That the Table of succession as given by Prof. Sarvadhikari and followed by other learned authors is wrong as regards the place assigned to the maternal uncle, is clear from the pronouncement of their Lordships of the Privy Council in Vedachela v. Subramania[10] (vide, the last paragraph but two in the judgment). It follows that according to the Mitakshara the cognates connected through the ascendants above the paternal grandfather just as much as those above the paternal grandmother must be regarded as Pitri bandhus. Similarly cognates connected through the ascendants above the maternal grandfather just as much as those above the maternal grandfather must be regarded as Matri bandhus. Atma bandhus are either in the descending line of the propositus or in his line up to the grand-parents. As we go upwards from the grandfather in the father's line or the paternal grandmother in her paternal line we get Pitri bandhus. If we go above maternal grandfather in his ancestral line or the maternal grandmother in her paternal line we get Matri bandhus. There are of course certain restrictions which will be mentioned later, bandhus in the father's father's agnatic line are Pitri bandhus (ex parte paterna), those in the father's mother's agnatic line are Pitri bandhus (ex parte materna), those in the mother's father's agnatic line are Matri bandhus (ex parte paterna) and those in the mother's mother's agnatic line are Matri bandhus (ex parte materna). These classifications alone appear to be consistent with the text of the Mitakshara. This division is in perfect accordance with that given in the Smriti Chandrika, Chapter XI, Section V, Paragraph 14 and the Saraswati Vilasa, Paragraph 595, which are books of high authority in southern India, and which are quoted by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Vedachela v. Subramania. They show clearly that the descendants of ancestors above the grand-parents on the father's and the mother's side are Pitri and Matri bandhus respectively.

---

[9] 48 I. A. 349

[10] 48 I. A. 349=44 Mad. 753

It will however be shown presently that in spite of the divergence in the classification, Prof. Sarvadhikari's conclusions and the fixing of the five groups are both substantially correct, though his propositions have to be restated in new terms in view of the pronouncement by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ramchandra's case.

The learned advocate for the defendants-appellants adopting the line of argument taken by the writer in the Madras Law Journal contends that the Mitakshara speaks of one's own or Atma bandhus and one's father's and mother's bandhus, but not one's father's own bandhus or mother's own bandhus. The contention is that the father's bandhus are spoken of generally and should be further divided into father's own bandhus (Pitri Atma), father's father's bandhus (Pitri Pitri Atma), and father's mother's bandhus (Pitri Matri Atma.). Similarly he would divide mother's bandhus into three sub-divisions, viz., mother's own (Matri Atma) mother's father's bandhus (Matri Pitri Atma) and mother's mother's bandhus (Matri Matri Atma). In this way the relationship of heritable bandhus would extend beyond the grand-parents of the owner and would include all the male and female great grand-parents.

It seems to me that the extension is fantastic and is based on an obvious fallacy, that the words 'father' and 'mother' have been used in a generic sense. If this were so then mother would stand not only for mother's mother's mother but also for mother's mother's father, which is untenable. Another error, which would be pointed out later on, is the assumption, that the words 'father' and 'mother' have been used in the possessive sense.

The language of the text of the Mitakshara itself makes it clear that the bandhus are to be divided into three classes. They are of three kinds only. There is no justification for adding another class to these three classes. When the text says that they are of three kinds, the classes must be three, neither more nor less. As has been pointed out by Prof. Sarvadhikari on page 591 even the additional bandhus mentioned by Mitra Misra fall within the same three classes. "In fact no commentator within the last eight hundred years has ever suggested that there may be a class of heritable bandhus other than the three specifically mentioned in the

CIVIL
1932
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Sulaiman, J.

Mitakshara." In Amrit Kumari v. Lakhi Narayan[11] the Full Bench remarked that Vijnaneswara's enunciation is used simply in establishment of the proposition that there are three classes of bandhus. The three classes are therefore exhaustive and not illustrative.

The case of Keshare Singh v. Secretary of State[12] is directly in favour of the appellants. The mistakes in Prof. Sarvadhikari describing the father's father's sister's son and the mother's father's brother's son and mother's father's sister's son as Atma bandhus contrary to the text of the Mitakshara where they are called Pitri bandhus and Matri bandhus respectively, were pointed out and so also the wrong place assigned to the maternal uncle. The learned Judges thought that for the five groups prepared by Prof. Sarvadhikari, there was no support in the texts or ancient commentaries. They considered that there was no justification for narrowing the class of heritable bandhus however logical and rational the theory may be.

If the Madras view were accepted the necessary result would be to include great grand-parents within the Atma bandhus, and father's mother's agnatic ascendants as well as mother's mother's mother's agnatic ascendants may become bandhus. It is urged on behalf of the appellants that Mr. Mulla has adopted this view in his Hindu Law, pp. 48 and also pp. 52-53 (Sixth Edition.). But Mr. (now the Rt. Hon'ble Mr.) Mulla has merely incorporated the result of the decision without expressly saying that it is a right decision.

The words in the text of the Mitakshara are Pitri bandhus and Matri bandhus. They have sometimes been translated as 'father's bandhus' and 'mother's bandhus'. Had the words been 'Pituh' bandhu or 'Matuh' bandhu, the translations would have been undoubtedly correct. But the words are Pitri bandhu and Matri bandhu, which, when translated word for word' mean 'father bandhu' and 'mother bandhu'. As pointed out by Mukerji, J. these are samasa or shortened forms, and may stand for one out of several forms as the context may demand. That the words Pitri and Matri have been used in the adjectival sense and not in the possessive, and they do not mean father's bandhus and mother's bandhus, but the person's bandhus through the father, i.e., on the father's side or in the father's line, and the person's bandhus through the mother, i.e., on the mother's side or in the mother's line, is obvious from the fact that they must still be the person's bandhus and not bandhus of only the father or the mother. The words cannot mean that a cognate who is the father's bandhu or the mother's bandhu, though not a bandhu of the propositus, is an heir. It cannot therefore be urged that the words father's bandhus and mother's bandhus include the same Atma relations of the father and the mother as the Atma relations of the owner.

It is well known that the Hindu conception of sapinda relationship is primarily along the agnatic line. When one talks of the father's line, he generally implies the father's father's agnatic line or at most father's mother's agnatic line, and not father's mother's mother's line. Similarly the mother's line would be the mother's father's agnatic ascendants or the mother's mother's agnatic ascendants and not the mother's father's mother's line or the mother's mother's mother's line.

---

[11] 10 W. R. (F.B.) 76

[12] I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652

As pointed out in Umaid Bahadur v. Udoi Chand[13]: the sapinda-relationship has been defined in Achara Kanda. Verse 52 contains the following passage:—"So also (is the nephew) a sapinda-relation of his maternal aunts and uncles and the rest, because particles of the same body (the paternal grandfather) have entered into (his and theirs): likewise (does he stand in sapinda-relationship) with paternal uncles and aunts and the rest." This is followed by Verse 53 which fixes the limit of the fifth ancestor on the mother's side. The commentary on this verse also shows agnatic ascent or descent. The Full Bench in Umaid Bahadur's case in order to explain the doctrine of the mutuality of sapinda-relationship gave an illustration showing that the common ancestor's daughter's daughter's son's son was not a bandhu. Though their statement was not absolutely necessary, it cannot be said that it was altogether an obiter dictum. It is entitled to great weight.

In Babu Lal v. Nanku Ram[14] the learned Judges pointed out who according to the explanation or definition given in the Mitakshara was a sapinda. The fourth group was stated in the following words: 'Any ascendant within the fifth degree reckoned from and inclusive of himself in the maternal line, that is any of the four maternal ancestors, namely, the mother, her father, her grandfather and the rest.' Here too the mother's ancestors are in her agnatic line. This is how the learned Judges understood the definition of a sapinda.

The owner's bandhu may be in his father's agnatic line or in his mother's agnatic line or he may be in father's line or the mother's line, which would include the father's mother's agnatic line and mother's mother's agnatic line. They cannot be in the father's mother's mother's agnatic line or in the mother's mother's mother's agnatic line.

There is one more circumstance which also conclusively narrows the group of bandhus, i.e., only male ancestors beyond the circle of grandparents. If bandhus were intended to include descendants of all ancestors, males and females, limited by the only restriction that they should be within five degrees, then there would have been no necessity to mention the last two classes, namely; bandhus on the father's side and bandhus on the mother's side. All of them could have been described as bandhus of the owner himself limited by the sole restriction of five degrees. It would then have been quite sufficient to say that all the cognatic relations of the owners within five degrees are bandhus. The fact that in addition to the Atma bandhus, the two other classes of bandhus are mentioned, shows that the Atma bandhus of the owner would not have included his father's mother's father and higher ancestors, nor his mother's mother's father and higher ancestors, although they may be within five degrees of the propositus.

Yet another strong circumstance points to the same conclusion. If the second and third classes had meant father's bandhus and the mother's bandhus just as the first class, the owner's own bandhus, then as bandhu-relationship ceases in the fifth degree, one would have to count to a common ancestor up to the fifth degree from the father and the mother, and therefore up to the sixth degree from the propositus. Ramchandra's case has now settled that this cannot be done.

---

[13] I. L. R. 6 Cal. 119 (F.B.)

[14] I. L. R. 22 Cal. 339 at 345

There is only one conclusion to which one can come and that is that the father's mother's mother's father and the mother's mother's mother's father are not included in one's heritable bandhus. The ancestral lines going outside the grand-parents are purely agnatic and not cognatic.

It may be noted in this connection that there is no other authority in support of the contrary view except the opinion of Dr. Golap Chandra Sarkar who thought that the limitation of degrees was applicable to marriage only and not to inheritance and that mutuality of sapindaship was unnecessary, and accordingly concluded that a bandhu may be taken to mean any relation, however distant, belonging to a different family whose relationship can be traced (Hindu Law, 6th Edition 479). This view has been definitely rejected by their Lordships of the Privy Council in Ramchandra v. Vinayek.

It may also be stated that all other modern writers like Mayne, Bhattacharyya and Ghosh, not to mention living authors like Dr. Gaur, have all excluded female ancestors above the circle of grand-parents. In an earlier edition of Mr. Mayne's Hindu Law the father's sister's son's daughter's son was included in the Table on the authority of Parot Bhupalal Sevakram v. Mehta Hari Lal Surajram[15]. But he has been deleted from the Table in the 9th edition, obviously because the Bombay case is no authority for his inclusion in the Table of bandhus. The Table excludes father's mother's mother's ancestors and mother's mother's mother's ancestors.

We can now group together the Atma bandhus of the owner first. These are now well known to be included (1) within the circle of grand-parents in the ascending line, and their descendants under certain limitations including certain descendants of the owner himself. For Pitri or Matri bandhus we go outside the circle and higher, but in accordance with the ordinary conception we must travel upwards along agnatic lines, that is (2) the father's father's agnatic ascendants (Pitri, ex parte paterna) (3) the father's mother's agnatic ascendants (Pitri ex parte materna), (4) mother's father's agnatic ascendants (Matri ex parte paterna) and (5) mother's mother's agnatic ascendants (Matri ex parte materna), and not in the agnatic ascendants of the mothers of these ancestors.

These groups correspond with the five groups of families enumerated by Prof. Sarvadhikari, and establish his first proposition. It will however be noticed that the order of precedence is not identical with that given by him.

As regards the method of counting the five degrees, Prof. Sarvadhikari's statement in Chapter II, p. 72 on his Hindu Law (second edition) may be conveniently quoted.

> Accordingly, it is to be understood that the fifth from the mother is she who is (the fifth) in the line of descent from (any ancestor of the mother, up to) the fifth ancestor (and counting her and such ancestor, each as one degree) in the computation—beginning with the mother (and counting her as one degree)—and the mother's father, paternal grand-father, and the like.

---

[15] I. L. R. 19 Bom. 631

As a necessary result of the mutuality of sapindaship, if it involves a similar counting from the side of the claimant also, the seven degrees in the owner's father's line have also to be reduced to five degrees. In view of the ruling in Ramchandra's case the bandhus beyond the fifth degree from the common ancestor shown in Prof. Sarvadhikari's book or Mayne's book would most probably not be heritable bandhus. Their Lordships have clearly laid down that the sapinda relationship on which the heritable right of collaterals is founded ceases in the case of the Bhinna-gotra sapinda with the fifth degree from the common ancestor. On the same principle, the restriction against the inclusion of a great grandmother will apply in the case of the owner's Atma bandhu in the descending line as well.

Thus certain propositions are now quite clear (1) As females inherit only under express rules, no females can be a heritable bandhu. (2) The common ancestor can always be taken to be a male, because a female ancestor's husband will always be the nearer and an equal ancestor of the descendants of his wife. (3) The relationship in the mother's line ceases with the fifth degree. It follows that an ancestor beyond the fifth degree from the propositus would be outside the circle. (4) The only exception which was recognised before Ramchandra v. Vinayek appears to have been the case of the father's mother's great grandfather, who is included on the theory of what is called a 'frog's leap', by which the father's mother is excluded in the counting. (5) There must be a mutuality of sapindaship and the deceased and the claimant must be so related that they are sapindas of each other.

The mutuality of sapindaship enables us to reverse the process and, applying the same rules to the claimant, deduce the converse propositions, viz.: (i) The propositus may be a male or female, for instance, a maiden leaving stridhan property. (ii) The common ancestor will always be a male. (iii) The claimant must be within five degrees of the common ancestor. (iv) The owner's father's mother is counted in calculating the number of the degrees, because she becomes like a daughter in the reverse process. (v) The propositus must be a sapinda of the claimant.

From these it is obvious that between the propositus and the claimant there must be at least one female relation otherwise the latter would not be a bandhu at all. There however may be more than one female. Indeed, the maximum number of females may be five, viz., the propositus, two females between her and the common ancestor (not treating her as a female) and two more between the common ancestor and the claimant. It follows that between the propositus and the common ancestor on the one side and the common ancestor and the claimant on the other side there can be only three intermediary relations. We have already seen that there can be only a male ancestor above the grand-parents. This is true as regards both sides of the ancestor. This means that there cannot be any mother's mother's mother or mother's father's mother, for in such a case, these would be a female above the grand-parents. If these conditions are not fulfilled the claimant cannot be an heir.

It necessarily follows that the claimant in order to be a heritable bandhu cannot be lower than the common ancestor's daughter's grandson or

CIVIL

1932

GAJADHAR PRASAD v. GAURI SHANKAR

the common ancestor's son's great grandson. The proposition may be stated in a simple way by saying that there should be no great grandmother in the line on either side of the common ancestor.

This conclusion bears out the correctness of the second proposition laid down by Prof. Sarvadhikari, although it has to be re-stated in the following form:—

Sulaiman, J.

There must be at least one female between the given person and the deceased, and there cannot be more than two females between the propositus and the common ancestor on the one side, and not more than two females between the common ancestor and the claimant on the other side, and if two females exist on either side they must be related as mother and daughter to each other. This holds good in the case of Pitri and Matri bandhus, whether ex parte paterna or ex parte materna, and also in the case of Atma bandhus whether in the ascending line or in the descending line.

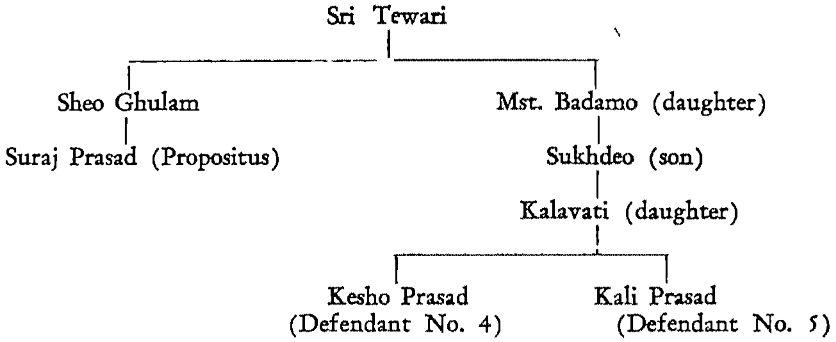
Applying these principles to the case before us it at once becomes obvious that Keshore and Kali cannot be the heritable bandhus of Suraj Prasad. Their great grandmother Mst. Badama intervened. Bandhus cannot come down lower than Sukhdeo's son, if any.

As I was one of the referring Judges I must point out that our doubt as regards the decision in Sheo Nandan v. Manni[16] arose because the claimant there was within five degrees of the common ancestor, and the judgment did not give any reasons except relying on the authority of Prof. Sarvadhikari's opinion which in its turn proceeded on grounds some of which as pointed out above, were not sound. In the light of the conclusions now reached, the actual result of the decision in Sheo Nandan's case was correct; and so were the decisions in Ram Sia v. Bua[17] and Hari Har Prasad v. Ram Daur[18]. These cases were in accordance with the ruling in Krishna Ayyangar v. Venkatrama Ayyangar[19]. In neither of these cases any great grandmother intervened.

My answer to the question referred to us is therefore in the negative.

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The point of law that has been referred to the Full Bench would require the following pedigree for its proper statement:—



Sri Tewari
Sheo Ghulam
Suraj Prasad (Propositus)
Mst. Badamo (daughter)
Sukhdeo (son)
Kalavati (daughter)
Kesho Prasad (Defendant No. 4)
Kali Prasad (Defendant No. 5)

The question for determination is whether the defendant Nos. 4 and 5, namely, Kesho Prasad and Kali Prasad are heritable bandhus to Suraj Prasad, and are his heirs, in the absence of any nearer heir.

---

[16] 21 A. L. J. 288

[17] I. L. R. 47 All. 10

[18] I. L. R. 47 All. 172

[19] I. L. R. 29 Mad. 115 (P.C.)

CIVIL

1932

GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR

Mukerji, J.

This is an abstract question of law, and before I can answer it, I have to see who are the bandhus, according to the Mitakshara Law, which governs the case.

The Mitakshara, Chapter II, Section 6 lays down as follows:—

> On failure of gentiles the cognates are heirs. Cognates are of three kinds, related to the person himself, to his father or to his mother. (The word "cognate" is a translation of the word "bandhu").

In Chapter II, Section 5, Clause (3) we find the definition of the term "cognate" or "bandhu". It is stated, "for kinsmen sprung from a different family but connected by funeral oblations are indicated by the term "cognate" (bandhu) (Colebrooke's Translation).

Putting the two definitions together we find that kinsmen sprung from a different family but connected by funeral oblations are to succeed after the failure of "gentiles".

The expression "connected by funeral oblations" used by Mr. Colebrooke is a mis-translation. The word in the original is sapinda, which, in the case of Bengal Law, may properly be translated by the expression "connected by funeral oblations", but, in the case of the Mitakshara Law, the meaning is somewhat different. According to Vijnaneshwar, the word "Pind" means "body or particles of body". Without going into the discussions raised and answered by Vijnaneshwar, we may take it as settled law that under the Mitakshara Law, a sapinda is one who is connected by means of blood.

It follows that a bandhu is a blood relation but belonging to a 'different' family.

The 'different' family "is a family which is connected with the propositus through a female or females." A 'cognate', therefore, is a blood relation who is connected with the propositus through a female or females.

A blood relation as defined above may include almost the whole world and, therefore, a limitation had to be put to the words "blood relation" or "sapinda".

A sapinda relationship has been defined by Vijnaneshwar in that portion of his commentary on the Institutes of Yajnavalkaya which deals with Achar or rules of conduct.

In Chapter I, Sloka 53, the sage Yajnavalkaya defines who a sapinda is by the following rule:—

पञ्चमात्सप्तमादूर्ध्वं मातृतः पितृतस्तथा

The translation of the commentary of Vijnaneshwar on this passage, as given by several writers, is not very happy. The writer of the Mitakshara first puts down the word "matrito" and then gives its meaning as Matuh Santane. The three words "Matrito" "Matuh" and "santane" are not to be taken together. As I have said, the first word is taken from the text and the next two words are its meaning. This would indicate that, according to Vijnaneshwar, the word "Matrito" means "in mother's line". Then come the words "Panchamat Urdhwam", which mean "above the No. 5". Then comes the word "Pitritah",—which is quoted from the text, and it is followed by its meaning given by Vijnaneshwar as "Pituh Santane", which when properly translated would mean "in father's line". Then follow

CIVIL

1932

GAJADHAR PRASAD v. GAURI SHANKAR

Mukerji, J.

the words "Saptamat Urdhwam", that is to say, "above the seventh degree." Then follow the words "Sapindam Nivartata". The whole commentary taken together means "in the case of a child claiming through its mother and in the case of a child claiming through its father the sapinda relationship ends with the fifth and seventh degree respectively." The translation that we find given by English text-writers is "on the mother's side in the mother's line after the fifth, and on the father's side in the father's line after the seventh ancestor the sapinda relationship ceases; (West and Buhler, Vol. 1, 120). This translation, however, does not affect the true meaning. What Vijnaneshwar means is that where sapinda relationship is to be considered of a person, who claims through his mother, we have to count up to the fifth degree, inclusive of the said person, and in the case of a person claiming through his father, we have to count up to the seventh degree, inclusive of the said person.

Vijnaneshwar further lays down that the six paternal ancestors are one's sapindas and so are the six lineal male descendants, himself being counted as the seventh. He further lays down that where the ascending or descending lines branch off,—'santan bhede' (संतानभेदे)—the seven degrees are to be counted from where the lines branch off, inclusive of the person from whom the lines branch off. Similarly, it would follow that where a person is claiming through his mother, and the line ascending or descending branches off, five degrees are to be counted from where the break occurs, inclusive of the person from whom the line branches off. Thus a person who is in the seventh degree, descending, say, from the third male ancestor of the propositus, will be a sapinda (of the propositus). Vijnaneshwar also explains that in the case of one claiming through one's mother, one's sapindas are the mother, the maternal grandfather, his father and so on, all on the male line. The text is as follows:—

तथा च मातरमारभ्य तत्पितृपितामहादिगणनायां पञ्चमी पुरुषवर्तिनी मातृतः पञ्चमीत्युपचर्यते

The definition of 'sapinda' having occurred in the part of the Mitakshara dealing with rules of 'Achar' or 'Conduct' at one time it was contended that the definition could not hold good for the second part of the book, which dealt with inheritance. But this contention is no longer regarded as valid. Vijnaneshwar himself says (See his commentary on verse 52 of Chap. I of the Institutes of Yajnabalka) that the word 'sapinda' is to be understood in the sense explained by him, wheresoever the same may occur. It is a rule of construction of Hindu Law texts that a word once used in one sense is to be taken as having been used in the same sense throughout the book, unless a clear intention to the contrary is established. It may be mentioned that their Lordships of the Privy Council, in the case of Ram Chandra v. Vinayek[20] have ruled that the word 'sapinda' in the chapter on Inheritance has the same meaning as in the chapter on 'Achar'.

Putting together, then, the definitions of all the words with which the term 'bandhu' has been defined, we find that bandhu is one who is related to the propositus within seven or five degrees, as the case may be, through a female or females. The fact must not be lost sight of that the lines of relationship must be through males and males only, and in the case of a claim

---

[20] I. L. R. 42 Cal. 394

CIVIL
1932
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Mukerji, J.

through the mother, it is the mother's father her paternal grandfather and so on who constitute the line for sapindaship.

According to Manu (Chap. IX, verse 187) a sapinda alone can take a sapinda's property. This means that for the purposes of inheritance by a sapinda, both the claimant and the deceased must be related to each other as sapindas.

At the outset, this may appear to be a mere truism, but this is not always the case. We have seen that a sapinda relationship, where it is traced through the mother stops at five degrees and when it is traced through the father it stops at seven degrees. It will, therefore, follow that while A may be a sapinda of B, B may not necessarily be a sapinda of A. I shall give the most familiar illustration to be found in text books. In the following diagram A is the common ancestor and on the right and left are his two branches of descendants. S represents sons and D represents daughter.

S5 on the right hand side being seventh in degree from the common ancestor A. would be S2's (on the left) sapinda, but counting, from S5 who claims through his mother D, five degrees would be the limit of his sapindaship and, therefore, S5's sapindas would terminate with S2 on the right. In this case S5 cannot inherit to S2, on the left.

We have then discovered that there is an additional qualification which a claimant must possess before he can claim, as a bandhu, the property of a deceased person. This qualification is that the claimant and the deceased must be related to each other as sapindas.

Now comes a matter which is the most controversial of the whole rule as to inheritance by a bandhu in Hindu Law. Vijnaneshwar says:

> "गोत्रजाभावे बन्धवो धनभाजः । बन्धवश्च त्रिविधाः आत्मबन्धवः पितृबन्धवो मातृबन्धवश्चेति ।"

This, when translated means, in the absence of a cognate, bandhus get the inheritance. Bandhus are of three kinds, namely, Atma-bandhu, Pitri-bandhu and Matri-bandhu. Then follows an example, being a quotation, "One's father's sister's sons, one's mother's sister's sons and one's maternal uncle's sons are Atma bandhavas; one's father's father's sister's sons, one's father's mother's sister's sons and one's father's maternal uncle's sons are Pitri bandhavas and then mother's father's sister's sons, mother's mother's sister's sons and mother's maternal uncle's sons are Matri bandhavas." I have stated that these are examples given by Vijananeshwar and are not to be taken as an exhaustive list of bandhus. Vijnaneshwar puts this list as if the list were a quotation, which under modern times, would be put within a pair of inverted commas. This follows from the fact that the list is prefaced with the words, (यथोक्तम्) which means "as has been said."

It is too late in the day to contend that the list of the three kinds of bandhus is exhaustive, for the Privy Council have laid it down in clearest terms that the list is not so, (see Girdhari Lal v. Government of Bengal[21]).

The question, however, is: can we add to the three classes of bandhus? The question arose before their Lordships in the Privy Council in the case of Ram Chandra v. Vinayek[22] quoted above, but their Lordships did not decide the question although it appears that their Lordships were inclined to the view that the classes could not be added to. My own opinion is that the classes cannot be added to, and, for this reason, that by the statement that bandhus were of three kinds, Vijnaneshwar limited the number of classes. These classes, as already stated, are Atma-bandhus, Pitri-bandhus, and Matri-bandhus. If we could add to the classes there would be no sense in stating that the classes were only three.

The fact should not be lost sight of that Pitri-bandhus and Matri-bandhus are the bandhus of the propositus himself and have no status except as the bandhus of the propositus. We have to find out the bandhus of the propositus. We are told that we would find them under three descriptions, and under three descriptions alone. The text quoted by Vijnaneshwar, to explain the nature of a bandhu, does not at all use the word 'bandhu'. The word used is 'bandhav', which only means a 'relation' or 'connection.' The word 'bandhu' has been used by the Mitakshara in a 'technical' sense, while the word 'bandhav' has been used in a non-technical sense. The commentary of Vijnaneshwar and the text quoted by him, taken together, indicate that 'bandhus' of the propositus are to be found among the persons who were related directly to the propositus, through a female, and among persons who were similarly related to him through his mother and father.

So far as the term 'Atmabandhu' goes, it is not capable of having two meanings. It must be taken as meaning 'direct relations.' The expressions, 'Pitribandhu' and 'Matribandhus' are compound words, formed by the process known in Sanskrit grammar, as 'Samasa' or 'shortening process'. On breaking up the 'samasa', we may have the words, Pitooh bandhu or Matooh bandhu or Pitra bandhu or Matra bandhu. The two words relating to father and mother having the same form, I will take one only, for the sake of brevity. Now 'Pitooh bandhu' if we treat the expression as a 'shashthi tatpurusha samasa' (षष्ठी तत्पुरुषसमास) it would mean 'father's bandhu'. If we treat the expression as a "panchmi tatpurusha' (पंचमी तत्पुरुष) the word would mean 'bandhus through or by reason of the father', according to the rule. 'Hetau cha' (हेतौ च), which means that the suffix Panchami, which gives the same form as Shashthi to the words pitri and matri, may be used where 'the reason is to be assigned.' Then again if we treat the words as 'Tritia tatpurush samasa' तृतीया तत्पुरुष समास then by the rule 'Tritia karane' तृतीयाकरणे we still have the same meaning, viz.,

---

[21] 1 B. L. R. 44 (P.C.)=10 W. R. 31

[22] I. L. R. 42 Cal. 384 at 407

CIVIL
1932
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Mukerji, J.

"through" the father. So it cannot be asserted with any show of reason that the words 'Pitri bandhu' and 'Matri bandhu' must mean "father's bandhu" and "mother's bandhu."

The analysis or breaking up of the words which would give them the meanings, 'by reason of' or 'through' father or mother appeal to me, as the correct rendition. If we adopt the analysis which would mean "father's or mother's bandhus" we shall find that the classification becomes useless and meaningless, if we should further say that the word 'bandhu' is used there in the technical sense, and not as having the same meaning as the word 'bandhav' in the text quoted. Then all relations of the propositus, howsoever remote, would come in as his 'bandhu' either through himself or through his father or mother or through the paternal and maternal ancestors of the father and mother and the paternal and maternal ancestors of those ancestors subject to no limit, or to the limit imposed by 7 and 5 degrees. If that was the object, what was the use of stating with all solemnity that there were three classes of 'bandhus'?

I am clearly of opinion that the three classes of bandhus mean three classes alone and cannot be added to. The great Sanskrit scholar Jogendra Siromani, whose untimely death is still mourned, is of the same opinion and founds it, among other grounds, on the fact that the commentary and the text of the quotation do not use the same word. (See Shiromani's Hindu law, pp. 299 and 300).

Then the question is: how are the bandhus to be ascertained?

We find that one's Atmabandhus are to be found in one's father's line and in one's mother's line; for we find that father's sister's son is an Atmabandhu and he is descended from the grandfather of the propositus. Again we find that one's mother's sister's son and maternal uncle's son are Atmabandhus, and they are the descendants of the maternal grandfather. These three instances lead us to the conclusion that one's Atmabandhus are to be found among the descendants of one's paternal and maternal grandfathers.

In the case of Pitribandhu we have three similar examples—Father's father's sister's son is a Pitribandhu and he is a descendant of father's grandfather. Again, father's mother's sister's son and father's maternal uncle's son, who are one's bandhus, are to be found among the descendants of the father's maternal grandfather. We have, therefore, a further indication that for bandhus, we have to search the lines of paternal great grandfather and father's maternal grandfather. Similarly we find that mother's father's sister's son is a bandhu and he is to be found in the branch of mother's paternal grandfather. Again we have mother's mother's sister's son and mother's maternal uncle's son, as bandhu and they are to be found in mother's maternal grandfather's line. If we put all these branches together, we find that four descriptions will suffice for tracing out the bandhus of a propositus. He, the bandhu, may be one in propositus's father's line which would include his own line, either ascending or descending because descending line also would be his father's line through the propositus himself. Secondly we shall find the bandhus in the propositus's maternal grandfather's line. Thirdly we shall find a bandhu in propositus's father's maternal grandfather's line and fourthly we shall find a bandhu

CIVIL
1932
GAJADHAR PRASAD
v.
GAURI SHANKAR
Mukerji, J.

in propositus's mother's maternal grandfather's line.

As pointed out by the learned author of the Mitakshara, when we talk of a "line", in dealing with Hindu Law, we must understand, that a line can only mean male ancestors and their descendants; for lineage is traced through the male ancestors and male descendants and nobody else. Mother's father's line would mean maternal grandfather, his father, his father and so on. Maternal grandfather's line or even mother's line would not mean mother's mother, her mother, her mother and so on. This view is supported by the rules by which cakes and oblations are offered to one's ancestors. A person offers cakes to his maternal grandfather, his father and to his father and not to the maternal grandmother and to her mother and to her mother. Sir Guru Das Banerji, in his book on Marriage and Stridhan, takes the same view; see his book, 4th edition, page 68.

Putting together now all the rules that go to define a bandhu who has a right to inherit to a propositus, otherwise known as a 'heritable bandhu', we find that he must possess the following qualifications:—

(a) He must belong to one of the four classes deduced by me from the statement of Vijnaneshwar as to the bandhus being of three classes and from the illustration quoted by him;

(b) The claimant must be a sapinda coming within the seven and five degrees as described above.

It will be noticed that many of the bandhus would not be a sapinda of the propositus, except for the definition that he (a bandhu) is a "Bhinna gotra sapinda", i.e., a sapinda who belongs to another family. Let us take this example:

In the above diagram, A is the common ancestor and S represents a son and D a daughter. S5 is not a sapinda of A, for A is not in the line of S5's mother. S5's mother's line would be the line of D3's father in which D2 is not, being only a mother. But S5 is a bandhu of A, inasmuch as A is in the line of the maternal grandfather of D3, the mother of S5, and is therefore a 'matribandhu' of S5. If S5 is a bandhu of A, it follows from the definition that S5 is a sapinda of A. It further follows that if two persons are not related with each other as sapindas in the ordinary way, but if they be each other's bandhu, they would thereby be the sapindas of each. It again follows that the relationship of bandhu virtually expands the definition of sapinda in particular cases. In such cases we may say that S5 is a sapinda of A through his mother D3 in whose mother's line (paternal, of course) A is.

We may now conclude that if the claimant to heirship be a bandhu of the deceased person but if the deceased person be not a sapinda of the claimant, the claim will fail, for Manu says, "A sapinda's property shall be taken by a sapinda". But if the deceased be related to the claimant as a bandhu, i.e., if both the deceased and the claimant be each other's bandhu, the claim will succeed.

So far I have examined the texts and have tried to come to my own conclusions. Let me now examine the decided cases.

We find that their Lordships of the Privy Council in the case of Ram Chandra v. Vinayek[28] laid down the test of mutuality as to sapindaship and the test of sapindaship itself as two of the matters to be established for a successful claim as a bandhu. In the actual case before their Lordships of the Privy Council, the claim having failed on the ground that the claimants were claiming through their mother, and to succeed, must have been within five degrees of the common ancestor, Timaji, but were in the sixth degree, it did become unnecessary for their Lordships of the Privy Council to consider whether the claimants were or were not bandhus. Nor was it necessary for their Lordships to consider what would have been the merits of the claim if the claimants had been claiming through their father and not through their mother. Their Lordships' general conclusions at page 420 of the report are based on the supposition that the claim is through the mother. This was pointed out by Rao, J. in I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652 at 690 and by me in the case of Harihar Prasad v. Ram Daur[24].

A bandhu, as we have seen, must be related to the propositus, in a particular way, besides being a sapinda. In the case before their Lordships, the sapinda test failed, and it did not become necessary to go into the question of the particular relationships which came within the definition of bandhu. At pp. 403 and 404 of the report their Lordships lay down the only issue before them, in the following language:—

> What we have to determine in this appeal is whether the term Bandhu has to be construed as the plaintiffs argued in the broadest sense or whether it is subject to any limitation. In the latter case what that limitation is, according to the law by which the parties are governed?

Their Lordships found that one limitation to bandhuship was that imposed by the definition of sapindaship. That test having sufficed for the failure of the plaintiffs, their Lordships made the following observations:—(see p. 417 of the Report):

> These remarks (based on the case of Girdharilal v. Government of Bengal, 12 M. I. A. 448=1 B. L. R. 44=10 W. R. 31) hardly warrant the contention which is attempted to be based on them that the classes specified by Vijnaneshwar can be added to.
>
> In the present case, however, it does not seem necessary to their Lordships to enter upon the determination of the question whether the classes can be extended, for the point at issue can be decided on other grounds.

This case, therefore, is no authority for the proposition for which the learned counsel for the appellants contends, namely, we have to see only one thing and one thing alone, namely, whether the claimant and propositus are or not within the prescribed degrees from the common ancestor. In other words, the contention of the appellants' counsel is that, if the propositus is related to the common ancestor through his father, we must see whether the propositus is or not within seven degrees from the common ancestor (including both the common ancestor and the propositus), and we have to see whether the propositus, if he is connected through his mother with the common ancestor is within five degrees of the common ancestor or not. Similarly we have to apply the test in the case of the claimant. If the test of "degrees" is satisfied, according to the learned counsel for the appellants, the claimant would be entitled to succeed.

[28] I. L. R. 42 Cal. 384

[24] I. L. R. 47 All. 172 at 178 and 179

Let us now consider the facts of this present case. Sri Tewari, the common ancestor of the propositus and of the defendants 4 and 5 is not in the 'line' of the claimants' mother Kalawati. For although Sukhdeo is Kalawati's father, Mst. Badamo is not the father of Sukhdeo, but only his mother. Then let us see if Kesho Prasad and Kali Prasad are bandhus of Sri Tewari. Sri Tewari is not in the direct father's line of the claimants nor is he in the line of maternal grandfather of them: he is therefore not an Atma-bandhu. He is not in the line of the claimants' father's maternal grandfather. He is not in the claimants' mother's maternal grandfather's line. The result is that the claimants are not related to Sri Tiwari as bandhus and are therefore not bandhus of the deceased Suraj Prasad, and are not his heirs.

Coming to authorities again I find that a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court, in the case of Umaid Bahadur v. Udai Chand applied this test now applied by me, vide p. 128 and 129.

The conclusion at which I have arrived is the same at which that eminent though much maligned modern writer Mr. Sarvadhikari arrived. People have not been able to follow his reasonings because he has put them in the shape of rules, as if they were framed by himself. But such is not really the case. He has tried to find some formulae by which lay men can arrive at the right result, in the question of a bandhu who may inherit. If we apply the tests deduced by me from a consideration of the texts, we shall find that the table of heirs framed by Mr. Sarvadhikari and adopted by all other important writers like Mayne, on Hindu Law, is in accordance with my conclusion. I need hardly mention that I am not considering the question of preference among the bandhus. That question does not arise in this case.

It will, however, be interesting to consider the method adopted by Mr. Sarvadhikari in finding out who a heritable bandhu is, and to find out the order of preference among them.

Mr. Sarvadhikari lays down three rules, for finding out a heritable bandhu. The first two rules cover, between them, a wide range of relations and the third rule excludes some of these. Those who fulfil all the three tests are, according to the learned author, a bandhu. These rules are to be found at pages 597, 599, 601 and 602 of the 2nd Edition of the book.

No exception can be taken to the first rule. Let us take the case of the first ancestor. When a line passes through a female the number of sapindas is five. As sapindaship has to be mutual, counting from a claimant, who claims through a female, you can go only 5 degrees and descend to only 5 degrees, including the propositus, though the latter may be claiming entirely through a male line. In the case of the ancestors Nos. 2, 3 and 4 (see p. 597) the ascendants are counted through a female and therefore the limit has been again put at 5 degrees, i.e., at four excluding the propositus.

The second rule is equally unexceptionable. The father's 'bandhavas' as mentioned in the text quoted by Vijananeshwar, or 'connections' being included among bandhus of the propositus, as also the 'connections' of the mother, the sapindas of these parents are likely to come in as bandhus of the propositus, but this inclusion of all the sapindas widens the circle of relations too much. These may be sapindas but they are not necessarily bandhus, bandhus must be in certain lines of ancestors. Those, that are not, have to be excluded. Hence the third rule. I have already pointed out that the definition of a bandhu, as we deduce it from the rules framed by the author widen the list of sapindas, strictly so called. What Mr. Sarvadhikari has done is to widen the circle of the sapindas by including all the sapindas of the parents and then to exclude those who do not fulfil the test of bandhuship.

I prefer the method of argument and drawing of the conclusion, mentioned by me, as the result of my own examination of the original texts. The result is the same as that arrived at by Mr. Sarvadhikari.

As regards the method of finding out the comparitive merits of the bandhus for the purpose of preference of inheritance, the question does not arise in this case, and I need not express any opinion. I may however mention what—according to my reading—Mr. Sarvadhikari has done, only for the purpose of finding out the nearness of relationship, for it is the nearness that gives the claim to inheritance. Mr. Sarvadhikari has divided the bandhus into

1. Atma bandhus ex parte paterna.
2. Atma bandhus ex parte materna.
3. Pitri bandhus, all ex parte materna.
4. Matri bandhus, all ex parte materna.

This method has not been adopted to contradict Vijnaneshwar or to improve on his method, but it is in keeping with his method. The persons who claim through the father in the paternal line or through the mother in the mother's paternal line have all been classed as Atma bandhus. Those that claim through the father's mother have been classed at Pitribandhus, and those that claim through the mother of the mother have been classed as Matri bandhus. As I have said, this has been done solely for the purpose of finding out the nearness of relationship. This method does not in any way clash with the opinion of Vijnaneshwar that the Atma-bandhus (as described by him, by means of the quotation) take first and then Pitri bandhus and then the Matri bandhus.

However, all these matters do not arise for discussion in this case. My object in entering into the discussion was to show, that my conclusions, being the same as that of Mr. Sarvadhikari, receive corroboration from him and that corroboration by Mr. Sarvadhikari is not to be discounted on the ground that Mr. Sarvadhikari is full of mistakes or that he has laid down arbitrary rules. I may mention that this division of the Bandhus for the purpose of finding out the nearness has been adopted by Jogendra Shiromani also.

CIVIL

1932

GAJADHAR PRASAD v. GAURI SHANKAR

Mukerji, J

It now remains for me to consider the few cases cited on behalf of the claimants to bandhuship, the appellants.

The case of Kesar Singh v. The Secretary of State for India in Council[25] entirely supports the appellants' case. But with all respects, I have not been able to accept it as having been correctly decided.

Spencer, J. based his decision on several considerations. One of these is that the words 'santan' which has been translated as a 'line' by all translators, does not mean male ascendants alone. Santans, no doubt, has another meaning, viz., issue, i.e., either male or female. But it also means a 'line'. Vijnaneshwar himself interprets it as meaning male line alone. I have quoted his very words. Then the learned Judge brushes aside the case of Umaid Bahadur as an obiter dictum. But it has already been cited with approval in the Privy Council case of Ram Chandra. Then he appears to have accepted an extention of the classes of bandhus. Rao, J. busied himself with an examination of the reasonings (for his conclusions) of Mr. Sarvadhikari, and did not examine the texts himself.

The next case that was cited was the case Umashankar v. Nageswar[26]. The observations of Malik, J. were relied on, where he examined the book by Mr. Sarvadhikari. The point before the Patna Court was one of relative title of two claimants, both of whom were bandhus. But the question before us did not at all arise in the case. The question was which of the two claimants had the better title. I am not concerned with the defence of Mr. Sarvadhikari. He can take care of himself. But when all is said, it would still appear that—questions of precedence apart—the table of bandhus prepared by him and adopted by other writers, is substantially correct. I am using the word 'substantially' because this case is not concerned with each of the numerous cases of bandhus shown in the tables, and I have not examined each of them separately. Excluding the cases in 49 Mad. and 6 Cal. there is no other case directly in point. As the result of my own reading of the original Mitakshara and relevant texts, and on the authority of the case in 6 Cal., I have arrived at the conclusion that the Madras case does not lay down the correct law.

My answer to the question before the Full Bench is that Kesho Prasad and Kali Prasad are not heritable bandhus of Suraj Prasad.

Young, J.

YOUNG, J.—I concur and have nothing to add.

BY THE COURT—The answer to the question referred to us is in the negative.

Reference answered in the negative

---

[25] I. L. R. 49 Mad. 652

[26] 3 P. L. J. 663

CIVIL

1932

April 21

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-
ULLAH, J.

MAHTAB SINGH (Defendant)

versus

THE COLLECTOR OF SAHARANPUR (Plaintiff)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 55 (5) (b)—Agreement to sell—Suit for specific performance—Court had sale deed executed—Liability to pay unpaid consideration arose at once—Limitation Act, Art. 120—Vendee agreed to pay balance of consideration to mortgagees—Delay in payment—Vendor had to pay interest—Suit for recovery of sum so paid—Limitation.

One B agreed to sell a village (this village and another village were subject to a mortgage) to the defendant, who paid earnest money in cash; but later B sold the village to other persons. The defendant instituted a suit for specific performance making the vendees also parties. The suit was decreed, and the court had the sale deed executed and completed in favour of the defendant. An appeal to the High Court by the vendees was dismissed. The defendant then deposited under Sec. 83 T. P. Act the balance of the sale consideration to the account of the mortgagees—this they had agreed to do under the terms of the agreement of sale—who agreed to accept the same in part satisfaction of the money due to them. The Court of Wards who had taken over the estate of B had to pay a large sum to the mortgagees as interest accruing between the date of the execution of the sale deed in favour of the defendant and the date of deposit under Sec. 83. The Court of Wards thereupon sued the defendant for recovery of the sum paid with interest from the date of demand. Held, (1) that it was the duty of the defendant to pay the amount to the mortgagees on the date the sale deed was executed in his favour, and the fact that an appeal was preferred to the High Court in the specific performance suit, could not suspend his liability. He insisted on the immediate execution of the sale deed and must accept his liability arising from it; (2) that the defendant was not entitled to retain the balance of purchase money, as there was no plea that the payment of this sum was conditional on the remaining incumbrance being discharged Muhammad Siddiq Khan v. Muhammad Nasirullah Khan, I. L. R. 21 All. 223 distinguished; (3) that the cause of action arose on the date the mortgagees were paid off, and the suit was governed by Art. 120, Limitation Act, and was within time.

FIRST APPEAL from a decree of A. P. GHILDIAL ESQ., Additional Judge of Moradabad.

Panna Lal for the appellant.

U. S. Bajpai for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an appeal by the defendant Mahtab Singh, and arises out of a suit brought in the following circumstances:—

Raja Balwant Singh, whose estate is now under the superintendence of the court of wards, owned villages Nejabatpur and Jamaluddinpur which were subject to a common charge of Rs.75,625 on August 5, 1921, under a mortgage-deed in favour of Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar. On July 26, 1921, Raja Balwant Singh agreed to sell village Nejabatpur to the appellant Mahtab Singh for a sum of Rs.73,725. Similarly he agreed on the same date to sell village Jamaluddinpur to Raghuraj Singh for a sum of Rs.17,000. It was agreed that out of the consideration of Rs.73,725 payable by the appellant for village Nejabatpur, a sum of Rs.58,625 would be paid to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar. The village was in possession of a lessee who had paid rent in advance and who was entitled to retain possession for six years. The rent for the six years thus received by the vendor in advance amounted to Rs.14,100, which was to be credited to the vendee and deducted from the price payable by the latter. This was to compensate Mahtab Singh for not obtaining possession for six years during which the lessee would retain possession in terms of her lease. Rs.1,000 was paid in cash as earnest money. These three sums make up the total of Rs.73,725.

*F. A. 117 of 1928

Raghuraj Singh, who had agreed to purchase the village Jamaluddinpur, was to pay the entire sum of Rs.17,000, the agreed price of that village, to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar.

It should be noted that the sums agreed to be left with the vendees for payment to the mortgagees were just sufficient to discharge the incumbrance in favour of Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar.

Raja Balwant Singh did not execute the sale deeds as agreed by him in favour of Mahtab Singh and Raghuraj Singh. On the contrary he sold the two villages to Bishunchand and Dayashankar on August 5, 1921 for Rs.104,000, out of which Rs.75,625 was left with the vendee for payment to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar. These vendees also agreed to accept Rs.14,100 as compensation for loss of the usufruct in consequence of the lessee's possession for six years. They paid Rs.5,000 as earnest money, and a sum of Rs.9,275 before the sub-registrar at the time of the registration of the deed.

Mahtab Singh brought a suit for specific performance against Balwant Singh and his vendees Bishunchand and Dayashankar in terms of the agreement of sale already referred to. Raghuraj Singh did not bring any action and acquiesced in the breach of agreement to sell village Jamaluddinpur. The court of first instance decreed the suit of Mahtab Singh on May 11, 1922, and directed execution of a sale deed by Raja Balwant Singh as agreed. On the failure of Raja Balwant Singh to execute the sale deed in pursuance of the decree passed in the suit for specific performance the court had the sale deed executed and completed on November 22, 1922. Formal delivery of possession was given on January 23, 1923. This, however, did not imply dispossession of any one, as according to the agreement of sale the lessee was to continue in possession for six years. The estate of Raja Balwant Singh was taken under the superintendence of the Court of Wards shortly afterwards in the same year. In the meantime Bishunchand and Dayashankar preferred an appeal to this Court from the decree passed in favour of Mahtab Singh in the suit for specific performance. Their appeal was dismissed on April 27, 1926.

It was not till June 29, 1926, that Mahtab Singh offered to pay Rs.58,625 out of the consideration of the sale to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar. His deposit under S. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act was not accepted by the mortgagees in full satisfaction of the charge, existing on the two villages. They, however, agreed to accept the same in part satisfaction of the mortgage money due to them on the date of deposit. Mahtab Singh agreed to the deposit made by him being accepted in part satisfaction of the incumbrance. No payment seems to have been made by Bishunchand and Dayashankar out of the consideration for sale of village Jamaluddinpur. It should be mentioned that Rs.58,625 was believed to be due to the mortgagees in respect of the proportionate charge on village Nejabatpur on July 26, 1921. By June 29, 1926, when Mahtab Singh actually deposited that sum, that portion of the charge had considerably increased. On November 17, 1926, the Court of Wards paid Rs.52,752-2-9 in full satisfaction of what remained due to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar in respect of their mortgage. The major part of this amount represented the incumbrance on village Jamaluddinpur. It is not disputed that it included a sum of Rs.19,352 which was the interest on Rs.58,625 accruing between the date of the sale deed in favour of Mahtab (i.e., November 22, 1922) and the date of deposit by him.

The Court of Wards representing the estate of Raja Balwant Singh instituted the suit which has given rise to this appeal for recovery of Rs.19, 352 aforesaid, together with interest on that sum from the date of deposit by Mahtab Singh to the date of suit. Other reliefs were also claimed, but it is not necessary to mention them for the purposes of this appeal. The lower court decreed the plaintiff's claim for Rs.19,352, but as regards interest on that sum the defendant has been found liable to pay at the rate of 6% from September 18, 1926, when the plaintiff demanded payment of Rs.19,352, up to the date of suit. The defendant Mahtab Singh has appealed to this Court.

The plaintiff's claim for Rs.19,352 proceeds on the ground that the defendant became liable to pay Rs.58,625 to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar on November 22, 1922, when they obtained execution of the sale deed in pursuance of the decree passed in his suit for specific performance. If such payment had been made on that date, interest would have ceased to run on that sum, and the plaintiff would have not been required to pay interest on Rs.58,625 between November 22, 1922, and November 17, 1926, when the plaintiff actually paid a large sum of money in full satisfaction of the mortgagees' claim; in other words, it was the direct result of the defendant's default in paying Rs.58,625 on November 22, 1922, that the plaintiff had to pay an extra sum of Rs.19,352. It is contended on behalf of the defendant-appellant that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover that sum, as the vendees of village Jamaluddinpur did not pay the portion of the mortgage money charged on it and that even if the defendant had paid Rs.58,625, village Nejabatpur in which alone he was interested could not have been freed from incumbrance—both villages being subject to a common charge. The argument is that Mahtab Singh was not bound to pay till the vendor or the vendee of Jamaluddinpur was ready and willing to discharge the rest of the incumbrance on the two villages. Reliance is placed on Muhammad Siddiq Khan v. Muhammad Nasirullah Khan[1], the facts of which were different from those before us. In that case there was an agreement between the vendor and the vendee for part of the purchase money being retained by the latter not as a deposit but as security for the vendor paying the entire incumbrance existing on the landed property. Their Lordships held that the vendee was entitled to retain it until the vendor provided the rest of the money necessary for the purpose of discharging the entire incumbrance. An understanding to this effect was established by evidence produced by the vendee. In the case before us there was no plea taken by the defendant that according to the agreement embodied in the sale deed or otherwise arrived at between the parties, payment of Rs.58,625 by Mahtab Singh was made conditional on the remaining incumbrance being discharged by the vendor or the other vendee. The sale deed has not been produced by either party and there is no other evidence that the parties agreed to a condition precedent of the kind referred to above. In the absence of a plea of that kind and an issue the plaintiff could not meet the case set up in the argument subsequently put forward by the defendant-appellant. Under S. 55(5) of the Transfer of Property Act the buyer is bound to pay or tender, at the time and place of completing the sale, the purchase-money to the seller or to such person as he directs. It follows that it was the duty of the defendant-appellant to pay Rs.58,625 to the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar in terms of the agreement of sale. Not having made the payment on November 22, 1922, the amount of Rs.58,625 swelled to a considerably larger sum by November 17, 1926, which the Court of Wards had to pay. We are satisfied that the plaintiff-respondent is entitled to the sum of Rs.19,352 which, as already stated, represents the accumulated interest on the sum of Rs.58,625 between the aforesaid dates. The learned counsel for the appellant also referred to Badri Das v. Jivan Lal[2]. The facts of that case are wholly different from those of the present case and, in our opinion, it has no application.

[1] I. L. R. 21 All. 223

Another contention which has been put forward on behalf of the appellant is that he was not liable to pay Rs.58,625 before the controversy regarding the vendor's title was finally set at rest by the judgment of this Court in appeal from the decree passed in the suit for specific performance. There was no dispute about the vendor's title. The only question was whether Bishunchand and Dayashankar, to whom Raja Balwant Singh sold the property in disregard of the agreement previously entered into, had acquired a good title. On the execution of the sale deed in his favour the appellant became liable to pay the price forthwith, and the fact that an appeal was preferred to this Court could not suspend his liability. If he had deferred the execution of the trial court's decree pending the appeal to this Court different considerations might have applied. He insisted on the immediate execution of the sale deed and must accept his liability arising from it.

As regards the further sum of Rs.1,250-14-0 allowed by the lower court as interest on Rs.19,352, it is complained that it amounts to compound interest. We do not think that this is so. The Court of Wards having paid Rs.19,352 on November 17, 1926, in consequence of the default of the appellant, was entitled to recover the sum forthwith. Formal demand was made on September 18, 1926. If the defendant had complied with their demand the sum could have been suitably invested by the plaintiff. We are of opinion that the lower court was justified in awarding reasonable interest from the date of demand as compensation for non-payment of Rs.19,352 as to which the defendant's liability on the date of demand has been established. It is not compound interest but represents compensation for the plaintiff being kept out of the use of Rs.19,352 which should have been paid at any rate, on September 18, 1926, when the same was demanded.

---

[2] 10 A. L. J. 480

Reference has been made to the conduct of Raja Balwant Singh in first agreeing to sell the village Nejabatpur to the defendant and subsequently selling it to Bishunchand and Dayashankar, which led to a contentious litigation in two courts. It is said that the defendant's claim, eventually found to be just, was keenly contested at the instance of Raja Balwant Singh. These circumstances are relied on in defence, and at any rate in mitigation of the damages claimed by the plaintiff. This grievance may be well founded. It was open to the defendant to have joined a claim for damages with his claim for specific performance, and the circumstances above mentioned might have entitled him to substantial damages in addition to the decree for specific performance. They have, however, no bearing on the controversy in the present case.

Lastly, the plaintiff's suit is said to be barred by limitation. The suit was instituted within one year after payment by the Court of Wards on November 17, 1926. It is suggested that Articles 65 and 111 are applicable. We do not think any of these articles can apply to the suit as framed by the plaintiff-respondent. The lower court has applied Art. 116 which provides a period of six years for a suit for compensation for the breach of a contract in writing registered. If this article applies the plaintiff's suit was in time but in our opinion the plaintiff's cause of action is not merely the breach of the contract embodied in the registered deed of sale but the fact that he was obliged to pay what the defendant should have paid early enough to prevent further accumulation of interest. It seems to us that the plaintiff could not have instituted a suit for recovery of the sums claimed by him before paying off the mortgagees Kunwar Sen and Bansidhar. This they did on November 17, 1926, which should be considered as the date of their cause of action. We have examined the terms of numerous articles which were referred to in the course of argument, and do not think that any of them applies in terms to the present case. Art. 120 is, therefore, the only article which should be held to be applicable. In that view limitation is to be reckoned from the date of payment by the plaintiff, and the suit having been brought within one year of that date is not barred.

We have discussed all the questions raised at the hearing of the appeal, and find ourselves in agreement with the lower court.

This appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 6

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

ABDUL RAB (Plaintiff)

versus

AKBAR HUSAIN AND ANOTHER (Defendants)*

Pre-emption Act (XI of 1922), Sec. 5—Wajib-ul-arz—Language of—"No particular rule based on custom, but there is one according to custom of country and Mohammedan Law"—Whether Sec. 5 (a) complied with.

Where the extract from the wajib-ul-arz prepared before the commencement of the Pre-emption Act (XI of 1922) ran as follows:—"Custom of Pre-emption. There is no particular rule of (based on) custom in this village, but there is one according to the custom of the country and the Mohammedan Law", held, that this statement in the wajib-ul-arz contains a declaration that there is a custom of pre-emption, though the entry proceeds to limit its significance by saying that pre-emption can be had only according to the custom of the country and the Mohammedan Law, and Sec. 5 (a) of the Pre-emption Act has been complied with. Shyam Lal v. Dwarka Prasad, 25 A. L. J. 109 relied on.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU PREO NATH GHOSE, Subordinate Judge of Pilibhit, reversing a decree of BABU BABU RAM VERMA, Munsif.

Iqbal Ahmad and B. Malik for the appellant.

U. S. Bajpai for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—This is a pre-emption appeal and raises only one question of law, because the other questions involved in the suit have not been decided by the lower appellate court. The plaintiff who is the appellant before us, based his suit on Section 5 of the Agra Pre-emption Act, and in order to comply with the requirements of that section produced an extract from the wajib-ul-arz containing an entry as regards pre-emption.

The court of first instance decreed the claim on condition of payment of Rs.1,900. There was an appeal and there was a cross-objection. The defendant's appeal succeeded on the ground that the entry in the wajib-ul-arz read with Section 5 of the Agra Pre-emption Act did not allow the plaintiff to maintain the suit. Section 5 of the Agra Pre-emption Act lays down that > a right of pre-emption shall be deemed to exist only in mahals or villages in respect of which any wajib-ul-arz prepared prior to the commencement of this Act records a custom, contract or declaration—

>
> (a) recognizing, conferring or declaring a right of pre-emption, expressly or by necessary implication, whatever its extent and in whatever form it may be expressed, etc.

The extract from the wajib-ul-arz that has been produced runs as follows:—

> Dastur darbab haq shafa—shafa ka koi khas dastur nahin hai—Bamaujib rewaj mulk sharake hai.

Translated this would mean

"Custom of Pre-emption."

"There is no particular rule of (based on) custom in this village, but there is one, according to the custom of the country and the Mohammedan law."

---

*S. A. 1034 of 1929

In our opinion this statement in the wajib-ul-arz contains a declaration that there is a custom of pre-emption, though the entry proceeds to limit its significance by saying that pre-emption can be had only according to the custom of pre-emption which obtained in the country and under the terms of the Mohammedan Law. This being our reading of the entry in the wajib-ul-arz, we are of opinion that Clause (a) of Section 5 of the Agra Pre-emption Act has been complied with, and it must be held and we do hold that the plaintiff has a right of pre-emption. This view of ours is in accordance with the view taken in Shyam Lal v. Dwarka Prasad[1] and Rameshar Prasad Lal v. Ghisiawan Prasad[2].

As the other questions involved in the appeal before the lower appellate court have not been decided, we allow the appeal, set aside the decree of the court below and send back the appeal to the learned District Judge for decision according to law. Costs here and hitherto will abide the result.

Appeal allowed

---

[1] 25 A. L. J. 109

[2] 27 A. L. J. (1929) 665

CIVIL
1932
April 8
BOYS, J.
YOUNG, J.

MAJHLI DULAIYA (Judgment-debtor)
versus
MUNNA LAL (Decree-holder)*

Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, Secs. 16 and 11—Decree-holder prevented from putting property of judgment-debtor to sale—Whether decree can be executed by giving a lease which the deceased debtor could have given under Sec. 11.

Where a decree-holder is prevented, by reason of Sec. 16 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, from putting the property of the judgment-debtor to sale, the decree can be executed by the giving of a lease which it would have been open to the judgment-debtor himself to give under Sec. 11, of the Act. Sardarni Datar Kuar v. Ram Rattan, 1 Lah. 192 relied on.

A creditor who has got a decree against the assets of a Hindu who died sonless leaving a widow, can attach and sell the estate in execution of the decree though that would have the effect of depriving the Hindu widow of future profits. Rani Kanno Dei v. B. J. Lacy, 19 All. 235 referred to.

EXECUTION SECOND APPEAL from a decree of H. J. COLLISTER ESQ., District Judge of Jhansi, confirming a decree of M. M. SETH ESQ., Subordinate Judge.

S. N. Chaube for the appellant.

K. N. Laghate for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Boys, J.

BOYS, J.—The respondent obtained a simple money decree against the assets of a deceased Hindu to whom the Bundelkhand land Alienation Act was applicable. But by reason of Section 16 of the Act, the decree-holder was unable to put the property to sale. He has been given in lieu thereof a lease which does not exceed the form of lease which it would have been open to the deceased himself to give under Section 11 of the Act. The appellant here has contended that this in effect amounts to attaching the profits to which the Hindu widow would be entitled. He has relied upon a decision of two Judges of this Court in Rani Kanno Dei v. B. J. Lacy[1]. This case has been considered by the Madras High Court, but we do not consider it necessary to pursue that further, as we are of opinion that it does not support the appellant's case but on the other hand defeats it. All that was held in that case was that a creditor who had got a decree against the assets of a deceased Hindu, could not apply for a receiver to be put in charge of the rents of the widow's estate. Nothing more was really held than that he could not proceed against the profits which had already accrued to the widow, whether they had actually come into her pocket or whether they had not, and there was a further suggestion underlying one single phrase in the judgment that future profits could not be affected. It is contended on the strength of this ruling that the profits to which a Hindu widow is entitled under all circumstances are inviolable. Counsel went to the extent of suggesting that when a Hindu died sonless leaving a widow, his assets could not be attached at all. This position eventually had to be abandoned. The very case quoted is direct authority, if indeed authority was necessary, that the property could be sold, though of course that would have the effect of depriving the Hindu widow of future profits.

---

*E. S. A. 1359 of 1930

Apart then from the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, there cannot be the least doubt that the estate could have been sold after attachment in execution of the simple money decree as being the assets of the deceased judgment-debtor. In the present case, the actual sale is prohibited by Section 16 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act. That is only because the owner himself could not have sold, and therefore the Court is barred from doing that which the owner could not himself have done. There is no reason whatever, why a decree should not be executed by the Court doing anything which the deceased debtor could himself have done. He could give a lease in accordance with the terms of Section 11 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, and there is therefore no reason why the decree should not be executed by the giving of such a lease. That is all that has been done in this case. If authority were needed in support of this, reference may be made to Sardarni Datar Kaur v. Ram Rattan[2]—the decision of a Full Bench. We are satisfied, therefore, that there is no force in this appeal and it is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

[1] 19 All. 235 (1897)

[2] 1 Lah 192

CIVIL

1931

Nov. 13

MUKERJI, J.
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

MANNU LAL AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
LACHHMAN DAS AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)*

Will—Construction of—Testatrix gave to P (Executor under the Will) the right to spend the entire income of her estate—For maintaining himself and his family—Whether income of estate given to P—Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), Sec. 172.

Where the testatrix expressly said in her will that she was maintaining one P and she wanted to maintain him in future, and she authorised him to deal with her property by appointing him the executor and gave him the right to spend the entire income of her estate for maintaining himself and his family, on this condition that if P turned out to be a man of dissolute habits, her property was to be utilized in raising money and in constructing a temple, held, (1) that the testatrix intended to give and did give the income of her estate to P, and as a matter of law the estate belonged to P (Sec. 172 of Succession Act of 1925); (2) that the prohibition against alienation being inconsistent with the interest actually given, was bad in law. Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee, I. L. R. 5 Cal. 438 applied.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of BABU RAJ BEHARI LAL, Additional District Judge of Cawnpore, reversing a decree of BABU RAJA RAM, First Subordinate Judge.

K. N. Katju and S. N. Seth for the appellants.

U. S. Bajpai and Hari Ram Jha for the respondents.

The following judgments were delivered:—

Mukerji, J.

MUKERJI, J.—The question involved in this appeal is: what was the intention of Musammat Budhia, towards Phundu as regards her property, as expressed by her in her will?

It appears that on the death of Mst. Budhia, Phundu took possession of her property which consisted of two houses and some movables and mortgaged one of these to the plaintiff No. 2. Phundu died without any heir. The defendant No. 1 obtained Letters of Administration to the estate of Mst. Budhia, and by the permission of the District Judge, who granted the Letters of Administration, sold the property, mortgaged by Phundu, to the defendant No. 2. The plaintiff No. 1 is a transferee from the plaintiff No. 2 and has joined with the original mortgagee in the suit.

The court of first instance dismissed the suit holding that Phundu got nothing under the will, but the lower appellate court decreed the suit holding that Phundu was the legatee under the will and was entitled to make the mortgage.

It is common ground that the defendant No. 1 is not an heir to Mst. Bhudia. It is also the case that no one has so far claimed any interest in Bhudia's property as her heir-at-law.

We have been furnished with a translation of the will, and we have also examined the original will which is in Urdu. Briefly what Bhudia said was as follows:—

---

*S. A. 1183 of 1928

CIVIL 1931
MANNU LAL
v.
LACHHMAN DAS
Mukerji, J.

> Budhia's mother-in-law had brought up one Gauri. Gauri was married and had a son Phundu. Gauri became immoral of character and was turned out of the house by Mst. Gyani. Phundu's mother died leaving Phundu a child of one year. Budhia brought up this child Phundu who was eleven years of age at the date of the execution of the will.

Having said all this, Budhia expressed herself as follows:—

> I am maintaining him (Phundu) and also intend to maintain him in future. I have also in mind the future management of my property. Therefore, in health (of) body and mind I put down the following provisions which should be carried out after my death by the said Phundu who is appointed executor herewith:—
>
> 1. Of all my property the said Phundu shall be the executor.
> 2. The said executor will not have any right to sell the property.
> 3. Whatever may be the income of the property, the executor will have the right to spend the same for his own maintenance and for the maintenance of all the members of the family (Ahlekhandan) but will have no further right.
> 4. The said executor will have no right to commit any act which will in any way encumber or cause loss to the property.

Having said so, Mst. Bhudia further expressed her idea that, if Phundu also turned out to be of immoral character, her caste men and certain other persons (including some Brahmans) would be entitled to take the property out of Phundu's hands and to sell one of the properties and build a temple in the other.

The question then is: did Mst. Budhia intend to give and did she give Phundu the right to appropriate the income of her estate and whether, she having in no way limited the duration during which this appropriation is to take place, it followed from the provisions of Section 172 of the Indian Succession Act that the corpus of the estate should be taken as having been bequeathed to Phundu?

I have already mentioned that neither in the will nor in any of the pleadings nor in the evidence so far as it can be gathered from the two judgments, was there any suggestion that Bhudia left any relation whom she wanted to benefit, if her idea to benefit Phundu failed. We have seen that she clearly set forth in her will that, if Phundu turned out to be a man of dissolute character, her property was to be utilized in raising money and in constructing a temple. Budhia expressly says in the will that she was maintaining Phundu and she wanted to maintain him in future. She authorised him to deal with her property by appointing him the executor and gave him the liberty to spend the entire income of her estate for maintaining himself and his family. It has been conceded in argument that the maintenance of the family or khandan could mean only the maintenance of the family which would come into existence if he married and reared up a family. We have to consider, now, what was in the mind of the testatrix. Did she give to Phundu unreservedly the income of her estate? For, if she did so without indicating any limitation of duration, it would follow as a matter of law that the estate would belong to the legatee (Section 172 Indian Succession Act 1925).

It has been contended that Bhudia gave to Phundu authority to maintain himself and his family and nothing more and, therefore, it cannot be said that the "interest or produce" of the estate had been bequeathed to Phundu within the meaning of Section 172 of the Indian Succession Act. In my opinion, this is taking rather a narrow view of the whole situation. Phundu was the executor of the estate and was prima facie the person fully authorised to deal with the income. The fact that he was prohibited from transferring the property did not debar him from spending the entire income of the property. It is true that Phundu was told that he was to spend the money on the maintenance of himself and his family, but there is no limitation as to the portion of the income that was to be utilized for the purpose. Undoubtedly it was the idea that the whole income might be spent, at the discretion of Phundu, if he thought that the money was needed for his own support and the support of his family. The income from the property was not very large. The property consisted of two houses and a few movable properties. In my opinion, the court below was right in holding that Bhudia intended to give and did give the income of her estate to Phundu on this condition and this condition alone that he was to be of good character.

It is nobody's suggestion that Phundu was of immoral character and forfeited the bequest. If he did not forfeit it, he was the owner of the property and was not divested of it under the only condition under which he could be divested. The mortgage made by him must be taken, therefore, to be valid. The prohibition against alienation is bad in law.

The case of Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee[1] and the remarks to be found at page 444 made by their Lordships of the Privy Council, in my opinion bear out the plaintiffs' contention as regards the construction of the will.

The only other point urged on behalf of the appellant is that the lower appellate court was not right in holding that any consideration had been paid to Phundu. This is a decision on a point of fact. Besides, the admission of Phundu in the deed which is relevant against the defendants under Section 19 of the Indian Evidence Act, and the evidence on the record would be good enough, in the circumstances of the case, to prove the payment of the consideration.

I would dismiss the appeal with costs.

Niamatullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—On the construction of the will in question, I was very doubtful as to the correctness of the view taken by the lower appellate court, but I find that in Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee[2] their Lordships of the Privy Council have construed an exactly similar clause as conferring an absolute title on the devisee. There a Hindu lady left to her sons lands belonging to her to support the daily worship of an idol and to defray the expenses of certain other religious ceremonies with a provision that, in the event of there being a surplus after those usages had been satisfied out of the revenue of the said land, such surplus should be applied to the support of the family. It was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that the last provision amounted to a bequest of the surplus to the members of the family for their own use and benefit and that each of the sons of the testatrix took a share in the property. After considering the terms of the will, which, as I have said, are similar to those contained in the will before me, "Their Lordships, not without some doubt and hesitation, came to the conclusion that these words amount to a bequest of the surplus to the members of the joint family for their own use and benefit. It is true that the testatrix further declares 'this property of mine will not be liable for debts of any person, none will be able to transfer it, none will have the rights of gift and sale.' But these directions, being inconsistent with the interest given, were wholly beyond her powers and must be rejected as having no operation." In this view, I must hold that the decree passed by the lower appellate court is correct, and agree with my learned brother in dismissing the appeal with costs.

---

[1] I. L. R. 5 Cal. 438

[2] I. L. R. 5 Cal. 438

By the Court—The appeal is dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Civil 1932
April 4
Pullan, J.
Niamatullah, J

JOTI PRASAD and another (Plaintiffs)
versus
HAR PRASAD (Defendant)*

Tenancy Act (Local Act II of 1901), Sec. 31(2)—Unauthorised transfer by occupancy tenant—Suit by zamindar—To eject transferee—Tenant not impleaded—Whether maintainable in civil court.

Where the plaintiffs sued for ejectment of defendant on the allegation that the heirs of an occupancy tenant of the land of which the plaintiffs were the owners, had transferred it to defendant, though they had no right to do so, and the heirs of the occupancy tenant were not impleaded, held, that the question of jurisdiction must, in the first instance, be decided on the statement of facts to be found in the plaint which merely sought the ejectment of an alleged trespasser, and the suit was cognizable by the civil court; and Sec. 31(2) of the Tenancy Act of 1901 did not apply as the plaintiffs had not sued for the ejectment of both the tenant and the transferee.

The word 'maurusi' means heritable and is not the recognised equivalent of occupancy, which is more appropriately translated as 'dakhilkari'.

First Appeal from a decree of S. M. Mir Esq., Subordinate Judge of Moradabad.

P. L. Banerji and S. N. Seth for the appellants.

K. N. Katju, Vishwa Mittra and Banke Behari for the respondent.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J

Niamatullah, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit brought by the plaintiff-appellants for a declaration that the sale deed, executed by the legal representatives of one Mr. John Lemaistre in favour of the defendant-respondent on July 25, 1925 is null and void as against the plaintiffs, who are the proprietors of the land to which the aforesaid sale deed relates and for recovery of possession with mesne profits and perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from cutting down trees standing on the land.

---

*F. A. 269 of 1928

CIVIL

1932

JOTI PRASAD
v.
HAR PRASAD

Niamat-ullah, J.

The land in dispute consists of Nos. 2781 and 2783|1, measuring 5 bighas 10 biswas and 1 bigha 15 biswas, respectively, situate in patti Jasso in the town of Bijnor. It is not disputed that the plaintiff-appellants are the owners of the plots in dispute which are mixed up with plots Nos. 2783|2 and 2782|3, belonging to certain proprietors, who are not parties to this case, as also with Nos. 2782 and 2784, which belonged to Mr. John Lemaistre himself. There is a 'kothi' on a portion of the land to which all these 'khasra' numbers refer. Parties are not agreed as regards the exact situation of the 'kothi'. In the view of the case we are inclined to take, it is not necessary to locate it with reference to the exact khasra number.

The plaintiffs' case, as stated in their plaint, is that Mr. John Lemaistre was an occupancy tenant of the land claimed by them and that his successors-in-title transferred it to the defendant by the sale deed of July 25, 1925, though as occupancy tenants they had no right to do so. Accordingly it is alleged that the defendant is a trespasser. It should be noted that the heirs of Mr. Lemaistre, who, if the plaintiffs' allegations are true, should now be considered to be occupancy tenants, have not been made parties to the case.

The suit was resisted on a variety of grounds, including the plea that the civil court had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit on the allegations to be found in the plaint. It is pleaded that the land in suit had been leased to Mr. Lemaistre sometime before 1849 by the then proprietors thereof in perpetuity and for building purposes, that the successors-in-interest of John Lemaistre had a transferable right and that by the sale dated July 25, 1925 the defendant stepped into the shoes of his transferors. A number of other pleas were also raised and have been decided by the lower court. It is, however, not necessary to mention them in detail for the purposes of the present appeal.

The learned Subordinate Judge dismissed the plaintiffs' suit, holding against the plaintiffs on the main question raised by their plaint.

We are clearly of opinion that on the allegations contained in the plaint, the suit was rightly instituted in the civil court. The question of jurisdiction must, in the first instance, be decided on the statement of facts to be found in the plaint. The plaintiffs have not impleaded the tenants themselves, who, according to them, had no right to transfer. If this is so, transfer of their tenancy land was void and conferred no right on the transferee (defendant), who is accordingly a trespasser. A suit for ejectment of a trespasser lies in the civil court. Reference has been made to Section 31(2) of the Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), which was in force when the suit was instituted and provided that when a tenant has made any transfer, the landholder may sue for the cancellation of the sale, or for the ejectment of the tenant and the sub-lessee or other transferee, or for both. Section 167, read with Schedule IV, Group B, No. 18, makes a suit of the character contemplated by Section 31(2) cognizable exclusively by a revenue court. That section, however, applies to a suit (a) for the cancellation of the transfer, or (b) for the ejectment of the tenant together with the transferee, or (c) for both the reliefs (a) and (b). The plaintiffs have not sued for the ejectment of both the tenant

CIVIL
1932
JOTI PRASAD
v.
HAR PRASAD
Niamat-ullah, J.

and the transferee. In case (b) above it is only if the object of the suit is to terminate the tenancy and to eject the tenant and his transferee that Section 31 (2) can apply. The ejectment of the transferee, assuming he is only a trespasser, will not necessarily imply extinguishment of the right of the tenant. In this view, the present suit, so far as it is for ejectment of the defendant, is cognizable by a civil court. Whether on facts found the civil court can grant the relief of ejectment is another matter. The initial jurisdiction is determined by the allegations made in the plaint which merely seeks the ejectment of an alleged trespasser. It is not necessary to decide the further question whether the relief of declaration, claimed by the plaintiff in respect of the sale deed of July 25, 1925, can be granted by the civil court.

As regards the exact nature of Mr. John Lemaistre's right in the land in dispute, there is a good deal of obscurity. The land was acquired by him, according to the defendant, before 1849 and, according to the plaintiffs, after 1871. No written grant has been produced by either party. It is not suggested by any of them that the original entry of Mr. Lemaistre on the land in dispute was otherwise than under an oral arrangement. The terms of the tenancy must, therefore, be gathered from the conduct of the parties and the apparent use which has been made of the land ever since the grant. We have been taken through the khasras prepared at the settlement of 1871, a partition in 1879 and at the settlement of 1893-94. The land in dispute has always been shown as in possession of Mr. Lemaistre along with Nos. 2782 and 2784, which belonged to him in proprietary right. All the plots, including proprietary and tenancy lands, were occupied by him either as site of his 'kothi' or its compound. In most years the land in dispute was shown as culturable waste, and occasionally vegetables were grown. Lemon trees are also shown in some years against part of the land in dispute. The land now in dispute was shown as 'maurusi' tenancy in the column of remarks of the khasra prepared in 1871. Reliance is placed by the plaintiffs on that expression to establish their case that Mr. Lemaistre was an occupancy tenant. The word 'maurusi' means heritable and is not the recognized equivalent of occupancy, which is more appropriately translated as 'dakhilkari'. Mr. John Lemaistre was the head clerk in the district of Bijnor. The District Gazetteer shows that he was one of the European residents of that station at the time of mutiny in 1857. It is in the highest degree improbable that he acquired this land as an agricultural tenant and became an occupancy tenant by twelve years' cultivation, as is alleged by the plaintiffs. It is far more probable that the then proprietors let the land in dispute to him to form part of the compound of his 'kothi'.

It appears that in 1897 the then proprietors obtained an order of enhancement of rent from the settlement officer on the allegation that the land in dispute formed part of an agricultural holding. Subsequently an application for review was made, and it was admitted on behalf of the proprietors before the settlement officer "that the land in question was given to the ancestor of the present owner to form compound of a bungalow in the station of Bijnor, which it still does". The plaintiff-appellants have not adduced any evidence to rebut or explain away the admis-

CIVIL
1932
JOTI PRASAD v. HAR PRASAD
Niamat-ullah, J.

sion referred to in the order of the settlement officer, and we hold on a consideration of the entire evidence that the plaintiff-appellants have failed to establish that the land in dispute was held by Mr. John Lemaistre as an agricultural tenant.

No less than three commissioners were appointed by the lower court to ascertain whether the 'kothi' or any part of it stood on the land in dispute. They arrived at different conclusions. In our opinion, it is wholly unnecessary to determine that question. If the land in dispute, or any part of it, is covered by the 'kothi', the presumption will be that it was let for building purposes, and there can be no doubt that the lessee of land let for building purposes has a right of transfer. If, on the other hand, no part of the land in dispute forms site of the 'kothi' and is merely appurtenant to it as part of its compound and was let as such, the lessee should be deemed to possess a right of transfer of the nature described in S. 108 (j), Transfer of Property Act (No. IV of 1882) which merely enacts preexisting law. It was not argued before us, though the question was put to the learned advocate for the plaintiff-appellants, that the law before 1882 was in this respect different from that contained in the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882). Unless the land in dispute was held by Mr. Lemaistre as an agricultural tenant, in which case different considerations may apply, he must be deemed to be a lessee subject to the general law governing landlord and tenant, and not that applicable to agricultural holdings. In that view, the heirs of Mr. John Lemaistre had every right to "transfer absolutely or by way of mortgage or sub-lease the whole or any part of their interest in the property and any transferee of such interest or part may again transfer it (Section 108 (j)). "The lessee shall not, by reason only of such transfer, cease to be subject to any of the liabilities attaching to the lease". (Ibid).

It is not necessary to determine for the purpose of this case whether Mr. John Lemaistre had rights in perpetuity, nor is it necessary to ascertain other terms of the grant under which he held. It is enough for the purpose of this case to find that he and his successor-in-interest did not hold as tenants, having no right of transfer. The plaintiffs' suit was rightly dismissed, and on our findings this appeal must also fail. It is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CRIMINAL
1931
Dec. 7
BENNET, J.

KING-EMPEROR
versus SIKHDAR*

Arms Act, Sec. 19 (f)—Unlicensed gun in the house—Presumption against all adult male members that it was in their possession and control—One or all the members liable to prosecution.

The finding of an unlicensed gun in the house would raise a presumption against all the adult male members that it was in their possession and control, and they might one and all be tried on that charge. It would be for these persons to show that they were not in possession of the gun in question. It is open to the police to prosecute one or all of the adult male members for an offence of this nature.

*Cr. Ref. 658 of 1931

Q.-E. v. Sangam Lal, I. L. R. 15 All. 129 explained.

CRIMINAL

1931

KING-EMPEROR v. SIKHDAR

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by BABU GANGA PRASAD VERMA, Sessions Judge of Fatehpur.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

The opposite party was not represented.

The following judgment was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Fatehpur asking that the conviction of one Sikhdar for illegal possession of a gun without a license under Sec. 19 (f) of the Arms Act should be set aside. The facts found by the learned Sessions Judge are that the gun in question was found in the house of this accused, but the recommendation is made on the ground that not only the accused lives in this house but some other members of the joint family of which the accused is a member, and that the accused is not the managing member. The joint family in question consists of the father of the accused, who appeared as a witness and denied that there was a gun in the house, and he is an old man aged 60, and he stated that he cannot see distinctly. The magistrate is apparently right in his conclusion that the father would have anything to do personally with this gun. Of the two brothers of the accused one Purna is said to live in another village called Nathkhera. Another brother Jethwa apparently lives in the house with the accused and Jethwa is said to be older than the accused. The learned Sessions Judge referred to a ruling of this Court of the year 1893, Q.-E. v. Sangam Lal[1] in which it was laid down at page 131 that > where it is sought to establish that possession and control are with some member of the family other than the managing member, there must be good and clear evidence of the fact before we can in an Act of this kind arrive at such a conclusion.

In the head-note this ruling is made to say that there must be good evidence that such arms are in the exclusive possession and control of the particular member of the joint family. It is to be noted that the word "exclusive" is not in the body of the ruling, and there is no justification whatsoever for its appearance in the head-note. In Sec. 19 (f) of the Indian Arms Act the words used are not exclusive possession but merely "has in his possession or under his control any arms". If the doctrine of exclusive possession held by the Sessions Judge on the strength of the language of the head-note in Q.-E. v. Sangam Lal were correct, then it would be impossible to convict two Hindu brothers who were found in possession of a gun in their house, although the evidence might establish that they were actually arrested by the police when they were both holding the gun in question. Such a result would obviously make nonsense of Sec. 19 (f) of the Arms Act. I do not consider that a Hindu is in any better position in this country than a Mohammedan or an Indian Christian and in no country in the world is it laid down that the criminal law should be interpreted by the canons of civil law. The evidence here shows that the accused is one of the persons who live in that house and the accused is one of the adult male members of the family. The finding of an unlicensed gun in the house would to my mind raise a presumption against all the adult male members that it was in their possession and control, and they might one and all be tried on that charge. Under these circumstances I consider it would be for these persons to show that they were not in possession of the gun in question. It is open to the police to prosecute one or all of the adult male members for an offence of this nature, and in the present case the police selected Sikhdar for prosecution for the apparent reason that they had information that Sikhdar had been taking part in a dacoity, and they searched the house where he lived in that connection. I consider that the conviction of Sikhdar on the evidence was correct, and I refuse this reference. Let the papers be returned.

---

[1] I. L. R. 15 All. 129

Reference refused

CIVIL 1932
March 18
PULLAN, J
NIAMAT-ULLAH, J.

AZIZ FATMA (Defendant)
versus
MUKUND LAL AND OTHERS (Plaintiffs)*

Transfer of Property Act, Sec. 52 and Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Sec. 19—Lease for 20 years in favour of defendant during pendency of mortgage suit—Civil suit by purchaser in execution of mortgage decree—Relief—That lease was void and defendant be ejected—Status of defendant—Whether suit for ejectment maintainable in civil court.

The plaintiffs purchased certain property at a sale in execution of a mortgage decree. Prior to this the same property was purchased by one H in execution of a simple money decree, who executed a lease for 20 years in favour of the defendant during the pendency of the mortgage suit. On a suit by the plaintiffs in the civil court for a declaration that the lease was void and for the ejectment of the defendant, held, (1) that at the time the lease was granted, H was the landlord and was authorised to admit the defendant to the occupation of the land, and the position of the defendant was that of a tenant, and when the suit was brought, the possession of the defendant was, under Sec. 19 of the Tenancy Act of 1926, that of a statutory tenant, and he could be ejected only under the provisions of that Act; (2) that the lease could be challenged under the terms of Sec. 52 T. P. Act, and the civil court could grant a declaration that the lease was void as against the plaintiffs.

SECOND APPEAL from a decree of ALI AUSAT ESQ., District Judge of Aligarh, reversing a decree of MAULVI SERAJUDDIN, Munsif of Koil.

A. M. Khwaja for the appellant.

K. N. Katju and R. C. Ghatak for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Pullan, J.

PULLAN, J.—The 'zamindari' shares of two brothers were put to sale in execution of a simple money decree and purchased by one Haji Muhammad Saleh Khan on April 20, 1925. At the time when that sale took place, another person, a mortgagee, had also brought a suit in respect of this property. The mortgagee had obtained a final decree on April 3,

---

*S. A. 568 of 1930

1925, and he in his turn put the property to sale. The former purchaser, Haji Muhammad Saleh Khan, had received a notice of the impending sale at the instance of the mortgagee on September 2, 1925, and on September 8, 1925 Saleh Khan executed a lease of certain plots in favour of one Muhammad Ishaq for 20 years at, what has been held by the learned District Judge to be, a favourable rate of rent. On July 28, 1926 the property was sold again in execution of the mortgagee's decree and was purchased by the present plaintiffs, who filed this suit for a declaration that the lease in favour of Muhammad Ishaq was fictitious and void, for possession of the plots covered by the lease and for a sum of Rs.750 a year by way of damages.

In this second appeal we have to determine the position of the lessee as against the present plaintiffs. We must accept the findings of the District Judge, first, that these plots were let at a low rate of rent and that the land could fetch Rs.700 a year whereas the lease is only for Rs.344 a year, and, secondly, that the lessor executed the lease in order to cause loss to the plaintiffs and to favour unduly the lessee. The lease was executed pendente lite, and a lease executed for 20 years in these circumstances must be taken to be a transfer of property within the meaning of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act. The lease was prejudicial to the interests of the present owners of the land and should not be held to be binding upon them. But when we have said this, we have said all that can be said in favour of the present plaintiffs. Whatever may have been the motive which influenced Haji Muhammad Saleh Khan in granting this lease, he was clearly the person authorized to admit the defendant to the occupation of the land. He was at the time the landlord, and it was his duty to arrange for the cultivation of the land. It is not the fault of a lessee that he received favourable terms from the lessor, and whatever may be the rights conveyed by the lease and however much the landlord may now be entitled to challenge the terms of that lease, the position of the lessee is that of a tenant. He is not a trespasser and, as a tenant, he has the rights of a tenant which have been given to him by the Agra Tenancy Act, and he can be ejected only under the provisions of that Act. The new Agra Tenancy Act came into force in September 1926, and when this suit was brought, the possession of the lessee, Mohd. Ishaq, was, under Section 19 of Act III of 1926, that of a statutory tenant. Any proceedings against him by way of ejectment could be taken only in the Revenue Court. The defendant, in his written statement, does not claim to hold to the terms of the lease, as he accepts his position as a statutory tenant. We have already pointed out that the lease was one which can be challenged by the plaintiffs under the terms of Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, and we accordingly think it proper to uphold that portion of the decree of the court below which granted the first relief sought by the plaintiffs, namely, a declaration that the lease is void as against the present plaintiffs, but we can go no further than this. We cannot give a decree for profits, and we cannot order the ejectment of the defendant. These questions must be determined by the Revenue Court.

We, therefore, allow this appeal in part and modify the decree of the court below in the manner specified above. The defendant has succeeded in holding this land for a period of seven years altogether and for a period of five years against the wish of the 'zamindar'. In the circumstances of the case we think it proper to order that the parties shall bear their own costs.

Appeal allowed in part

CIVIL 1931
Dec. 23
MEARS, C. J.
SEN, J.

RAGHUNATH PRASAD AND ANOTHER
versus
JWALA PRASAD AND OTHERS*

Tenancy Act (III of 1926), Secs. 15 and 14(5)—Usufructuary mortgage of sir in terms of Sec. 14(5)—Stipulation—In the event of mortgagor being declared exproprietary tenant, he would be liable to pay rent determined—But mortgagee to retain possession of property—Whether this amounted to waiver of exproprietary rights.

Where a specific area of sir was transferred by a usufructuary mortgage in terms of Sec. 14(5) of the Tenancy Act of 1926, and there was a stipulation in the mortgage bond that in the event of the mortgagor being declared an exproprietary tenant he would be liable to pay the rent determined but the mortgagee should retain full possession and enjoyment of the mortgaged property, that is the grove, held, that the stipulation amounted to a waiver of his exproprietary rights, since the mortgagor expressly consented that the mortgagee should retain possession of the mortgaged property which would form the subject of the exproprietary rights, and the mortgagee could not be deprived of the benefit of this stipulation.

APPEAL under Section 10 of the Letters Patent from a judgment of the HON'BLE MR. JUSTICE KING.

The following is the judgment of

King, J.

KING, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for damages for fruit misappropriated by the defendant from a grove and for a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with the plaintiffs' possession of the trees of the grove.

On September 15, 1927 the defendant executed a usufructuary mortgage of certain plots of land, which have been held to be grove land, in favour of the plaintiffs. The property was described as being resumed muafi and it was recorded as sir land. On January 20, 1928 the zamindar brought a suit for the determination of the rent of the mortgagor on the ground that by reason of the transfer of his proprietary rights under the usufructuary mortgage he had become an exproprietary tenant and his rent should be fixed. Accordingly the revenue court fixed Rs. 10-10-0 as the rent of the defendant as an exproprietary tenant.

Subsequently a dispute arose between the parties or their lessees, for possession and enjoyment of the produce of the grove, and the plaintiffs instituted the present suit.

The principal defence was that as the mortgagor had become an exproprietary tenant of the land in suit, the trees which formed part of the exproprietary holding could lawfully be retained by the mortgagor notwithstanding the terms of the mortgage deed. The jurisdiction of the civil court was also challenged as it was stated that the relation of landlord and tenant exists between the parties.

---

*L. P. A. 32 of 1931

Both the courts below have decreed the plaintiff's claim and the defendant comes to this Court in second appeal.

It is clear that under the terms of the mortgage deed itself the mortgagee, namely, the plaintiff, is entitled to the usufruct of the grove. It was contemplated in the mortgage deed itself that by reason of the transfer the mortgagor would become an exproprietary tenant, and it was expressly provided that in such an event if rent were fixed upon the holding of the defendant as an exproprietary tenant then he would be liable to pay that rent, but the mortgagee was to be entitled to the full use and enjoyment of the grove, to appropriate the produce and to plant new trees.

The question is whether the mortgagor is bound by the terms of his own agreement, or whether this agreement is void as contrary to the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act.

The appellant has relied upon a ruling of Mst. Hafizan v. Chakko Lal, A. I. R. (1927) All. 779 in which it was held that groves situate on exproprietary holdings partake of the nature of the holding on which they stand, and as such cannot be attached and sold in execution of a decree. This was the decision of a single judge, but it followed a Full Bench decision in Jugul v. Deokinandan, I. L. R. 9 All. 88. These rulings, however, are not strictly applicable to the facts of the present case. The mortgage of the land, with the grove standing thereon, was made by the mortgagor as a proprietor before any question of his being a mere exproprietary tenant arose. The mortgage of the trees, therefore, was perfectly valid, and it is open to question whether the mere fact that the mortgagor subsequently was found by the revenue court to be an exproprietary tenant, in consequence of the transfer, renders the valid mortgage of the trees invalid. It is unnecessary for me to consider that point for reasons which will presently appear. In any case the point decided by the rulings mentioned does not arise, because there is no question whether the defendant as an exproprietary tenant is now able to transfer the grove or whether the grove can be attached and sold in execution of a decree against him.

The finding of the revenue court that the defendant is an exproprietary tenant of the land in suit (which finding is necessarily implied in the determination of rent payable by the defendant as an exproprietary tenant) is, in my opinion, binding upon the civil courts and cannot be challenged.

The decision of this appeal appears to me to turn upon the provisions of the last paragraph of Section 15 of the Agra Tenancy Act of 1926. Section 15 lays down certain rules regarding the relinquishment of exproprietary rights. The last paragraph runs as follows:—

"Notwithstanding anything in this section, where the property transferred by means of a mortgage of the kind specified in Sub-section (5) of Section 14 consists wholly of a specific area of sir, the mortgagor may by simultaneous agreement in writing waive his exproprietary rights, and in that case the mortgaged land shall, if the mortgagor regains within 12 years of the date of the transfer possession thereof on repayment of the mortgage, resume the character of sir."

In my opinion the terms of this provision apply exactly to the facts of the present case. The property was transferred by a usufructuary mortgage which is a mortgage of the kind specified in Sub-section (5) of Section 14. The property consisted wholly of a specific area of sir. The mortgagor, moreover, in the mortgage deed itself expressly agreed in writing that in the event of his being declared an exproprietary tenant he would be liable to pay the rent determined but the mortgagee should retain full possession and enjoyment of the mortgaged property, that is the grove. In my opinion this amounts to a waiver of his exproprietary rights, since he expressly consented that the mortgagee should retain

CIVIL
1931
RAGHUNATH PRASAD
v.
JWALA PRASAD
King, J.

possession of the mortgaged property which would form the subject of the ex-proprietary rights.

In view of this express provision of the Agra Tenancy Act I think it is not open to the mortgagor to claim that he can disregard the terms of the contract of mortgage, and that he can insist upon retaining possession of the land and grove in exercise of his rights as an exproprietary tenant.

In my opinion the courts below have come to a right decision and I dismiss the appeal with costs.

Panna Lal for the appellants.

Krishna Murari Lal for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sen, J

SEN, J.—We are clearly of opinion that the judgment under appeal is correct and ought to be affirmed. Where property is transferred by a usufructuary mortgage in terms of Section 14, Sub-section 5 of the Agra Tenancy Act of 1926 and there is a stipulation in the mortgage bond that the mortgagee is to retain full possession and enjoyment of the mortgaged property including the trees appertaining to an exproprietary holding, the mortgagee cannot be deprived of the benefit of this stipulation. This is perfectly clear from the language of the last paragraph of Section 15 of the Act. We dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

CIVIL 1932
March 4
MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J

SURAJ BHAN UGARSEN—IN THE MATTER OF*

Income-tax Act (XI of 1922), Secs. 66(2), 23(4), 30 and 31—Assessment by Income-tax Officer under Sec. 23(4)—Assistant Commissioner considers assessment properly made—No order under Sec. 31—No reference lies to High Court.

Where the Assistant Commissioner of Income-tax considers that the assessment by the Income-tax Officer is properly made under Sec. 23(4), no appeal lies to him under Sec. 31 (in accordance with the proviso to Sec. 30) and there is no order under Sec. 31, and no reference therefore lies to the High Court in accordance with the provisions of Sec. 66(2).

Vishwa Mittra for the applicant.

U. S. Bajpai for the Crown.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—These are two references by the Commissioner of Income tax at the instance of a Hindu joint family of whom the manager is one Surajbhan Ugarsen. In one case the assessment is for the years 1930-1931 and in the other case for the years 1929-1930 under Section 34. In each case there was non-compliance with the orders of the Income tax Officer. In regard to the earlier year the Income tax Officer issued a notice under Section 22(2) read with Section 34 requiring a return of income for the year 1929-1930. The assessee submitted a return of Rs.1,500 as an estimated income from interest and stated that an approximate amount was given because the assessee had kept no accounts previous to April 1, 1929. The Income tax Officer held that this was not a valid return and accordingly he made a best judgment assessment under Section 23(4). An appeal was filed by the assessee and the Assistant Commissioner of Income tax considered the reasons which had led the Income tax Officer to assess under Section 23(4) and he held that those reasons were sufficient and therefore no appeal lay under Section 31 in accordance with the proviso to Section 30. As the Assistant Commissioner of Income tax has considered whether the assessment was properly made under Section 23(4) and has held that no appeal lies therefore there was no order under Section 31. As there was no order under Section 31 no reference lies to this Court in accordance with the provisions of Section 66, Sub-section (2).

---

*Mis. 764 of 1931

The case for the assessment in regard to the year 1930-1931 is similar. A notice was issued under Section 22(4) requiring the assessee to submit cash books and ledgers and original bonds and promissory notes and again a notice was issued under the same section requiring him to submit cash books and ledgers in regard to petrol and kerosene oil agency in Dehra Dun, cash books and ledgers in regard to a cloth shop in Dehra Dun and cash books and ledgers for money-lending and grain business at another place. The assessee failed to produce any books in regard to the Dehra Dun business on grounds that they had been previously shown to the Income tax Officer, Dehra Dun and he alleged that he had no account books before the years 1927-1928 and 1928-1929 for this money-lending business. The Income tax Officer held on certain evidence that there must have been account books for the money-lending business for the years not produced and that the reasons for not producing the books in regard to the Dehra Dun business were insufficient. An assessment was therefore made under Section 23, Sub-section (4). An appeal was filed by the assessee. The learned Assistant Commissioner considered the grounds which had led the Income tax Officer to consider that the assessment should be made under Section 23(4) and held that those were good grounds. Accordingly no appeal lay under Section 31. As already stated when no appeal lies under Section 31, no reference lies under Section 66(2).

Our decision, therefore, in both these cases is that no reference lies to this Court and accordingly we refuse these references with costs. We allow the fees to the Government advocate of Rs.150 conditional on his filing a certificate of payment within the period prescribed by the Rules of this Court. The costs of the references will be paid by the assessee.

Reference refused

CIVIL

1932

March 29

MUKERJI, J.
BENNET, J.

DAMBAR LAL (Judgment-debtor)
versus
CHAND MAL AND OTHERS (Decree-holders)*

Limitation Act, Art. 182, Cl. (5)—Application for execution filed after expiry of prescribed period—Previous application made under Or. 21, R. 11—Not accompanied by affidavit required by Or. 21, R. 66(3)—Rules 11 to 14 complied with—Whether application "in accordance with law" so as to save limitation.

An application for execution of a final decree for sale in a suit on a mortgage was made by the decree-holder, who claimed that limitation was saved under Art. 182(5), Limitation Act, by a previous application under Or. 21, R. 11. On behalf of the judgment-debtor it was alleged that the previous application was not 'in accordance with law' because it was not accompanied by the affidavit required by Or. 21, R. 66(3) and the certificate of the Sub-registrar as regards prior encumbrances. Held, (1) that it was not shown that any of the rules 11 to 14 of Or. 21 were not complied with and therefore the application under Rule 11 was an application according to law; (2) that the affidavit and the certificate should be filed at a subsequent stage.

EXECUTION FIRST APPEAL from a decree of MAULVI MUHAMMAD AQIB NOMANI, Subordinate Judge of Agra.

B. Malik for the appellant.

Gopi Nath Kunzru for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Bennet, J.

BENNET, J.—This is an execution first appeal by a judgment-debtor and the sole point raised is that the application for execution is beyond time. There was a final decree for sale in a suit on a mortgage, the decree being dated October 26, 1925. The present application for execution is dated August 1, 1930. The decree-holder claims that limitation was saved under the Indian Limitation Act, Article 182, Clause (5) by an application under Order XXI, Rule 11 dated November 26, 1927. The sole question is whether that application was "an application in accordance with law" as is necessary under the Limitation Act Article quoted. On behalf of the appellant it is alleged that the application was not in accordance with law because it was not accompanied by the affidavit required by Order XXI, Rule 66(3) and the certificate of the sub-registrar as regards prior encumbrances. We consider that that certificate and affidavit should be filed at a subsequent stage from the application for execution under Order XXI, Rule 11. When the application for execution was filed the court should have dealt with it under Order XXI, Rule 17 which lays down that the court is to ascertain whether such of the requirements of Rules 11 to 14 as may be applicable to the case have been complied with. It is not shown that any of these Rules 11 to 14 were not complied with and therefore in our opinion the application under Rule 11 was an application according to law. We therefore consider that limitation was saved by this application and we dismiss this appeal with costs.

Appeal dismissed

---

*E. F. A. 173 of 1931

CRIMINAL
1932
April 28
KING, J
THOM, J.

HAR PRASAD
versus
KING-EMPEROR*

Municipalities Act (Local Act II of 1916), Secs. 307, 318 and 321(1)—Prosecution under Sec. 307—Accused's failure to comply with notices ordering him to remove certain construction—Remedy under Sec. 318 not availed of—Whether trying magistrate precluded from questioning legality or validity of notices.

The accused was prosecuted under Sec. 307 of the Municipalities Act of 1916 for failure to comply with two notices issued by the Municipal Board under Secs. 186 and 211 ordering him to remove a certain construction which was encroaching upon a public drain, and it was proved that the notices had been served and not complied with. The accused maintained that he had not made any encroachment on the public drain and therefore the Municipal Board had no jurisdiction to issue the notices. Held, that Sec. 318 gave to the accused a remedy by way of appeal to the District Magistrate to challenge the legality or validity of the notices under Secs. 186 and 211 of the Act and as he failed to avail himself of that remedy, the criminal court was, under Sec. 321, precluded from questioning the legality or validity of the notices.

There is nothing in the language of Sec. 307 of the Municipalities Act of 1916 which indicates that it is the duty of the court to satisfy itself that the notice was "lawfully" issued by the Municipal Board. King-Emperor v. Piare Lal, 12 A. L. J. 254 referred to. Mannu v. Emperor, 18 A. L. J. 187 relied on.

CRIMINAL REFERENCE made by the Sessions Judge of Mainpuri.

The applicant was not represented.

M. Waliullah (Assistant Government Advocate) for the Crown.

Krishna Murari Lal for the Municipal Board.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

King, J.

KING, J.—This is a reference by the learned Sessions Judge of Mainpuri recommending that a conviction and sentence passed by a Magistrate under Section 307 of the U. P. Municipalities Act, 1916, be set aside.

The facts are that there was a certain plot No. 2357 situated within the limits of the Mainpuri Municipality. In this plot there is a nallah through which the drainage of that locality passes. The accused Har Prasad alias Lallu is alleged to have started making a certain construction which encroached upon the nallah, partly blocking it up and interfering with the drainage. The Municipal Board issued a notice to him under Section 186 of the Municipalities Act, which was served upon him on October 30, 1928, requiring him to stop immediately the construction which he was making without permission. The accused did not comply with this notice which admittedly was served upon him.

On June 21, 1929 a second notice was served upon him by the Municipal Board under Section 211 ordering him to remove the construction, which was encroaching upon the public drain, within one month. The accused neglected to comply with this notice also. The Municipal Board thereupon instituted the prosecution under Section 307 for failure to comply with the two notices. The case was tried summarily. It was proved and admitted that the accused had been served with the two notices issued by the Municipal Board. It was also proved that he had not complied with the notices. The accused maintained that he had not made any encroachment on the public drain and therefore the Municipal Board had no jurisdiction to issue the notices. This was his only ground of defence. The trial court held that, as the accused was entitled under the Municipalities Act to appeal to the District Magistrate under Section 318, if he had any objection to complying with the notices served upon him, and as he had failed to avail himself of that remedy, the criminal court was precluded under Section 321 from considering the question whether the notices were valid or invalid. The result was that the accused was fined Rs.15 for each offence.

---

*Cr. Ref. 810 of 1931

The learned Sessions Judge was of opinion that the trial court was not precluded from going into the question whether the notices were legal and valid and held that the Magistrate should have taken evidence to show that the construction made by the applicant was an illegal construction to which the provisions of Sections 186 and 211 were applicable. The learned Sessions Judge therefore has made this reference recommending that the conviction and sentence be set aside and the Magistrate be directed to proceed with the case according to law.

This reference first came before a learned single Judge of this Court who considered that it raised an important question of law and directed that it be laid before a Bench of two Judges.

The Municipal Board has been represented before us by counsel. No one appears on behalf of the accused.

The main question which we have to consider is whether the Magistrate was bound, or authorised, to go into the question whether the notices served by the Municipal Board upon the accused were legal and valid.

Section 318 gave to the accused a remedy by way of appeal to the District Magistrate (or to such officer as the local Government may appoint for such purpose) to challenge the legality or validity of the notices served upon him under Sections 186 and 211 of the Municipalities Act. The accused neglected to avail himself of the remedy prescribed by statute. It appears to us that, in these circumstances, the Magistrate was perfectly right in holding that, under the provisions of Section 321, he was precluded from questioning the legality or validity of the notices. Subsection (1) of Section 321 runs as follows:—

> No order or direction referred to in Section 318 shall be questioned in any other manner or by any other authority than is provided therein.

The language seems to us to be perfectly clear. Section 318 expressly lays down that > Any person aggrieved by any order or direction made by a Board under the powers conferred upon it by Sections 186 or 211 may, within thirty days from the date of such direction or order, appeal to the District Magistrate.

Section 321 clearly shows that this is the only method by which the person served with a notice can challenge the validity of that notice and, if he fails to do so, no other authority such as a criminal court can question the validity of the notice.

The learned Sessions Judge referred to a ruling of this Court, King-Emperor v. Piare Lal[1]. In that case it was held that no one can be convicted of disobedience of a written notice of a Municipal Board for demolition of certain construction unless the court is satisfied that, what he had disobeyed, is a notice lawfully issued by the Board under the powers conferred upon it by the Municipalities Act. The court relied upon the language of Section 147 of the U. P. Municipalities Act of 1900 (Act I of 1900). That section provides a penalty for any person who disobeys any lawful direction given by the Board by public notice lawfully issued by it under the powers so conferred, etc. In view of the language of that Section it was held that it was incumbent upon the trial court to satisfy itself that the notice had, in fact, been lawfully issued by the Board under the powers conferred upon it by the Act. That decision clearly proceeded on the language of Section 147 of the old Municipal Act. The Legislature has introduced important changes in the language of Section 307 of the Municipalities Act of 1916, which corresponds to Section 147 of the old Act. Under Section 307 it is laid down that:

> If a notice has been given under the provisions of this Act . . to a person requiring him to execute a work, or do or refrain from doing anything within a time specified in the notice, and if such a person fails to comply with such a notice, then the said person shall be liable, on conviction

It will be noticed that in the present Section 307, the word "lawfully" has been omitted. There is nothing in the language of Section 307 which indicates that it is the duty of the court to satisfy itself that the notice was "lawfully" issued by the Municipal Board; probably this change of language was intentional, in order that it should be consistent with the provisions of Section 321 which prohibits any authority, other than the appellate authority specified in Section 318, from questioning the validity of the notice. The view which we take of the present law is supported by a decision of this Court in the case of Mannu v. Emperor[2].

In our opinion, the view taken by the trial court was perfectly right and the learned Sessions Judge has not appreciated the effect of the amendment of the statute.

We accordingly reject the reference and maintain the conviction and sentence. Let the record be returned.

Reference rejected

---

[1] 12 A. L. J. 254

[2] 18 A. L. J. 187

Civil

1930

July 18

Sulaiman, J.
Banerji, J.

HIRAMBHO NATH BANERJI (Judgment-debtor)
versus
SAROJNI DEVI (Auction-purchaser)*

Civil Procedure Code, Or. 41, R. 5 and Sec. 151—Appeal from an order confirming sale under Or. 21, R. 92—Application by auction-purchaser for delivery of possession under Or. 21, R. 95—Judgment-debtor applies for stay—Whether High Court has power to order stay.

The judgment-debtor appealed to the High Court from an order confirming the sale of immovable property under Or. 21, R. 92. During the pendency of the appeal the auction-purchaser applied to the court below for delivery of possession under Or. 21, R. 95. The judgment-debtor therefore applied to the High Court for stay of proceedings relating to the delivery of possession. Held, (1) that the application for delivery of possession was 'a proceeding under the order' confirming the sale, and the appellate court had therefore power to order stay under Or. 41, R. 5; (2) that assuming that Or. 41, R. 5 did not apply, the appellate court had power under Sec. 151 C. P. C. to stay proceedings in a subordinate court from which an appeal was pending.

ORDER on application of Hirambho Nath Banerji, judgment-debtor.

P. L. Banerji, H. C. Mukerji and R. C. Ghatak for the applicant.

S. N. Seth, H. P. Sen and J. C. Mukerji for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Sulaiman, J.

SULAIMAN, J.—This is an application for stay of execution in a First Appeal from order confirming an auction sale. In execution of a simple money decree the house property belonging to the applicant was put up for sale and purchased by a third party. An application was filed for setting aside the sale but it was dismissed and the sale was confirmed. Thereupon the sale certificate was duly granted and then the auction purchaser applied to the court below for delivery of possession under O. 21, R. 95. In the meantime the judgment-debtor has appealed from the order confirming the sale and has impleaded both the auction purchaser and the decree-holder.

A preliminary objection is taken to the hearing of this application on the ground that this Court has no jurisdiction to grant any stay. It is contended that O. 41, R. 5 is not applicable to this case because the application for delivery of possession is not a proceeding under the order confirming the sale but is a separate proceeding. It is also contended that when O. 21, R. 95 casts a duty upon the court below to deliver possession and gives it no discretion, this Court will have no inherent jurisdiction to order the stay and, in any case, we should not exercise that jurisdiction.

It seems to us that the expression "proceedings under a decree or order" in Order 41, R. 5 (1) is very wide and would include proceedings taken on the basis of a decree or order. It has to be conceded that the proceeding relating to the delivery of possession to an auction purchaser is not a proceeding in execution because the decree has been satisfied and the decree-holder has received his money. This was the view expressed by Banerji,

*Application in F. A. F. O. 90 of 1930

J. in Bhagwati v. Banwari Lal[1] in which Aikman and Griffin, JJ. concurred. The proceeding in reality is one between the judgment-debtor and his representative the auction purchaser." See also Mohsin Raza v. Haidar Baksh[2].

It does not however follow that the proceeding is not one under the order confirming the sale. Once the sale has been confirmed the court is bound to grant the sale certificate and O. 21, R. 94 does not even require a previous formal application to that effect. The effect of the grant of the sale certificate which is a ministerial act is to entitle the auction purchaser to apply for delivery of possession under R. 95. Such application therefore is an application on the basis of the order confirming the sale and is consequent upon it. We are therefore inclined to hold that it can be treated as "a proceeding under the order" confirming the sale. There seems to be no reason to limit the meaning of that expression to proceedings which are expressly directed by the order itself.

Assuming that O. 41, R. 5 does not apply to such a case, we have no doubt that the appellate court has inherent jurisdiction under Section 151 C. P. C. to make such order as may be necessary for the ends of justice. This power includes one for stay of proceedings in a subordinate court from which an appeal is pending (see 52 I. C. 185 and the cases referred to therein). It is quite clear that the order confirming the sale has not yet become final so far as the appellate court is concerned, and if the order of the court below is set aside the proceedings relating to the delivery of possession will become infructuous. We therefore think that we have power to interfere if a fit case is made out.

In the present case one of the two houses in suit in a single enclosure has been sold and purchased by a stranger. The other portion of the enclosure is still being occupied by the judgment-debtor. He offers to deposit the full sale price in the court below by August 15 at the latest. We think that having regard to the facts mentioned in the affidavit this is a fit case in which there should be a stay of proceedings. We therefore direct that the proceedings relating to the delivery of possession should be stayed on condition that the applicant deposits Rs.15,850 on or before August 15, 1930. If the amount is not deposited within that time, the stay order will automatically stand discharged. The time shall not be extended in any event. If the amount is so deposited, the auction purchaser would be at liberty to take the money out and in case of the dismissal of the appeal would have to redeposit it before taking delivery of possession. We make no order as to the costs of the application.

Application allowed

[1] I. L. R. 31 All. 82=6 A. L. J. 71

[2] 1928 A. I. R. All. 368

CIVIL

1932

Jan. 8

PULLAN, J.
NIAMAT-
ULLAH, J.

RAM SAHAI (Plaintiff)
versus
DEBI DIN (Defendant)*

Bundelkhand Alienation of Land Act (II of 1903), Secs. 16 (as amended by Act VII of 1929), 9 and 6—Mortgagor and mortgagee—Members of agricultural tribe—Suit for sale on mortgage instituted in 1924—No decree for sale could be passed in view of Sec. 16—Sec. 9 inapplicable—Order of Subordinate Judge consigning the case to the record room—Effect of—Whether amending Act revived proceedings.

The mortgagee, who was a member of an agricultural tribe within the meaning of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act (II of 1903), sued for enforcement of his mortgage executed by another member of an agricultural tribe but as a claim to a simple money decree was time-barred, he prayed for a decree under Or. 34, R. 4 C. P. C. for satisfaction of the mortgage money by sale of the mortgaged property. The Subordinate Judge, being of opinion that no decree for sale or for foreclosure could be passed, made a reference to the Collector with a view to the latter substituting a mortgage in the form prescribed by Sec. 6 in place of the mortgage then in suit. On the Collector's refusal to take action under Sec. 9, the Subordinate Judge referred the matter to the High Court under Or. 46, R. 1 C. P. C. and after the High Court's decision "that the law as it stood, left the mortgagee without a remedy" (Ram Sahai Singh v. Debi Din, 24 A. L. J. 945), the Subordinate Judge on June 10, 1927 ordered the case to be consigned to the record room. After the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act had been amended in 1929, the mortgagee, who was protected by the newly added proviso to Sec. 16, applied for a decree for sale under Or. 34, R. 4 C. P. C. Held, that the order of the Subordinate Judge dated June 10, 1927 operated as a final adjudication of the rights of the parties and was a decree determining the suit for sale; and the amending Act could not have retrospective effect so far as to revive proceedings in a suit which had terminated before it was passed.

Govind Rao v. Kamta Prasad, I. L. R. 36 All. 376 referred to.

Strictly speaking there is no provision in the Act requiring the Collector to 'return' the reference. If the Collector cannot take action under Sec. 9, the proceedings before him terminate.

CIVIL REVISION from an order of J. N. MUSHRAN ESQ., Subordinate Judge of Banda.

S. N. Seth for the applicant.

A. Sanyal for the opposite party.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamat-ullah, J.

NIAMATULLAH, J.—This is an application for revision of an order dated July 25, 1930 passed by the Subordinate Judge of Banda. The applicant, who is a member of an agricultural tribe within the meaning of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, was a mortgagee under a deed of simple mortgage dated January 24, 1913 executed by Mst. Raj Rani, who is now represented by Debi Din the opposite party, who was also a member of such tribe. The land hypothecated by the aforesaid deed is 'land' within the meaning of that Act. The circumstances which have led to the revision are so inter-related to the provisions of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act II of 1903 that it is necessary to make a reference at the outset to Sections 6, 9 and 16 of the aforesaid Act. Section 6 provides that a member of an agricultural tribe can make a mortgage in one of the prescribed forms and not in others. Generally speaking the object of the Section is to minimise the chances of foreclosure, if not altogether to prevent it. Section 16 declares that no land belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe shall be sold in execution of any decree or order of any Civil or Revenue Court. Section 9 provides, inter alia, that if a suit is instituted in any civil court on a mortgage not in the prescribed form made by a member of an agricultural tribe the court should refer the matter to the Collector who can modify the mortgage so as to make it conform to the provisions of Section 6. Broadly speaking, the mortgages permitted by Section 6 enable the mortgagee to remain in possession for a period not exceeding 20 years during which usufruct is to satisfy the mortgage money and at least interest which is, in no case, to run over and above the usufruct. After the expiry of the period the mortgagor is entitled to redeem on payment of the sum, if any, due on the mortgage.

---

*Civ. Rev. 17 of 1931

To advert to the facts of this particular case, the mortgage of January 24, 1913 was in the form of a simple mortgage, the only remedy of the mortgagee being to obtain a simple money decree or a decree for sale of the mortgaged property. The mortgagee instituted a suit for enforcement of that mortgage in 1924, when a claim to simple money decree was barred by limitation. Accordingly he prayed for a decree under Order XXXIV, Rule 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure for satisfaction of the mortgage money by sale of the mortgaged property. The suit was contested. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that no decree for sale could be passed in view of Section 16 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act as that Section contained a clear provision against sale of 'land' belonging to a member of the agricultural tribe. No decree for foreclosure could be passed having regard to the terms of the mortgage deed. He however considered that Section 9 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act was applicable, and accordingly on October 9, 1925 he made a reference to the Collector with a view to the latter substituting a mortgage in the form prescribed by Section 6 in place of the mortgage then in suit. The Collector, however, ruled that S. 9 was not applicable as both the mortgagor and the mortgagee were members of an agricultural tribe, the section being confined to cases in which the mortgage is made by a member of an agricultural tribe in favour of a person who is not a member of such tribe. The result of this view, which was subsequently upheld by this Court, was that a mortgagee who is a member of an agricultural tribe is in a worse position than a mortgagee who is not. The Collector refused to take action under Section 9 and returned the reference. Strictly speaking there is no provision in the Act requiring the Collector to 'return' the reference. If the Collector cannot take action under Section 9, the proceedings before him terminate. The Subordinate Judge, on receipt of the Collector's reply, made a reference to this Court under Order XLVI, Rule 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure asking for a decision of the question as to what was the proper remedy for the mortgagee in view of the Collector refusing to take action under Section 9. The matter was considered by a Full Bench in Ram Sahai Singh v. Debi Din[1]. The majority of the Judges composing the Full Bench held that Section 9 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act, as it then was, did not apply to a simple mortgage between members of the same agricultural tribe. The learned Judges pointed out that there was a hiatus in the Act which worked injustice in a class of cases of which the one before them was an instance. They felt constrained to hold that the law as it stood left the mortgagee without a remedy. After this Court's decision on the reference, the Subordinate Judge passed an order, on June 10, 1927, in the following words:—

> No steps can be taken now. The reference has been decided against the decree-holder. It is accordingly ordered that the case be consigned to the record room.

The view expressed by the learned Judges was taken notice of by the Legislature and the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act was amended by Act VII of 1929 which has added a proviso to Section 16 under which 'land' belonging to a member of an agricultural tribe can be sold in execution of a decree passed on foot of a simple mortgage made by him in favour of a member of the same tribe or to a member of an agricultural tribe residing in the district in which the land is situated. The amending Act came into force on September 14, 1929. The applicant is protected by the newly added proviso. The application which has given rise to this revision was made by him shortly afterwards praying for a decree for sale under Order XXXIV, Rule 4 of the Code of Civil Procedure being passed. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that the amending Act has no retrospective effect and that no decree for sale can be passed. The applicant questions the correctness of this view.

There is no doubt that this is a hard case, but the law as it stood when the suit was instituted and when it was "consigned to the record room" has so materially affected his position that the amendment since made in the law cannot help him. The order of the Subordinate Judge dated October 9, 1925, referring the case to the Collector under Section 9 is tantamount to an adjudication that no decree for sale could be passed (foreclosure being out of the question) and that the only relief which could be granted to the mortgagee was a reference to the Collector who, it was believed, could substitute a mortgage in the form prescribed by Section 6 for the mortgage then in suit.

Ordinarily a suit for sale of the mortgaged property terminates either in dismissal or in a decree under Order XXXIV, Rule 4 C. P. C. In cases in which the mortgagor is a member of an agricultural tribe and the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act applied, a third course is possible, namely, a reference to the Collector who can take action under Section 9. In such a case the final order of the civil court is a reference to the Collector and no further proceedings can take place before the court which, ex hypothesi, cannot pass a decree for foreclosure or sale. In this case, however, the Subordinate Judge reopened the proceedings after the Collector's refusal to take action under Section 9 Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act and pursued the matter further by making a reference to this Court and it was not till June 10, 1927, after the decision of this Court, that he passed an order "consigning the case to the record room." It is contended by the learned advocate for the applicant that the suit not having been dismissed and no formal decree having been drawn up declaring the dismissal of the suit, it should be deemed to have been pending when the amending Act VII of 1929 was passed and also when an application was made for a decree under Order XXXIV, Rule 4 being passed. The argument is that neither the order dated October 9, 1925 nor that of June 10, 1927 can be considered to be a decree as defined in Section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that therefore the suit never terminated. Govind Rao v. Kamta Prasad[2] is relied on as an authority for the proposition, that a reference under Section 9 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act to the Collector does not terminate the suit. In that case the Collector refused to take proceedings on a reference being made to him under Section 9 on the ground that the mortgagor was not a member of an agricultural tribe. On such refusal the Subordinate Judge passed a foreclosure decree. In appeal to this Court it was held that the mortgagor not being a member of an agricultural tribe, the foreclosure decree passed after the refusal of the Collector to take action under Section 9 was a good decree. The only question which was raised before the court was whether the mortgagor in that case was a member of an agricultural tribe. On a consideration of the circumstances of the case it was held that he was not. The question whether the proceedings in a suit terminate on a reference being made to the Collector under Section 9 of the Bundelkhand Land Alienation Act was not raised and decided. It was assumed by the parties and by all the courts including this Court that the proceedings do not terminate. The case is therefore no authority for the proposition that on a reference being made by a civil court under Section 9, the suit must remain pending. It is not necessary to decide this question as in view of the subsequent order passed by the Subordinate Judge, on June 10, 1927, it is purely academic. If the Subordinate Judge did not intend by his order of October 9, 1925 to decide the case once and for all he must be deemed to have done so by his order of June 10, 1927. After an expression of opinion by a Full Bench of this Court, the Subordinate Judge clearly ruled that no relief could be given to the mortgagee and that the case "should be consigned to the record room." The suit was in effect dismissed. Refusal to grant any relief to a plaintiff can have no other meaning. Decree is defined in Section 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure as "The formal expression of an adjudication which, so far as regards the court expressing it, conclusively determines the rights of the parties with regard to all or any of the matters in controversy in the suit." There can be no doubt that the adjudication in the case was that the mortgagee (the applicant) was not entitled to any relief in the view of the law taken by this Court. So far as the Subordinate Judge was concerned that was a final adjudication of the mortgagee's right to obtain relief on foot of the mortgage deed then in suit. The mere fact that a formal decree was not drawn up will not prevent the court's

[1] 24 A. L. J. 945

[2] I. L. R. 36 All. 376

CIVIL
1932
RAM SAHAI
v.
DEBI DIN
Niamat-ullah, J.

final order operating as such adjudication. For these reasons we hold that the order dated June 10, 1927 operates as a final adjudication of the rights of the parties and is a decree determining the suit for sale.

The amending Act VII of 1929 now entitles a mortgagee who is a member of an agricultural tribe, claiming under a simple mortgage made by another member of an agricultural tribe to have the 'land' belonging to the mortgagor and mortgaged to him sold in execution of a decree passed on foot of his mortgage. It is not necessary to decide for the purposes of this case whether it has no retrospective effect as regards deeds executed before but sought to be enforced after the amending Act was passed. It is, however, perfectly clear that it cannot have retrospective effect so far as to revive proceedings in suits which had terminated before it was passed.

In this view of the case this application for revision must fail and is dismissed with costs.

Application dismissed

CIVIL 1932
March 14
LORD BLANESBURGH
LORD TOMLIN
SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

PRIVY COUNCIL

THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, BENGAL

versus

SHAW, WALLACE AND COMPANY*

Income-Tax Act (XI of 1922), Secs. 6(iv), 2(4), 10, 6(vi) and 12—"Income, profits and gains"—Meaning of—Sum received by agent from his principal as compensation for cessation of agency—Whether taxable—Sec. 4(3) (vii)—"Receipts arising from business"—Meaning of.

The object of the Indian Income-tax Act is to tax "income" which connotes a periodical monetary return "coming in" with some sort of regularity, or expected regularity, from definite sources. The source is not necessarily one which is expected to be continuously productive, but it must be one whose object is the production of a definite return, excluding anything in the nature of a mere windfall. Income has been likened pictorially to the fruit of a tree, or the crop of a field. It is essentially the produce of something which is loosely spoken of as "capital".

A sum received by an agent from his principal as compensation for the compulsory cessation of his agency cannot be regarded as profit or gain from carrying on the business or as income from "other sources" as mentioned in Sec. 6(vi) of the Income-tax Act and therefore such a sum is not taxable under the Act.

The expression "receipts arising from business" in Sec. 4(3) (vii) must mean receipts arising from the carrying on of business. In re Turner Morrison and Co., I. L. R. 56 Cal. 211 doubted.

APPEAL from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

A. M. Dunne, K.C. and R. P. Hills for the appellant.

A. M. Latter, K.C. and Cyril King for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir George Lowndes

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—This is an appeal from a judgment of the High Court at Calcutta delivered on a reference made to it under Section 66 of the Indian Income Tax Act, XI of 1922. The reference was out of an assessment to income tax upon the respondents for the year 1929-30, in respect of an item of Rs.9,83,361, part of a larger sum of Rs.15,25,000 received by them in 1928 as compensation for the termination of certain agencies.

---

*P. C. A. 108 of 1931

The respondents carry on business in Calcutta as merchants and agents of various companies, and have branch offices in different parts of India. For a number of years prior to 1928 they acted as distributing agents in India of the Burma Oil Company and the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, but had no formal agreement with either company. In or about the year 1927 the two companies combined and decided to make other arrangements for the distribution of their products. The respondents' agency of the Burma Company was accordingly terminated on December 31, 1927, and that of the Anglo-Persian Company on June 30 following. Some time in the early part of 1928 the Burma Company paid to the respondents a sum of Rs.12,00,000 "as full compensation for cessation of the agency," and in August of the same year the Anglo-Persian Company paid them another sum of Rs.3,25,000 as "compensation for the loss of your office as agents to the Company." The quotations are from letters by which the payments were recorded, and are accepted on both sides as correctly expressing the nature of the transactions.

The income tax officer, in computing the assessable income of the respondents for the relevant year, took these two receipts into account as profits or gains of their business in the year ending December 31, 1928, but allowed certain deductions therefrom in respect of compensation paid by the respondents to various employees, leaving a balance of Rs.9,83,361 which he included in the total income of the respondents found assessable for the year 1929-30.

The respondents objected to the assessment, and appealed to the Assistant Commissioner, who confirmed the assessment. Thereafter, on the requisition of the respondents, the Commissioner drew up a statement of the case, and referred the questions of law therein set out to the High Court with his own opinion thereon, which was against the contentions of the respondents.

The questions so formulated were as follows:—

> (a) Was not the sum of Rs.9,83,361 which had been included in the total income of the assessees for purposes of assessment for 1929-30, in the nature of a capital receipt and therefore not income, profits or gains within the meaning of the Income Tax Act?
>
> (b) If it could be said to be income, profits or gains within the meaning of the Act, was it liable to be assessed under either of the Sections 10 and 12 of the Act, inasmuch as (1) it was not the profits, or gains of any business carried on by the assessees within the meaning of Section 10 of the Act, nor (2) income, profits or gains from other sources within the meaning of Section 12 of the Act?
>
> (c) In the alternative, was not the payment of Rs.9,83,361 an ex gratia payment in the nature of a present from the oil companies in question and was it not therefore exempt under Section (4) 3 (vii) of the Act?

The reference was heard by the Chief Justice sitting with Ghose and Buckland, JJ. The judgment of the High Court was delivered by the Chief Justice, his colleagues concurring.

The learned Judges appear to have returned a formal answer only to question (a) which the Chief Justice stated to be "the real question in the case." He thought that if the respondents could not escape by reason of the contention raised by this question they must fail. The other questions, he thought, fell within a recent decision of the Court in the case of In re Turner Morrison & Co.[1]; he had nothing to add to what was then said on these points.

Their Lordships agree that the real matter for decision falls under (a), but they think that this question is not happily worded, as it seems to suggest that it was only if the sum there referred to was "in the nature of a capital receipt" that it would be exempt from assessment, whereas the more correct proposition would seem to be that it was only if it was in the nature of an income receipt that it would fall to be assessed to the tax. The question was, however, re-stated by the learned Chief Justice in more precise terms, viz., "whether these sums are income profits or gains within the meaning of the Act at all," and for the reasons stated in his judgment he came to the conclusion that they were not. Their Lordships think that his conclusion was right though they arrive at this result by a slightly different road.

In one part of his judgment the Chief Justice seems to hold that the "compensation for loss of these agencies is a receipt in respect of a capital asset in the nature of goodwill," but it has been objected with some force that there is nothing upon which this finding can be based. There was, so far as the facts disclose, no transfer of the goodwill of the respondents, and no agreement by them not to compete with the new selling agency of the companies.

In another part of the judgment the payment seems to be regarded as in the nature of compensation in lieu of notice. But here again their Lordships think that there are no facts to support such a conclusion, and they doubt if Section 206 of the Indian Contract Act upon which reliance is placed has any application.

Again their Lordships would discard altogether the case-law which has been so painfully evolved in the construction of the English Income Tax Statutes—both the cases upon which the High Court relied and the flood of other decisions which has been let loose in this Board. The Indian Act is not in pari materia; it is less elaborate in many ways, subject to fewer refinements, and in arrangement and language it differs greatly from the provisions with which the Courts in this country have had to deal. Under such conditions their Lordships think that little can be gained by attempting to reason from one to the other, at all events in the present case in which they think that the solution of the problem lies very near the surface of the Act, and depends mainly on general considerations.

The object of the Indian Act is to tax "income," a term which it does not define. It is expanded, no doubt, into "income profits and gains," but the expansion is more a matter of words than of substance. Income, their Lordships think, in this Act connotes a periodical monetary return

---

[1] I. L. R. 56 Cal. 211

CIVIL

1932

THE COMMISSIONER OF INCOME TAX, BENGAL v. SHAW WALLACE AND COMPANY

Sir George Lowndes

"coming in" with some sort of regularity, or expected regularity, from definite sources. The source is not necessarily one which is expected to be continuously productive, but it must be one whose object is the production of a definite return, excluding anything in the nature of a mere windfall. Thus income has been likened pictorially to the fruit of a tree, or the crop of a field. It is essentially the produce of something, which is often loosely spoken of as "capital." But capital, though possibly the source in the case if income from securities, is in most cases hardly more than an element in the process of production.

The sources from which the taxable income under the Act are to be derived are enumerated in Section 6, which runs as follows:—

> Save as otherwise provided by this Act, the following heads of income, profits and gains, shall be chargeable to income-tax in the manner hereinafter appearing, namely:—
>
> (i) Salaries.
> (ii) Interest on securities.
> (iii) Property.
> (iv) Business.
> (v) Professional earnings.
> (vi) Other sources.

The claim of the taxing authorities is that the sum in question is chargeable under head (iv) business. By Section 2(4) business "includes any trade, commerce or manufacture, or any adventure or concern in the nature of trade commerce or manufacture." The words used are no doubt wide, but underlying each of them is the fundamental idea of the continuous exercise of an activity. Under Section 10 the tax is to be payable by an assessee under the head business "in respect of the profits or gains of any business carried on by him." Again, their Lordships think, the same central idea: the words italicised, are an essential constituent of that which is to produce the taxable income: it is to be the profit earned by a process of production. And this is borne out by the provision for allowances which follows. They include rent paid for the premises where the business is carried on; the cost of current repairs in respect of such premises; interest on money borrowed for carrying on the business, etc.

Some reliance has been placed in argument upon Section 4(3) (v) which appears to suggest that the word "income" in this Act may have a wider significance than would ordinarily be attributed to it. The subsection says that the Act "shall not apply to the following classes of income," and in the category that follows, Clause (v) runs:—

> Any capital sum received in commutation of the whole or a portion of a pension, or in the nature of consolidated compensation for death or injuries, or in payment of any insurance policy, or as the accumulated balance at the credit of a subscriber to any such Provident Fund.

Their Lordships do not think that any of these sums, apart from their exemption, could be regarded in any scheme of taxation as income, and they think that the clause must be due to the over anxiety of the draftsman to make this clear beyond possibility of doubt. They cannot construe it as enlarging the word "income" so as to include receipts of any kind which are not specially exempted. They do not think that the clause is of any assistance to the appellant.

Following the line of reasoning above indicated, the sums which the appellant seeks to charge can, in their Lordships' opinion, only be taxable if they are the produce, or the result, of carrying on the agencies of the oil companies in the year in which they were received by the respondents. But when once it is admitted that they were sums received, not for carrying on this business, but as some sort of solatium for its compulsory cessation, the answer seems fairly plain.

If the business had been sold—even if that somewhat indeterminate asset known as the "goodwill" had been assigned to the employing companies, as the High Court seems to have thought it had—it is conceded that the price paid would not have been taxable. But why? Plainly because it could not be regarded as profit or gain from carrying on the business, and their Lordships think that the same reasoning must apply when the sum received is in the nature of a solatium for cessation.

It is contended for the appellant that the "business" of the respondents did in fact go on throughout the year, and this is no doubt true in a sense. They had other independent commercial interests which they continued to pursue, and the profits of which have been taxed in the ordinary course without objection on their part. But it is clear that the sum in question in this appeal had no connection with the continuance of the respondents' other business. The profits earned by them in 1928 were the fruit of a different tree, the crop of a different field.

For the reasons given their Lordships are of opinion that question (a) was rightly answered by the High Court in favour of the assessee. No objection has been taken to the form of the answer or to its sufficiency, and it would seem unnecessary therefore to deal with the other two questions. Their Lordships will only add that the reasoning of this judgment would apply equally if the appellant based his claim on head (vi) "other sources" and the corresponding provisions of Section 12.

With regard to the claim to exemption under Section 4(3)(vii), their Lordships think that the decision in the case of In re Turner Morrison & Co. to which reference has been made above, may need re-consideration in the light of this judgment. In their Lordships' view the expression "receipts arising from business" in that clause must mean receipts arising from the carrying on of business.

Their Lordships will humbly advise His Majesty that this appeal should be dismissed with costs.

Appeal dismissed

Solicitor, India Office—Solicitor for the appellant.

Linklaters and Pamis—Solicitors for the respondents.

ABDUL HALIM KHAN

versus

SAADAT ALI KHAN AND OTHERS*

CIVIL

1932

March 10

LORD BLANESBURGH

LORD TOMLIN

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES

Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), Sec. 29—Widow of Mohammedan taluqdar—Power to adopt—Forfeited upon remarriage—Hindu Law—Adoption—Widow—Power to adopt—Whether exercisable after remarriage.

The widow of a Mohammedan taluqdar has, under the terms of Sec. 29 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), no power to adopt a son after her re-marriage.

A Hindu widow cannot, after re-marriage, make a valid adoption to her former husband.

APPEAL from a decision of the Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow.

B. Dube, K.C. for the appellant.

A. M. Dunne, K.C., M. A. Jinnah and S. Hyam for the respondents.

The following judgment was delivered by

Sir George Lowndes

SIR GEORGE LOWNDES—The appellant in this case is the claimant to a large and valuable taluqdari estate in Oudh, known as Taluqa Nanpara, the succession to which is governed by Act I of 1869. The 1st respondent was at the date of the suit in possession of the estate, and unless the appellant is able to show a better title in himself, it is admitted that he cannot succeed.

The last full owner was Raja Muhammad Siddiq Khan, who died without issue on December 30, 1907. He left four widows surviving him, and by his will gave successive authorities to each of them to adpot a son. The 1st respondent is in possession as the adopted son of the second widow, Rani Saltanat. The appellant claims to oust him as the adopted son of the fourth widow, Rani Champa, on the ground that his (the appellant's) adoption was the only valid one. The other respondents are in possession of parts of the estate under a compromise with the 1st respondent.

The main question in the suit was whether the adoption of the appellant, the factum of which is admitted, was valid, and the first line of defence was that Rani Champa had been re-married to one Sher Mahomed Khan before the adoption of the appellant, and that for this reason his adoption was invalid.

The question of the re-marriage was contested at great length in the Oudh Court, as is testified by the bulky record now before the Board. The appellant, in addition to denying the re-marriage in fact, asserted that, previous to the date on which it was alleged to have taken place, Sher Mahomed Khan had been married to the sister of Rani Champa, and this was put forward as making the story of the latter's re-marriage impossible it being admittedly contrary to the Mohammedan law for a man to be the husband of two sisters.

The trial Judge and the Court of Appeal have concurrently held that the re-marriage of Rani Champa with Sher Mahomed Khan, on a date prior to the adoption of the appellant, is established by the evidence. They are also agreed that the alleged previous marriage with the Rani's sister, the burden of proving which was clearly upon the appellant, is not established. These findings must, in accordance with the recognized practice of the Board, be held conclusive as to the fact of the re-marriage.

---

*P. C. A. 60 of 1931

It only remains to consider an alternative contention of the appellant that the re-marriage did not invalidate the adoption. This again has been negatived by both the Indian Courts, mainly on the strength of Clause 10 of Raja Muhammad Siddiq Khan's will. The official translation of this clause, which was before the trial judge, was in the following terms:—

> If any of the Ranis contract a second marriage after me she shall not be entitled to be profited by any of the paras of this will.

The learned Judge held that the power of adoption was on the same footing as a power of appointment and therefore "a benefit or privilege" conferred on the widow which she would, under the terms of this clause, forfeit upon re-marriage. He also thought that under Section 29 of the Oudh Estates Act (I of 1869), by which a conditional power of adoption is given to the widow of a Mohammedan taluqdar, the power could only be exercised by her if she were still his widow at the time of making the adoption.

In the Court of Appeal the translation of Clause 10 of the will was amended by the learned Judges, and this has now come up to the Board under the official seal of the Court. The amended translation runs as follows:—

> If any of the Ranis contract a second marriage after me she shall not be entitled to avail herself of any of the provisions of this will.

The learned Judges thought that on this reading of the clause it was clear that Rani Champa "on her re-marriage with Sher Mahomed Khan forfeited her power of adoption, and consequently the plaintiff's adoption made by her on July 25, 1914, is invalid."

Their Lordships, while not disagreeing with the reasoning of either of the Indian Courts on this question, think that the same result is to be arrived at in another way.

The parties being Mohammedans, there is no power to adopt under their personal law, and it is only conferred by Section 29 of the Act, and must be confined strictly within the limits there laid down. The section is as follows:—

> Every Mohammedan taluqdar, grantee, heir or legatee, and every widow of a Mohammedan taluqdar or grantee, heir or legatee, with the consent in writing of her deceased husband, shall, for the purposes of this Act, have power to adopt a son whenever, if he or she were a Hindu, he or she might adopt a son.

The power is thus exercisable by the widow of the taluqdar only under such circumstances that if she were a Hindu she would be entitled to adopt. It can, their Lordships think, hardly be doubted that a Hindu widow could not, after re-marriage, make a valid adoption to her former husband. Indeed, this is conceded by Mr. Dube, who has presented the appellant's case with ability and restraint. Their Lordships think that it necessarily follows that the widow of a Mohammedan taluqdar has, under

Civil
1932
Abdul Halim Khan
v.
Saadat Ali Khan
Sir George Lowndes

the terms of the section, no power to adopt a son after her re-marriage, and that therefore the adoption of the appellant was invalid and conferred upon him no right to the Nanpara estate.

For these reasons their Lordships think that this appeal fails and that the appellant's suit was rightly dismissed by the trial Judge, and they will humbly advise His Majesty accordingly. The appellant must pay the costs of the appeal.

Appeal dismissed

Hy. S. L. Polak and Co.—Solicitors for the appellant.
Barrow, Rogers and Nevill—Solicitors for the respondents.

HIGH COURT

PARAS RAM CHAUBEY AND ANOTHER (Defendants)
versus
SHEO DHAN PANDEY AND ANOTHER (Plaintiffs)*

Civil
1932
Jan. 11
Pullan, J.
Niamatullah, J.

Mortgage—Possessory mortgage—Simple mortgage—Covenant—Mortgagor could not redeem first mortgage without payment of sum due under second mortgage—Suit for redemption of possessory mortgage—At a time when suit on second mortgage barred by limitation.

Besides the possessory mortgage of 1868, the mortgagor had executed in 1874 another bond in favour of the same mortgagee and the sum advanced under the bond was charged on the same property as was in possession of the mortgagee under the deed of 1868, and there was a clear stipulation that the mortgagor should not redeem the mortgage of 1868 without payment of the principal and interest due under the bond of 1874. The present suit was brought to redeem the possessory mortgage at a time when if the defendant had to sue on the bond of 1874 it would have been barred by limitation. Held, that limitation can be pleaded as against a plaintiff's claim but no defence can be barred by any Article of the first Schedule of the Limitation Act, and the mortgagor was not entitled to redeem the possessory mortgage without payment of the sum due under the second bond. Aditya Prashad v. Ram Ratan Lal, 57 I. C. 173; Ram Kishore Ahir v. Ram Nandan Ram, 25 A. L. J. 1086 relied on.

Second Appeal from a decree of Babu Krishna Das, Subordinate Judge of Ghazipur, confirming a decree of S. Ejaz Husain, Munsif of Ballia.

U. S. Bajpai and J. P. Bhargava for the appellants.
K. Verma and A. P. Pandey for the respondents.

The judgment of the Court was delivered by

Niamatullah, J.

Niamatullah, J.—This is a defendants' appeal and arises out of a suit for redemption. Both the courts below have decreed it, but on payment of a much smaller amount than that claimed by the defendant-appellants who are the legal representatives of the original mortgagee Ramyad Chaube. The plaintiffs are the transferees of the original mortgagor Brij Raj Dube. The principal question in controversy between the parties relates to a deed of further charge for Rs.100 carrying interest at

---

*S. A. 1504 of 1928

CIVIL
1932
PARAS RAM CHAUBEY v. SHEO DHAN PANDEY
Niamat-ullah, J.

one-eighth per cent. It is alleged to have been executed by the mortgagor on September 22, 1874. The possessory mortgage sought to be redeemed was executed much earlier, on August 4, 1868. The defendant-appellants claim a sum of Rs.1,358-0-9 alleged to be due under the bond of 1874. Both the lower courts have disallowed this sum and decreed redemption on payment of Rs.213. It is not now in dispute that under the mortgage of 1868 the defendant-appellants were in possession of two plots, one of which was allowed to be redeemed on payment of Rs.86. The lower courts have therefore allowed redemption of the remaining plot No. 1358 on payment of the remaining sum of Rs.213 out of Rs.299 the original consideration of the usufructuary mortgage.

As regards the bond of 1874, the trial court held that the mortgagee's remedy for recovery of the sum due thereunder is barred by limitation, and that therefore no payment can be claimed as a condition precedent to the redemption of the usufructuary mortgage. The lower appellate court has disallowed the defendant-appellants' claim on the additional ground that it has not been shown that the bond of 1874 relates to the same property which had been mortgaged in 1868.

